"AT THE PLAY"

The proofs of this magnificent work of art are in every way satisfactory, and the admiration of every one has heen roused hy the accuracy of the likenesses and the really artistic grouping of the various distinguished characters, here brought together in a grand composition. The extremely delicate processes, and the great care to be observed in the adjustment of the plates, will make it necessary to delay the issue of the picture till the 19th of July. The presses are at work ni ht and day, but the numher of impressions—50,000—will compel caution and comparative slowness in order to secure thorough finish and effect. Out of 1,435 pbotographs sent in, we have taken, in the order of their reception, 300 for the first issue; this numher being all that the plate would take. We shall follow up these first, however, with the others arranged in classes, so that due justice may be done the merchant princes of our city, with the various professions, and all those prominent citizens, whose energies and intelligence have contributed to place San Francisco in the proud position she occupies to-day in the eyes of the whole civilized world.

Complimentary to the News Letter.—As we do not meet with compliments every week, we give insertion to the following from one of our live contemporaries:

Although we allude to the part heretofore taken hy the editor of this journal in directing attention to the advantages to this country of steam communication hetween California and the Colonies, we hy no means claim the premier position, which we readily concede to the San Francisco News Letter. The information contained in that journal on the subject has been at all times of the most reliahle character, and the articles written were forcible and to the poiut.—Irish and American Home News.

Young Friedlander.—We are pleased to see that our friend, the worthy son of Isaac Friedlander, our late Grain King, has made application to the Produce Exchange for membership, being the first applicant under the new rules. It is just one year ago since the death of Isaac Friedlander.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The continued decline in the north end stocks has exercised a depressing influence on the whole general market, and with the heavy assessments being levied at this time, there seems to be little prospect of any immediate recuscitation of values for the present. The balance of the Comstocks are heavy, and without demand. Outside stocks show little or no improvement.

London, July 11th.—The scene last night in Committee on the Army Discipline hill was most exciting. Parnell, memher from Meath, accused the Speaker of a breach of privilege and of one-sided conduct. This caused an altercation with Raikes, Chairman of the Committee, whom Parnell attempted to silence by shouting. A tumultuous debate followed, during which recourse to physical violence appeared not improhable.

Fruits.—Our market is copiously supplied with Apples, Apricots, Berries of all kinds, Cherries, Currants, Figs, Pears, Peaches, Plums, etc., also Oranges, Lemons, Limes, etc. These are all the product of our own orchards. A few Grapes have made their appearance. The crop is very promising, and our Raisin and Wine makers will soon have their hands full.

Wool.—Oregon is now sending forward her spring clip. The steamship Oregon, just at hand, bringing 2,005 sks. The general market is very slack at the moment. We quote Eastern Oregon, 18@21c.; Valley, 24@26c.; California rules from 12½c. for Burry, Southern, up to 27c. for best Humboldt.

The business outlook seems bright and cheering. Political troubles are practically at an end, the crops are good, the mines productive, and the revival of trade in other parts of the country must make an impress on this and the other Pacific States and Territories.

Berlin, July 11th.—It is understood there will he a general election for the Prussian Diet in October, when Bismarck proposes to appeal to tbe country on questions of financial reform and purchase of private railways hy the State.

From Philadelphia.—The ship Standard, 147 days from Philadelphia, is to hand, and is consigned to George Howes & Co. She brings a large and well assorted cargo of hard wood, lumher, demijohns, iron, window glass, etc.

The steam yacht "Enchantress," with the remains of the Prince Imperial, has arrived in the Thames, but will lie helow Woolwich until four o'clock P. M., July 10th.

London, July 10th.—A dispatch from Cape Town, June 23d, says: General Sir Garnet Wolseley arrived to-day and immediately started for Natal.

Teas.—Owing to the present scarcity and short supply of Japan Paper Greens, the price of diamond "L" and other choice marks have heen advanced to 35c.

Telegrams received at Cape Town state that the British forces are within twenty-five miles of Cetewayo's Kraal.

PIGTAILS AND SCISSORS.

After deliberating over the matter for many months, the Courts bave at last decided that it is unconstitutional to deprive the imprisoned Chinaman of his queue. All right-thinking people will be glad of this. Tbe queue-clippiug ordinance was simply a bid for the lowest sort of popular applause on the part of the municipal authorities who decreed it. That applause was dictated by pure malice, and nothing short of it. While the matter was iu abeyance, the anti-Chinese organs did not hesitate to approve of the ordinance—and to attempt to bully the judges into approving it—on tbe ground that no greater humiliation could be inflicted upon the Mongolian than the loss of his "pigtail." They argued that this, more than anything else, would deter him from committing crimes for the purpose of getting cosy quarters in jail, and in this strain they ran on, quite unconscious of tbe fact that they were advocating class-discrimination and betraying their unwholesome prejudices at every word. If they had been equally anxious that some similar scheme of degradation should be devised for the innumerable white loafers who make a practice of getting into prison when stealing-times are hard, then it would have been different. But, no! The whipping-post for hoodlums they wouldn't bear of; they even doubted the propriety aud humanity of a chain-gang. According to their gospel, the rigbts of negroes, greasers and vagabond whites must he rigidly respected, but if auy special method of persecution could be arranged for the beuetit of poor "John," they would be delighted. As for their talk about queue-clipping being necessary to ensure cleanliness, that is all bosh, and they know it. The meanest Cbinaman is incomparably cleaner in his person than the class of Caucasians who are his jail-mates. You see no filtby, matted shock of hair about him, either in prison or out of it. His head is washed daily, and is close-sbaven, with the exception of a little patcb at the back. On tbat patch the bair is allowed to grow to what lengtb it may—a foot or two, perbaps—and being conbed and plaited witb the greatest neatness, is eked out, "for the sake of "style," with two or three feet more of silken braid. Compare this sleek creature with the unwashed and unkempt brutes who await seutence in the dock with him, and you will see that if tbe Cbinaman ought to lose his queue for the sake of cleanliness, the Caucasians ougbt to be flayed from bead to foot witb the same object.

THE MALTHUSIAN THEORY DOWN EAST.

From the recently published report of the Boston Board of Registration many striking facts are elicited suggesting an extensive practice of the theories of the late Mr. Malthus. Notwitbstanding the increase in population the birth-rate bas fallen from 11,760 in 1874 to 10,185 in 1878 (in the city of Bostou), while in the entire State the annual increase per 1,000 has fallen from 30.4 in 1856 to 24.1 in 1877. During the latter year 1,233,008 of the native-born people produced 16,897 childreu, while 418,904 foreigners produced 18,071! That is to say tbe average increase of natives per 1,000 was but 13.72, while that of foreigners was 43 per 1,000. A fair rate of births would have been 33 per 1,000. A comparison with recent European statistics shows that in England tbe births per 1,000 average 36 per annum; in Prussia and Austria, 40 per annum; Italy and Spain, 36; Netherlands, 36; Scotland, 34½; Norway aud Sweden, 31. So it is apparent that in the Old World, where food as a rule is scarce and dear, humanity prospers, so far as coming into the world is concerned, vastly more than it does in the most enlightened State in the Union. In the neighboring State of Vermont, where the foreign element is comparatively smaller, it is noted tbat in 1877 the native increase was 17½ per 1,000, while that of foreigners was 22, so it would seem that the idea had slightly infected the latter class. In a farming town in Vermont, which, with an equal number of inhabitants formerly contained five schools, but one small building is now required. As an old farmer put it: "People don't have many children uow-a-days—they kill 'em off!" This charge of foeticide has been frequently urged by doctors and clergymen, who knew what they were talking about, and as frequently denied by self-constituted champions who either did not know or didn't want to know; but, in the face of official statistics it is no longer wise nor prudent for New England people to deny or disregard the incontrovertible. The same authorities which we have drawn upon state tbat when the natives marry it is most usually a pre-arranged condition tbat there shall be no children. Is it any wonder then that New England is in a fair way to see her Anglo-Saxon stock die out and he replaced by the Celt and German? Possibly a people or a nation have as much right to commit suicide as an individual, hut as to the social and political changes foreshadowed, we shall consider them hereafter.

THE DESERT OF SAHARA.

Among all the great undertakings of the world it seems as if ere long the Desert of Sahara will be taken in hand by some bold projectors, so as to try to turn it to some useful purpose. South of the desert is Soudan, with a population of 50,000,000 of semi-barbarous but not savage people. They produce palm oil, cocoa nuts, dates, figs, wheat, corn, yams, beans, tobacco, cotton, indigo, etc.; and there is a trade with Algiers, hy horses and camels, of $20,000,000 annually, cousisting of gold dust, attar of roses, gum arabic, ivory, indigo and ostrich feathers, in exchange for cotton goods, cutlery and weapons. In the whole region, however, surrounding the Sahara there is an estimated population of 150,000,000, and there are various projects on foot to open up this couutry by railway communication, advantage being taken of water transportation by the lakes and rivers to reduce the expense of continuous communication. The British, French and Germans are anxious to open up commercial relations with these vast populations.

The Desert of Sahara is 3,000 miles long and 1,000 miles wide, and, though called a desert, there is much of it that is cultivated here and there, and there are occasional high ridges, some of them with a growth of timber. Wben tbe sea hreezes, in passing into the interior, lose tbeir moisture, the air becomes very dry, though hy no means unhealtby, and the soil becomes sterile. It is seriously contemplated to flood the Sahara from the Mediterranean, and thus briug an inland lake into this dry region, which would promote moisture, and probably iu time alter the whole climatic conditions of the country and bring into cultivation large tracts of fertile soil that only need water to be fruitful. It is estimated by a French engineer that tbe building of a railroad across the Sahara would be a much less formidable undertaking than the Pacific Railroad was, and there are signs that capitalists are looking in that direction for new enterprises.

EXPLOSION AT BODIE.

Bodie, July 10th.—A terrible explosion occurred at 7:30 this evening of a powder magazine, near the old Standard incline. The works were blown to atoms, and everythiug near them was blown to the ground. The Summit works, hut a short distance off, were also leveled to the ground, and the building shattered to pieces. The shock was distinctly felt at Bridgeport, 25 miles distant. It proved to be the magazine of the Giant Powder Company, near the old hoisting works of tbe Standard Mine, coutaining ahout five tons of giant powder. There were a good many buildings, such as boarding houses, dwellings and other houses near the magazine, which were torn to atoms. The dead numher six as far as heard from: Frank Fyle, hlacksmith; Thomas Flavin, miner; William O'Brien, miner; Charles Molloy, miner; Hugh McMillan, engineer, and John McCarthy. There are others dangerously hurt. The number of wounded will not fall far short of forty. There will be no cessation of work on the Standard Mine, tbe new shaft being perfectly competent to do all tbe hoisting required.

I heard the following amusing story of Mr. J. E. Millais the other day: He was introduced to a lady whom he was to take down to dinner, but neither he nor his partner caught the other's name. So soon as they were seated at table the lady opened fire with the usual stock questions. "Have you been to the Academy?" "I have," said Mr. Millais. "And did you notice that odious old Millais' pictures?" "Well, yes, I saw them, too." Presently the champagne came round. Said Mr. Millais, with his best smile: "I am going to ask you to take wine with me, and not a mere sip, but to drain your glass to me, to strengthen your nerves." The lady pledged him accordingly. Then said the artist, quietly: "Now that you are fortified, I may venture to tell you that I am the odious old Millais." The lady put up her hands in horror. "Good gracious!" was all she could find to express herself.—T. T., in Truth.

King George III. first found his way to Weymouth in 1789, traveling by carriage, in a very simple way, with few atteudants, and woke up sleepy old vil'ages which had scarcely ever realized that royalty was a reality. In one of his excursions during his first visit, in the hay barvest, he was passing through a field where only one woman was at work. Tbe king asked her where the rest of her companions were. Sbe said, "They were gone to see the king." "Aud why did not you go with them?" he inquired. "Tbe fools!" she said, "they have gone all the way into the town, and they will lose a day's work hy it. That is more than I can do; I've five childreu to work for." "Well, then," said the king, putting a piece of gold into her hands, "tell your companions who have gone to see the king that the king came to see you."

Emily Faithful, in her last London Express, June 2d, says: "Henry Ward Beecher's great clerical rival, the Rev. Dr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, is here. He preached on Sunday at Dr. Davidson's church in Islington, and somewhat astonished his hearers by observing that some men spoke in their prayers about the sun, uoon and stars, and in fact 'gave the Lord a gread deal of astronomical information that must he very gratifying to Him.' English congregations are scarcely prepared for American pulpit humor, and Dr. Talmage tried his hearers considerably by further remarking 'that it wasn't till Job got his carbuncles and a pest of a wife that he wanted to leave this world.' The congregation did not know whether to laugh or to be shocked."

Memorial to the late Baron de Rothschild.—An influential committee is being formed for the purpose of founding a fund and college for the benefit of widows and orphans of decayed bankers and merchants. It is proposed that the fund shall be raised to perpetuate the memory of the late Baron de Rothschild, whose name as a merchant "prince," a statesman and a philanthropist have endeared him to a wide circle, and thus renders one and all, irrespective of creed or professiou, unanimous in tbe desire to contribute to the proposed fund, in order to make it an appropriate and fitting tribute of honor to the memory of the deceased Baron, and also acceptable to his bereaved family.—London City Press.

The Annual Circular of St. Mary's Hall, Benicia, shows a prosperous condition of this excellent seminary for young ladies. Founded in 1870, the school is now entirely in the hands of the Rev. L. Delos Mansfield, as Rector, and of Mrs. Mansfield, as Principal, with an Advisory Board, presided over hy the Right Reverend J. H. D. Wingfield, D. D., LL. D. Among all the schools in our State tbere is not one which hears a higher character or offers more substantial guarantees for the moral and intellectual traiuing which go to form a noble Cbristian character. See advertisement in another column.

Failures Among English Farmers.—Mr. Richard Seyd, the English statistician, has compiled the following figures: Numher of farmers whose failures were announced in 1870 were 229; in 1875, 354; in 1876, 480; in 1877, 477; in 1878, 815; and in 1879 (to Juue 10th), 614. This is very clear evidence of the distress among English farmers the last eighteen mouths, and Mr. Mechi, the well-known agriculturist of Tiptree Hall, stated in the London Times three days ago that the continued rains had given the finishing stroke to the hopes of a fair harvest in England, and that further ruin must ensue to English farmers.

Ruffler, in Vanity Fair, June 21st, says: "Baron Lionel De Rothschild's personal property bas been sworn uuder £2,700,000 for the probate of the will. He was always supposed to be worth between £15,000,000 and £16,000,000. The will has been found. Gunnershury and the house in Piccadilly are left to Baroness Lionel Rothschild for her life. The large Buckinghamshire estates will be eventually divided among the three sons. I hear that Mr. Leopold Rotbschild will undertake the management of the racing stud.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Boxing.—Edwards and Chambers are at Skaggs' Springs for a little relaxation, the hard work they did at the California Theater having somewhat used them up.——Mr. William Riley received a telegram from Mike Donovan, stating that he would leave Chicago to meet McClellan on Monday next, and that he was in good trim for the match.——McClellan is training very hard, and appears anxious for the fight. He is, perhaps, a trifle too heavy, but has plenty of time to reduce.——Fred. Busby, the glove-maker, has just finished an entirely novel boxing-glove, which is far superior to the style now in use. Instead of having fingers, the glove is shaped like an apple, with an aperture for the hand to enter; there is a leather ring inside for the hand to grasp, allowing the fist to be properly clenched. The great advantage of the glove is, that it puts a stop to cutting, on account of its peculiar shape.——Mr. Harry Maynard will open the gymnasium under the rooms of the Y. M. C. A., on Sutter street, next Tuesday. Harry offers to bet a hundred dollars that in eight weeks he can make a good boxer out of any one, besides strengthening the muscles and improving the carriage of the pupil.

Pedestrianism.—The six days' walk now progressing at the Mechanics' Pavilion is the most important pedestrian contest ever held on this coast, and, in some respects, is ahead of any similar tournaments that have been held either in America or England. Two of the contestants, Messrs. Scott and McIntyre, made over one hundred miles in twenty-four hours, which is good time for the first of a six days' race. The contest has already narrowed down, several of the men being virtually out of the race. At present it looks as if four of the walkers had a good show for the belt, but, in our opinion, it will go to either Scott, Callahan, or Edwards. McIntyre looks as if he would not last. Bowman did some good work the first day, but fell behind, taking longer rests than most of the men. The race will be finished at 12 P.M. Tuesday next. The six day go-as-you-please contest, for ladies, will commence July 17th. Mme. La Chapelle, Bertha Von Berg, Fannie Edwards, and several other ladies are already entered.

Swimming.—Professor F. Cavill, who called himself champion long-distance swimmer of the world, left town last Monday, and left several unpaid bills behind him. His departure was perhaps somewhat hastened by the challenge that Daily sent to swim him any distance for any sum from five hundred to five thousand dollars.——We hear that Mr. Wonderlich, of the Newport Baths, has secured Mr. Flemming as swimming teacher.——There will be a race at North Beach, on Sunday, for the gold badge, for members of the Neptune Club, and two handicap races. The Neptune boys are working very hard to make their club a success. We think they will succeed. Their membership list is nearly full and they have splendid accommodations. The club numbers among its members the best amateur swimmers on the coast.——Captain Webb left England for America on July 7th.——The Terrace Baths, Alameda, are adding new attractions each week.

Yachting.—The coming race between the Consuelo and the O'Connor excites a great deal of interest among yachtsmen. Opinions as to which is the faster boat are very evenly divided. The yachts have been out together several times, but never under conditions that would prove anything.——While escorting the Jeannette out to the heads, last Tuesday, the Frolic was fouled by the pilot-boat Geo. Peabody, and lost a boat that was hanging from the davits.——Captain White is building a new schooner at North Beach.

Picnics.—St. Rose's Sunday School, Badger's Park, to-day (Saturday)——Ariel Rowing Club, Badger's Park, Sunday.——Italian Mutual Benevolent Society, Schuetzen Park, Alameda, Sunday.——Centennial Mill employes, Fassking's Park, Alameda, Sunday.——Excursion to Cremorne Gardens, Martinez; the steamer S. M. Whipple leaves Washington-street wharf at 9 A. M. Sunday.——Excursion to Sonoma; steamer Herald leaves Washington-street wharf at 9 A. M. Sunday.

Rowing.—A harge race has been arranged between the Neptune and Ariel Clubs, for a silver pitcher, given by W. H. Bovee. It will most likely be rowed at 10 A. M. Sunday, from North Beach, that early hour being set because of the Ariel's picnic coming off on the same day. The Neptune Club will use their new harge Kate, which is thought to be a very fast boat.——There will be several races at Badger's Park Sunday.

Baseball.—Games last Sunday: Knickerbocker vs. Reno; score, 12 to 2.——McMahon vs. Franklin; score, 9 to 4.——Oakland vs. Mutual; score, 5 to 4.——Games to-morrow at Oakland Grounds: Athletic vs. California.——At Recreation Grounds: Knickerbocker vs. Eagles.

Racing.—Running race at Oakland Park to-day (Saturday); half mile heats; between Mr. Louis' "Sam Brannan" and Mr. Smith's "Stranger." In addition there will be a trotting race, mile heats, best three in five.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11th, 1879.

Dear Editor News Letter: In last Saturday's issue of your valuable paper, I notice, under the head of "Brilliant Mine Management," the question: "Who is he, anyway?" referring to the President, Middlemiss. He can be seen at the Palace Hotel dining-room, leering in the most insulting manner at every lady that enters, and at those who, unfortunately, sit near him during the entire meal. It is fortunate for him that he has never visited Texas, as there they hang horse-thieves on suspicion, and his suspicious looking face might condemn him the moment it is shown, guilty or not, though his own opinion of himself is simply immense.

Yours, ——.

Dr. Glenn, the Would-be Governor.—This man has been accused by a great many newspapers in this State of the crime of employing Chinese. We do not know whether he has or not, but we notice with pride and satisfaction that, as yet, no newspaper has pitched into his mother, his wife or his daughters. This looks as though a period might yet arrive when a decent man can become a candidate for office, as in other countries.

The School Census of Los Angeles gives the following result: White—boys, 1,429; girls, 1,548; black—total, 9; children below 5 years, 1,220; children at public schools, 1,404; do. at private schools, 365; of American parentage, 2,516.

THE DELIGHTS OF ENGLISH NAIL MAKING.

Rowley Regis, June 5th.

I came here to inquire for myself how much it would cost to deliver one hundred tons of coal a month by the Rowley Colliery Company at two or three given localities within a distance of ten miles; and, having satisfied myself on that point, much to my pleasure I continued my walk from the coalpit up through the fields to Rowley Old Church. I came to a place called Bell End, which is apparently a new part of the old village. Through a small window I observed a female head bobbing up and down; soon I heard the sound of a hammer; and, never having seen any rivet-making done by human hands, I threaded my way through some brick passages until I came to the little smithy where "Alice" was at work. This was the name by which her father called her, whom I met on my way, and to whom I am indebted for the following remarkable piece of knowledge. Alice, I may say, was a young wife engaged in blowing her fire, heating pieces of iron in a "gleed" forge, and producing rivets from an anvil at the rate of 3,000 a day. For this manual labor Alice, her father proceeded to tell me in her presence, gets from the warehouse 1s. 0¾d., out of which she has to pay for wear and tear of tools 1d., carriage 1d., and a like sum for gleeds, a kind of small coke, made expressly for nail and rivet forges. On Monday she does her washing, on Saturday her cleaning up; so that she only works at rivets four days in the week, and her gross earnings, therefore, amount to 4s. 3d. for forging 12,000 rivets. I have said nothing of rent which Alice would pay, and which might amount to one shilling a week. She was a sedate young woman, well spoken, with very fair hair and a low sweet voice. John Price (Alice's father) then, at my request, took me to see his neighbors, Edward and Phyllis Tromans, who lived and worked at making nails close by. Phyllis is a handsome woman, with beautiful white teeth and abundance of flesh, which Rubens might have painted; it is so plentiful and rosy. This woman was forging large nails; and the manner in which she made a nail with a point and a head an inch and a-half in circumference fly off a piece of hot iron was marvelous to behold. She worke from eight o'clock in the morning until nine at night, and in four days will forge 54lb. weight of clout naile, for which she will receive the wondrous price of 3s. 8d., out of which she has to pay fivepence for gleeds and twopence for tools. Her husband works "as hard as he can drive" from six o'clock in the morning until eleven at night; and his week's wage amounts to 12s., from which tenpence for gleede and fourpence for tools will have to be deducted, to say nothing of rent. Edward Tromans was only forty-three years of age, but looked much nearer seventy. Two other young women were hammering away at rivets in company with Phyllis; and never as long as I live shall I forget that little black smithy. I once traveled many miles to see "Vulcan's Forge" by Velasquez; but there was in that famous picture no figure to equal that of Phyllis Tromane, and I shall remember Phyllis to the day of my death. That such a woman should be slaving in soot—blowing bellows, now with her left, and then wielding a hammer with her right hand—forging clout nails for twelve hours a day, in order to earn less than forty pence in a week, is a phenomenon that I would never have believed as being possible in England if I had not seen it. As John Price and I strolled into the village, I said: "Why, everybody seems to be idling." On which John explained that "They were all on strike." The strike, I discovered, was not for more wage, or against the present rate being lowered, but against the iniquitous truck system. After the men and women at many shops had earned their five shillings for the week's wages, they had to take out the amount in "tommy." That is, they would be compelled to pay 10d. a pound for American bam worth 6d., 8d. for bacon worth 3½d., and so on for butter, cheese, currants, raisins, and candles in like damnable disproportion. At last the men struck, and they refuse to go to work again unless they can be master of their wages and spend them as they like. The masters say that they will comply with this demand after their present stock of ham and cheese, bacon, and other commodities is exhausted; but the men steadily refuse to listen to the condition. Many of these I saw on the Rowley-road as I walked on to Dudley. Some were drunk, but playing at marbles like boys at school, and using language that I could not repeat under any circumstances. There were also many young women with very pale faces, many of whom had lost their front teeth; nor do I believe that the loss is to be attributed to eating too much sugar in any form. Farther on, at Tippity-green, I encountered Thomas Tibberts, a very small old man, aged seventy-two. He had a childlike smile on his face, and there was a clean crust of bread peeping out of his waistcoat pockets. I asked him in a loud voice—the tone of which, however, he could not mistake—"why he was loafing about there; on which he gave me a happy, toothless laugh, and said that "they had turned him off because he could not make 'em [meaning the nails] fast enough;" he could earn five shillings a week once; but all that was over, and now he got two shillings a week from the parish; which, he said, wasn't much, because he had to pay out of it a shilling a week for lodging. Not one of these people asked me to give them anything, or used a cringing or even an angry word. One jester, strong in drink, but able to hold his own, requested me as he saw me writing in my ponderous note-book, to "put him down for two pounds o' soap." But that was all that passed; and when I did leave something for Phyllis, through John Price, and Tommy Tibberts, by which they were to drink good health to me at night, they did not seem to be much moved by my presents. It was their way. God made them to forge nails as He made sheep for the slaughter.

From Tippity-green you can see the Clent and Malvern hills, and Halesowen and Cradley, which lie in a valley, from which spring a hundred tall chimneys; and these send out at every beat of a man's pulse immense volumes of the blackest smoke that coal and bad burning can make—hiding sun and sky, green grass and green tree, and clothing the whole creation with a horrible darkness. This is the sooty sphere in which ten thousand men, women and children labor day and night for perishable bread, and for nothing more; and even that is sometimes denied them, even though they have given their toil without complaint or stint. —Correspondent Pall Mall Gazette.

On a honeymoon tour, recently, the young husband, going across from Dover to Boulogne, was suddenly very strange. "Are you ill, love?" exclaimed the anxious model wife. "Oh! say, Alfred, beloved, are you ill?" He was afraid of being doubted, and faintly replied, "I think the shrimps I had for breakfast this morning must have been alive."

FACT AND FANCY.

Palace of fancy or attic of fact—
Which will my Imogeno visit to-night?
Is it her whim to see somebody act,
Or witness a play by reality's light?
I am indifferent; I have no choice—
Fancy or fact, dearest; which has your voice?

Fancy shows pictures more lurid, perhaps,
Shadowed by passion, by vice and by crime;
Fact counts its misery by the quick taps
Of a hid heart beating agony's time.
Fact lies in darkness and fancy in light;
Which will my Imogene visit to-night?

You can see trials and trouble and care,
Set off by lustre and gilding and dress;
Or you can watch them all hideously bare,
Framed in the pall of their own wretchedness.
Fact often kills, Fancy crowneth the right—
Which will my Imogene visit to-night?

Fact! Do you choose it? Well, fact let it be;
It is the basis of all of our plays,
But the five acts of the dramas we see
Really run throughout numberless days.
You hardly realize what you have read—
"Ten years elapse and the victim is dead."

Here, in this garret, a wife lying ill—
Only a line from reality's page—
You've seen the husband; you may see him still
Strut any night on a theater stage.
You've scarce observed him—forgotten him quite,
Guest at a hall for a dollar a night.

Just at this moment he's walking about,
Talking dumb show with the girl on his arm;
Dozens like him wander in and pass out,
Forming the picture that makes the scene's charm,
And his sole thought as he stands in the set—
"Is my poor girl at home lingering yet?"

She cannot live; she is past doctor's skill;
Well as he knows it he smiles and toils on;
Thinking at times with a heart-breaking thrill—
"Rent-day to-morrow, the last dollar gone."
A single set and a pitiful act,
Curtain descends on the attic of fact.

You do not like it? I thought not, my child;
We'll see no more of this terrible play.
Better the flimsiest fancy run wild
Than the dread drama of life's ev'ry day.
Weep at the well-acted woes if you list;
Soon dried are tears for what does not exist.

San Francisco, July 3, 1879. G. H. J.

KEARNEY AND THE TRADES UNIONS.

At last the Workingmen are being awakened out of their dream of high wages and of wealth to be acquired by denouncing capital and capitalists. For two years they have been talking all sorts of communistic nonsense, and threatening all sorts of dreadful things. Capitalists were, by some undefined process, to be compelled to yield up at least some portion of their wealth, and by some other equally undefined process it was to be distributed among the workingmen. This was regarded by the large mass of ignorant working people as a splendid programme, and although they may most of them have doubted its feasibility, still they applauded it enthusiastically, not thinking of the harm they were bringing on themselves. They now find that the millenium has not come, but that in place of that desired consummation of all things, they are suffering from the greatest depression of business that California has ever witnessed, and the lowest rate of wages that the State has ever known. How sane men could have expected any other result we are utterly at a loss to comprehend. We have all along condemned the Sand-lot orators in the interest of the State, but really far more in the interest of labor than of capital. As we have often said, capital can take ample care of itself; it is in a San Francisco bank this morning, and by noon it has been permanently transferred to New York or Boston or London. Capitalists are threatened with all sorts of confiscation, and they say, "Let us transfer our means beyond the reach of this villainous crew of confiscators," and they transfer their capital to some place where confiscation is not one of the fine arts but one of the qualifications for a place in the Newgate Calendar. One of our leading capitalists, a genuine Californian, and owing everything he has to the splendid opportunities this State offered to him, has made large investments in real estate in New York because there the communist is in danger of the State Prison, while deliberate proposals of robbery are altogether out of the question. We have no doubt that this gentleman breathes more freely when in California at the thought that he has no fear of the morrow, no fear of learning his property has been burned down by a mob, or that it is at the mercy of a crowd of lawless incendiaries and demagogues, such as have clustered around the foul-mouthed impostor Kearney. We maintain that the Sand-lot leaders have done irreparable injury to the State by causing capitalists to transfer their capital elsewhere, and by frightening outsiders from bringing their capital here. We read the record of the paralysis of business and of the ruin that have resulted in the number and value of deeds and of mortgages of real estate recorded in this city in the first six months of the last three years:

First Six Months of	No. of Deeds.	Amount of Deeds of Sales.	Amount of Mortgages.
1877	1,880	$12,095,000	$12,666,900
1878	1,268	7,065,300	6,976,200
1879	1,121	4,838,200	4,943,200

The valuation by the City and County Assessor of real estate and improvements in this city for the last three years is as follows:

Year.	Real Estate.	Improvements.	Total.
1877	$141,424,870	$49,547,760	$190,972,730
1878	140,384,706	50,761,465	191,146,171
1879	123,730,820	43,707,065	167,437,885

If, in the face of such a state of things as the above figures show, workingmen can go on hoping that they are going to benefit themselves by driving away the capital out of which their wages are to be paid, or that they have not seriously injured themselves by their violent and preposterous conduct, then we can only say they deserve their misfortunes. The trades unions, however, are beginning to look at the profit and loss showing of the Sand Lot movement, and they are somewhat bewildered to see that every step in its progress has been ruinous to them. We say, in the interests of labor, that the confidence that the Sand-lot impostors have destroyed must be restored by the action of the workingmen themselves; and they must reassure capitalists of their sense of justice and prudence by declaring in emphatic numbers against all the Sand Lot violence and rhodomontade, and in favor of the co-operation of laborers and capitalists in developing the trade and resources of the State. We know that many large buildings are projected in the city which nothing but the uncertainty of the attitude and policy of the workingmen keeps from being begun. Everywhere people with means are waiting, wondering how long this Sand Lot folly is going to last; how long Kearney, the worst enemy the working classes ever had, is going to be accepted by them as their leader; how much more capital they are going to drive away from this State before they are starved into the wisdom which desires to attract capital and raise wages. It would seem, at last, as if the trades union leaders are awakening to the fact that the interests of labor must be saved from further ruin by a complete reversal of the Sand Lot policy, and the sooner it is done the better.

"PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

California Theater.—The present Aimee season promises well. French opera bouffe, with its light, sparkling music, and its spicy, wicked dialogue, has found great favor in this moral land. This is Aimee's fourth visit to us, and she comes this time with a good troupe and an extensive repertoire. As compared with the former organizations, this company is not as perfect as those of '72 and '74, but very much superior to that of '76. As far as can be judged by the few performances this week, its principal weakness is in the lack of a good singing secunda. Theater-goers will all remember in this capacity M'lle Stani, an admirable vocalist. The chief merits of this season will lie in the repertoire. It contains several operas entirely unknown out here, and several others that have been presented on our stage in the butchered style characteristic of Mrs. Oate's adaptations. Les Cloches de Corneville, as presented on Monday night, was something so pleasantly different from the garbled version lately seen at another theater, that a new vista is opened as regards the charms and attractions of Le Petit Duc and La Marjolaine. The opening performance on Monday night was greeted by a perfect crush of a house. It reminded one of old times, when this community showed more desire to encourage and help efforts to please them; efforts made by a management far less willing and ready to do its best to meet public favor than the present one. The energy shown by these lessees, in striving to place before our public all that is talented and successful in present dramatic circles, deserves some recognition, and it can hardly be said that they have received it. In singing, Aimee has improved since her last visits. The quality of her voice is better, and in execution and general style there is great progress visible. She has lost none of the charm and vivacity and thorough chic that serves to make her one of the foremost opera bouffe actresses. She shows all her wonted vivacity and diableire. In appearance, a change, and an unfavorable one at that, is noticeable. A life full of fatigue and excitement leaves its tracks behind it, and age will finally tell. Miss Aimee has lost in the last few years some of her superfluous flesh, but her features have grown harder and coarser. The old favorites, Juteau and Duplan, met with complimentary receptions. Jouard is a good baritone and a capital actor, and Mme. Delorme an excellent bouffe duegre. Mlle. Gregoire has a very sweet and sympathetic voice, but of very little volume. She possesses the knack of, as the French call it, saying a song. That is, to give the full meaning and expression to the text, which in opera bouffe is far more important than a mere musical rendition of the air, with no attention to the words. Mlle. Raphael is a person of rather statuesque proportions, and with a handsome face, of the Jewish type. Her voice is a light contralto. In singing and acting, this member of the troupe is rather tame. Mezieres, the character comedian, is a remarkable actor. His "Gaspard," the miser, is a wonderful piece of eccentric acting. It is intensely artistic and artistically intense. The portrayal of impotent imbecility was the handiwork of a master mind. This artist has quite a reputation in his line, and genuine treats may be expected from him. The orchestra is a very good one, and the chorus will undoubtedly become so, although it is as yet a little unsteady. The bill this week included, besides Les Cloches de Corneville, La Fille de M'me Angot and La Jolie Parfumeuse. On Monday we are to have Le Petit Duc, and on Thursday La Petite Mariee, said to be a charming, spicy work. In criticising and reviewing opera bouffe, it must be borne in mind that a mere musical rendering of an opera means nothing. A pretty tune is very well in its way, but the audience must be able to hear and catch all the witticisms and jokes of the text. The talent of the artist is to be determined by his or her ability to do full justice to this feature, paying at the same time proper attention to the music.

Boscovitz's "Pianoforte Recital."—A commanding display of surprising technical intricacies, which patient and long continued application can alone insure, seldom if ever arouses the enthusiastic recognition and justly deserved appreciation which so much implied industry might reasonably enough expect and look for. A Pianoforte Recital might very easily become the data! basis of some curious reflections, and if it suited Mr. Boscovitz's purpose to so wish it and go into details, many a doting mamma's expectations would be blighted. Boscovitz has an activity and power of finger that can only be attained by incessant labor for hours every day, and that, too, for years. Dexterity of finger being a purely mechanical acquirement, no amount of talent can supersede actual practice. His style of playing the piano differs somewhat from the German routine usually followed, particularly in this country. Having very small hands, he of necessity shuns the Tarantula scramble mode of arranging the fingers on the keys. His motions have none of the High Jinks spider action so conspicuous in some of his brother artists, and so thoroughly antagonistic to all principle and reason. He does not pound the keys as if he had studied his mechanism in a stamp-mill; on the contrary, his style is free from the dash and seeming brilliancy which some look upon as essential in a display of technical ability.

Clanish in sentiment, his taste inclines to the music of Chopin, who was physically unsound and mentally erratic. Ever overloaded by a melancholy induced by disease, as might with everything like reason be expected, Chopin was never in a proper state of body, or mind either, to compose great and lasting works, although certain critics would force them into domesticity, while they at the same time proclaim that not one professional in a thousand can discover the hidden beauties in them—illusive monomaniasm! Fortunate or otherwise, Mr. Boscovitz seems very much inclined to depart from the fossil schools—the B. B.'s of antiquity. With courage, and sense to back it with, he ought henceforth to eschew all the worn-out Bach and Beethoven senilities, and, if Chopin proves unequal to the task, which it hazards little to say he will, there are plenty of others to draw upon.

Boscovitz, if sometimes fantastic with his hands, is nevertheless an accomplished player—the would-be amiable, if sinister hostility of his professional brethren to the contrary notwithstanding. At the Recital he went through a very mixed programme, with very little in it to fascinate. Besides Dr. John Bull's "Village Bell" and his own two compositions, there was nothing attractive. Performing under a trio of celebrities, he betrayed no nervousness. At the tail end of his Steinway grand, Rubenstein looked a good caricature of a pious nigger; Chopin, modest and sickly looking, was supported on the right by Liszt, who appeared fascinated at a butterfly fight on the ceiling above. In the garb and with the dignity-scowl of an itinerant priest, his attitude and expression are those of a stool-pigeon or bogus bidder at a Peter Funk auction.

Baldwin's Theater.—In last week's issue justice was hardly done to the admirable representation at this theater. While the play, The Marriage by Moonlight, is but a weak arrangement of an old-time, improbable and impossible melo-drama, still it gives an opportunity for the excellent stock company to do some good acting. The total want of appreciation exhibited toward Miss Coghlan is something that must remain inexplicable to theater-sharps and connoisseurs. This lady gives us pictures of the highest order of dramatic art, which should set the town agog with excitement, but they only seem to bring together a corporal's guard of intelligent, appreciating listeners, whose faces are all familiar. They are members of the press, regular first-nighters, and, highest tribute of all, unemployed actors. Hardly an evening passes but what the intensely intelligent and natural efforts of this lady meet with enthusiastic applause and recalls, and still the general public keep aloof. In this play Miss Coghlan's portraiture of the heroine was something so artistic that its equal is rarely seen on the stage. There is not a point lost, every little, minute detail handled as carefully as the more important, broader effects, and the result is a finished, perfect impersonation. The different phases with which the character abounds—warmth, sensibility, dignity of manner, and mental misery—were all effectively depicted. Mr. O'Neil gave an intelligent, manly rendition of the character of the hero. His acting was very strong in the third act, and particularly so in the last scene of the play. Mr. Morrison was intrusted with one of those characters in which he is at his best—that of a villain concealed under the suavity and polish of a gentleman. The part of "Felix" gave Mr. Robinson a chance to prove that adverse criticism may result in improvement. This gentleman has an admirable voice, which he uses with proper elocutionary effects. The rigidity of manner and appearance which mars everything he does was hardly noticeable in this effort, and the result is a creditable impersonation. Mr. Bradley does his little bit in his usual conscientious, merit-deserving way. Miss Corcoran and Mr. Herne represent an element that robs the play of all its plausibility. They are gipsies of an impossible type. Although both of these characters are played with unusual ability, the utter absurdity pertaining to their presence in the dramatis personæ render them of no importance to the reviewer. The entre acts in this theater are among the most enjoyable moments of the evening, through the music of Harry Widmer's orchestra. This is composed of finished soloists, and the selections performed are tasteful and appropriate. L'Assommoir is announced for Monday next.

Bush Street Theater.—Mr. Locke announces that there will be one week more of old "Uncle Josh." Another proof of the success of this remarkably good play. So all of you Yankees, particularly, and everybody else generally, should lose no time in witnessing this most perfect representation of American country life. From a national and patriotic point of view, the picture of the Yankee farmer is a pleasing one. Although possessing features that cause regret, in the way of lack of polish and disregard of conventionalities, it is so full of the nobler traits of manhood, truth, honesty and integrity that one's heart warms with pity and pleasure. It is through the natural foresight of Mr. J. M. Hill that the church-going as well as the theater-going public of the whole United States are able to see this splendid production, for he was the first to discover Denman Thompson's abilities, and, by securing a good company of artists to assist him, completed the success we are all so familiar with. Mr. Hill is now about doing the same thing with Lawrence Barrett. He has engaged him for two years, and will bring to his support the very best available talent. The opening piece will be A New Play, one of the most powerful productions ever put upon the stage, and the language of which is truly fine. Unless Mr. Hill succeeds in getting the Fifth Avenue Theater for a year or more, the play will be produced at the Lyceum, New York. We have not the slightest doubt but that, with the wonderful business sagacity of this genial gentleman, at the end of his engagement Barrett will find himself as popular in his way as Edwin Booth or Denman Thompson are in their's. Mr. Locke announces as his following attraction Tony Pastor's Variety Troupe. While opinions differ as to the merit of variety performances, it is useless to deny their popularity with a large majority of our people, and this engagement is made in strict accordance with the policy of this theater to meet the popular wishes.

Standard Theater.—Notwithstanding the great counter-attraction of Aimee, the Pinafore is still sailing along successfully with a stiff breeze of plaudits and ducats. The long run has so familiarized every one with their respective parts that everything goes off as smoothly as you please. Several of the good voices in the chorus, not anticipating such a protracted success, had engaged themselves to the California, and were necessarily compelled to withdraw, but this loss is not noticeable, with the exception perhaps of Mr. Harris' basso profundo. The amateurs have sunk all mauner and semblance of such, and now do their work with the skill and ability of veterans. The wonderful youngsters continue to daily-increasing audiences, and are really a sight to behold. This, Saturday, afternoon and evening will be the last performances in this city of the Emelie Melville troupe prior to a tour through the interior; appearing first at Oakland, thence to San Jose, Stockton, Sacramento and San Rafael. We can tell our country friends they have a rare treat in store. The Juvenile Company will appear every evening next week, and at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

At the Revels' Masquerade, July 3d, quite a novel feature was introduced, in the shape of a small hand fire-engine, called "New York," which was loaned for the occasion by the Exempts. On the apparatus was seated, dressed as a "Fire Jake" and carrying a trumpet, the three-year old son of P. L. Ducasse, the little fellow being a kind of Dave Scannel in miniature. It was quite a pretty innovation, and a gladsome sight to the heart of that old vamp, Jerry Whalen.

Woodward's Gardens offer, on Sunday only, the wonderful child violinist, Master Mitchell Banner; and to-day and to-morrow the performing dogs, the great Wambold and son in equilibristic acts, the aerial bars, grand concerts, and Buislay's amazing pantomime, Nigo, the Stupid Waiter. No extra charge.

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Post street, between Mason and Taylor, Rev. Wm. A. Scott, D. D., pastor. Preaching on Sunday as usual at 11 A. M. and 7½ P.M. The public cordially invited to attend. Communion (Lord's Supper) at the close of morning service. Sunday School and Bible Classes, 9½ A.M. Prayer and Praise Service at 6½ P.M.

Conservatory Pianos, $250. 200 Post street, corner of Dupont.

Chit-Chat.

Sothern's opening piece at the Park will be Crutch and Toothpick. ——Lilian Cleves Clark, while in Europe, proposes to complete her musical studies, and it is also likely that she may star (!!) through England in Bronson Howard's Banker's Daughter.——Carlotta Patti will soon be here.——Miss Lizzie Harold will spend the summer at Gardiner, Maine. She will be here in time for the new season at the California.——Miss De Belocca takes Miss Cary's place in Strakosch's company.——Miss Thurshy will return to America in September, but goes back to Europe next summer.——Emmet threatens to bring over from Ireland for his new play, Fritz in Ireland, a lot of real Irish men and women, who will talk the real brogue. Have mercy, Joe; are there not enough Micks hereabouts?—— Miss Cary will not be in Strakosch's troupe next season. Mapleson has made her an offer for his American tour.——The rumor that Miss Sarah Bernhardt will visit and star in this country will only be confirmed in case the lady makes up her mind to resign from the Comedie Francais. This, because the rules governing this unique organization are perfectly rigid and stringent upon this point, and are to be made still more so. This rumor is traced directly to the lady herself, who has announced, it is said, that she will come to this country before 1881, without fail.——The French Courts have legalized Marquis de Caux's opposition to Patti's appearance in Paris in conjunction with Mr. Nicolini, and the performances announced at the Gaitie for next February will not take place.——Suppé, the light opera composer, is an Italian by birth, but an Austrian subject—a Dalmatian.——Why does Annie Pixley say she will never return to San Francisco?——The highest yearly subscriptions paid to opera houses are as follows: Paris, $175,000; Berlin, $140,000; Stuttgard, $107,500; Dresden, $80,000; Vienna, $60,000.——Byron's The Girls has reached its fiftieth performance.——The Lord Mayor of London has invited the Comedie Francais to a banquet in their honor.——George Rignold sails from Australia to England in August.——M'lle Anizette used to be the darling of the Empire, and especially admired by a member of the Imperial family—the present head, Prince Jerome.——The London Times is being taken to task for its ratber unfair style of dramatic criticism, which contrasts strongly with John Oxenford'e consistent and judicious way of writing.——Locke has signed a contract with Sothern for next February. Fifty per cent of the gross, and railroading for the company from Chicago out here and back. Where ie tbe profit to come in?——Locke also has the Colville Folly Troupe, to come out about Christmas time.

REVIEW OF NEW BOOKS.

The Yellow Mask By Wilkie Collins. Appleton's Handy Volume series. For sale by Billings, Harbourne & Co.

The scene of tbis story is laid in Italy, a century or so ago. The cbaracters are few, but admirably drawn. The plot is touching and dramatic, without being in the slightest degree sensational, and the tale is told with all the grace and simplicity wbich distinguishes the best works of the illustrious author.

THE NATURAL RESOURCES OF THE UNITED STATES. By J. Harris Patton. New York: D. Appleton & Co., 1879. San Francisco: Bancroft & Co.

This small book is a primer intended to give, in a brief and very condensed form, a sketch of the natural resources of tbe United States. Within 102 pages it deals with minerals, metals, soil, rainfall, bealtb resorts, climate, products of the soil, the forest and the sea, and numerous other subjects. If be who runs has not time to read it, he may at least carry it in his pocket until he finds time. It gives a summary of the leading resourcee of the country, whicb every intelligent person should be aware of, and will doubtless be found very useful for the young, as well as for those who in a busy life bave not time to read more recondite works on the subjects of which it treats.

The "Portfolio" for June has Mr. McWhirter's "Vanguard," a striking picture of Highland cattle, under the lead of a bull, toiling through the snow, Merton College, Oxford, and Albert Durer's famous "Ritter, Tod und Teufel," besides the new College and Castle street, Oxford. Mr. Lang discourses of High Tory Oxford, with gossip of Queen Anne's time; and Mr. Hamerton closes his notices of Goya, with what seems to us a fair explana ion of the extravagant claims made on behalf of this artist by some continental critics: "It is the thinker in Goya, and not the artist, who has taken a place in the history of liberal ideas in Europe." What a temper the old man had he showed when Wellington sat to him. The Duke made some remark on the painter's style, when Goya snatched a rapier from the wall and made a thrust, which Wellington only escaped by leaping nimbly on one side. The Albert Duror is the very best copy of the composition we have seen, and Mr. Hamerton says its excellence is wholly due to the personal skill of M. Arnaud Durand. The Art Chronicle has notes of the better pictures in the Royal Academy exhibition, which seems to be on a higher level of merit than usual. Two water-color exhibitions are criticised, and there are notices of eome admirable works in the Continental pictures at Goupil's Gallery and the French Gallery in Pall Mall. Merely to read the names of the artists represented in these makes one restless. The hook reviews commend Miss Kate Thompson's "Hand Book to the Public Picture Galleries of Europe" as compact and useful, and Mrs. Jameson's "Memoirs," certainly one of the most entertaining biographiee of the year. Madame Cadart's "Annual Portfolio of Etchings," which may be had for a few ehillings, gives a connected view of the progress of European etching.

"The Pacific Medical and Surgical Journal."—The numher for July, like its rival, the Western Lancet, is more valuable for its foreign excerpts than for the long-winded lugubratione of local authors. It is a great pity that one really good clinical and sanitary journal cannot be published in this city. Nothing would contribute more effectually to the education of the profession and to a better knowledge of the diseases of this coast. We observe a most careless misprint in the name of Dr. J. H. Stannard for Dr. J. H. Stallard, the distinguished memher of the College of Physicians, London, whose desire to contribute some portion of his large experience, sbould not be discouraged by such a glaring mistake.

The "Commercial Herald" says the bonds of the Spring Valley Water Works were placed in New York to the amount of $2,000,000, at 92¼. They had been in our market for two years, and could not he sold on account of the newspaper clamor against the Company; though, now that New York has secured them, capitalists here see their mistake. The Herald knows of a lot of $300,000 withdrawn at 92¼, for which an offer of 95 has since heen made, and it predicts that the whole $2,000,000 will be floated at par and over.

THE DAY BOOK

FROM

Saturday to Saturday.

Berlin, July 4th.—The Tariff Commission to-day agreed to the amendment introduced by Herr Windthrost, proposing any revenue in excess of 130,000,000 marks he distributed among the separate States.——London, July 5th.—The British troop-ship Orontes arrived at Madeira to-day with the remains of the Prince Imperial. The remains were transferred from the Boadicea to the Orontes at Cape Town, June 15th.——Paris, July 5th.—The Chamber of Deputies has passed the first six clauses of Jules Ferry's education hill. The debate on the principal clause, against the Jesuits, will take place to-day. The petition against M. Jules Ferry's hill now has 1,643,000 signatures.——Paris, July 5th.—Lepere, Minister of the Interior, estimated that in consequence of the had crop, purchases of foreign grain would amount to £20,000,000.——London, July 5th.—In the House of Commons last night the Government agreed to the motion of Henry Caplin (Conservative) for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the causes of agricultural depression, and how far they were created, or are remediable, hy legislation,——St. Petersburg, July 5th.—Four hundred Nihilists were arrested at Kieff on the night of June 26th, and a great store of weapons seized.——London, July 5th.—A Berlin correspondent of the Times transmits a report that the Chinese are committing outrages in Kuldja, and thousands of fugitives are seeking protection at Russian forts.——Cape Town, June 14th, via Madeira, July 4th.—Col. Newdigate has cleared the country between Ilyotyozic and Upoko rivers without loss. Intelligence is received of the arrival of two more messengers from Cetewayo, at Pietermaritzburg, asking time for a conference. They have been sent to headquarters. It is rumored that a fortnight's armistice has been agreed to.——Yokohama, July 5th.—Ex-President Grant and party arrived to-day from China.——Vienna, July 5th.—In the election for members of the Reichsrath thus far, the Liberals and 130 Conservatives and Nationalists have been chosen. The Liberals lost 33 seats.——New York, July 6th.—In consequence of the continued high water, Szegedin cannot he rebuilt this year. The inhabitants will live in wooden harracks during winter.——Nearly 200 delegates representing Hebrew congregations have arrived in New York to attend the union of American Hebrew congregations.——Paris, July 7th.—The authorities interdicted the great meeting at the Bordeaux Alhambra, where Blanqui was advertised to speak.——New York, July 7th.—The Bulletin prints the following: A private dispatch from Callao yesterday from Grace Bros. states that 850 tons of guano are heing shipped daily from the deposits in the Lohos Islands, and that forty vessels have cleared from Callao for that port to load guano.——New York, July 7th.—The Panama Star and Herald says: Passengers from the south coast report a hattle at Coloma and the capture of that point hy the allied forces. Tbe Chilean losses are stated to be 1,500 killed.——London, July 7th.—A Berlin dispatch says: The new German Consul-General to Samoa has received orders to abstain from iuterference with internal affairs. The suggestion of certain interested parties that Germany shall annex Samoa finds no favor in high quarters.——The latest official telegram states that the houses of fourteen out of the fifteen wards forming the most important part of Irkutsk, Siheria, were destroyed hy fire on the 4th, and many inhabitants are homeless.——Paris, July 8th.—De Lesseps does not think the expense of constructing the Darien Canal will exceed two hundred and fifty million francs. The difficulties of the work were not so formidable as those which had been overcome in the construction of the Suez Canal, as a railroad already existed along the course of the proposed Panama Canal, with a large town at each extremity. De Lesseps fully expects commencing work on the Canal next New Year's day, employing 30,000 or 40,000 workmen, some of them Chinese, and 15,000 Brazilian negroes.——Tirnova, July 8th.—Prince Alexander has arrived. His reception was one of indescrihable enthusiasm.——Rome, July 8th.—The Diritto announces that negotiations hetween Germany and the Vatican are likely soon to result in a general amnesty to transgressors of the May laws.——London, July 8th.—A dispatch to the Daily News from Rangoon says: Cholera among British troops at Thayetmyo is spreading.——Madrid, July 8th.—In the Chamher of Deputies to-day the Minister of Foreign Affairs stated that he had ordered two frigates to prepare to support the protest of Spain against the action of San Domingo. Señor Castelar demanded that the Government insist upon the summary punishment of Puerto Plata.——San Francisco, July 8th.—United States Bank Commissioner Langford left on the 6th for the East, having completed his annual examination of the National Banks in this State. The hanks under Mr. Langford's supervision embrace all the area west of the Missouri. As a general thing they have been found in good condition, though somewhat depressed hy the prevailing stagnation in business circles. The depression is especially true of those in this State. The hanks, as a rule, have heen found favorahle to the National Bank system.——San Francisco, July 9th.—The Arctic discovery ship Jeannette left here yesterday. The anchor was hove short ahout half-past three, and promptly at four o'clock the ship swung free, the propeller commenced its revolutions, and slowly she moved through the water on her way toward the Arctic seas. The Jeannette was accompanied hy the following yachts: Consuelo, Con. O'Connor, Azaline, Clara, Magic, Emerald, Ida, Sappho, Lively, and others. The tugs Millen Griffith, Governor Irwin, Rabboni and Rocket also joined the fleet. When off Fort Point, Major Hashrouck, of the Fourth Artillery, commanding the garrison, fired a salute of ten guns from the harhette. The courtesy was acknowledged hy cheering and dipping of colors hy the Jeannette.

An ambitious young writer having asked, "What magazine will give me the highest position quickest?" was told, "A powder magazine, if you contrihute a fiery article."

FOLDED AWAY.

[BY FIDELIA.]

Day by day, we fold away
Some treasure that our heart holds dear,
Some cherished thing to which we cling
And bless with many a kiss and tear.

A shred of lace may hold a place
That jewels rare could never win:
With love untold a ribbon old
Is laid our dearest shrine within.

A little tress we fondly press
Unto a heart that aches with pain,
Then, with a sigh for days gone by,
We fold it from our sight again.

And is there not a hallowed spot,
In memory's casket lying low,
Where day by day we fold away
Our heart-thoughts lest the world should know?

Many a one, now lost and gone,
In sweet day dreamings we behold,
Who, in our sleep, come back to keep
With us their vigils as of old.

And yet, alas! such dreams must pass,
Life's sterner duties must be met!
Quickly we turn and strive to learn
That cruel lesson—to forget!

When from the gleam of love's sweet dream
Our heart's awake in sad surprise,
How dimly burn, where'er we turn,
The lesser lights that meet our eyes!

When o'er the dead our tears are shed,
While on the silent lips we press
The last fond kiss—oh, is not this
The summit of life's loneliness?

And yet we know though all lie low
Whom we have ever loved or known,
Still we must live and learn to give
To earth the claims it calls its own.

O grief untold! with hearts grown old,
Like flowers blighted in a day,
How fondly then from sight of men
We fold our dear dead loves away!

SYDNEY EXHIBITION.

Editor News Letter:—Since you opened your columns to advocate the Sydney International Exhibition 1879, reports and correspondence relating thereto have from time to time appeared. The accompanying is a copy of my last communication to the Royal Commission.

July 8th, 1879. Yours truly, JOHN J. BLEASDALE.

MICROSCOPICAL SOCIETY'S ROOMS,
120 Sutter street, San Francisco, July 7th, 1879.

Augustus Morris, Esq., Secretary Sydney International Exhibition, 1879:

MY DEAR MR. MORRIS—I missed writing to you by last mail through being delayed a day longer than I had anticipated on my return journey from the State of Oregon, whither I had gone in search of objects for the Exhibition. Communication had been opened with the Vice Consul, but only to convince me more strongly of the utter uselessness of depending on that class of officials to do anything of a public nature requiring time, care and address, outside of their immediate duties. They have business of their own, and naturally grudge the loss of time. When, however, I arrived at Portland, the Vice-Consul did his best to forward the objects of my journey when he understood what was wanted and how to obtain it. To him and to Mr. Reid, Secretary of the Board of Trade, the thanks of the Commission are due, for they made every exertion to induce that body to meet and hear me, but to no purpose, because it feared to be called upon for pecuniary assistance. I succeeded, however, in securing an extensive collection of grain of all kinds grown in the State, both in the straw and cleaned, as well as of grasses and their seeds, and salmon. There is some little hope of obtaining samples of woollen goods, leather and tanning materials, as also sections of wood and veneers.

Among the drawbacks of these Republican Governments stands prominent the fact that there is no manner of means of obtaining from a public source so much as one shilling for any purpose, no matter how patriotic or valuable to local industries it may be. And as to the State Legislatures of these two States, when they last met, as they do once in two years, no money could be got for even so important an object as advertising the States at the World's Fairs of Philadelphia and Paris, while all the time the mercantile classes, who are longing for an extension of commerce, and in no direction so much as Australia, have shown themselves as mean as the Legislatures. I have personally waited upon a number of the reputedly wealthiest of the citizens, both bankers and merchants, to solicit them to help this Committee a little with their wealth for the credit of the State and city, and the advancement of commercial relations with their nearest and largest markets outside of the States of the Union, but to no purpose. One merchant—and one only—promised some pecuniary assistance, but even that itself depended upon my first obtaining some like aid from other parties, which, since I have got none, might as well never have been promised. Thus far I have defrayed all expenses myself. Now do not run away with the idea that I tell you this as if I expected to be re-imbursed by the Commission—nothing of the kind—but that you may clearly understand that if the display from the Pacific Coast be not nearly so extensive and varied as it should be, it is not owing to any bungling or want of effort on my part.

In your most important department of Education, the University Curriculum, the system of Public Schools of the State will be shown very completely, through the courtesy of the University authorities and of the Superintendent of State Schools, and also of the Superintendent of Public Instruction of this city and county. By correspondence with the flourishing University of Michigan, I have obtained the Curriculum there pursued, as also several interesting educational reports and minor publications. These and whatever more of the kind I can obtain will be sent on by next month's mail.

Among the rare and valuable products of this State is a kind of marble (not alabaster), which in some respects resembles onyx. It is a wonderfully beautiful substance, about as hard as Carrara marble, of many colors and shades of color, and capable of taking the highest polish, so that one may look into it, as it were. As much as £300 apiece are paid for a single mantel-piece of it. This I have endeavored to obtain, and may now perhaps succeed, since Lord Loftus told me the other day that he had urged the owners and workers of it to send samples to the Exhibition. I have seen many rich marbles, but none, to my thinking, equal to this. But here again, "surgit amari aliquid," tho expense—money out of pocket, trifling though it be. Had I had at my disposal only £100 to defray the expenses of packing, freight and insurance, I could have more than doubled the quantity and value of the exhibits which will be sent. Very many have expressed their willingness to send goods to be sold at the close of the Exposition for what they would bring, who could on no account be induced to incur the preliminary expenses.

By telegram in the newspapers, I learn that the U. S. Government have at length voted £4,000 towards the Sydney Exhibition, and appointed a commission of two, and directed that all goods for the future must be sent via this port, and I have opened correspondence with the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington to ascertain at whose disposition the money is placed, and if any portion of it he available for this State, and when I learn the result I will advise you. But I am told not to look for one cent coming this way.

Hoping the two ship-loads of exhibits from the Eastern States will make a good set-off against the paltry show of the Western, and trusting to be able to judge for myself before the Exhibition closes, I am, as you know,

Yours faithfully and sincerely, JOHN J. BLEASDALE, D.D.

REGISTRATION.

Republicans, Attention!

Headquarters Republican State Central Committee, Rooms Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, No. 703 Market street, southwest corner Third street, San Francisco, June 26, 1879.

The vital importance of immediate REGISTRATION must be apparent to every Republican, when the fact is announced that the entire Registration of this city and county has been wiped out; and that no one will be allowed to vote at the September Election unless RE-REGISTERED. The State Central Committee calls the earnest attention of Republicans to this matter, and requests them, without delay, to register themselves, so as to strengthen the hands of the organization and place it in a position to win the approaching contest. No true Republican will neglect this most imperative and urgent duty. By order of the Committee.

M. D. BORUCK, Secretary. [June 28.] W. W. MORROW, Chairman.

THE AVERILL MIXED PAINT

Is manufactured from strictly pure White Lead, Zinc, and Pure Linseed Oil, to which is added Water Glass, which chemically unites the ingredients and holds them in solution, so they cannot separate. As a house paint it has no equal, producing a brilliant glossy finish, impervious to the weather, and

Will Last Twice as Long

as any other paint made. It is of pure white, and any Shade or Color desired, mixed ready for the brush, so that any one can apply it.

Our wagon and machinery paints, from the more common colors to the finest vermilion, are specially desirable.

Our fire-proof roof, barn and bridge paint, manufactured from oxide of iron, is the best and cheapest paint for the purpose that can be produced.

Put up in ¼, ½, 1 and 5 gallon cans, and in barrels, sold by the gallon. Send for sample card of colors and price list. Address,

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, the beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, which for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of the tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in the Pescadero river.

THE DARIEN CANAL AND FOREIGN INTERFERENCE.

A portion of the great American people is getting desperately wrathy because it seems that this country is going to play a very insignificant part in the Isthmus Canal project. Certain of our military Bombastes Furiosos solemnly claim that in cass of a foreign war the canal would prove of incalculable advantage to the enemy; others protest against the project from a commercial point of view; but the greater part are simply savage because the United States government is not foremost in ths undertaking. All of these objections are ridiculous enough. A war between the United States and an European power would be solely a naval war, and there isn't a second-class power in the old world that couldn't whip our puny navy out of sight and lay our defenseless coast towns under contribution without need of any such facilities of communication as the canal would furnish. If we want to keep our coasts secure, we shall do so much more effectually aud creditably by building decent vessels and bringing our fraudulent naval constructors to book than by hindering an undertaking which the interest of the whole world demands. The commercial objection seems to he based upon the belief that the canal won't pay. Well, those who think so needn't he shareholders. At the same time, if De Lessep's latest estimate of total cost—$50,000,000—he correct, there can he no douht about its paying; as in that case the tax of three dollars per ton originally intended would of course be reduced in proportion to the cost. As for saying that "uothing practicable can come from the present agitation in Europe upon the subject unless this Government takes the initiative," and that we "cannot afford to allow any foreign government to strike a spade in this project except under the auspices of the United States," that is all pig-headed buncombe. The people of the United States have had abundant opportunity to construct a canal if they wished to. Nohody would have sought to deprive them of "the initiative" if they had planked down their money and gone to work, or if they had shown any disposition to do so. Even yet, if they are so terribly anxious to head the uudertaking, they can do so by paying for the privilege. But this doesn't suit them. They were quite content to see foreign engineers and surveyors do all ths preliminary work, and they are perfectly satisfied that foreign capital and enterprise shall carry the project through, but they must have all the glory, and must have it "on the cheap." And, after all, what special affair of ours is it? What have we got to do with the Isthmuses of Panama, of Darien, or of Nicaragua more than any other nation not inhabiting or owning them? If the project had any political significance, why, then our national fowl might clap his wings and scream about the "Monroe Doctrine"—and his scream has always been sharper than his talons in that particular, by the way. But the canal scheme presents no such feature. It is not an affair of governments, but of individuals, and the only change proposed to be made in the political status of the strip of country through which the artery passes is that it shall forever be sacredly neutral ground for all peaceful purposes. "Under the auspices of the United States," indeed! Under the jobbery of the United States, we suppose that means. It would be a fine field for our slippery government contractors to play their tricks in; hut we somehuw think that they will have to louk elsewhere. The down-trodden and oppressed subjects of the effete monarchies have got ahead of us—as they always do when science, liberality and the nobler sort of enterprise can win the race. We are very smart at stuffing ballot-boxes, celebrating glorious Fourths, patenting jimcracks and mixing drinks, but when it comes to cutting continents in half, we had better take a back seat. Besides, if the great powers, or any one of them, were resolved to make the canal regardless of us and our wishes, the formidable question would arise: What are we going to do about it? And echo would answer, What?

THE OAKLAND STRIKERS.

There is trouble over in Oakland about the employment of Chinese in filling in the Railroad Company's long wharf. White men were originally employed at $1 50 per day each—considerably more than Chinamen would have been paid, but they struck for $2, and the contractor now proposes to hring Mongolians on the scene. Hence all the trouble. The argument of the Caucasians, so far as we can understand it, seems to be that, since times are hard and business is dull, their wages must be increased, which is rather a queer way of putting it. But a more ludicrous feature of the affair is a protest "signed by a large number of citizens of Alameda county," who therein declare that if Chinamen are employed instead of "the sons and daughters of American citizens" they will "assert their claims as did their ancestors at Lexington, Concord, and Bunker Hill." Now we will venture to state our belief that not one of the actual strikers is the son of an American citizen, and that not one of ths signers of the protest had an ancestor who was an American at the time of the hattles mentioned. We are ready to swear that nine-tenths of the whole "biling" of them are Irishmen born iu Ireland, who, if they knew anything at all about their "ancestors," which they don't, would find those worthies in the British ranks if they took any hand in the war of independence. When you hear men talk so freely about their American citizenship, you may always be sure that they have acquired the honor very recsntly, and when you hear them jabber about their ancestors who fought and died in the cause of American liberty, you may wager your Sunday boots that they are fresh importations from some effete monarchy.

CALIFORNIANS ON WALL STREET.

Wall street begins, perforce, to recognize the influence and power of California capital, and the names of Keene, Mills and Tevis are becoming as familiar to the Gothamites as to ourselves. The agencies of the Nevada Bank and Bank of California, in New York, command a respect born of their mighty accumulations of the yellow metal. William M. Lent, whose luck is akin to that of Baldwin, is gradually educating the New Yorkers to a proper appreciation of our mines, and is ably seconded by a score of old San Franciscans who "know all ahout it." Besides Keene's wheat speculation, he is largely interested in Lake Shore and telegraph stock, and has recently been elected a Director of the celebrated Erie Railroad. Mr. Mills is also credited with a penchant for telegraph stock, and is said to have acquired a large interest in Lake Shore, by purchase from Jay Gould. Great things are told of the latter's new Central Union Telegraph Company, in which Messrs. Keene, Tevis and Mills are also thought to be concerned. One thing is certain, that our solid men need fear no comparison with the strongest and ahlest of Wall streeters. A graduate of our Stock Exchange has nothing more to learn—at least, not until he gets to heaven.

FREE TRADE IN THE EAST.

It is somewhat singular that while there is a strong tendency towards free trade in the Atlantic States, where they have amply tested the ahsurdities of protection, the doctrine should find favor with so eminent a statesman as Prince Bismarck. The German free trade newspapers openly avow that in the case of rails the German proprietors are combined to enforce high prices at home, in order that they may sell at a loss ahroad, and an instance is given where a Westphalian company has made a successful tender for the steel rails required by a line in upper Italy, at £4 19s. per ton, while another company (the Konigshutte) sold a quantity to the Upper Silesian Railway at £8 5s., or £3 6s. more for the German than the Italian railway. The Chancellor's new tariff is evidently aimed at ths United States and Russia. The principal articles sought to he excluded are petroleum, wheat, corn, horses and cattle, meats, canned fruits, tobacco, cigars, lard and cheese. In contra-distinction to this short-sighted German policy was the speech or Mr. Foster, M. P. for Bradford, of which the summary by telegraph, dated 30th ult., terminates: "There could he but one meaning tu protection or reciprocity, and that was a tax on food. The people of England would never stand such a tax." The American people have long since discovered that protection is nothing more nor less than systematized robbery of the community in order to enrich a few individuals. The excessive competition now prevailing in the Eastern States is due to the premium placed upon competition by Government, in the shape of a tariff which excluded foreign trade. So keen had that competition become that our manufacturers were forced to seek markets for their surplus abroad, even though the prices realized left no margin for profit. Nothing but our immense food supplies could have so long sustained such unuatural conditions. Now, when our merchants wish to enter European markets, the Continental authorities feel inclined to apply the tu quoque argument and say: "You rejected our trade these many years, now we reject yours!" Fencing in one's own commerce is very pretty, provided we don't fence out our neighhor's. Thereby, perchance, we lose many ducats.

A SPECIMEN CANARD.

On the 23d ultimo a certain newspaper of this city published one of its customary fabrications about a great embryotic revolution in Mexico, which would infallibly result in the expulsion of President Diaz and the succession of General Negrete. By late advices from Washington and the City of Mexico it appears that all such statements were based principally upon imagination. Minister Zamacona stated to a N. Y. Herald reporter that the names mentioned in the article were unknown to him, if they even existed, and while denying in toto any danger, present or prospective, of the overthrow of Diaz, Seüor Zamacona was of opinion that such revolutionary reports emanated from a class of people un the border, who, in their eagerness to enforce "claims" against the Mexican Government, would hesitate at uo means to embroil the two countries in war. One of these people possesses 1,400 such "claims," and they are usually as worthless as their "owners. Sr. Zamacona felt assured that President Diaz wuuld be continued in office by the will of a vast majority of his countrymen, who believe in his patriotism, ability and conservatism. The Minister also directed attention to the fact that imports into Mexico from the United States have risen from $5,000,000 to $7,000,000 annually under General Diaz's policy of fostering relations between these countries. From Mexico the Two Republics (newspaper), of the 14th ult., informs us correctly about Negrete's foolish attempt. At the instance of a Spaniard, who edited a small sheet at the capital city, General Negrete issued his pronunciamento in the columns of said sheet. The entire result was that the Spaniard left the Republic "by request," and Negrete, perceiving no effect from his attempt, went humhly to President Diaz and asked his pardon. The self-styled "General" Negrete was the laughing stock of the Mexicans, and his "army" did not even exist on paper. It looks as though the "live sheet" had been badly sold, and we suggest that it now pull "the documents in our possession" relating to this widely spread revolution!

THE ENGLISH LABOR UNION.

This organization of English mechanics and lahorers was formed about eight years ago, and now claims a membership of over 3,000,000. The weekly dues of 2d. from each individual produce a gross annual income of more than £1,300,000. These funds are divided among the sick bureau, the emigrant lureau and the labor bureau. The emigrant bureau has assisted upward of 60,000 people in ohtaining passage to New Zealand and Australia, and in placing them after their arrival there. The labor bureau attends to political affairs and differences hetween the masters and men. If wages are reduced below living rates, the men are advised by their Union leaders not to strike, but to inform the master that they will not accept the pay, and continue their work. Of course this places the responsiblity of their discharge upon the masters. Once a lock-out is begun, the Union leaders proceed to investigate whether the master has been guided merely by avarice, or forced by diminished profit to close. In the former case, the difficulty continues, but in the latter, the men heing satisfied the master is unable to pay higher rates, resume their work until prosperous times enable them to do hetter. There is considerably more common sense in such methods than in those in use in America.

GENERAL GRANT'S MOVEMENTS.

By late telegrams from Japan it is promulgated that the ex-President has considerably changed his programme, and that instead of reaching this city within a few weeks, he now proposes to visit the Australian Colonies and the Sandwich Islands. It is generally understood that this detour has considerahle political significance. General Grant, being a very prominent candidate for the Presidency, shakes off all the fatigue and worry attendant upon convention work, and leaves his calling and election in the hands of his friends. In the meantime he enjoys several months more of ease and comfort, and successfully eludes, for at any rate a hrief season, the adulations and attentions of the military of California. It has been hintsd that the latter consideration over-balanced all the rest. Certainly we shall not see the General in San Francisco for some months to come.

We always thought it was bad enough before, but they've struck tl bed-rock at last in Nevada. They call it a Carson complication. This is the end.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier!" "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

Three Presbyterian clergymen have gone to Alaska, hut, alas! only for a time. We have an ample supply on hand in this city and Oakland, and prices rule uncommonly low at this season of the year. The community has always been somewhat mixed in the far North, hut the Calvinistic element has been wanting, and now is the time to introduce it. The nights are long in that region in autumn and winter, and ths stock of oil unbounded. Clergymen of the Presbyterian persuasion, beiug generally tall in person, might be utilized as wicks and afford in the process of combustion, at one and the same moment, illumination for social gatherings, and materials for a future Calvinistic martyrology. It were invidious to select among so many; but our readers will know to whom the first place is due in any practical embodiment of our suggestion.

There are fifty-five different ways of spelling Shakespeare's name, each with authority to back it, and Dennis Kearney does but pay the penalty of greatness in being misspelled hy everybody, beginning with himself. The orthography of even so simple a name as Weller puzzled a learned English Judge on a memorable occasion, and we may therefore he excused if we ask why people will spell Dennis with one n, and Kearney without a Cur. A cockney might answer that even one hen was too good for such a cockerel, and that no passahle cur would like to he taken for one of his family; but after all, why not settle upon a form of spelling until time has dispelled him altogether?

Judge Field's decision in the cass of the municipal ordinance requiring the cutting of the queues of Chinamen is a righteous one in principle, whether technically correct or not. The personal dignity of every man should be safe in a civilized community. It is the growing conviction of the sacredness of the person which has suppressed so many of the degrading punishments formerly inflicted on criminals, and the ordinance in question flagrantly violated the very spirit of American institutions. At the same time, it must he confessed that worse things might have been done to the Chinese: they might have been compelled to accept nominations to the Board of Supervisors.

A notorious doctor named Chas. O'Donnell made a complaint before the proper authorities against the Chinese Companies of this city, on information and belief. The complaint fizzled out, in the classic language of the Post. That is more than a charge against Chas. O'Donuell would do, if anybody could he found to make it; hut the physical impediments in the way of deposition, while hoth hands are employed in holding the nose and the physician's name chokes the wind-pipe, effectually secure the man of science against heing restrained of his libsrty. There are situations in life when one may rejoice in the hounty of nature, which gave him the polecat for a first cousin.

A more moral stand than that of the W. P. C., on the business of assessing candidates, it would he difficult to invent in the heat of a campaign. Any candidate who agrees to pay an assessment is to he dropped from the ticket, hecause the office should seek the man. The W. P. C. wander from the point. It is not the office that is sought hy these promising-to-pay candidates, hut the unhappy heings themselves, who are sought out and run to earth hy the men who sell offices. And do they sell these for moral effect? We trow not. Ths terms are and will he cash down, or good collaterals; and when one W. P. C. looks at another, does he see any green?

Mr. Augustine, of Marin county, addressed a somewhat personal open letter, on Monday last, to Dr. Carr, State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Dr. Carr does uot run with the express train, and has a great deal of instructiou, public and private, to make up; and these little obstacles may serve to explain the fact that he has so far held his peace. When he does speak there will he richness, for he has chunks of wisdom laid away in him, like that intellectual man in the story, who sat thoughtfully silent through a long dinner, to break out at the sight of the dumplings with this memorahle utterance: "Them's the jockeys for I."

Can't some inducement be offered Sig. Rotura, of "Suspended Animation" notoriety, to visit San Francisco? Our good city is afflicted with several unwholesome characters, whom we would he glad to see suspended, without the use of the antidote. Par exemple, the Board of Supervisors could he "sat upon" for a century and a half, with material benefit to the community; the ghostly Educational conclave could he Mangled for a spell, without causing a tear; and it wouldn't do any harm to lay Kearney and the "live paper" on the shelf, where they might freeze—and forget to "come to."

The daily papers continue to advertise "250 cats wanted, to kill gophers, squirrels, etc., wild and of good size; also female cats, with kittens, at half price." We would respectfnlly suggest that the latter demand could he most satisfactorily filled hy applications at the stock hoards and brokers and lawyers offices. There is a very feline class of females in this community who could well he spared. They "go for" anything or anyhody, and if transported would get away with the Jersey Farm and all its destructive animals at one fell swoop!

Mr. King, a newsboy in his youth and a cripple all his life, has just presented 2,500 hooks to the Cincinnati Public Library. The moral is not so clear as it might he, hut it must he a good one. If you are a newshoy you have a fair chance of heing crippled; or if you are a cripple you may be transported to Cincinnati; or if your name is King you'll have to give away your hooks. There's no seeing through it. But it's a good example anyway where pigs are plenty, and so it can have no hearing on this coast.

A Suggestion, not Untimely. Now that Lotta's fountain is carefully screened from the public by the ugliest fence on the Pacific Coast, how would it do for our city officials to go through the washing of their soiled linen there? It has everything convenient: water in the fountain, a fence to hang the duds on, and whisky galore in the immediate neighhorhood to refresh the mind.

It is a curious and noteworthy fact that nearly all the clerks in the Registrar's office wear eye-glasses, whereas their clients are mostly natural eyes'd citizens.

The Gas Inspector has cost the city, from May, 1878, to July, 1879, $6,699 72, by accurate hook-keeping. A healthy sum for the supervision of wind, or noisome air, which we take gas to be. Accustomed as ws are to the continual inspection of gaseous hodies, ws are devoured with envy at the good luck of Inspector Bloomfield, and think he was not named in vain. Surely he disports himself in flowery fields and quietly draws his pay, to the tune of $300 a month, for trying the hills of fars in hotels all over the land. Owlglass thought he earned his money when he cat to bursting for twelve pence; what can he said of the work the Gas Inspector does in that way?

That Michigan lady who writes, we are told, with rare truth that the thonsand and one vexations of daily life start the fret, is a wonderful woman. Her father was Martin Farquhar Tupper and her mother the Sweet Singer of Michigan, and she has thrown her beautiful thought into verse worthy of hoth:

"Yes, it is that confounded corn that makes me make wry faces,
And the griddle cakes were spoiled to-day,
and the Call has an affidavit."

General Burnside's statue, lately described as a "perfect likeness of his whiskers, and with a heroic expression on the face," is to be placed at one end of the Darien Canal, D. V. (which stands for "De Lesseps willing"). The great engineer, when cautiously approached on the subject, promptly answered, "Why not? If his countrymen could stand the living one; surely other people can put up with the image. At least, that can't make a fool of itself."

The Virginia City folks introduced a little novelty into the Fourth of July husiness. A procession, of course, hut purely local in character; made up, that is, of miners and mining superintendents, Burleigh drills, Indians on foot and on horseback, and the Sazerac Lying Club. Carloads of girls representing the States, and kegs of heer representing patriotism, identified the husiness as American; hut in other respects it was wildly original.

Mr. Julian Hawthorne is no improvement on his father, and a good deal so. Every time that a wildly prancing newspaper man or woman writes a Moon-Hoax about the Hawthornes, Sir Julian mounts his red-roan charger and valiantly hurls defiance at the enemy in a couple of hundred sarcastic paragraphs. Like Mr. Charles Reade, he is incessantly spoiling for a fight; and, also like Mr. Reade, he is fast becoming a nuisance and a hore.

He doth protest too much. Mr. Perkins declared on Wednesday night that he had never, directly, or indirectly, employed Chinese; that is, he guarantees that he has never used Chinese tea, or Chinese sugar, or silk, or hamhoo, or lacquered ware, or rice, or camphor, or fire crackers, or any other thing that is Chinese, selphimgod, and amen. And we never heard anything quite like it, or hardly ever.

Ingersoll's lectures are now offered everywhere at five cents, pathetic remarks at his hrother's grave included. The coincidence in time hetween his hrother's death and the issue of this cheap edition is one of those curious accidents which relieve the monotony of life. Where a hereavement can he turned to such good account, it seems a pity that Nature has restricted the supply of relatives.

An English resident of San Francisco excused himself for keeping his store open on the glorious Fourth by remarking to a patriot, who was remonstrating with him: "Oh, d—n it, ye know, I did not have to wait for the fourth of any heastly month to get my independence. you know. Never was a slave, in fact, or any thing of that sort, you know. Pleasant day tho', isn't it?"

The Supervisors passed the tax levy over the Mayor's veto by a vote of 9 to 2. Each ons of the nine explained his vote iu a way never hefore heard of, as extorted from him hy his abiding sense of duty to the public. And what a comfort it must he to each one of them to think of duty performed, when he snuggles in his little hed! Lesser men never know these joys.

Mayor Bryant keeps up his stroke. Another veto of the tax levy, and the general approbation of mankind, in consequence. A fight so persistent should have its reward; and perhaps it will, if the Mayor gets a chance to veto anything else. There must he several matters lying about in which he could interest himself to this extent.

"D. J. T." writes to an evening paper that the "meanest vice of the polygamist Reynolds is loftier than the nohlest virtue ever imported hy any Chinaman in California." If D. J. T. is the virtue aimed at every one must agree with him; hut if he is the vice here spoken of he lacks modesty to hlow his own trumpet so loudly.

The telegrams say there is danger that the negro exodus may introduce infected haggage into Missonri and Kansas. This unworthy fling at the physiological distinction of the African race will hring Senator Chandler to the front; but wise men will keep to windward of him and his clients, under the circumstances.

Won't somebody do a little to wake up enthusiasm in this hlessed political husiness? The town is in danger of dislocating its jaws with yawning over H. B.s and Pinafore Perkins. A sleepier, more stupid, more monotonously silly affair never was known, tasteless as warm water, endless as a Bulletin editorial.

Reform is the order of the day. A vigorous movement was begun on Washington-street wharf yesterday by a mule; hut it was, like too many others, a hackward movement, and ended in the hay. There has been no nnity of action among these intelligent quadrupeds since they dissolved partnership with Mr. Pixley.

Denis Kearney went to Stockton on Thursday, hut the asylnm was full, or perhaps they just had plenty of him; and he went frrther. All the spice has gone out of this poor fellow; both his talk and his meetings are as tame as an Episcopalian canary.

The citizens of Chickeymncksonville are erecting a statue of their recent Fourth of July poet. He deserved it hy losing the fifty-four pages of manuscript which he had intended to deliver, and thns does reward follow quickly on the heels of merit.

Will the Academy of Science inform us what occult law of Nature transforms a hen (at night) into a rooster?

Has the saying, "It takes nine tailors to make a man," any reference to Superintendent Taylor? It looks like it.

A good name for a female squalling baby is Aurora.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

Helmbold's Buchu has long been known as one of the most valuable medicines attainable in certain classes of diseases, such as dyspepsia, chronic rheumatism, dropsy, and cutaneous affections. As a diuretic, it is superior to almost any medicine in use, and the great care with which it is prepared, the absolute purity of the preparation, and the diligence used in the selection of the crude material, have made it known far and wide as a reliable and effective preparation, and one that can always be used with safety and benefit. The great success of Helmbold's Buchu has led to the production of many spurious preparations, which are made cheaply and placed upon the market to be sold on the reputation acquired by Helmbold's original preparation. Parties who desire a really good medicine should be careful and use Helmbold's only.

"Close to Nature's Heart," said the Rev. W. J. Smith; and he mounted a hard-trotting mule and rode into Yosemite, leaving one in doubt whether the valley or the mule was so near the heart of Nature. Perhaps this mystery never will be cleared up, or hardly ever; but there is one thing certain: The man who takes his coffee and muffins or his cosy lunch at the Original Swain's Bakery, 213 Sutter street, has gone to the very heart of the matter; nature can offer him nothing better, nor yet can art. Ready service, perfect quiet, comfort and ease, and the best cooking in town at Swain's.

A little Waterloo Sunday-School miss was asked by her teacher: "What must people do in order to go to heaven?" "Die, I suppose," replied the little one. The teacher did not question her any further.

That terrific tornado in Minnesota, the other day, played some most extraordinary freaks. It hoisted a Presbyterian clergyman, weighed down with a sermon under sixteen heads; and was seen making frantic efforts to lift a photograph of the Rev. Jos. Cook. One of Montanya's Union Ranges was taken by it 800 yards through the air, and deposited in the middle of a park, where it was found calmly attending to business, and cooking dinner with the most exemplary steadiness. Not a pot or pan was displaced, and things were done to a turn.

The "Jeannette" is on her way at last to the Arctic, and speculation is busy with the possible intentions of her owner in organizing this expedition. The general opinion is that Bennett expects to cut off a portion of the North Pole and set it up in front of the Herald office with one of his own hats on top to be adored, a la Gessler. There would be nothing strange in this if Bennett's hats were furnished by White, 402 Kearny street, for all New York would be on its knees before such marvels of art.

The Emperor of Japan is learning all the European ways and making himself like his brother kings. With his beef-eaters and body-guards he is already quite civilized, and now he is going to have his Opera Company, at an expense of 2,000,000 francs. This is the way to enlighten the world; and it is noticed that all these excellent ideas have come to the Emperor since he became acquainted with the Gerke Wine, which he has regularly from Landsberger's, 10 Jones Alley.

The Detroit Free Press looks back with a sigh to its courting days and says: "Nothing smells of the olden times more than onions."

The style and finish of articles and work furnished by McNally & Hawkins are unsurpassed. They have just received at their store under the Grand Hotel, a full assortment of chandeliers and brackets in nickel and gold, silver, gold, bronze and brass in all styles, ancient and modern, and at prices remarkably low. Perfect taste is the distinguishing mark of these goods.

Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings are certainly cured by Dr. Jayne's Alterative. It stimulates the absorbents into healthy action, whereby all watery or calcareous depositions are gradually but surely carried off. It also increases the power of digestion, and imparts renewed vigor to the whole system, thus removing all danger of a relapse. Sold by Crane & Brigham, San Francisco.

Ripe scholars are falling off a little.

"Of all sad words of tongue or of pen,
The saddest are these—it might have been."

So sings Whittier, with profound insight and exceedingly imperfect ear for rhyme. What would he have said if he had been able to compare the weak representations of his own celebrated face, with a genuine photograph from Bradley & Rulofson? It would have been a blow to find that he might have had a likeness if he had gone to them.

The very best nominations for office cannot be expected of men or conventions, unless they are kept up to the very best condition of their powers by proper nourishment. No man is fully himself when reduced by living on poor diet; though even with poor food, corrected and supplemented by F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation Whisky, men do wonders. There is more judgment in a bottle of it than in fourteen conventions, stimulated in any other way.

Geologists can tell the age of the stone which David threw at the giant.

The extension of the telegraph report of passengers overland to Omaha has been a great boon to those in this city expecting friends. People are now enabled to order their supplies of Napa Soda in time to greet the thirsty travelers before they enter the alkali plains; and much suffering is obviated.

Tapestry Brussels, $1 per yard and upwards; fine new patterns. Call and see them. Window shades, 75 cents and upwards. Window lace, 12½ cents and upwards. Cornices, wall paper, etc. Oilcloths, 50 cents per yard and upwards. Hartshorn & McPhun, 112 Fourth st., near Mission.

A man picked up an extraordinary communication the other day. It ran thus: "Dear Charley:—The Nevada Building Association is under your management. How much for a chance?" Mr. Peters wishes it to be understood that his address is at Virginia City, Nevada.

THE CUMBERLAND MINE.

First Report of the Newly-Elected Superintendent, Robert Collins, of the Cumberland Gold Mine, of Arizona.

To the President, George M. Ciprico, Esq., and the Directors of the Cumberland Mining Company, 417 California street, San Francisco—GENTLEMEN: In this, my first report, I have great pleasure in confirming Mr. Wm. Craib's report of December 1st, 1878, and agree with him in his closing remarks of the vast wealth and importance of the Cumberland Mine. I am of the opinion that this mine, or ledge, will increase in size as it goes down to from 50 to 00 feet wide. My reasons for so thinking are that on the south there is a granite wall which forms the foot-wall, and on which the ledge rests, while on the north, and 60 feet from this wall, is another cropping boldly up. Outside these walls the country is stony and rough, but between them it is as smooth as a garden walk, with hundreds of small quartz veins running through it. These veins gradually widen as they go down. Where all these veins come into the ledge, they will fill up the whole space between the walls spoken of, making the ledge 50 or 60 feet across.

The Cumberland Mine is a gold-bearing quartz lods from 8 to 10 feet wide, dipping to the north and running nearly east and west, with well-defined walls. Free gold can be seen in nearly every piece of ore exposed. There has been considerable work done upon the mine; three shafts have been sunk, a good road built up the side of the hill, two stone buildings erected, and also a small corral. The ground has been prospected along the vein, and everything is ready to commence operations on a more extended scale. The Cumberland ledge can be traced for over one mile, showing the well-defined character of the lode.

There are three large veins, or spurs, coming into ths Cumberland from the north, converging toward each other. The combined width of these veins and the ledge is twenty-five feet of solid ore. These veins are rich in gold. All the ground from the cap, or outerop of the ledge, down the hill-side to the wash, or creek, is rich in free gold, and tons of splendid float can be gathered from the surface—all good specimens. The surrounding country is rich in gold and silver ledges, some of them wonderfully rich. The Leviathan and Vulture are immense lodes that have been proven to be of immense value of free gold.

LOCATION.—Cumberland Mine is situated on the south side of the Date Creek Range, about one and a half miles from Martinez Creek—seven miles from Date Creek—and from eighteen to twenty miles from Wickenburg, the nearest post-town and telegraph station. The wagon-road to Prescott passes within one and a half miles of the mine. The stage passes every day by another road, and meets the railroad cars at Maricopa Wells.

WOOD AND WATER.—Water to run any size mill can be got in the Martinez Creek, or in Date Creek. Thousands of cords of wood can be seen from the mine, covering the level country to the south and west. Labor is plentiful and cheap, and provisions at Maricopa Wells very reasonable.

RECAPITULATION.—The Cumberland Mine is a most splendid property—a large body of ore, very rich; plenty of water at hand; wood within one-half a mile; good roads; easy communication with any part of the world; labor cheap and plenty, and with a record of from $130 to $260 per ton. All that I have seen on and around the mine impresses me with the belief that this is the most valuable property in the Territory. In concluding this short report, I wish to impress upon the minds of the Directors and shareholders the value of the Cumberland Mine. It is no wild-cat, but a mine that must come before the public either now or at some future day. It is only a matter of time, for I am convinced that the Cumberland Mine will be worked successfully for generations to come. The Directors cannot think too highly of the Cumberland Mine, for it will be worked when they and their childrens' children have passed away. I have inspected the mine and the country around it, and am convinced that the Directors have no idea of the immense value of the property they possess. The mine is so well situated that it can be worked with very little outlay. The ore can be shot from the shafts to the feeding floor, if required. A mill can be erected 100 yards or less from the ledge, in the gulch below, where water can be had by sinking 35 feet. The mines worked in this Territory have proven that the richest ore is discovered at the greatest depth yet obtained. I shall forward, in a few days, some ore from the Cumberland Mine to be tested, that you may have some idea of what hundreds of thousands of tons, now in the mine, must be worth.

Respectfully yours, ROBERT COLLINS,
Superintendent Cumberland Mine.

ART JOTTINGS.

"Lincoln at Gettysburg" is the title of a very large painting just placed on exhibition at the rooms of the Art Association on Pine street. It is by A. H. Bicknell, a German artist, now resident in Boston, Mass. The work (judging from the four dozen pages explanatory obtained from the door-keeper) has been painted with a view to selling the engraving, an outline etching of which hangs near by, tastefully framed and upholstered. The visitor to see this immense painting (it is well nigh a hundred square feet in size) is informed at the outset that the engraving is published in connection with the exhibition, and a little further on we are told that on a mild midsummer day the artist had availed himself of the opportunity presented by the occasion to group around the grand central figure of Abraham Lincoln some of the most prominent of the statesmen and soldiers of the war period. This is all the artist has had to do with it, and he has succeeded in placing twenty-one figures on canvas in the exact position, with just the expressions we might look for if they were posed before the photographer's camera. Well does the writer remember the first time he ever saw the immortal Lincoln! It was at Springfield, Ill., when Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglass spoke from the same rostrum; and in a journey immediately thereafter, over one of the corduroy roads of Michigan, with the latter, the great power of Lincoln over an audience was the subject of many a conversation, and no one who ever heard him deliver an address could believe that the pose and expression Artist Bicknell has given him was ever present, except very early in the morning when no one was around. And does any one believe that, in the presence of a multitude of people, Charles Sumner would have been seen squinting at Gen. Butler, or vice versa. Mr. Bicknell is, perhaps, a good portrait painter, and in this picture we doubtless find twenty-one good likenesses; but there is not an element of strength in the work to entitle it for a moment to any consideration whatever as a historical picture. The civil war, although its incidents were replete with motiffs for the painter's brush, has generally failed to give inspiration for any great picture, and this late comer is no exception. Perhaps it is well that it is so, for paintings live for generations, and if they are of such a character as to indicate a political meeting of a quiet character, so much the better, for those who come after will attach less odium to us for engaging in that fratricidal strife.

Another new picture on view this week is a large marine, by De Haas, "Wrecked on a Lee Shore." It is at Messrs. Morris & Kennedy's. Although not as large as some examples heretofore exhibited by this noted artist, it is nevertheless one of the best. The action of the water is superb, and the perfect harmony of the lowering sky gives the picture a weird look just in keeping with such a scene. In the same gallery are to be found several accessions, notably a portrait by Freeman, an artist who came to this city four years ago and went to the country, where he has remained ever since. Mr. Freeman is a painter of the "old school," believes more in finish than effect, although the latter is not wanting, especially in ladies' and children's portraits. A pleasing example of the latter is in the window over the way at Snow & Co.'s. At this gallery the sale of works by the late James Hamilton is meeting with marked success, nearly one-third of the entire number being reported sold during the first three days. But for the prevailing dullness the entire number would have been "called for" on the first day of the exhibition.

Tavernier and Rix have gone to the Russian River country on a sketching tour, and Thomas Hill (to every one's surprise) is again visiting Yosemite Valley, although it must be said that heretofore Mr. Hill has depended more upon photographs than original sketches for his Yosemite pictures. Let us hope that, after a six month's respite from the labors of the studio, he has again put on the armor and gone forth to interpret nature on canvas with some of the strength he possessed before neglecting his chosen and well-suited profession—art.

Hahn, too, another painter, whose works a few years ago were the admiration of everyone, is with us again after a three years' trip to the East of Europe. Doubtless his sketch book is replete with subjects, the execution of which will give evidence of the improvement travel affords the true artist.

And then we have Deakin back, too. We shall soon see what improvement he has made while intermingling with the notable painters of England and the Continent. He has two works in the Salon at Paris this year.

The NEWS LETTER'S picture, "At the Play," is completed, and will appear with the next number. The London journals, the World and Vanity Fair, have published similar plates, but not on the scale of this one. Their efforts partake more of the character of caricatures than would be agreeable in this country. The likenesses are more typical than realistic, but their publication has proved a great success to the journals issuing them, a single edition of sixty thousand copies of the World containing the picture having been exhausted in twenty-four hours.

The outlook for art at the Mechanics' Fair this season is not encouraging. On the whole our artists have not been over-industrious the past year, and so far, they do not seem to have made any preparation at all for this exhibition. Liberal premiums, however, may have a beneficial effect in bringing out the usual number of canvasses.

HOUSES GOING UP.

A TERRIBLE FOE.

On Monday last a man who had attempted the life of the Czar of Russia perished on the scaffold. He died, we are told, with firmness; he refused all rigbts of religion. Life for him seemed to have no special charms; death had certainly no terrors. The deed for whicb he suffered the last terrible penalty of the law was attempted in open day, at an hour and a spot which insured the capture of its perpetrator. Time and place were obviously selected without any reference whatever to the safety of the murdcrer, but only with a view to making the hlow as certain as human calculation could make it. He met the doom he courted with the heroism of a martyr, with the indifference of a fatalist. The apostle of Nihilism, like the pioneers of Christianity, count their lives as nought; and though they murder and overthrow where the apostles of the Saviour built up, their success is greatly due to this absence of all csre for life. The motive is different, the sentiment is different, but the same end is attained. The early Christian positively rejoiced when he was "counted worthy to suffer for religion's sake; he died triumphing in the arena, he sang hymns of praise amid the flames; he hebeld, as he lay stretched on the rack, visions of a glorious future. The Nihilist has no hope; his theory of life is pessimist, his view of the eternal world is summed up in the terrihle words of Couthon: "Apres la mort—le neant." He counts himself simply a joint in a vast machinery, which is to hring ahout certain results; and he does bis work without hope of reward, without fear of penalty.

"Butchered to make a Roman holiday;"

Appalling to the moralist, appalbng to the politician, is tbis contempt of life; for, whether a man meet death as a saint or a stoic, a cause must have a migbty power over men's minds when it can destroy in tbem the first instinct of humanity, the love of life. Its influence over other minds is overwhelming. The vulgar fail to see the hroad distinction which lies hetween the cheerful, even joyous sacrifice of life to a holy cause, and the brute-like indifference of a man who has neither hope of heaven nor fear of hell. He who carries his life in his hand is a martyr, he the cause for which he suffers what it may.

But, besides this, the safeguards which ordinarily protect society are broken down. As a rule, no man not a madman would think of committing a murder in open day, and thousands of would-he criminals, even in harharous States, are restrained from secret deeds of violence hy the fear of possible discovery. The Nihilist is restrained hy nothing. If you are a marked man, seek not safety in the open street, the crowded hall-room, the thronged church or theater. In any of these places you may he struck down. A man in au opposite hox may shoot you; a man who kneels beside you at Mass may stab you; you would not be safe at the very altar, with the priests around you. The Nihilist has no belief in God; the very sanctuary of the church is no more to him than the paving-stone of the square, or the mud of the alley; he does not care that, as you fall, a hundred hands will he stretcbed forth to grasp him. You are to die—therein lies all with which he is concerned. His own fate is absolutely ignored by himself and his comrades. It may he Ivan to-day, it may be Michael to-morrow, whose duty it becomes to murder some high functionary, or fire some town. Ivan dies, and Michael looks on in grim indifference, and steps forth next day to fling his own life into the gulf, witb the same stony calm.

How is Russia meeting tbis intangible, tbis unconquerahle foe? Like herself. Tyranny gave birth to the monster Nihilism, and tries to slay her own ill-formed child hy trampling on it. But it cannot be trampled out. The very ferocity of the retaliation shows fear; fear ever makes us angry. Sending 10,000 people to the mines of Siberia will not crusb Nihilism; nor will placing cities under interdicts, and arresting innocent persons on the flimsiest charges. There can he no peace for Russia, no escape from the serpent that has coiled around her, until reform is instituted in every department of the State and jurisprudence. The Russian rule is a gigantic and irresponsihle tyranny, as harharous as tbe rule of Cetewayo, only restrained by a superficial civilization from heing as hloodthirsty. But it is the worst government in Europe, and unless the rulers can be brought to see the imperative need of reform in time, a fearful revolution—a complete revulsion—must ere long shake the nation to its very hase. Who can say that the day, and even the bour, is not already discussed—if not fixed—in the secret councils of the Nihilist?—London Express.

HE NEVER TOLD A LIE.

The passenger, a Scotch gentleman, who was going down the Mississippi for the first time in his life, secured permission to climh up beside the pilot, a grim old gravhack, who boasted that he never told a lie in his life. "Many alligators in the river?" inquired tbe stranger, after a look around. "Not so many now, since they got to shootin' 'em for their hides and talley," was the reply. "Used to he lots, eh?" "I don't want to tell you ahout 'em, stranger," replied the pilot, sighing heavily. "Why?" "'Cause you'd think I was a-lyin' to you, and that's sumthin' I never do. I kin cheat at cards, drink whisky, or chaw poor terhaccer, but I can't lie." "Then there used to be lots of 'em?" inquired the passenger. "I'm almost afraid to tell ye, mister, hut I've counted 'leven hundred allygaters to the mile from Vicksburg cl'ar down to Orleans. That was years ago, afore a shot was fired at 'em." "Well, I don't douht it," replied the stranger. "And I've counted 3,450 of 'em on one sandhar," contiuued the pilot; "it looks big to tell, hut a Government surveyor was ahoard, and he checked 'em off as I called out. Once wben we grounded on a har, with an opposition boat right behind, the allygaters gatbered round, got under her stern, and humped her clean over the har hy a grand push! It looks like a hig story, hut I never told a lie yet, and I never shall. I wouldn't be for all the money you could put ahoard this hoat." There was a painful pause. "Well," said the stranger, "you are a dark man." "I am dark in complexion, hut what of that?" "Why, you remind me of my native heather," said the Scotchman, "that's all." "How's that, mate?" "Why," said the Scotcbman, "we call them low-lying moors."

At the recent Army of the Potomac meeting, in Albany, Francis M. Finch read a "Sheridan's Ride" poem, in wbich he says: "Ride, ride witb your helmless hair!" "Ride, ride with your streaming hair!" "Charge, charge, 'tis a hanner, your hair!" "Ride, ride, we laurel your hair!" This may do for poetry; but little Phil always wore a remarkably close cropped bead, and was not afraid.

"The World," the Flesh, and the Devil.

[By a Truthful Penman.]

I saw the other day, in a newspaper, a fancy sketch of the early life of Christine Nilsson. Here is the reality. On a remote estate in Sweden lived a Baron Leheusen whose wife was very musical. On these Swedish estates the peasants were, until within a few years, practically serfs, and are called Bunde and Torpare. The Bunde have about thirty or forty acres, and have to perform certain obligations to their landlords, such as tilling his ground with their horses or oxen, etc. The Torpare are cottagers with a small plot of ground, for which they have to pay a certain amount of "dagswerke," or day's work, each week. Their food is obtained from the vegetables on these plots, and from about two shillings per week for the labor of their free days. Nilsson's father was a Torpare of Baron Leheusen, and the little Christine used to run about barefooted, with a short petticoat on full of holes coming down to her knees. Baroness Leheusen one day heard her singing one of the old Swedish ditties, which have been handed down from generation to generation amongst the Bunde and the Torpare. The Baroness was struck with the sweetness of her voice, and ordered her to come up to the chateau; there she gave her some elementary lessons in singing, and then sent her to Paris, where she was placed under the tuition of a French professor. After several years of assiduous study, she made her debut before the Parisians at—if I remember rightly—the Theatre Lyrique. With the first money that she earned, she built up the cottage of her old father, the Torpare, and made him comfortable, and he is now a well-to-do peasant.—Truth.——I conscientiously went to church in May, a recent Sunday, expecting to bear a word about hospitals. The young gentleman who delivered an excellent sermon—far above the average—said much about the strait path and the wrong path, but not one word about what was supposed to be the subject of the day. I am inclined to think that if I had given the congregation a simple account of a visit I paid lately to the London Hospital at midnight, I could have unfolded a tale of human suffering and anguish that might have at least doubled the collection—the sum being a miserable one, dukes and duchesses notwithstanding. I need not afflict the gay world by dwelling upon the scene I was called there to witness; but if any wish to be impressed with feelings of charity and humanity, I recommend them to walk through those silent wards, with the solitary light here and there, with the night-nurses flitting about, bringing water to the parched tongue and stimulants to the dying, and then tell me, or whom they like, if they have not seen a sermon such as they can never hear, and never can forget.—Atlas, in the World.——The end of the Prince of Orange was worthy of a confirmed Parisian, which he was. He had been suffering for about two weeks from an inflammation of the chest, which was in a fair way to recovery on Saturday, the 7th of June, when he insisted, against the positive prohibition of his physician, in repairing incognito to the Grand Opera Festival on behalf of the sufferers at Szegedin. "I would rather be in bed for two weeks more than miss such an opportunity," he remarked to his favorite servant-man, in his snug chambers at Rue Auber 19, as he was dressing. Every precaution was observed for preventing him from taking cold again as he was going out after the fete, in the small hours of the 8th. But the heat was so intense inside the building, and the weather so damp outside, that a sensation of coolness could not be avoided, and a complication ensued, which ended fatally.——The last of the Paris Exhibition Lottery. About seven thousand prizes, of the aggregate value of 470,000 francs, or close on £19,000, remain unclaimed to this day. They are about to be sold by auction in the Pavillon de Flore of the Tuileries, and the proceeds of the sale are to be deposited at the Caisse des Dépots et Consignations, there to await properly qualified claimants.——A social Russian question has been agitating society for the last week. The Russian Ambassador presented a lady to Lady Salisbury at her reception. The lady was married, and had come to England accompanied by her husband, who is a gentleman well-known and respected in St. Petersburg. But the lady in days gone by had been divorced. The story of the divorce grew and grew, until it was asserted that she had at least six husbands. "What," said Lady Salisbury, "introduce this female Bluebeard to me? Monstrous! I am insulted, my husband is insulted, my country is insulted, my Queen is insulted!" And so the lady has left England, which is to be regretted, as she is singularly beautiful.—Truth.——Lord Norreys, in selling Sir Bevys to Rosthchild, reserved half the stakes of the Derby, should the horse win the race. Coming home one evening he found his little daughter surrounded by lighted tapers. The child, who is a Catholic, had lit them as a votive offering that Sir Bevys might win; and so convinced was she of the effect of the illumination, that she requested her father to stake her savings (£3) on the horse. This he did, and the young lady won £99.—Truth.——Much regret is felt at the death of poor old Lionel Rothschild. He had his faults and also his virtues. Although a hard man in business, he was exceedingly liberal in his charities. It is curious that only a few days before his death the house of Rothschild was obliged to announce for the first time that default would be made in the interest on a loan negotiated by it. So vast was his personality, that the succession duty which his heirs will have to pay will materially aid in reducing the deficit to which Sir Stafford Northcote has accustomed us.——The latest fashionable pastime is paper sculpture. The requisites for indulging in this art are a pair of sharp-pointed scissors and pieces of thin Bristol-board. The flowers are cut out singly, and then gathered into a bouquet, and, after being mounted on a piece of black velvet, they are covered by a concave glass, and we have a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Those flowers most desirable for beginners are pink, trailing arbutus, roses, fuchsias, daisies and blue-bells.——Coins bearing the effigy of M. Gambetta have been struck in Belginm and smuggled into France.——Nearly nine thousand prizes in the Paris Exhibition Lottery remain unclaimed, and are to be sold by auction.

"BIZ."

The talk of the street in commercial circles is of Sugar and its sweetness solidi6ed. It is well known to the trade that for a year or two past a regular systematic warfare has heen carried on hetween the local Sugar refiners and the few johhers who persistently went to New York and other Eastern cities for their supplies of Sugar and Syrup, the refiners in this city claimiug their ahility to supply the Pacific coast trade with all they required, and of as good quality and at as cheap a rate and npon as favorahle terms as the Sugar and Syrup could he ohtained elsewhere; in fact, aiming at all times to keep prices npon this coast as low or as cheap as Eastern supplies could he imported and laid down here. Admitting for argument sake tbis to he true, one or more grocery houses persisted in continuing to order Eastern Sugar, claiming that a certain class of their customers required and would have the trehle Eastern refined product. The result of this persistency upon the part of the California-street johhing house was a refusal upon the part of the local refiners to sell them Sugars or Syrup at their regular schedule prices allowing the usual trade discount. This wealthy 6rm was accordingly ostracised hy the refiners in this, and in other ways and in a manner altogether foreign to correct mercantile usages. In fact, other wholesale houses, drawing their supplies from the refinery, were actually forhidden to huy the Eastern Sugar of the party referred to, and were also prohihited from selling California Sugar to them. Well, this warfare, single-handed, has run on for a year or two, with an occasional outhreak, until a few months since, when two (2) prominent Front-street johhing houses were threatened hy the refinery and warned not to go East for their supplies, even claiming that home industries ought to he encouraged and shonld he maintained at all hazards. These Front-street houses, having some little independency of character and wealth to hack them up, concluded that, knowing their sights as free American citizens, resolved that they would do as they pleased, and huy and order their Sugar and Syrup wherever they could huy the cheapest, and for their interest and convenience. They, accordingly, some months since, sent orders to the Messrs. Thurhers, of New York, to send them supplies of their different grades of Sugar hy rail. These Sugar supplies have heen coming here for some time past and adorning the sidewalks of Clay and Front streets in a manner that was very disturhing to the local re6ners, and until forhearance was no longer a virtue. Then it was that a new programme was issued, and the wholesale johhers of the city, accustomed to hny of the local refiners, were noti6ed and forhidden to sell any of their Sugars to the three johhing houses in rehellion, thus endeavoring to stop, hy a regular freezing-out process, all imports of Eastern Sugar. And to make the rule the more effectual, prices to the trade have heen reduced ½c. ₱ lb on all grades of White Sugar, the rates fixed heing actually helow the cost and freight of Eastern Sugars laid down here. What will he the final outcome of all this unmercantile fight, we know not. Yet it seems passing strange that our wealthy johhing merchants would lend themselves to such a course of husiness, it heing entirely out of the line of legitimacy. Following is the price list sent to us, and to which reference is made in the foregoing remarks:

California Sugar Re6nery; office, 215 Front street, San Francisco (Cal.), July 8, 1879.—Cash prices from date. No order taken for less than 40 harrels, or equivalent in half-harrels or hoxes. Syrup, 30 harrels, or equivalent in half-harrels or kegs. Remittance must accompany orders from country. (A) Pat. I. kegs, —; D Sugar, in harrels or S. I. kegs, 7¾c.; Extra C, in harrels, 8¼c.; half-harrels ¼c. more, hoxes ¼c. more, for all kinds. S (in diamond)—Syrup, in harrels, 42½c.; ditto, in half-harrels, 45c.; ditto, in 5-gall. kegs, 50c.; ditto, in tins 1 gallon each, 60c. Cash on delivery. Prices may he changed at any time. Discount, 2½ per cent. Prices guaranteed.

Imports during the week embrace two cargoes of Hawaiian Sugar—La Girondee, with 4,065 pkgs, and the hark H. W. Almy, from same, with 7,421 pkgs. The hulk of this Island Sugar comes under contract to the California Re6nery. Our receipts of Hawaiian Sugars for the first six months of the current year aggregates 25,089,777 lbs, against 19,876,421 lbs for the same time in 1878. From Manila the past six months we imported only 2,848,822 lbs, against 21,419,118 lbs. Here we find a falling off the past six months of 18,570,296 lbs. We suhmit herewith a statement of the Sugar trade of this city for the six mouths ending June 30, 1879:

The great hulk of the Sugars imported here the past two years have heen of re6ning grades, thus throwing nearly all our receipts of raws directly into the hands of local refiners. Imports from China have heen stopped since the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty went into effect, and so also of Manila and other countries, sending us heretofore large supplies. The Sandwich Islands are having and reaping the full henefit of the Treaty. They are expending large sums of money upon their Sugar and Rice plantations—resortiug to irrigation largely and erectiug mills, etc., thus greatly increasing the productiveness of the Hawaiian Empire. As the hulk of the Island Sugar comes here under contract to the California Refinery, hut very little of the very desirable grocery grades of Sugar are received here, consequently keg Sugar is very scarce, and it is at all times in great demand. The best is now 8c.

Rice.—Imports from China the past six months aggregate 22,422,741 lbs, and from Hawaii 1,712,882 lbs. These heavy imports cause a depressed market, China mixed now selling at 4¾c., while Hawaiian tahle has unexpectedly fallen to 5¼c. This decline is owing to the prospective large receipts of new crop from the Islands.

Teas.—We have uow to announce the arrival of the P. M. S. S. Co.'s steamer Alaska from China and Japan. She hrought hut few Teas for this city, only 1,144 pkgs, hut for Eastern account, to go forward hy Central Pacific Railroad, of 5,126 pkgs. At date our stock of Japan papers is very light; quotable at 30c. for standard and favorite chops.

For Australasia.—The Pacific Mail Steamship Zealandia sailed hence for the Colonies on the 7th inst. carrying her full compliment of passengers, government mails, etc., and for cargo, Barley, 8,225 ctls.; Oil, 8,368 gals. Whale; Quicksilver, 60 flasks; Salmon, 350 cases; Hops, 2,800 lbs, hesides Lumher, Cheese, Corn, Honey, etc.

For the Isthmus of Panama.—The P. M. Steamship Granada, hence, carried en route to New York, Brandy, 3.881 gals. Native; Case Goods, 650 cases; Salmon and Fruits; Wool, 205,306 lbs; Wine, 54,523 gals. Native. To Callao, 100 flasks Quicksilver. To Arica, Peru, 100 flasks ditto. En route to England, Silver Bullion, $13,750; for Hamhurg, $52,309 same. To Central America, Tallow, 5,273 lbs; Wheat, 4,101 ctls; also to same the hulk of 1,808 hhls. flour.

Freights and Charters.—But very little husiness has heen done in ships during the week. Large American ships to Havre or Liverpool direct are now held at 42s. 6d., British Iron, 45@47s. 6d. Some ships will no douht prefer to load Wheat and Flour upon owner's account rather than accept current low rates. At present there are hut few charters offering, and rates at hest are more or less nominal. The fleet of disengaged vessels in port is now 22—27,260 tons register. On the herth, 16 vessels, 22,641 tons. In sight, or en route to reach here within six months, 165,000 tons register against 225,000 same time last year. It is now doubtful as to any of the Guano fleet coming here seeking.

Wheat and Flour.—The following tahle shows the receipts at this port of Flour and Wheat from the interior of the State, and the exports of same, since July 1st, 1878, as compared with same time in the previous year:

Coal.—The market is flat at $6 50 for cargoes of Sydney Steam. West Hartley to arrive, $7.

Case Goods.—The canneries are very husy putting up fruits of all kinds. Salmon is now held firmly at $1 15 asked, and $1 12½ hid for standard hrands of 1-lb tins Columhia River fish.

Coffee.—The market is very 6rm for all Central American Greens at 14½@16½c. Imports of C. A. for six months, 9,000,000 lbs—say 66,000 hags—against same period last year of 86,500 hags. Stocks are very light of all kinds.

The Petroleum Market keeps gaining strength. Transactions during the week have heen made on speculation account—55 to 60 cents in tanks per P. C. O. certificates. Sales for actual delivery have taken place at 60 to 63 cents. We understand that a good deal of refined has heen sold ahead hy Petrolia and London refiuers at from 8 to 9 cents a wine gallon, London freights allowed, delivery according to price, the earlier deliveries heing the cheaper.—Petroleum (Canada) Advertiser, June 27th.

LOVE'S INQUIRY.

Who'd care to have the picture of a rose
When he could kiss the petals on the bush?
Or who would see the sunrise in cold prose,
Nor greet the tropic morning's golden flush?

But if without the garden we are doomed
To wander lonely on a weary way,
Where not a single tender flower has bloomed,
Or cooling fountain tossed its rainbowed spray;

If in the north, amid white seas of snow,
We see in dreams alone a sunny nook,
With voice of birds and river murmuring low—
Then turn we to the picture and the book.

And so, dear girl, with roses for thy cheeks,
And southern sunshine in thy singing heart,
Though I hear not thy voice which music speaks,
Nor see the gladness that thy smiles impart;

Yet from thy garden fling me just one flower,
And of thy Summer bud a single ray,
That I may have at least one fragrant flower,
One gleam of sunlight in a dreary day.

Write me a letter, darling, which shall seem
At once a bunch of roses and a song.
I hate short notes, so send me half a ream—
Be sure, at least, it's twenty pages long.

Tell me that thou art fond and faithful still,
That thou wouldst be so happy at my side;
And mention, also, darling, if you will,
How much your uncle left you when he died!

TERRORIST QUACKS.

The "Western Lancet," for July, contains some original articles of interest to the medical profession, specially on account of a successful operation by Dr. W. H. Mays, a gentleman whose able pen has frequeutly contributed to the NEWS LETTER. There are, also, some selected papers, illustrating the latest improvements in practical medicine, and many interesting abstracts from home and foreign medical journals. The journal fairly represents the progress of medical science, and should be in the hands of all practitiouers:

There is a form of quackery which is essentially of the lowest, if not the wickedest, in the whole field of quackcry, which in the most systematic manner deals with the more secret and objectionable of human infirmities—I mean with diseases which spring out of sensual indulgence. The men who carry out this line of bad business are numerous. They are not, as a rule, men who have received any medical education. A few of them may have attended classes, and a few may have passed through their curriculum and failed in examination. The majority are mere ignorants who assume to possess a medical qualification from a medical college of some other part of the world. They base their claim to be trusted on the ground of the secrecy of their knowledge, and the secrecy of their proceedings. The very fact that they themselves are obscure, hidden, distrusted, is the reason too often why they are consulted by those who, in the matter of their illness, themselves wish to be obscure and under concealment. Many a youth, who under ordinary circumstances would go to the family physician or surgeon for advice and assistance, goes to one of these men because he thinks he can open his mind to such a man freely, and communicate his distress without fear of discovery.

These men do an incalculable amount of evil. They not only directly rob, they corrupt their victims. Seizing upon minor failings of a physical or moral kind, they distort or caricature such failings until their victim is literally distraught with the idea of the life-long misery that is in store for him. Moreover, having raised this misery, they do no mortal thing to allay it. It is a part of their shameless policy to keep the mental wound open, to offer temporary relief at the most, and to maintain silence at the cost of a levying which knows no end so long as the fears of the victim hold ascendency over the acts of his life.

The respectable public cannot think we do wrong in keeping an eye on quacks of this order. If the public understood its own interests, if it understood the interests of those youths who spring from it, and who are to become the backbone of the next generation, it would give us more than thanks for our vigilance; it would give us its earnest assistance—

"To whip these scoundrels naked through the world."

I am glad to say that the very fact of the existence of our Society has largely checked this class of men. Supported by the public voice, we could put them all down in twelve months, and relieve the young of their pestilent influence for this generation.—From Dr. Richardson's Presidential Address to the members of the Medical Defence Association.

LORD LOFTUS.

The new Governor of New South Wales, Lord Loftus, son of the late Marquis of Ely, in the peerage of Ireland, proceeded on Monday by the Zealandia en route to the seat of his Government at Sydney. He has just completed a trying diplomatic term at St. Petersburg during all the war, and negotiations resulting from it between Russia and Turkey—and both those Empires and the States of Western Europe. And it is no small matter to think of, that, though advanced in life, his appearance was that of a strong and healthy man, and one likely to enjoy the rest and quiet of his delightful new home in Sydney. Among the first of his public acts will he the official opening of the International Exhibitiou. Acquainted as every educated gentleman ought to be with the relative positions, both geographically and coumercially, of San Francisco and Sydney, he naturally expressed his anticipation that there would he a great display of the results of cultivation and manufacture from the Pacific Coast, and appeared much surprised at what it is feared the display will prove to be; yet he could hardly believe, when remembering the boasted wealth of the city, and her interests abroad, that the labor and expense of making a collection of objects for the Internatioual Exhibition had devolved on an Australian gentleman, and that from neither a public nor a private source had one cent been contributed in any shape for the furtherance of so patriotic an object. Of course, he was assured that this arose out of no want of sympathy to Sydney or her commerce, but was the outcome of a chronic condition of public meanness; and illustrated by the conduct of the State and individuals at the great Exhibitions of Philadelphia and Paris.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 84, as compared with 82 for the corresponding week last year. Fifty were males, 34 females. There were 3 casualties, 1 homicide, 1 suicide; 10 Chinese. The zymotics were—typhoid fever 3, diarrhœa 2, infantile cholera 2, diphtheria 2, croup 1, scarlatina 1, whooping cough 3. The other principal causes of death were—phthisis 9, pneumonia 5, heart disease 4, brain disease 4, infantile convulsions 6, cancer 3, Bright's disease 2, epilepsy 2, enteritis 2, cerebro spinal meningitis 1, dysentery, gastritis, paralysis, peritonitis, septicæmia, 1 each. Thirty-two deaths were under 5 years; 40 were between 20 and 60 years. There were no deaths in the Fifth Ward, and only 1 each in the Third and Ninth; 11 occurred in the Eleventh Ward, and 12 in the Fourth; the deaths in public institutions were 20. The weather has presented every variety of climate, all within a few hours—heat and cold, cloud and sunshine, calm and wind, dust and fog, dryness and damp. All these mixed up in California confusion, and all calculated to make the citizens supremely uncomfortable, if not positively sick. No wonder many have gone to the country.

DIVERTING THE OXUS—RUSSIA AND CHINA.

It is reported that for some time past Russia has had thousands of workmen employed in diverting the River Oxus to its ancient bed, in order to establish water communication between the Caspian Sea and the regions bordering on Afghanistan. The Oxus, as our readers know, at present empties into the Sea of Aral, its delta being low and marshy, a very few of its mouths navigable even for the smallest craft. Formerly, however—and as recently, some say, as 1640—it flowed into the Caspian Sea at the Balkan Gulf, where its mouths were free from obstruction. The ancient bed diverges from the present one at a point only some fifty miles, more or less, from the Sea of Aral, so that, should the present project succeed, the river's course from that point will be the exact opposite to what it now is—namely, southwest instead of northeast—while its length will be extended by some two hundred miles. The river itself is navigable for more than a thousand miles of its length, a forms a highway through the heart of Central Asia. The importance of this undertaking to Russia cannot be overestimated. With the Volga flowing into the Caspian Sea at one end, and the Oxus flowing into it at the other, her troops and munitions of war could go by water almost from St. Petersburg to Afghanistan, through a country dominated from end to end by the Czar. It is, however, not against Afghanistan that Russia may be expectsd to take advantage of this water way. She has had enough of meddling with that country, and is not likely to try it again for some time to come at least. But in the steady eastward march of her empire Russia has at last come face to face with a power which bids fair to give her more trouble than the petty Khanates of Central Asia. That power is China, and already the impending collision is apparent. Russia respects no rights which she is strong enough to ignore, but she has got her match in the Celestials. In diplomacy the Chinese are fully as cunning and perfidious as the Russians, and can't he overreached like Shere Ali and his neighboring potentates. The only advantages that the Russians possess are superior courage and military skill. The latter may easily be acquired or obtainsd from abroad by the Chinese, and the former is far more than counterbalanced hy the vast superiority of numbers which the Mongolians possess. There is practically no limit to the armies China can put in the field, and recent wars havs shown that her Generals and Government take no account whatever of ths number of lives they sacrifice. Then these soldiers can be recruited on the spot; indeed, it is the invariable custom of Chinese generals to press into service the inhabitants of the country through which they pass, which is looted for subsistence, though very little of that is required for men who can live on a handful of rice and a cup of water per diem. Russia, on the other hand, must hring the hulk of her troops from Europe, and to maintain an army of sufficient strength to cope with the vast hosts of ths enemy would need an immense commissary and transportation train. Then, China is rich, or, at least, has shown that sbe is willing to spend any amount of money to defend her interests and keep her empire intact. At ths same time her wars are comparatively inexpensive, for she never dreams of paying her troops at the front, nor, as we have said, of supporting them. Russia, on the contrary, is bankrupt, and cannot horrow money as easily as Turkey. In short, if these two powers should once come into open collision, the peoples of Central Asia, who have one after another seen their territories invaded and seized by Russia, would be likely to have their revenge. Possibly they migbt find an opportunity in such an event to rise against their ancient enemy. Nor is it altogether improbable that John Bull would have something to say in the matter. But, without any such extraneous aid, it is safe to say that China would hold her own, especially if she took a notion to avail herself of European modes and implements of warfare.

ARIZONA.

Continuing favorable reports come from the newly developed mines in Arizona, and we learn that a constant stream of machinery is going into the territory, one house alone baving forwarded ten quartz mills this season to various points, and orders for as many more being now filled in this city and at the East. A gentleman conversant with the productiveness of the properties now worked, predicts that this year Arizona will yield fully $5,000,000 in bullion, and that a year hence the amouut may he trebled. All the signs of the times point to a coming era of unexampled prosperity. New mines are heing constantly brought to light through the energies of a large numher of hardy prospectors, some of whom have already realized handsome fortunes from their discoveries. The Silver King Mine continues to send forward its valuable concentrations, and now that tbe property is being worked upon an improved system, is reported to be capable hereafter of producing some 20,000 pounds per week; these have a value of at least one dollar per pound, and it is confidently stated by an expert miner who has recently visited this wonderful property, that there is now in sigbt in the mine not less than two and a half millions of dollars at the inconsiderable depth of 260 feet. When we consider ths vast shafts upon the Comstock, reaching down thousands of feet into the heart of the earth searching for treasure, we cannot but consider that Arizona enterprises, such as many we have described, offer more and better inducements than these for the investment of capital, especially as the pay ore appears to be found from the surface down, reaching a high grade at a comparatively trifling depth. The Tombstone district is taking its place as one of the bullion producing sections of the territory, and some heavy shipments have already heen made to this city. The new mill at the Tiger Mine was started last week, and cleaned up some $14,000 after a seven days' run, and the owners expect to run $20,000 per week when they get to work upon first-class ore. A new gold mill has just been completed at Yuma from which large results are anticipated. We hear of a number of Eastern capitalists who contemplate making ths tour of ths Arizona mines as soon as the heated term is over. The future of Arizona does indeed look very bright.

An old convict says that he cannot tell how many crimes are arranged in prison and afterwards carried out, but their name is legion. Hs proposes, therefore, that we take away the motive from these men by using the prison as a preserve for candidates; and the suggestion offers such a ready escape from two difficulties that one is surprised it has never been hit upon before. What to do with our criminals need trouble us no longer; and the necessity for conventions and caucusses disappears as by magic. First come, first served. Take the convict of oldest date as candidate for the U. S. Senate, and so on down. The thing is as simple as A, B, C, and has nothing to do with the Legion of Honor.

SOME VERY PLAIN TALK.

The Liverpool "Weekly Courier," of June 14th, has a letter, signed D. C. M., which gives us some hard ruhs, under the title of a "Little Plain Truth About California." D. C. M. says that the State is overloaded, and that correspondents are generally dined and wined into admiration of all our doings and beings. Society he does not think much of:

"Thers is no doubt tbat many people there of wealth and a high social grade were offenders against the criminal code, who sought retirement and oblivion in the distaut gold hunt. Some of them now wear the disguise of strange names; and ons of them, more brilliant than the average, achieved a high office under the State.

As compared even with the worst cities of the Eastern States, San Francisco is irreligious, immoral, feverish, speculative, dishonest. Drinking saloons, grocery and other stores are open and transact business on Sunday. Yet, strange to say, it is a penal offense for a butcher to sell meat on that day. Preaching is at a sad discount, and the churches are going to rack.

As to its immorality, there are all the adjunctive vices of fast living. Drinking and gambling are not confined to men, but are indulged in to excess by many women of the fashionable element. Nor is even the opium den without its attraction for the women.

I speak of these things as appearances and facts, wishing to be understood as making exception in point of intelligence, morality and refinement, in favor of many good people whose presence serves to ameliorate the gross character with which this population is marked.

As to dishonesty, the average Californian in his dealings seems to be not only devoid of personal honor and pride, but of policy too. It is true that in almost all parts of the world men seek to trick and beat each other, but they do it with some discretion and policy, but with Californians the inquiry is, "Who's to beat?" and instantly the scramble begins. I said, also, that these people were speculative. That is certainly true, and it has bronght them to grief, and may bring them, as a community, to ruin. And now the savings banks are overloaded with mortgages.

They speak of Italian skies in California, and there is something akin to that if ws can so compars ahout four months' steady sunshine, from the 1st of September up to January, which this year was free from the miserable typhoons which rule in the summer months. But there is nothing balmy or mellow ahout this. The very crop itself is a gamble because of the uncertainty of the rains. The raising of stock is consequently a gamble hecause of the uncertainty of fodder.

On the whole, I think Oregon is a better country to live in. Tbe soil is richer, and from year to year tbe climate is more uniform. The elements are more prompt and faithful in their ministrations. The harvest is in steadier proportion to the seed. One may farm there upon 50 acres and calculate within $100 of the outcome, and that in a manner which would ruin one in California. In California there are 800,000 people, 600,000 of whom live in cities and towns. That means three non-producers to one producer. In Oregon the case is exactly reversed. That State has a population of 160,000, only 40,000 of which reside in cities and towns, showing three producers as against but one non-producer."

THE MINING OUTLOOK.

The Eastern papers continue to devote considerable space to the mining interests of the Pacific Coast, and the subject is one worthy of their unremitting attention. The New York Daily Graphic has done a large amount of valuable work in this direction, both in the way of description and illustration, as have also Harper's Weekly and Leslie's Illustrated News. The New York dailies are not behindhand in the good work, and all the leading journals of the country bear evidence to the fact that a very widespread interest in our mining enterprises is being gradually but surely developed. It now remains the duty of those interested in this vast industry to foster it with exceading care. New York is fast becoming the central rendezvous for multitudinous mining schemes. Many of these are well wortby of the attention of capitalists; others should bs very carefully investigated, both as to value and title, before auy money is invested in them. California gold mines, as a class, are good properties. Mines of this class that are partially developed, with facilities for cheap working, with wood and water abundant, and access not too difficult, in our opinion are almost certain of proving profitable investments. Many such properties are working successfully to-day that are never heard of in the stock boards. The Bodie mines are of this class, and it is not going far from the record to say that the prospects of many other localities are fully as encouraging as those of that favored district, and only require the touchstone of capital to make them give up their hidden treasures. It is interesting to know that California gold properties are fast establishing themselves as favorites with Eastern investors, and from all appearances a number of these, now idle, will become live and valuable mines in the very near future. We gladly welcome to our favored State these "wise men from the East." That they will not regret their investments we can confidently assure them, if they will only exercise tbe same amount of care in selecting their localities for mining that they would in investing in any other legitimate line of business; for we do emphatically contend that mining is legitimate, when properly and economically managed.

PROSPECTIVE REFORMS.

The Chambers of Commerce of all the principal Eastsrn cities havs resolved to transact their grain business after 1st September next on the central basis which has so long been in use in California. There is a quiet hut persistent effort being made on the Atlantic side to practically adopt the metrical system; and Government also inclines in that direction. Six months' actual uss would prove its superiority, but the cost of changing weights and measures is tbe principal drawback. Thers is a strong disposition among the official and commercial classes of Russia to reform their old style calendar and bring it in accord with that of the civilized world. The chauge may be looked upon as a foregone conclusion as soon as affairs become more settled in that Empire. Creditors and peasants will no doubt ask, "Who stole the twelve days?" as they did when Parliament adopted the Gregorian calendar. Last on the list, is an evident desire of the American Jews to celebrate their Sabbath on Sunday. Some prominent rabbins urge that as they are a thoroughly commercial people, it is a waste of valuable time to retain their predilection for Saturday. These things show the tendency of modern thought to favor all reforms of universal benefit.

Important Announcement in Life Assurance!

The EQUITABLE LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY of the United States make the following announcement to the public:

The dissatisfaction which prevails throughout the community with regard to onorous conditions contained in life assurance contracts and the judicial decisions based thereon, together with the public endorsement of the liberal usages of this Society, as shown by its largely increased business, has led the management seriously to consider whether the contract could not be simplified, and certain conditions erased therefrom which have been the subject of much criticism and misconception.

After a carefnl examination of the experience of some of the best companies in Great Britain, who have ehown a greater liberality than has been cnstomary in thie conntry, this Society feels jnstified in adopting a form of contract in which the following important concessi0ns are made to policy-holdere throughont the United States:

1. Policies will be made incontestable after three years from their date
2. Each ordinary policy will provide for a definite surrender-value in paid-up assurance, in case the policy is forfeited after three years from its date.
3. Each Tontine Policy will contain a definite surrender-value in oash, in case of withdrawal at the end of the Tontine Period.
4. The contract will be concisely and clearly expressed, containing only such provisione as are necessary to protect the policy-holders.
5. The above concessions will hereafter inure to the benefit of all policies already iseued and in force after three years from their dates respectively.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The past week has been one of unusual dullness, and with the exception of Ophir the entire list shows a gradual shrinkage of values over previous quotations. The recent heavy assessments levied, together with the inevitable delay attending operations at the mines, have greatly unsettled the public confidence as to any immediate change for the better, and until developments are more assured we may not look for any increase of speculation. Work is being rapidly pushed ahead, with the view of crosscutting in Union and Sierra Nevada 2300-level, at as early a day as possible, but with the usual interruptions, and the trouble experienced from water, etc., it will be several weeks before crosscutting can be commenced. At other points there is nothing of particular interest to note. The outside stocks participate in the general weakness, and, altogether, the prospects of the market are anything but cheerful. Bodie continues to decline under a heavy pressure to sell. The drifts and stopes are not looking so well, but the winze continues to improve, and at this writing shows better than ever before. Mono, North and South Noonday, and Syndicate, are looking finely, and promise to develop handsomely. Advices from Eureka Con. report an improvement in the mine.

MINING SWINDLES.

Four years ago the NEWS LETTER began the first crusade in the State against mining swindles, and the lesson then administered was long remembered. It stopped for a time the infamous swindles perpetrated by mining operators and brokers. Lately we observe symptoms of the same disease breaking out, and we now warn all intending frauds that there is a rod in pickle for them. Soft words avail not against these harpies; they must be held up in pillory for public scorn. Names, not fictions, are our password, and some of these swindles must be run to the earth. The extortionate assessments lately levied on the Comstock and the fly-traps put forth in Bodie shall merit our attention. The same service we rendered in ridding the State of quack doctors will be repeated in ridding it of quack mining operators. We ask all aggrieved parties to present us with facts and they can rely upon having justice done them. It is high time for this community to be relieved from the infamous leeches that have prayed upon its prosperity.

We note with pleasure the return of E. J. Baldwin from his Eastern trip, where he has been spending a few weeks with his charming young bride. While in Chicago, Mr. Baldwin, who is noted as one of our most zealous and liberal patrons of the turf, must have been exceedingly gratified at the victory won by his favorite horse, the famous mare, Mollie McCarty, in a race for the Garden City Cup, competed for by a field comprised of many of the most noted flyers of the Southwest. Mr. Baldwin is one of the citizens of San Francisco whose absence, even for a short period, is keenly felt, especially in business circles, and we gladly welcome his return.

The extraordinary pressure upon our columns to-day has forced us to hold back many most interesting articles already in type, among them an elaborate and most valuable table of statistics relating to Californian progress. So great is the demand for the magnificent work, now at last presented to the public, that we feel compelled, however reluctantly, to sacrifice to the exigencies of its production the advantages we had promised ourself from the publication of the papers now withheld. Our Chinese mail is also excluded.

From the Orient.—The Pacific Mail steamship City of Peking arrived yesterday from Hongkong, via Yokohama, with thirty-two cabin passengers, five Europeans and 370 Chinese, and for cargo 43,065 pkgs mdse, say 3,510 tons, consisting in part, for this city, of 5,967 mats rice, 4,781 pkgs tea, 10 pkgs silk, 1,872 pkgs mdse, 1,450 bales gunny bags, 189 mats sugar, 595 pkgs tin; and to go East, overland, 27,353 pkgs tea, 467 pkgs silk, 74 pkgs mdse; a total of 1,979 pkgs mdse, 5,967 mats rice, 32,134 pkgs tea, 502 pkgs silk.

The "American Union Telegraph Company of the United States" have leased for 99 years from July 1st, all the lines of the Dominion Telegraph Company of Canada, guaranteeing the latter 5 per cent. annually upon its capital, payable in quarterly advance installments. The American Union is fast extending its lines southerly and westwardly, and expects to reach the Pacific Coast in four months. A great reduction in rates is promised, most probably one half less than those now charged.

Freights and Charters.—Our fleet of disengaged vessels now foots up 22, of 27,000 tons register. We have on the berth for Europe 21 vessels, of 31,000 tons, and in sight, to arrive within the next six months, 165,000 tons. From this it will be seen that about one-half of our surplus grain crop is provided for. At this date freights are quite firm at 43@45s. to a direct port; Havre or Liverpool at 47s. 6d.@50s. to Cork or Falmouth for orders.

The S. F. Stock Board's action in regard to the Bullion and Exchequer assessments is entirely commendable, and should lead to good results. The fact of retaining a stock upon its list carries with it a certain responsibility for the proper management of the same, and when that becomes no longer possible, the sanction of the Board should be withdrawn in the interest of the public.

The steamship City of Sydney has arrived from the Australian colonies, with passengers, Government mails and, for cargo, tin 708 ingots Sydney block; also, from same, about 500 boxes fruit, lemons, etc. She also brings, from Honolulu, sugar 6,419 bags and 65 kegs, chiefly refining grades for the California Refinery; rice, 400 bags; bananas, 500 bunches, etc.

Teas from Japan Eastward.—The bark Frank Marion, Capt. Dow, arrived yesterday, 30 days from Yokohama, to the consignment of the Occidental and Oriental Steamship Company, bringing 14,686 packages tea, to go East by the Central Pacific Railroad.

To-day we issue the first in the series of illustrations of California's notable sons and daughters. The others will follow with all convenient speed. Subscribers to the News Letter for one year will receive these magnificent pictures free, as issued.

We have had fifty artist proofs of "At the Play" printed, which will be sold at the office for five dollars per copy. These are printed on the finest of plate paper.

The Australian steamer arrived so near the time of our going to press that we can but chronicle the fact.

CALIFORNIANS

"AT THE PLAY"

To-day we offer to the readers of the News Letter, whose name is legion, and who are confined to no one locality, but are scattered world-wide over the surface of the entire habitable globe, a souvenir of California that, we are persuaded, will not be lightly regarded anywhere. California has made its mark in the world's history. Its wonderful yield of the precious metals during the past thirty years has exercised, and is still exercising, an influence upon the commerce of all nations, that the future historian may do justice to, but which may not be fully summed up in our time. Just when the marvelous developments of trade, resulting from the general use of the steam engine, demanded an enlarged currency, the discovery of gold was made in this State, and so many hundreds of millions of wealth's best representative—i. e., gold—were added to the ever expanding uses of commerce that the nations have in consequence been enabled to trade with each other to an extent unparalleled in the world's history. The treasures of California were discovered just when the whole earth was about to stand sorely in need of them. For this reason, if for none other, California is a land of intense interest to all people. Travel wheresoever you will, the land of gold is eagerly talked about. Its gold, its silver, its marvelous yield of grain, its fruits, its scenery, its wonders of nature, its youthful energy, its abnormal growth, its wealth, its beauty, its men and its women, are all fertile themes for conversation and for inquiry. No child when first it reads of the imaginary discoveries made by Aladdin and his wonderful lamp, is more interested than is the average adult inquirer as to the realities of this wonder-land of the far-off West. The News Letter is wont to tell of these things. It is racy of the soil. It is as cosmopolitan as are our people. In short it is eminently Californian. Hence it is read and known everywhere. It is a favorite at home and popular abroad; representing, as it does, the vim, the energy, the enterprise, the intelligence and the life of the Pacific Coast. Our readers are to be found in all lands. That we are esteemed a welcome visitor in all places of intelligence we know from abundant evidences. Understanding the interest taken in all that is Californian, it is our chief labor to supply such facts and figures that concern our material interests, as will keep people everywhere posted about us. Desiring still further to gratify that keen interest in us which we have but lightly touched upon, we have hit upon the idea of illustrating our people as they are. We have heretofore issued faithful portraits of many of our leading men, under the title of "Men We Know." The process was slow, only one portrait being issued weekly, so that it was impossible to do justice to all within a reasonable time. From that beginning we conceived the wider, and better idea, which finds execution to-day in the really splendid work of art which accompanies this number of the News Letter. Three hundred of the men and women who represent the enterprise, the brains, the culture, the wealth and the beauty of our State, are most faithfully portrayed. In order to bring them together, happily and appropriately, they are massed as "At the Play." Our people love amusements, which are essential to the strain of our active business lives. Hence we levy upon the world for musical and theatrical talent; and nowhere is genius better rewarded. Prejudices against theatrical exhibitions, which still exist in more Puritanical cities, have scarcely an abiding place among our singularly cosmopolitan people. Hence, the Eastern or European reader must not suppose that any violence is done to the probabilities when the Bishop of the orthodox Episcopal Church is seen in pleasant tete a tete with the unorthodox divine of the Unitarians, or when the covenanting Presbyter is observed in happy contiguity with the Jewish Rabbi, and when all together are met in the auditorium of a first-class theater, where nature and human nature, and not schisms or creeds, are represented. The picture "At the Play" is essentially Californian, because it is exceptionally cosmopolitan. In it are grouped together men and women from all lands, of all creeds and nationalities, and of varied pursuits and stations in life. They are representatives of all that is useful and successful in our midst. The railroad magnate, the bonanza king, the enterprising manufacturer, the skilled agriculturist, the successful wine-grower, the able and upright judge, the eloquent divine, the foremost law-makers, the brilliant and learned lawyer, the skillful physician, the bright litterateurs who wield a power in the land, the proprietors of our chief newspapers, our city fathers, our architects, our artists and our actors find a prominent place; and, not to be ungallant, a fair display of the women who beautify and adorn our social circles is to be found. Every picture is a copy from a photograph. The likenesses are excellent. No resident of our city need be at a loss to name every individual face with which he is acquainted. For the use of strangers, an admirably-arranged Key is supplied, by aid of which the ownership of each counterfeit presentment may conveniently be determined. It may be truly said that this work is full of interest. A copy will reach every household in the State, and our people will spend many an hour in picking out the faces they know, and in giving expression to the thoughts and experiences associated with those faces. When the live men and women in it have passed away, it will serve to make their memories live after them. Their children and their children's children will treasure it as a most prized souvenir of these times. Such as it is, we offer it to our readers everywhere as a faithful representation of three hundred of the leading men and women of California. The arranging of the materials into this harmonious whole has been a work of labor and expense, as well as one of love. The decorative design is by Garibaldi, the photographs by Bradley & Rulofson, the drawing by Van de Casteele, and the lithographing by Messrs. Britton & Rey. These artists are all justly celebrated, and that they find appreciation and profit among us, is no slight evidence of the aesthetic tastes of our citizens. The News Letter is pleased to have furnished this opportunity for the display of their skill. We do not intend it to be their sole effort in the same direction. We are conscious that there yet remain many, very many worthy Californians who meet "at the play." Indeed, an apology is due to hundreds for whom this week there is not even "standing room." Further editions will be published in good time, and in the end we hope to do justice to all.

CAN'T BE DONE, FRIENDS.

A political party can't be successfully run by a newspaper. That fact may now be taken to be pretty well established. The thing has been tried more than once but has always failed. The Bulletin tried its hand at it four years ago, only to meet with ignominious failure. It got up the so-called Independent Party and ran General Bidwell for Governor, but only succeeded in securing a small minority of all the votes cast for its ticket. It then wisely retired from the field of party management and left that business to the experts. The Chronicle is now trying its hand at the game, but with even less prospects of success than those which attached to the Bulletin. It is floundering in a quagmire of its own making in a most deplorable fashion. It is really pitiable to observe the humiliating attitudes into which the "live paper" is being forced. It is one thing to run a newspaper and quite another to run a successful political party, as De Young and Fitch have found out to their costly and sore discomfiture. In that line they have proven to be failures both. It is well that it should be so. The tyranny of a newspaper would be intolerable if it could own and run the nominating machinery of political parties. If it could reward its friends and punish its enemies at its sovereign will and pleasure then the oppression of no king, czar or emperor would equal that of the newspaper proprietor. There would be an end to independence of thought and action. A De Young would issue his mandates and men would soon come to vie with each other in their eagerness to give them effect. They would make haste to win the favor of the god of the machine. It is well that men revolt at the very threshold of all such attempts at dangerous usurpation. In the interest of journalism we are glad that they do. We are persuaded that it is not good for the press that its managers should personally wield the scepter of power. If they succeeded they would fail as independent critics, and become the apologists for the wrong-doing and corruption of their tools and creatures. No! that power of the press is greatest and best which is more felt than seen. It may influence, but should not command. It may lead, but can never safely be permitted to drive. Honestly and wisely conducted it can mold that public opinion which in the end must control all political parties. When it goes beyond that and seeks to dictate the mere personnel of politics it makes a great mistake, as is being most curiously demonstrated just now.

MIDDLEMISS, OF THE BRILLIANT MINE.

Middlemiss, of the Brilliant Mine, is a courageous man. He has given us an opportunity to ventilate him in the Police Court. On Thursday he preferred a complaint against the News Letter for libel, and the matter awaits an examination. The difficulty has come about in this wise: Last Saturday week we had an article entitled "Brilliant Mine Management." In it we laid bare as impudent a piece of humbuggery as was ever brought to the notice of the San Francisco public, which is saying not a little. One J. R. Middlemiss was named as the President of the mine. If the statements therein contained were untrue the article was grossly libelous. If they are incontrovertible facts, as we claim they are, then their publication was a public good. This man Middlemiss refuses to challenge them. He carefully avoids allegations that are serious, and lights upon ones that are trivial. The article of moment against his management of the Brilliant mine he fights shy of. He declines to try the question of its truthfulness. If silence gives consent, then he consents that it is true. That article being unchallenged, and unchallengeable he is ill employed when he thinks it worth his while to bother about the light and airy touches which appeared in a card published on the following Saturday. A gentleman of high standing sent us that card, and we published it, and propose to stand by it. It good humoredly congratulated him upon not being in Texas, where they sometimes hang men as good-looking as he on suspicion, whether guilty or not. As he didn't see the joke we now withdraw our congratulations and wish he really were in Texas. We will leave the spectators, who may be present in the Police Court, to judge whether we have not flattered his personal appearance. We trust the worthy prosecuting officer of that court will not think that it is through any intentional fault of ours that so dangerous a rival in the manly graces has been introduced where he, himself, has hitherto reigned supreme. Meanwhile we tell this man Middlemiss that whilst he refrains from challenging our serious article upon his management of the Brilliant mine, it is the height of folly, if not of impudence, for him to question the pleasant allusions of our contributors as to his personal appearance.

TO PESCADERO.

Pescadero is a very pleasant place, and what is more, the journey to it from San Francisco is a pleasant one also. From the city to San Mateo by railway; from there to Pescadero as good a road and as commodious a coach, as smart horses and as civil a driver as ever need to handle the ribbons—and that is saying a good deal. Necessarily the nature of the country we travel over demands time, as it is not by any means a dead plain. But there is not a mile which is not replete with interesting variations of scenery: Quiet glens, with crystal brooks purling through them; a luxuriance of ever-changing foliage; quiet hamlets and farmhouses, nestling in picturesque nooks; hills up to eight hundred feet high, commanding views of the Bay of San Francisco on one hand, and the Pacific Ocean on the other; then Spanishtown, where we stop for lunch, and on for miles, over a rolling country, with the ocean close by on one hand, with an endless succession of luxuriant wheat, barley and potato crops, varied here and there by the beautiful dark blue flowers of acres of flax, on the other. There is no want of variety the whole way, for something fresh comes into view at every turn of the road—and the turns are legion. Arrived at Pescadero, the traveler meets with all the quiet, elegant comfort he could wish, in one of the best kept hotels. Pescadero is not a "watering-place" in the ordinary acceptation of the term; but the sea is easily approached, and the pebbly beach affords endless interest and amusement to visitors who can love nature in her beautiful home products—minerals and oceanic flowers. There is fishing at all times, and wing-shooting in the season, and, taken all together, a climate neither too hot to be oppressive, nor too cool to be in the least objectionable; where all kinds of European flowers and fruits abound, while the scenery of gently sloping hills and narrow valleys remind the traveler of the picturesque scenery of Devonshire and the West of England. To Pescadero by stage and rail, there and back, $7 is all the cost of travel.

A GREETING TO AN OLD FRIEND.

As we start to-day on a literary and pictorial tour "all round the world" in a kindly spirit with all mankind, we cannot but pause a moment before we embark to greet with a hearty hand-shake a journalistic friend, who, starting on his race for public favor almost before our State was recognized, has walked by our side these many years. Commencing an important career with the first rush of adventurous pioneers, full of life and hope, our journalistic friend has been for more than thirty years a welcomed visitor in the offices and houses not only of our own people, but of thousands around the world. From its high character and enterprise in the days when news-gathering was far more difficult than now, it won the position accredited to it by the press of the States, of Europe and of the British colonies, as the leading journal of this coast, and was then, as it is now, in many of the centers of industry, influence and wealth, recognized as the sterling authority on all matters of facts, figures, and of interest to the State at large. As the years have come and gone, it has maintained, with reputation untarnished and with fidelity to principles, its high standing in the foremost ranks of the press, and has earned the earnest approval of the community. Its well-won record of fairness in criticism of the events of the day, and its labors for the best interests of the city and State have kept the Alta California close to the hearts of its friends. Its past career is but a guarantee of its future course. Replete with the largest and fullest news gathered from all parts of the world, with calm, able and considerate editorials, and representing in its pages nothing that can possibly offend the most sensitive mind, the friend of long years grows daily more and more in popular favor. We wish it a hearty God-speed in its progress.

THOSE EXAMINATIONS AGAIN.

At the last meeting of the Board of Education Director Sullivan, of the Committee appointed to investigate the charges against Miss Birdsall and Mrs. Danielwitz, make a report exonorating those ladies, and recommending that they should not be forced to undergo another examination. The Board rejected the report, for reasons known, perhaps, to themselves, but much hidden from the public. All this looks like mean persecution. The Committee, Messrs. Sullivan, Mountain and Laven, declare that they have carefully revised all the facts and have heard additional testimony, and they find nothing against these ladies; but here they lie under a mistake. Director Taylor is against them, and Director Bacon and Mr. Leggett and some other pious men, who care for public opinion and are full of virtue, but take all their information in these matters, by Taylor's own confession, from anonymous letters. Anonymous letters! And if they came from near the Board; from a friend of the Board? Why should men be above doing this, whose friends are capable of the infamy of believing anonymous charges? The venomous persistence displayed in this business is sufficient to damn the leaders in it, all the more that these are the very men who quaked before Ewald and ran away from responsibility. They trust they may be allowed to disgrace these ladies, but they trust in vain. No convention will touch them, but exposure will.

CATHOLIC FUNERAL OBSEQUIES.

As announced in the Press, the solemn requiem obsequies of the late Madam Jovita Haraszthy, daughter of General Vallejo, took place last Tuesday at the Roman Catholic Mortuary Chapel, the officiating priest being the Very Rev. Father Kaiser, now of Mission San Jose, a personal friend of the family. The attendance of relatives and friends was, as might have been expected, very numerous. After a solemn Requiem High Mass, the Reverend Father, in a few eloquent sentences, spoke of the many unobtrusive public and private Christian virtues which adorned her life; her devotion to her Creator, her exemplary life as a wife and a mother, the education of her children, her never failing charity to the poor, and that belief in the Catholic religion which has ever distinguished her family. Her death was sudden and unexpected, having been called away at one of those moments which the world deems most happy, but which to friends always seems the saddest—but "the ways of the Omnipotent are unsearchable, and His judgments justified in themselves," and He knows best what is best for His own.

Improvement in the manufacture of gas. The London Times of the 20th June says that an engineer of Philadelphia has patented a process by which it is proposed to increase the production of gas from 7,000 cubic feet to 250,000 cubic feet per ton of coal. The coal is first pulverized, and then projected into a heated cupola, mixed with steam.

NOTICE.

To Bullion and Exchequer Stockholders.

The San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board having been informed that great dissatisfaction exists among the shareholders of the Bullion and Exchequer Mining Companies, respecting the management of those properties by the present Boards of Trustees, have empowered their Executive Committee to co-operate with those shareholders who wish an opportunity for the expression of their sentiments respecting the same. The Executive Committee intends, with such co-operation, to procure the action of the Courts in ordering a new election of Trustees of those companies. All shareholders in sympathy with this movement are requested to call at the office of Mr. J. W. COLEMAN, President of the Committee, Room No. 1, Stock Exchange Building, and sign a petition to the County Court for its action in the premises.

WARM WEATHER WISHES.

O, for a seat in some railroad of chilliness,
And a swift engine to hear me away,
Far from the blinding heat, dusty and villainous,
Into the cool of a mid-winter day!

O, for a goblet of Amontillado,
With the ice dewing the liberal glass,
O, for a century passed in the shadow
Of breezy trees, with the frost on the grass!

O, for the maiden whose haughtiness freezes you!
O, for a blast of northeasterly wind!
O, for the snow-storm that chills as it seizes you!
O, for the coolies and punkahs of Ind!

O, for a residence perched on a pinnacle
Of the tall Andes, the Alps, Pyrannees!
O, for a yacht with a seat by the hinnacle,
And a free swing at the salt-laden breeze!

Would we were mummies! The mummy don't suffer, he Beats hack the heart from Pyramidal works;
O, for an antartic voyage of discovery
Where we'd get shipwrecked and cast on the bergs.

O, for a drink in an arbor of shadiness!
Well, that at least we can get in a trice,
And we will have it, too, Ganymede aiding us—
Waiter, two punches, with plenty of ice!

San Francisco, July 11th, 1879. G. H. J.

PLOWING BY ELECTRICITY.

Experiments have just heen carried out at Sermaize on a new system of tilling hy machinery devised hy MM. Chretien and Felix. These gentlemen, aware of the remarkahle properties of the Gramme machine, conceived the idea of employing the hydraulic forces so distributed in France, as well as the stationary engines at the various manufactories, to work powerful Gramme macbines, producing electricity in considerahle quantity; and it is this electricity, conducted to distances of 1,000 and even 2,000 metres, which communicates movement to other Gramme machines, counected directly with the windlasses which move the plow. The Gramme machines in fact transform motion into electricity, when worked hy any kind of motor, and electricity into motion when placed in connection with any source of electricity. The loss produced hy this douhle transformation varies hetween 30 and 60 per cent. of the initial work, according to the distance of the apparatus and the section of the conducting wires. In practice one may, up to a distance of two kilometres (2,187 yards) from the motor, calculate upon a mean service of 50 per cent. with conductors 10 square millimetres in section (140·5 mils diam). Thus the inventors have arranged a set of mechanical apparatus for plowing, threshing, loading and unloading goods, harrowing, weeding, sowing, and all the operations of farming as executed in England hy means of traveling steam engines.

Two of these sets of machinery have already heen estahlished at Sermaize, an apparatus for discharging harges laden with heets, and a double windlass for plowing. The former was worked all last winter, and effected a saving of about 40 per cent. on the manual lahor. It, moreover, greatly facilitated the unloading of the heets. The plowing windlasses have heen at work only during three weeks, and have brought a crowd of visitors to the spot; savants, official functionaries, agriculturists engineers and others, including M. Duphenieux, prefect of La Marne, and General Clinchaut, commandant in chief of the 6th Corps d'Armee.

The electric cahles are suspended upon posts like telegraph wires. The two windlasses are placed 200 metres apart, and, hy means of commutators, the electricity is transmitted sometimes to the machine of one apparatus and sometimes to the other. As the wire rope unwinds from one drum it is wound upon the other. The windlasses are self-moving, transport themselves to their destination, and shift their position as the work proceeds. One of the prime motors at the sugar-works at Sermaize, 300 metres from the field, sets in motion two other Gramme machines which generate the electricity. Ahout 8 horse-power is used for this purpose. In order not to delay their experiments, MM. Chretien and Felix have used machines intended for the electric light, and have had for the draught of the plow only 4 horse-power. But they will shortly have much more powerful machines to work plows with 4 shares, and to penetrate the soil more deeply than they have hitherto done. At present they use a plow with two shares for light soils, and one with a single share for heavy soils.

The followiug are a few data relative to the work: Velocity of the Gramme machines at the works, 1,600 revolutions per minute. Velocity of the Gramme machines at the windlasses, 800 revolutions per minute. Velocity of the friction pullies, 133 turns per minute. Velocity of the small drum, 14 turns per minute; of the large drum, 27 turns per minute. Velocity of the motor wheels, 4·6 turns per minute. Rate of motion of the plow (high velocity), 81 metres; ditto (low velocity), 50 metres per minute. The furrows are ·275 metre (nearly 11 in.) in width, and have a mean depth of ·2 metre (nearly 8 in). With two shares, ahout 20 square metres may be plowed per minute.—Revue Industrielle.

Immigration and Emigration.—The following are the arrivals and departures with regard to California for six months ending June 30th:

Six Months.	Arrived.	Left.	Gain.
By rail	18,601	11,267	7,334
By sea	7,367	5,965	1,402
	25,968	17,232	8,736
First six months of 1878	25,926	17,940	7,986
Increase	42	.....	750
Decrease	....	708	.....

The gain of 750 over the first six months of last year shows that California is not at present increasing in attractiveness to settlers. Kearny's communism has douhtless a good deal to do with this slow immigration.

[From London Truth.]

AN INTERCEPTED LETTER.

—— LONDON, June, 1879.

It is sad, but true, Ella; my little remaining faith in the human race has vanished, for Juliet, our cook, our treasure, has proved false. Henceforth, let any one talk to me, if he dare, about the gratitude of mankind! No tongue can tell, no pen can describe what we have done for Juliet, and to think——My dear, the recollection of recent experiences makes me ill. Indignation, combined with disappointment, has left corroding marks upon my brow, and given birth to a gray hair! I asked Aunt Fanny yesterday whether she wished me go to an early grave. "You must be mad to put such an absurd question," she replied. "Well, then," I continued, I give you notice that I shall no longer worry about the house. All I promise is to engage servants that are total abstainers. I draw the line at drunkenness. Lying and stealing in moderation, and shirking of work, I shall not resent, whatever you may choose to do. Life is too short to be devoted to reforming everybody but one's self." Aunt Fanny accepted the situation, and has even gone so far as to promise to stand at the helm when future household storms arise, so you'll hear little more from me, my dear, of domestic muddles. I've been on a strike, and returned to work on my own terms. And now I'll tell you the cause of my deliverance, which, of course, you already suspect. I was sitting one afternoon by myself, Aunt Fanny and Bob having gone to a reception, when I was frightened out of five year's existence by a heavy fall and a series of shrieks. Rushing down stairs, I found the housemaid rushing up. "Oh, mum, the cook is dead!" Hurrying to the kitchen, I found Juliet extended on the floor—not dead, however, for breathing was apparent. Demanding an explanation, the housemaid declared that Juliet had been drinking, and, after threatening the servants' lives, had mounted the kitchen table to dance a jig; a performance abruptly terminated by a false step, which resulted in her present position. "So she's killed herself, mum," said the servants in chorus. "We're not to blame."

"Who's killed, I'd like to know?" cried the Treasure, raising herself on one elbow. "The best thing for you to do, mum, is to discharge these girls. They're a bad lot. They're drunk. They've not been sober for a week. Killed, am I?" I'll show you whether I'm killed." Suiting the action to the word, Juliet picked herself up with great effort, and staggered to the fire, seized the soup-pot, and poured the contents into the fire. "Now, who says I'm killed?" shouted Juliet, amid the sputtering and smoke, waving a big iron spoon over her head. The servants again shrieked, and I, for the first time, stood face to face with a drunken woman. I had read that infuriated animals are quelled by being looked firmly in the eye, so I was inspired to try this treatment on Juliet. "Put down that spoon," I said; "you are drunk."

"Drunk, mum! Who's been taking away my character? I never drank more than a pint of beer a day in all my life."

"It is useless to lie to me. Your condition is disgraceful. Go to bed at once, and we'll settle this matter when you are sober."

"Indeed, mum, it's the hard work, and being over the fire. It's fits, as I've told you."

"Go to bed, and don't attempt useless deception."

"You wouldn't deprive a poor woman of her pint of beer?"

"Juliet, if you don't go to bed instantly, I'll send for the police."

At this crisis a huge policeman came down the area steps, thinking somebody was murdered. "Same old game!" he muttered, gazing upon the raving Juliet. "I've been watching her for some time, and wondered whether you knew what she was up to. Why, she's been put out of the 'public' in the next street half-a-dozen times recently. She's an old hand." Think of it, Ella! Our Treasure, our beautiful cook, "an old hand!" It was useless to think of reforming her. She had spent all her money, pawned all her clothing—even the dresses I had given her—for drink! The policeman brought several assistants, who carried her off in a cab.

The next problem was, where to get a cook? I once more fell upon the newspaper "wants," and finding an advertisement that seemed to suit, drove to the place named. Fancy my amazement on discovering that I'd been ingeniously lured to a notorious servants' agency, against which I'd been warned! The advertisement read as though the girl were in service as the fashionable address given. Being caught, I went in. One supercilious young man was warming his back at the fire; another was tilted back in a chair before a desk. Neither changed his position. "What did I want?" "Oh, a cook." "What kind of a cook?" "Oh, ah, the one advertised, 'Sarah?'" "Well, yes; ah, five shillings, if you please."

"But I've not engaged her. I don't think that she will suit."

The proud gentleman with his back to the fire smiled pityingly. "We—ah—nevare bring our ladies and servants together, ah, until payment of the customary fee, ah. It's good for three months, ah. Sarah is a very good cook."

Like a fool I paid the fee, the young gentleman at the desk condescending to make out a receipt, saying: "When we state that Sarah is a good cook, we don't guarantee her, you know—oh, not at all. She says she is. We take her word for it."

"Take her word? What, then, do you mean by this morning's advertisement? You state positively that she is a first-class cook, and sober."

"O, dear, no! We don't state anything. She states. It's her advertisement; we only insert it."

The mistress pays five shillings, the maid pays half-a-crown, the agency advertises its address at the maid's expense, and guarantees nothing. Isn't that a capital arrangement for the agency? Enraged with the system, I yet took Sarah's address and departed. In reply to my note I received the following communication: "Miss Sarah Buggins precents her cumplimens an cant think uv no sitervashun with late dinnrs sundy and no skitchun made." I exhibited this elegant epistle to the young gentlemen of the agency, who thought it a capital joke. They grinned from ear to ear, until, in a voice of thunder, I demanded their attention.

"Very unfortunate, I'm sure, but perhaps we've something in the next room that will suit." The "something" appeared in the shape of a hideously ugly and dirty girl, whose hands were in deep mourning.

"You are a cook?" "Yes, mum."

"How much experience have you had!" "One month."

"That will do." And "something" retired.

"How dare you offer me such a servant?" I said to the clerks.

"These beautiful cads began to think, from my strong language, that I must be a grand lady, so they began to apologize.

"Very sorry, we're sure, ah; but, ah, we do, ah, the best we can. Very nice person just from Ireland. Miss O'Flanigan!"

Miss O'Flanigan appeared. She was very tall, very red-headed, and sickly in appearance.

"What wages do you ask?"

"The highest the best cooks get."

"Oh, then, you are a professional cook?"

"No, I'm not, mum; I'm a dressmaker, but as business is bad in Dublin, I've come to London to go into service."

"And you presume to demand the highest wages, when you can't cook? You can retire."

Giving me a withering look, Miss O'Flanigan returned to the inner room, whence came a peal of laughter. Miss O'Flanigan had undoubtedly made some pleasing remarks about our interview.

"I'll have no more trifling," I said to the clerks. "Either you'll endeavor to send me a sober, good cook, or I'll warn my friends against your agency." The clerks begged me to see other girls shut up in the pen. I refused. "No, you must send me a cook." They promised. A flaunting, impudent creature came the next morning, and, on hearing my requirements, declared I would not suit, as though she would! Again reviewing advertisements, I again set out in search of the unattainable, and was again lured unwarily to another agency, better than the other, but unsatisfactory. "The truth is, mum," said the woman, "I can't find good servants. The women who come to me drive me mad. They often lie, they sometimes steal, and they usually drink to excess. I'll do the best I can." She did. She sent me an old woman who was deaf and partially blind. After this hoon had misunderstood half-a-dozen orders, put curry in the soup, pepper in the tarts, and hack hair in everything, we sent her away. Disgusted with advertisements, disgusted with agencies, I cried aloud for help. Where, oh, where, to find a cook? "Go to Whitely's," said a friend. I did, dear; and I'm sure you'll rejoice to know that I breathe again. Yours, ever, PUSS.

Baldwin's Theater.—The rapid progress made by realism in art, literature and on the stage is an important and interesting question. Emile Zola is undoubtedly the most powerful writer of those who seek to portray human nature as it is; in all classes, with all its ills and ailments. "L'Assommoir" is one of the most remarkable books ever written. It is disgusting and vile in language and action; it is true and life-like to the most minute of its details. The good that a publication of this sort can do is incalculable. It opens the eyes of those who are able to help their fellow-men to an existing condition of things little dreamt of in their philosophy. The evils and horrors that are concomitants of existence in the lowest classes are, to a great extent, remediable through legislation and philanthropy, and any writings that tend to keep these subjects before the world, and public opinion interested, are worthy of encouragement. The proper field of the stage is more to amuse than instruct, and under this view, the propriety of a dramatization of such a work as "L'Assommoir" is a matter admitting of much discussion, pro and con. Zola's novel, if it may so be called, does not lend itself to dramatization. It is not a book with an intrigue or plot—with the necessary good and bad people, and a happy ending. It is simply a description of life in the low working classes of Paris, as more particularly exemplified and illustrated by the career of a couple of beings. The gradual fall of these people from a comparative state of prosperity to the lowest depths of misery is not the result of any machination or plot, but the simple consequence of the individual vices, and of an outrageous condition of society. The great lesson it teaches is one of temperance. The language is mostly all of the Parisian Argot, and the scenes and incidents perfectly local, and, therefore, inexplicable to outsiders. It will be seen that translation is difficult, and successful dramatization nigh unto impossible. Charles Reade, understanding this, has constructed a play based upon those features of the book that are illustrative of the evils of intemperance; and this drama is creating a sensation in London. Mr. Reade, through clever management, succeeded in receiving from Mr. Zola an indorsement of his action, and this effectually silences criticism as to the propriety of such a proceeding. Mr. Reade, to make the play a play, has written up a plot, with a skillful use of the dramatis personæ. In some instances this results in a total change of character of some of the individuals. The moral of the book is also lost. In the play, "Gervaise" and "Coupeau" fall to their abjectedness through the hunting and hounding inspired by a spirit of revenge on the part of "Lautier" and "Big Virginie." The Reade play is evidently what the Baldwin Theater is supposed to produce; but what is being played is a sort of hybrid between that and a literal translation of the author's own dramatization. In its departure from the book, in plot and action, it is Reade's Drink; in its sketchy nature, lack of continuity, tableaux taken here and there from the book, it is a translation. This performance ought to possess relish for us, satiated as we are with the everlastingly similar run of plays. It is something so different, so new that our mental palates ought to be tickled with it. In reality there are but two strong scenes; the women's encounter in the wash house, and the terrible delirium tremens death episode. The other seven tableaux, there are nine in all, fall rather flat, through a lack of clearness, as to what it is all about. Between some of them there are supposed to be intervals of years or months, and there is nothing, absolutely nothing to indicate this. To one who has not read the book, the whole performance is unintelligible, to one who has perused Zola's pages, it becomes a source of anger and annoyance at the different changes. Of the acting of Mr. O'Neill, nothing but praise can be written. This is by far the best piece of work he has ever done in San Francisco. He seems to have gone into the part with heart and soul. It is a most carefully studied and carried out piece of acting. The faults that generally mar Mr. O'Neill's efforts, an imperfect knowledge of his lines, and a total disregard of the requirements of make up do not exist in this masterly rendition of "Coupeau." In appearance, he is a French workman to the life. Every one appreciates Mr. O'Neill's talent, and when adverse criticism is necessary, a too frequent occurrence, by far, it is always done regretfully. On this occasion he does full justice to himself, and scores a great success. For a horrible realistic piece of acting, I commend you to his death scene. The delineation of the ravings resulting from mania a potu, is to a certain extent very difficult. In ordinary cases of dementia, the mind generally follows one groove, be it sadness or joy. But the wild delerium of alcohol is different; there the mind, or what is left of it, flits from one subject to another, from laughter to tears almost instantaneously. It is a hard task for an actor to portray, but Mr. O'Neill seems equal to it. Miss Coghlan plays "Gervaise" as she does everything else, admirably. It is not a character exactly suited to her, for her deportment and manner of speech are too refined in themselves to fit the unfortunate "Gervaise." A whole column might be written upon Miss Coghlan's good acting; upon the satisfaction produced by all her efforts, and the truly artistic purity of her school, but it would be like preaching in the wilderness. Whenever this artiste leaves us, it is to be hoped that her regrets at the want of appreciation shown her, will be tempered by the knowledge that there does exist here a small band of friends who admire in her an admirable exponent of the perfection of dramatic art. The part of "Big Virginie" was assigned to Miss Lilian Andrews, an Australian actress, who made her debut on the occasion of Mrs. Judah's benefit. It was rendered vigorously and intelligently. Mr. Morrison's conception of "Lautier" may have been a satisfactory one to him, but it is about as far apart from the author's as the North and South Poles. The management have spared no expense in scenery, costumes and appointments. There are some features in stage settings that are absolutely ridiculous as regards the true rendition of things in France, but this is due to the ignorance of the stage manager. It would seem that a simple perusal of the book was deemed unnecessary, for if it had been done many errors in dress, get-up, etc., would have been avoided. The wash house scene is admirably managed; though it might be suggested that the blows inflicted by "Gervaise" upon "Virginie," en petit comite, be made more audible. The audience would probably appreciate them, the peculiar nature of the punishment, and more fully understand "Big Virginie's" deep resentment. The novelty of some of the scenes is so strong, that a successful run is undoubtedly assured, or ought to be.

Diplomacy.—Although it is not customary to review benefit performances, the production of Diplomacy, at the Grand Opera House last Friday night, possessed so many meritorious features that comments are in order. The individual impersonations were praiseworthy, the ensemble remarkable. Miss Lewis' "Countess Zicka" is too well known to our theater-goers to require extended notice. It is a powerful piece of acting, producing a strong impression on the listener, but repeated auditories brings one to the belief that that is due more to the character itself than to its delineation. The strength and vividness of the author's creation carries along the actress that represents it. All this is naturally said without any wish to detract in any way from the talent displayed by Miss Lewis. The very fact that this is such an excellent effort on her part permits of above remarks. Miss Nina Varian was very satisfactory as "Dora," though her tenderness towards "Julian Beauclerc" seemed to lack depth and warmth. Mrs. Morris made all that was possible out of the subordinate character assigned her, and that was of a nature to cause the wish to be expressed that she should be given more opportunities to appear on the local stage. As the hero of the piece Mr. Piercy did not disappoint his admirers. This gentleman possesses qualifications that will eventually acquire for him a very high position on the stage. He is in every respect an excellent actor, and his "Julian Beauclerc" was an able, intelligent performance. His emotion and mental misery was dignified and manly. That perfect ease of manner and self-deportment, so characteristic of Montague, was sadly lacking though, and this was a strong blemish on an otherwise faultless impersonation. Mr. Piercy suffers through being too ardent a devotee at the shrine of Star-ism. Messrs. Keene, Billings and Morris were as good as could be expected, but to Mr. Max Freeman special commendation is due. "Baron Stein" was by long odds the best acted part of the whole cast. As compared to the French and German schools of acting the English is but crude and undeveloped, and pupils of the former appearing in conjunction with actors of our stage will naturally shine. There is a completeness of finish, an attention to by-play, make-up and dress suggestive of intelligence, that forms a strong contrast to the utter disregard of such trifles (!!) by our performers. Mr. Freeman succeeded in investing the character of "Baron Stein" with all the attributes necessary to make it a perfect picture, and our native public can now appreciate the high position he occupies on the German stage. Negotiations are in progress for the production of this play, with the same cast, for a short season at the Standard Theater. It is to be hoped that they will be successful.

California Theater.—Le Petit Duc, has run through the week to crowded houses. It is a very perfect performance, and so far superior to the rendition by Mrs. Oates that comparison is childish. That ease of manner and genuine tout ensemble, which are the strong characteristics of the French stage, are possessed by this troupe to a great extent. This work of Lecocq's is more in the nature of an opera comique than any of his other works, and there is, therefore, a stronger call made upon the musical features of the troupe. Mlle. Aimee sings and acts the part admirably. The music of the first act, so sweet and tender in its nature, is sung with remarkable pathos. In the second act the assumption of a character of a regular villageoise is a clever bit of acting. The spicy little verses sung in connection with this disguise are rendered with true French chic. Miss Beaudet is a delicious little beauty. She is a Boston girl of French parents, and is supposed to be a novice. Although very young, this seems hardly possible, for she has all the aplomb and verre of an old stager. Her voice, though small and thin, is very sympathetic, and even if it were not the audience would not care, for in this case it seems to be more a feast of the eyes than of the ears. The different duets scattered through the opera are very prettily sung by "Mr. and Mrs. Little Duke." The character of "Mlle. de la Roche Tonnerre" is assumed by Mlle. Raphael, and effectively acted by her. With a total disregard of the author's idea, this character was burlesqued in the Oates version and made ridiculous. Duplan is irresistibly funny in anything he attempts, and his "Frimousse" is no exception to the rule. The costumes were remarkably elegant, thanks to Mrs. Somebody, whose name every paper in town with singular unanimity has mentioned. The "Minuet de la Cour," as danced by the bridal pair in the first act, is a pretty, graceful piece of dancing. The female chorus, on whom falls a great part of the hard work, is not as good or harmonious as the bevy of beauties that surrounded the little hoodlum, and the poor little man did not receive as many encores as was his wont. But the solfeggio was infinitely better rendered. It is to be doubted that many in the audience recognized the last act. In the English version it was almost entirely cut, and it gave a rather abrupt termination to the part. La Petit Mariee will be produced on Monday. Mr. Voegtlin, the talented scenic artist of this theater, has arrived in New York, and is at work on the spectacle Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." The scenic effects are said by those who have seen it at La Porte St. Martin, in Paris, to be wonderful. In all probability it will be produced at the California Theater in January. Mr. Voegtlin's connection with this theater has not ceased, he is merely away on a short furlough.

Standard Theater.—The Emilie Melville Pinafore Troupe closed their engagement to a full house. Having rested for a week, they will leave on their barn-storming tour this evening. While all the other Pinafores that were launched were stranded through the inefficiency of their respective crews, or were carried down in the maelstrom of public indifference, this nobby little ship sailed triumphantly along to the end of its journey. That the country trip will be a success is a foregone conclusion. This little band of amateurs can be assured of one thing—they carry with them the best wishes of all those who witnessed their admirable performance. During this week the Juveniles have held the boards, and have appeared to good houses. Repeated visits deepen the impression produced by the precocity of these youngsters. Little Flora Walsh is too cunning for anything. She plays and sings "Josephine" with all the semblance and knowledge of an experienced actress. There is not an emphasis misplaced or a point lost. This troupe will continue until further notice, and any one who attends will be so thoroughly amused that he or she will surely recommend a visit to his sisters and his cousins and his aunts. Miss Lottie Chissold, to whom all the credit is due for the admirable training of the youngsters, continues to watch over them every evening.

Grand Opera House.—Another effort is to be made to keep this theater successfully open. On Monday evening a spectacular pantomime, containing local hits and features, will be produced. It is entitled Bulls and Bears. This speculation is under the management of Mr. Evans, and he promises great things.

Chit-Chat.—Sheridan Corbyn is soon to bring out Jno. Woodard's great drama, California through Death Valley, one of the most striking and vigorous of modern plays. The scene of the mirage on the desert is wonderful.

Bush Street Theater.—Sunday night sees the close of Mr. Thompson's engagement. It has been in every respect a successful one. The great strength of the play lies in the fact that not only does it attract and amuse the regulnr amusement-seeking, thenter-going people, but it also draws to its audiences n class that rarely patronize a regulnr theatrical show. Those old-style Puritans thnt generally content themselves with occasional visits to concerts, bell-ringers, Hutchinson, etc., families and circuses, have flocked to see the old down-East farmer, who to them is a remiuiscence of youth. They reconcile this infnction of their habits with their conscience by the opinion that "Uncle Josh" is nature itself, and not the work of a play actor. But they are wrong, for this very semblance to nature is the quintessence of dramatic art. So much has already been said in regard to the merits of this performance that further remarks would be but tiresome repetitions. Mr. Thompson will continue to star in "Uncle Josh," under the able and energetic management of Mr. Hill, to whose sagacity and intelligence a great part of his success is due. On Monday, Tony Pastor opens with his variety troupe. Several of the names on the list are those of old favorites; tbe others new faces, of whom report speaks favorably.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Rowing.—The race between Leahey, of the Pioneers, and Stevenson, of Vallejo, for a gold badge and tbe amateur championship of the coast, comes off to-morrow at Long Bridge. The odds are in favor of Leahey. ——There was a large race at North Beach last Sunday between scratch crews of the Pioneer, Neptune and Dolphin Clubs. It was won by the Neptune boys in their barge Kate. ——Bank of British North Amcrica versus Balfour Guthrie & Co, Saturday afternoon last, on Oakland Creek, one mile, straight away against the tide. Four oared in rigg barges with coxswains. Bank of B. N. A., D. Brown (bow), E. Stanger, G. Westland, H. N. Wallace (stroke), G. Moir (coxs.). Balfour, Guthrie & Co.—F. W. Reynolds (how), F. C. Beazley, J. G. Heecas, R. D. Girvin (stroke), D. MacDonald (coxs.). After a closely contested race, in which the Balfour Guthrie had the advantage at the commencement, the Bank crew won hy a length nnd a quarter. Time, 8 minutes and 3 seconds. ——The St. George and Columbia Rowing Clubs, of Oakland, have decided to hold, jointly, a regatta in the latter end of September next. The proposed races are as follows: First class—four-oared shell (McKinlay cup). Second class—four-oared shell, four-oared out-rigged lapstreak, four-oared in-rigged barge, single shell, ship's boats, duck hunt. The officers of the Regatta Committee are A. McKinlay, President; A. J. Knight, Vice-President; F. C. Beazley, Secretary, and J. M. Costigan, Treasurer.

Shooting.—A match was shot at Bird's Point last Sunday between C. W. Randall and A. Lambert, twelve single rises at 31 yards rise. It was won easily hy Randall, score 9 to 5. Other matches were shot for small sums, the averages made being very good—Lambert killing 34 out of 40, and Randall 30 out of 37. There will be several freeze-out matches at Bird's Point to-morrow. ——At the Presidio, Wednesday, about 200 people gathered to witness the shooting for the selection of a team to shoot with representatives from Oregon and Arizona, the best shots to represent the Military Division of the Pacific Coast at the National Rifle Tournament in September. The men selected were Lieutenants Anderson and Jones, who were hoth presented with a silver medal.

Swimming.—At the annual meeting of the Neptune Club, a gold badge and the Club championship was won hy Mr. Dean. ——Aquatic Polo is becoming very popular, hoth here and at Alameda. ——Daily, the champion, has just saved another person from drowning at Santa Cruz—making twenty persons rescued hy him since he went into the business. We should like to see a few gentlemen who are lovers of pluck petition Congress to vote Daily a medal for his splendid service.

Base-ball.—Last Sunday's games were poor exhibitions, at the Recreation Grounds, the score stood Knickerbocker 35, Eagle 4. ——Franklin vs. Company B, score 8 to 6. ——McMahon vs. National, score 16 to 5. At Oakland, California vs. Athletic, score 15 to 13. Games to-morrow at Recreation Grounds, Reno vs. Star. At Oakland, California vs. Oakland.

Boxing.—Mike Donovan will arrive in San Francisco by Monday. He would have been here before, but for the loss of his railroad ticket, which nccessitated a short delay. ——It is rumored that some sporting men are getting up a grand hoxing tournamcut, which will probably take place at the Mechanic' Pavilion, on or about the 24th inst.

MORE FRENCH THAN THE FRENCH.

The Bulletin, of Tuesday last, kindly took tbe French nation under its wing and commended it as, on the whole, a valuable contributor to the progress of civilization, and an avant courieur, whatever tbat may be. The Suez Canal, we are told, is a French enterprise, and we believe it, partly hccause there is some historical evidence to that effect. But we positively decline to accept a statement, even from the Bulletin, that the Mont Cenis tunnel is a French enterprise, unless we are permitted to say that because the Chronicle contributes to nake people remember the Bulletin, the Bulletin was founded by the Chronicle. The Mont Cenis tunnel was a purely Italian enterprise, hegun by Sardinia and finished by the kingdom of Italy. France came in when she acquired Savoy. The Act authorizing the work was passed hy the Sardinian Parliament in 1857. The mountain to he pierced lay entirely within the kingdom of Sardinia. The engineers—Grandis, Grattoni, Sommeillier—were Sardinians; and the Minister who urged the matter upon tbe Parliament, and explained tbe plans, and supervised the details, and provided the means, and communicated his own energy to every one, was a Sardinian—the Count de Cavour—of whom even the Bulletin ought to have heard hy this time.

"The World," the Flesh, and the Devil.

[By a Truthful Penman.]

We were talking, the other day, to a friend of ours who resided for some time at Natal. He tells us that the Zulu men are good-natured, cheerful heings, and that the Zulu girls are excessively pretty, most decorous in their behavior, hut addicted to flirt and joke. If you wish to marry them you have to pay the father ahout £40. Should you desert your wife her relations assegai you, hut if she misbehaves herself the relations, as part of the bargain, kill her. The girls go ahout in hands; when they see a young Zuluwarrior they surround him, and make him tell them which of them he thinks the most heautiful.——At Bristol, the otherday, two boys were brought before the County Justices charged with tbeft. They were declared hy the police to he respectably connected, and nothing had been previously known against them. The offense of which tbey had been guilty was that of stealing two eggs which they had found in a plowed field into which they had wandered in the country. The crime was not a very beinous one, yet it appears to have been cousidered somewhat serious hy the Bench, for the hoys were ordered to pay a fine of 30s. each or go to prison for a month. Their father pleaded that a short time might he given him in which to find the money, but the request was peremptorily refused, and the hoys were sent to jail until the necessary sum could he procured. Disbonesty should douhtless he promptly suppressed, hut considering the stigma which always attaches to a lad who has once heen sent to prison, it seems altogether questionable in the present instance whether the punishmeut has not exceeded the offense.——There is a funny story afloat that Mr. Rivers Wilson lost: ne good graces of the Kbedive rather through a neglect of Court etiquette than hy his financial policy. In the Egyptian Court it is regarded as a sine qua non of propriety to wear a fez. Europeans as well as Orientals are accustomed to respect this prejudice, aud fall in with it. Mr. Wilson, however, whether from British obstinacy or a dislike to exposing his eyes unduly to the sunshine, persistently retained his black-silk "top hat," to the great indignation of the Egyptian Court. So tbe story goes, and it is probably nothing hut a story. If it were true, however, there is an historic parallel to be found in the incident. The Emperor Paul of Russia conceived a violent dislike to the tall black hat, and issued an ukase prohihiting its use under heavy penalties. The Ambassador of one foreign court, however, insisted on wearing the obnoxious headgear, and was dismissed hy the Czar.—Court Journal.——There is a good deal of controversy just now about the value of merely circumstantial evidence. If the following incident has any truth in it, therefore, it is somewhat interesting at the present time. It is said that one of the learned Judges has received a handsome ring from the United States, accompanied hy a letter in which the donor, while concealing his real name, expresses his gratitude to the gentleman in question. It appears that some years ago the man who had heen rightly charged with having committed a forgery was acquitted, owing entirely to the favorahle summing-up at his trial. Since that time he has lived honestly, and is now honored and respected hy those who know him. Comparing his present condition with what he might have heen had things gone differently, he rightly gives the credit of his good fortune to the Judge who presided, and encloses the souvenir in consequence. It is laid down in a certain well known hook on criminal law that it is more expedient that innocent persons should suffer than that one guilty should escape. According to the strict idea of administering justice this may douhtless he the case, hut in the case of recent hlunders it is even pleasant to he reminded that the precept has not always been carried out.—— M'lle Adelaide Montgolfier, a daughter of the inveutor of halloons, is still alive, aged 89 years. Sbe is possessed of a large fortune, and presented the Museum of the Aeronautical Academy with a copy of the large medal executed by Houdon, and representing her father and uncle—who was associated with him in the invention of halloons. This medal was executed to commemorate that event. A movement will he got up in France for celebrating the centenary of that memorahle event, which took place in tbe month of June, 1783, in the vicinity of Lyons.—Court Circular.—— Mr. Sothern has arrived safely in Canada, and has left for his salmon river on the coast of Labrador, where he, the Duke of Beaufort, Sir John Reid and Mr. Florence are to spend two months in salmon-fishing. They are to live in a frame-house, sent out from New York, to wear Jersey shirts and long boots, spend days of angling and nights of poker, lay in stocks of health, and accumulate new experiences.——Cardinal Newman is still very ill at Leghorn, and can take no food from loss of appetite and weakness.——A Russian paper, in describing the execution of Nihilists at Kieff, adds that a young girl, who concealed her name despite the use of the lash, declared at the foot of the gallows that she was Nathalie Gortschakoff, niece of the Russian Chancellor.——Sir Arthur Gordon, the Governor of Fiji, has heen presented with a farewell address hy tbe Aborigines Protection Society, expressing approval of the policy which he had adopted during his rule over that dependency. Sir Arthur was to have left England for Fiji about July 5th.——The new Edinhurgh waterworks, at the Moorfoot Hills, were formally opened on June 13th, by the Lord Provost. The Water Trust and a number of leading citizens visited the reservoir at Portmore and Gladhouse. The storage capacity of the waterworks is now increased to about two hillions and a half gallons. The principal reservoir, which is ahout twelve miles from the city, has a storage capacity of one hundred and seventeen millions of gallons.—— Prince Jerome Napoleon is now fifty-seven. He is a man of wide information, extensive reading, clear brain, and undoubted ability; a horn dehater, he enjoys the hy no means inconsiderable advantage of the only "Napoleonian" features in the family. Of the latter fact, M. Edmond Ahout once made capital hy graphically describing him as a Cæsar declasse. This said, the whole of his chance seems to have heen summed up. He has little or no money, and no personal friends. Indeed, he bas always heen celebrated for an unfortunate kuack of disgusting his familiar servants and followers by manners and language amounting sometimes to rudeness. On the occasion of the Paris Exhibitions of 1855 and 1867, for instance, which he superintended with undeniable energy and success, he managed to obtain the dislike of almost every exhihitor through his petty regulatious and unsavory fits of temper.——Is this true—that charming Théo is ahout to leave the stage? Not for a garnished hotel (she is honest); not for a title (she is married); hut the model little wife has her eye on a confectioner's shop in the Avenue de l'Opera. O, if she makes the cakes herself, who would not cheerfully give himself an indigestion on petits fours! By the way, while her brothers and sisters are teaching us how to act, I wish Madame Théo would come over and teach us how to make tarts. British pastry is an unpleasant thing at the best, while the Parisians—and, still more, the Florentines—have the art of a certain short crust, neither huttery nor puffy, which is one of the delights of travel.—— Anecdotes of the Prince Imperial are cropping up. When the news of the hurning of the Tuileries reached the Imperial family in their English exile, his exclamation was "Quel maheur! I wonder what they did with my hicycle!"

FATE.

O eyes that mate with mine, of all the earth—
Dear, wistful eyes that mine have never seen!
I pray that ye may never look my way
Until my grave be green.

O hands that would have helped me in my need,
That never would have thrust my own aside!
Oh, never may ye touch me till I lie
Too pale for pride!

O feet in listening for whose coming youth
Went by, while of its leaf-time came no bloom!
'Tis now too late for ye to come, till I
For happier hearts make room.

O lips that would have found my own most sweet
Of all sweet things that gladden God's dear earth,
Let the world part us until m-ue are cold,
And dumb, and little worth.

O heart of all hearts, that was meant for mine,
That somewhere wauderest, weary for my sake,
Will some mysterious sorrow thrill thee through
The day that mine shall break?

FLOGS HIS MINISTERS.

The King of Siam is reported to have flogged one of his Ministers, and public opiuion has been thereby considerably excited in Bangkok. The importance attached in this case to the use of the rod by his Majesty Somdet Phra Paramindr Maha Khoulalonkorn is, perhaps, explained by the fact of the flagellated mandarin having been connected hy marriage with an English resident of the capital; for other Kings of Siam have been, by all accounts, pretty free in their use of the rattan without exciting any remark. His late Majesty, who died of a fever when on his way to view an eclipse of the sun in October, 1868, was, of course, an exceptional monarch of Thai. He spoke French and Latin and English, and possessed a practical acquaintance with the heavenly bodies which would have made him an ornament to any astronomical society in Europe. He, consequently, got the credit of being a more courteous and better mannered king generally than the other kings of Siam, and especially of having introduced a more polite and gentle system of transacting business with his State advisers than was formerly in vogue at Bangkok. It is a question, however, whether he quite deserved the reputation he enjoyed for being a humane as well as an accomplished prince; and at any rate, if he spared the rod, be was about the first King of Siam who did. When Captain Hamilton was iu the "land of the free," as Siam is rather misnamed by its inhabitants, hardly a day passed without the monarch whipping some minister. The punishment, he tells us, was administered with split rattans, which cut pretty deep into the flesh, leaving conspicuous marks behind them. "The greater the marks appear," says the seventeenth-century traveler, "the greater the honor they take them to he, and the pretty ladies are not exempt from this flagellation for very small faults. I have seen some pretty agreeable young gentlewomen with rattan marks on their shoulders, which they are so far from covering tbat they expose them to passers-by, seeming to glory in being so mucb taken notice of by the greatest king on earth."—Pall Mall Budget.

ANDES RAIL THE HIGHEST IN THE WORLD.

A Spanish-American journal gives an interesting account of tbe extraordinary route and construction of the Ferro Caril Transandino, or Andes Railway, the highest on the face of the globe. A great part of this line is already in use. It begins at Callao, in Peru, runs along the coast of the Pacific Ocean as far as Lima, tben rises to the Andes, where it attains at one place to the dizzy elevation of 14,260 feet, or about a level with the summit of Mount Blanc, and almost double the hight of the line of perpetual snow in the European Alps. The iron for this incomparable line was delivered by England, the wood by California and Oregon. In the buge field of rock between the chains of the Cordilleras the line passes no less than sixty-one tunnels. Such a railway, traversing hights once supposed to be inaccessible, necessarily possesses some wonderful bridges. One of the most remarkable is that of Verragos, whicb rests upon two iron columns of 240 feet in higbt. The view from this bridge into the abyss which it spans is said to he truly horrifying, and, as the train passes over, the traveler may imagine that he is being wafted through the air on an aerial machine. Some points of the amazing landscape which are nearest heaven are described as being of "Dantesque infernality" in character. There are places on the line which are never visited by the light of the sun, in spite of their high elevation, the ravines being perpetually darkened hy the immensity of the "Pics," or mountain summits, which rise up toward the sky. At San Matto the line passes a spot which is even named hy the few inhabitants who are accustomed to the terrible gorges and heaven-reaching "Pics" of the Andes, the "Bridge of Hell"—et Puente de l'Infermiello. This grand line goes at present as far as Chicla, at a hight of 7,250 feet above the ocean, and then descends by degrees to Oruya. The intellectual creator of this stupendous work was the American engineer Meiggs, who died in 1877, the coustructor of the line hetween Chili and Valparaiso. As a perpetual memorial to him tbe highest peak of the Andes has been most appropriately named "Pio Meiggs."

French Commerce.—The Imports and exports of France were, in 1859, 2,400,000,000 francs; in 1876 they were 7,830,000,000 francs. The tonnage employed was, in 1859, 3,036,000, of which 1,473,000, under the French flag. In 1876 the total was 5,614,000, of which French vessels represented 2,362,489 tons. In 1859 the steam marine counted 2,616,000 tons; in 1876, 6,146,034. The railroads transported, in 1859, 19,947,790 tons; in 1876, 62,131,107 tons. The mails carried, in 1859, 258,900,000 letters, of which 18,456,730 were addressed to foreign countries. In 1876 there were 367,443,307 letters, 45,300,664 of these being for foreign countries. In 1859 the telegraphic dispatches numbered 698,501, including 144,703 for points outside of France; and in 1876, 8,080,964, of whicb those for other countries were 1,027,249.

Said the Sheriff, as he wedded the two fond hearts: "What God has joined let no man enjoin"—which was satisfactory, in spite of its irregularity.

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, tbe beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, whicb for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of tbe tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in tbe Pescadero river.

THE WATER QUESTION—MAYOR BRYANT AND THE BULLETIN.

The Bulletin is nothing if not a grievance monger. It must always appear to be fretting and fuming over something or somebody. It was only a short time ago that we were wondering what it would find to make a special grievance of during the forthcoming campaign. We knew it couldn't be happy unless it had somebody to worry. We had begun to think, most vainly as it appears, that its stock of grievances had about run out. It had made its peace (piece) with the railroad. Ralston had been too long in his grave to be again disinterred. Who, and what were to be its next subjects of attack? We had not long to wait for an answer. Mayor Bryant and the water question are to serve for this special occasion. The fretting and fuming process is already far advanced. Editorials filled with lying and slandering, with malice, and all uncharitableness, make their appearance almost daily. The attack has set in with more than ordinary Bulletin virulence. Driven by the force of truth from one position to-day, it breaks out in an altogether unexpected quarter to-morrow. It is lying by day and lying by night, and lying from the very lust of lying. It shrieks the word "water," and howls itself hoarse at the name of Bryant. We are told one day that Bryant has always been the tool of Spring Valley. Then a more sober-minded and truthful contemporary points out the inexorable logic of the facts. It is shown beyond peradventure that our worthy Mayor procured the employment of John F. Swift as special counsel for the city, and that he was in earnest in all efforts made on behalf of the city as against the Water Company. Then the Bulletin, driven from that position, suddenly assumes another, and says: "Bryant has recently changed base on the water question." The original charge, though disproven, is not withdrawn. An honest assailant would at least do that before asking people to believe a second accusation. That Mr. Bryant has in any respect "changed," is an assertion that is unaccompanied by any evidence whatever. Coming from one who has just been caught in a malicious lie, it is hardly worth a respectful answer. His Honor the Mayor has not changed. The water question is at rest, and His Honor will soon be in the same position, so far as his official duties go. The Bulletin knows as well as it knows anything that the Water Company does not want to sell its works. It prefers to keep them for the good reason that the money could not be better placed. Bulletin legislation fixed the company's income at 8 per cent; with that the company is satisfied if the city is. If, however, the city insists upon owning its water works, then, and in that case only, the company desires to sell, as, of course, it would not desire a competitor. But the city is not insisting upon anything of the kind. So long as it does not stir the subject no one else will. The fact is, the water question is a dead issue, and the Bulletin knows it.

WHAT! SO SOON?

Verily it is over early for the Workingmen's candidates to begin stealing and running away with the plunder. But a commencement has been made. One R. A. Leonard was and is the party's candidate for City and County Surveyor; he was also collector of unconsidered assessments. What else he was we have no means of knowing. Like most of his party's nominees, he had the advantage of being unknown. You can't say much about fellows who were never heard of before. They cheat criticism and defy attack. That was the happy condition of Mr. Leonard, until the other day. In an evil hour he was entrusted with the money bag. There was but a trifle of three hundred dollars in it, yet even that small sum was great enough to tempt his cupidity. He stole it, and ran away; and now Mr. Leonard is not as obscure as he was. Through the medium of the Police records, we are told that he is thirty-nine years of age, slender of build, dark of complexion, heardless as to face, and with a head covering of light-brown hair. He was a pet of Kearney's, and a favorite at the sand lots. He was a nominee for an office, which is generally supposed to afford more than the average opportunities for stealing. He couldn't wait the realization of his prospective opportunities, but must needs hasten to go for the first thing in sight. He cleared out with money collected from the poor dupes of workingmen who follow him and his kind. That money was intended to help him and his associates to office. It was a paltry sum, yet his honesty was not proof against the temptation of stealing it. Is he not a fair specimen of most of the others? We do not know for certain whether he is or not. Therein lies the objection to the whole crowd. They are unknown. They may be all Leonards for ought the general public know. Yet they ask to be put in possession of the city's treasury. A private individual would want some better recommendations before he would yield up control of his safe to such people. It is a most monstrous proposition to put the treasury in charge of men unaccustomed to handling coin or fulfilling important trusts.

THE POLITICAL SITUATION.

The political situation is so mixed that there is little satisfaction in attempting to describe it at present. The pipe-layers and wire-pullers are at work, and until they are through it is difficult to tell how the issues are to be made up, or who the real contestants are to be. The one thing that is certain is, that the Republican ticket, with George C. Perkins at the head, has made a fine start, and that its success seems to be beyond a peradventure. The party is united, is in earnest, and is happy in the sure and certain hope of success. On the other hand, the varied elements in opposition are wrangling among themselves in a most unseemly way. There are enough votes in opposition to the Republican ticket to defeat it; but as they cannot, it would seem, be united in favor of any one course of action, the Republicans are likely to have something very like a walk over. That is the way it looks now. Dr. Hugh J. Glenn has published a fair and candid exposition of his position, that ought to satisfy those who have a reasonable desire to be satisfied. In all matters that may arise between the two noted parties, he will be true to his Democratic principles. In regard to all things in which the distinctive principles of the new Constitution are concerned, he will adhere to the spirit of that instrument, regardless of party. That is his position, and it is a clear, distinct and consistent one, notwithstanding the hypercriticism of his enemies. White, the Workingmen's candidate, is met with an assault upon his good name that would injure him, if he were nominated by any other party. But the unwashed crowd have a way of sticking to their man all the more because he is a little dirty. They will adhere to Kalloch and White sure. By next week things may be expected to take on a more definite form, and by that time we shall see what we shall see.

CALIFORNIA.

Primeval.

Silent and still her mighty reach
Of winding stream and mountain chain,
Of whispering woods and wave-lashed beach,
Of flowery dell and grass-clad plain;
Her dusky children's step is light—
They are not many in the land,
And though her face is glad and bright,
And though her mien is calmly grand,
She seems half wistfully to wait
The advent of a nobler fate.

Discovered.

From Southern seas and sunny skies,
Behold! a white sail northward flies;
And, in Spain's name, forevermore
Cabrillo claims the virgin shore.
Solitude reigns again. And now
We see another wandering prow.
It is the knightly rover, Drake,
At whose dread name all Spaniards quake.
No trifler he, with empty hoast,
To idly claim a distant coast;
For, lo! he boldly comes to land,
Plants England's banner on the strand,
And with due form and seriousness,
Proclaims his sovereign lady, Bess!

Evangelized.

From yonder mission walled in white
A drowsy bell peals on the air,
Calling the dusky neophyte
To morning task or evening prayer.
Listless alike at both is he,
And wherefore should he not so be,
Whose life knows neither hope nor care?
The purple grape climbs up the hills,
The fields are gilt with yellow grain,
Rich, lucious fruit the orchard fills,
Fat cattle graze upon the plain.
An exile, learned and refined—
The long-robed Friar—rules the land,
Portly, but pious, stern, yet kind,
The idol of his half-tamed hand.

Transformed.

Gone are Friar and neophyte,
Gone the sleepy days of old,
Conquered by the Saxon's might
California yields her gold.
Waking from her sleep at length,
She arises in her strength,
Brings all races to her feet,
Builds a nation of her own,
Motley-hued, but as complete
As the world has ever known.

San Francisco, July 18, 1879.

THE JUDICIARY IN DANGER.

We have no hesitation in saying that the ticket "put up" by certain members of the Bar is a menace to the independence of the judiciary of this city. It is conceived in sin and shapen in iniquity. It is the result of a wickedly designed arrangement among certain legal firms, whose desire it is to own our Judges and run our Courts. The possibility of its success should be looked upon with dismay by all honest citizens. It is surface reasoning to argue that lawyers are necessarily the best guides in electing an independent judiciary. Their knowledge as to who are calculated to make the best judicial officers is unquestionable. But their disinterestedness is by no means equal to their knowledge. No, not by a great deal. In short, they are liable to be corruptly interested parties. There are lawyers who like to have a friend on the bench, and it is worth not a little to the practitioner to have it known that he has such a friend. Clients will always bestow their favors on the attorney that has, or is supposed to have, the most influence with the Judge. It is not well that Judges should be indebted to particular attorneys for their election. If they are, Justice is not as likely to be as blind in such cases as she ought to be. She will be very liable to see a friendly aide-de-camp, and to cast a favorable squint in his direction whenever occasion offers. Human nature is human nature, whether on the Bench or off it. The mere fact of clothing a man with ermine will not purify him if the essence of the thing is not within him. These general principles are true, and should make us wary of an attorney-packed Bench. If we were to descend to particulars, name every nominee on the ticket, tell of his affiliations, and explain just why his name comes to be there, we should demonstrate the terrible danger there is in permitting a few self-seeking lawyers to foist a judiciary upon us that is conceived in corruption. A little investigation of this subject is much needed. The more it is probed the better. If the danger should become more imminent, it will be our duty to deal with it less gingerly. There are some ugly facts underlying this business, that must come out if the Bar ticket is persisted in. The presence of a name on that ticket may almost be taken to be evidence conclusive that the nominee is a good man to vote against. There may be one or two exceptions, but we doubt that there is one. We say that, knowing the motives which got them on the ticket. A few wire-pullers, for their own purposes, brought the thing about. It is understood that the innocent majority now repudiate the ticket, and realize its evil conception. It must be defeated at all hazards.

Mr. Frank W. Gross is the nominee of the Republican party for the office of Clerk of the Supreme Court, and a better there could not be chosen by any party. The reputation he has made for himself in his widely-extended business relations, is a most enviable one, and his fitness for the extremely responsible and delicate position for which he has been named, will bring forward many active and energetic friends to work for him. It is with sincerity we hope so congratulate him in September.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier!" "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir, with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

The Pedestrian Fever has intensified to that extent in this vicinity that there is every indication that the community can hardly recover unless something is done for its immediate relief. Last Tuesday morning there was a general domestic sensation over the entire Western Addition. Over forty boys had suddenly disappeared from their homes, and in spite of the industrious search made by their mothers, could be discovered nowhere. Tuesday night came and still the lost heirs did not report. Wednesday morning the agonized parents besieged the police office, and specials were sent out in every direction. By Wednesday night the excitement was intense, and with the fate of Charley Ross fresh in their minds, the distracted relatives scoured the city in person for traces of the juvenile delinquents. Thursday morning, as some of the searchers were passing a large empty building on a side street, they beheld one of the estrays—little Jimmy Dickerson—busily engaged chalking figures on the adjoining fence. "Oh! you villain!" screamed his mother, "come home this minute, won't I give it to you?" "Lemme 'lone, said Jimmy, still chalking away, "Skinny Briggs has just made his ninety-second in twelve forty-two, and I must get it down." Say—don't you want to go in? Only ten cents!" sang out a snub-nosed urchin at the basement door; "all the walkers now on the track!" The parental delegation entered the cellar. It was about seventy-five feet long and forty wide. It was filled with boys, tents, noise and other nuisances. Half a dozen half stripped boys, almost cut in two by tightly strapped belts, were staggering around the track supported by their trainers. Others were lying on their backs with their hind legs in the air, having their blistered feet sponged off and painted with arnica. The son of a doctor was sawing out a bunion from the puffy toe of the boy who had taken the first prize for attendance at Sunday school. Some reptile who had bet no end of glass alleys on Reddy McShucks, had been detected in trying to poison Johnny Gibson, the Hayes Valley Champion, with a strong cigar, and there was a prodigious row in consequence. Bouey Rodgers, who wore the South Park belt, had accused the official scorer, Willie Bazembee, of altering the record, and the editor of the Peanut was makiug a speech from the Judges stand to the effect that unless the sawdust was immediatly sifted for broken glass and things, he'd write a hole through the whole tournament in the next issue. By the aid of an entire detachment of police, the match, which was really to run four days longer, was broken up, and the boys taken home by main force—that is, all but four—they were taken to Lone Mountain.

Multitudinous are the tricks of trade, but for mingled ingenuity and rascality the little dodge of a piano-seller, whose store is located not a thousand miles from New Montgomery street, takes the cake. His stock consists of Hale and Antisell pianos, but, be it observed, the names of those well kuown firms does not appear upon the instruments. And why? Because, to his customers, this gentleman is a great manufacturer of pianos (he never had one made for him in his life) and therefore it becomes necessary that his name should appear upon the workmanship of others. If a customer wants a "Hale," then, of all pianos in the world, he would counsel him not to purchase that particular make. But he has an article here of his own manufacture, which for finish, tone, etc., excels, etc., anything and so forth. If an Antisell is required, the same little comedy is enacted, and the joke is that in each case the buyer gets what he asks for and gives all the credit of manufacture to our enterprising and amusing fraud. Perhaps, if be keeps on in this way, he actually will he able to start a manufactory of his own some day; but it is the cheapest dodge for establishing a reputation, without risk or expense, that has yet come under our notice.

About two months ago two young ladies were assaulted, in the night, at Wheatland, and beaten almost to death with an iron bar. There are seventeen persons in Wheatland, including a negro, who lives by asking for a drink of water and looking at Ida Dunn. All the detectives of the Pacific coast have been engaged ever since the 15th of May, working up the case, and several have been imported from abroad, including the famous Smellemoutski, of Moscow, who discovered thirteen Nihilists in the Czar's private library, done up as folio volumes. New developments are expected every minute. The iron bar has been analyzed, and found to consist of 13 parts cyanide of potassa, 47 parts Rumoris, 20 parts Umbræ Nigræ, and 20 parts Wheatland horror. Something will soon he done. Further search shows traces of undue influence in the wrong quarter, and the village is almost depopulated. The griddle cakes at the Roddan's yesterday turned up missing, the griddle having disappeared. The detectives are now out, following up this clue, and the mystery will soon be unraveled. Ten barrels of beer have heen sent up from town, and men, strong men, weep like children.

H. L. Knight, late of Kearney's gang, paralyzes the universe by a "card," in which he solemnly declares that he has "deemed it just and wise and proper to rejoin the Republican party," at least until "the serpent of secession and shoddy" is trodden under foot, and "our glorious flag, like the serpent raised by Moses in the wilderness, carries assurance to all that freedom of speech and pen and ballot are secured to them." We don't want to insinuate that Mr. Knight has snakes in his boots, but, really, these serpent similes are suspiciously mixed and multitudinous. It is interesting to know, however, that the reptile which old Mose set squirming on a pole gave freedom of speech and peu and ballot to the Israelites; and, when we come to think of it, a brazen serpent wouldn't he such a very inappropriate emblem for a political party after all.

R. A. Leonard, nominee of the W. P. C. for City and County Surveyor, has mysteriously disappeared. As Chairman of a Committee to start a party paper, he had collected $150. We have known for some time that the value of city offices is depreciating, but we should have thought the pickings would he worth more than this, especially when we consider the risk and trouble of decamping with such a trifle.

A drummer for an Ogden business house was recantly fined $400 and costs, at Winnemucca, for soliciting without a license. We always said that Winnemucca was no slouch of a place, and now we say that Winnemucca ought to he made the capital of the Universe. God bless Winnemucca.

Of the three nominees for Governor, White is accused of having "ruined a family," Perkins of being in league with the monopolists to ruin the State, and Glenn is of being a perfect ruin in his own proper person, morally and mentally. It is unnecessary to add that the truth of all these accusations is proved beyond a shadow of doubt by the respective political enemies of the gentlemen in question, so that it seems we have to choose between a destroyer of bomes, a destroyer of communities, and a blamed idiot for our next chief executive.

One of those cheap bits of wisdom out of the copy hook is now traveling round the country, to the effect that this world was not meant for mourning, because the flowers are not black. Exactly so; ueither was it meant for diuing, because dinner-tables are not sky-blue; nor for fishing, because trout don't wear ulsters; nor for smoking, because tobacco costs money; nor for sensible men, because Martin Farquhar Tupper lives in it.

Some persons are very much concerned for the feelings of honest Democrats in the present crisis. We have seen them both, and they say they have no feelings to speak of; much obliged, all the same. We have heen lookiug for the honest Republican, but he has gone out of town; and the self-respecting Honorable Bilk died last week. On the whole, we may have heen wasting our sympathy, and shall hottle up the rest of it.

There is an appalling outbreak of initials in the papers. Meetings of the Y. M. U. B., the A. O. U. W., I. O. P. R., and the J. G. A. are announced without fear of consequences. We mean to stop this by explaining these dark hints. Your Most Ugly Bachelors, the Ancient Order of Ugly Women, the Immense Order of Prize Roosters and the Jackasses Gone Astray are now unmasked and must seek other disguises.

Murphy has gone. He has "folded his tent like the Arabs and silently stolen away." Yet stay, not silently. He made a farewell speech, in which he declared that he had become enamored of San Francisco. Proudly the Golden City twines this flower of temperance amid her wreath of grapes, and hopes next time Mr. Murphy visits his new love, to have a splendid crop of drunks for him to operate upon.

The New York Sun is in partnership with Edison, and is very cheerful about prospects in the electric light business. Why don't it help him out, then? The poor man is stopped because platinum costs so much, and he can't find anything incombustible to take its place, and yet there's the Sun, publishing every day statements warranted to stand hell fire, they're so tough, and never a ribbon of them for his partner.

The Detroit Free Press is witty as ever. It declares that "impeachment can never he exercised for a higher or holier purpose than for the punishment of a chief magistrate who tramples on the laws of his country." What, never? Almost always it might be better to impeach the Free Press for heing as funny as it can, and in hot weather. Lord! Lord! so many fire-crackers thrown away, and so near the Fourth of July!

Voorhees threw at Burnside in the Senate a phrase which we think we have met before: "Et tu, Brute!" Burnside, stirred up by a brother senator, demanded an apology for this insult, and Voorhees declared he never called him a brute "on the floor of the Senate." He said nothing about any other floor, and Burnside smoothed his heroic whiskers. Lesseps has not yet apologized for the Darien Canal.

There is not in all Texas to-day, we learn, a colored beggar, nor one who is without food, clothing or shelter. The grammar is a little mixed. First, there is not a colored beggar; then there is not a colored beggar that is without food, clothing or shelter, but some, presumably, that have all these. It is a little mixed, but we believe it. Only the statements are colored in Texas, not the beggars.

The papers tell us that "Louis Jackson, of Coos Bay, after being stung by a poisonous insect, died of inordinate thirst. Neither water nor milk would satiate his craving for drink." We have kuown several men in the same fix. Undoubtedly it was tarantula juice that hurt Louis. Why didn't his friends try a hair of the bug that hit him?

Two young ladies in Los Angeles County got drunk under a gum-tree. This is the English of an item in Wednesday's papers, and why there should be such a noise made over it is more than anybody can tell. If young ladies want to get drnuk they could hardly choose a more retired spot to indulge the freak.

Adolph Armand is his name, and he says Dr. Coggswell's fountain is a nuisance, and the Doctor a humbug, and he prays that both may be abated, and all the people say Amen! But the fountain is good enough for a tombstone, and Dr. Coggswell ought to he huried under it. We stick to that.

A telegram to the daily papers says that the counsel of Cox, the murderer of Mrs. Hull, argues in defence of his client that "the deceased was alive until after the post mortem examination." This is the first time we have heard of a person heing alive "after death."

An evening paper looks upon the Mayor as a kind of king, and speaks of his scepter being in worthy hands. The Mayor himself sometimes thinks so, and Fernando Wood always hesitated between Mayorality and Maroyalty when writing of his official position.

The Postmaster-General says the Dead Letter Office is the proper place for live toads and bugs of all degrees. We have already forwarded a choice collection of slugs and spiders, and hope others will contribute their mites, with or without cheese.

"The man who is always offering to pledge his honor has, douhtless, had it in pawn many a time."—Alta. What of that, so long as he redeemed it? Couldn't pledge a scarcer article.

The Papers say Civil Service Reform is a failure, but we have our doubts. They have reformed it so well in the public offices out here that you can't get a civil answer to a question.

Dr. Glenn writes to say that he has not gone back to his native glens, and the T. C. did lie, under a mistake, when it said so. We gladly correct the error; but he ought to go.

The "Pass Christian Gazette" offers this: "If the Louisiana State Convention will legalize perjury, it will give many who claim residence in that State great relief."

The Chicago Socialists are impressed with the idea that to be real sociable they must have guns, and drill like militia boys.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoips and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

Baron Rothschild's first maxim for success in business was, "Attend carefully to all the details." This is a golden rule, too often overlooked by those who undertake to meet the wants of the public, and consequeutly they fail, and blame others for their failure. It is at the Original Swain's Bakery, 213 Sutter street, that one sees the perfect application of the great banker's rule. Nothing there is left to chance, nothing left undone that should be done; and the result is entire satisfaction to every one who enters the place, and au attractiveness that brings him back always for his breakfast and lunch and dinner. Swain's are the best and the best served in the city.

There is no deceiving an old smoker as to the qualities of tobacco. Your veteran knows that when his throat is left smooth, his tongue sweet and the last whiff from the pipe, cigar or cigarette has a cool, pure flavor, he has been enjoying a good, genuine smoke. No argument of favor or prejudice can hold against what he knows when he has tried the article, and brought to this test the famous "Old Judge" tobacco is absolutely unsurpassed, and it seems to be a mere statement of fact to declare it the best in the world. Every man recognizes with a shudder the reek left behind by poor tobacco, and the room in which "Old Judge" has been smoked is as pure and fresh as the outer air.

The moral law is wider than a rifle-range and higher than a hip-pocket.

Great fault is found, but unjustly, as we think, with our present system of Grand Juries. Good citizens lend their best efforts to carry out the theory of the duties laid upon this body, and, so far as unassisted human intelligence can work, with a fair measure of success. The shortcomings which we are obliged to admit are the result of insufficient light; and the responsibility for this justly falls upon the people, which ought to insist upon the Grand Jury's being furnished with F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation Whisky, one bottle to a man.

The English faith in the banking system of Great Britain has been severely shaken by the failures in Scotland and elsewhere, and men are naturally disturbed in their minds for the safety of their ducats. No such anxieties ever afflict the soul of the man whose house is provided with Montanya's Union Range. Whatever else may happen to him, breakfast and dinner are secure beyond a peradventure, and of a quality not to be had from any other range. Such a man feels that fate cannot harm him, for whatever may he said of banking, his own system is secure.

The assistant surgeon is not promoted from the rank of lance corporal.

There are two sides to the railroad question, whatever people may think of G. C. Gorham's onslaught upon Pixley; but there is one opinion, and only one, with regard to Bradley & Rulofson's photographs—the very best that ever contented loving friends. Surrounded with a collection of these, a man is ever in the society of those he loves, and the faces speak to him even more eloquently than the living lips could. The mind, the heart, are brought out upon the features by these excellent artists.

The "Roof of the World" is one of the hyperbolical names given to the Panier by the Orientals. Finely suggestive and gorgeous as the rhetoric is, it lacks that more practically intellectual turn peculiar to the Western mind, where man is recognized as the crown of the world, and the roof therefore is, necessarily, the hat which covers the crown. And the true World-Roof is, therefore, one of White's hats, from 614-616 Commercial street.

Mr. Charles Peters is lending all his experience and judgment to the noble enterprise of the Nevada Building Association, which has but 100,000 shares, and offers extraordinary chances for the charitably disposed. The headquarters of the Association, under Mr. Peters' management, are at Virginia City.

Artistic Novelties, manufactured from California quarts, at Randolph & Co.'s, corner Montgomery and Sutter streets.

All good things go to London, as the commercial capital of mankind; and the demand for Landsberger's Private Cuvee is increasing every week. Not a month ago one order for 100 cases was filled for a London house, and others are coming in almost too rapidly for even the enterprise of this famous house. Increased accommodations are fast becoming necessary, and nothing but the perfect organization of the whole establishment has enabled it to keep pace so far with the demands made upon it.

No more infallible sign of taste, or the want of it, than the gas fixtures, chandeliers and plumbing work of the dwelling; and many, for lack of attention to these critical matters, have been shamed in the eyes of their acquaintances. The only safeguard is to put these details in the hands of McNally & Hawkins, whose long experience is sustained and enlightened by admirable taste. Their stock at the Grand is simply unrivaled.

Mr. White, the American Minister to Germany, has commenced to eat with Bismarck. His friends can decide whether they will have him embalmed and sent home, or buried over there.

Sure, prompt and thorough are the characteristics of Dr. Jayne's Carminative Balsam. Its merit has made it known everywhere for years, as a standard curative for Cramps, Diarrhœa, Cholera Morbus, and all Diseases of the Bowels; it is, besides, easily administered to children, being pleasant to the taste, and is entirely safe. Sold by CRANE & BRIGHAM, San Francisco.

"L'Assammoir" is probably the vilest book ever talked about among decent people, and it has reached its fifty-fifth edition. It is useless to deplore such a condition of things, wholly due to a lack of Napa Soda. With an increase in the use of this most wholesome beverage it will become more and more difficult for men to have dirty minds.

AT THE GATE.

And where were you just now, Mahel? The gate is by the road, Mable,
Where have you been so long? And idle folks go by—
The moon is up, and all the birds Nor should a maiden brook the glance
Have sung their evening song. Of every stranger eye.
I saw you loitering down the path, Besides, I thought I saw a cap—
So lonely and so late, I'm sure you had a mate;
Beyond the well and the lilac bush, So tell me who was with you, child,
And hanging by the gate. Just hanging at the gate.
I love to hear the birds, mother, Now, you know just as well, mother,
And see the rising moon; 'Twas only Harry Gray.
And oh! the summer air is sweet He spoke such words to me to-night,
Beneath the sky of June. I knew not what to say;
My cow is milked, my hens are cooped And mother, oh! for your dear sake,
And washed are cup and plate, I only bade him wait;
And so I wandered out a while And mayn't I run and tell him now?
To hang upon the gate. He's hanging at the gate.

AUGUSTINE TO AUGUSTA.

Almost all the new dresses are made rather lower, and are more open at the neck, therefore guimpes, and fichus of lace, crepe, tulle, blonde, soft Indian, and other thin muslins are much in request. The forms of these fichus are very varied, the most fashionable at the present moment being the scarf shape, with broad ends, and the Marie Antoinette fichu. If a flower is worn with these fichus, it is generally a single rose at the left side of the neck.

A great many eccentric costumes were to be seen last week at the races, and at the flower show; among them being a coat of mail worn as a casaquin, and a conspicuous Parabère dress, with five paniers covered with Malines lace.

The costumes most in vogue for the country are composed of plain batiste, printed linen, calico and foulard, the paterns being either the Pompadour detached colored flowers of stripes, or the shawl patsrns; plain and striped barèges, Voile de veuve, plain cashmere, and, for more elegant visiting dresses, changeant, or shot silk; grenadine and velours Zéphir are the most admired. This Zéphir is a silk gauze with narrow velvet stripes, and is chiefly employed for a tunic, fourreau or polonaise over black or dark colored dresses; for instance, over a skirt of violet faille or satin, a tunic of Zéphir with paniers, or a dress of black striped Zéphir with pointed bodice opening over a high waistcoat of lotus blue. Walking or country dresses are made with short round skirts; the foulard is often composed of half plain ground and half printed foulard; for instance, the first skirt plain silver-gray, with two flounces, one of which is plain, the other of the Pompadour pattern on the same gray ground; the second skirt, draped up slightly over the first, with an apron front of Pompadour pattern; tunic of the same pattern, drawn up at the sides, panier style, and forming a slight half train behind, with border of Breton lace; and bodice of Pompadour pattern, cuirass shape, with plain broad turned-back collar, also bordered with lace.

Kid shoes, and also varnished leather, almost half-boot shape are worn; the toe is much more pointed than a few weeks ago; these shoes are laced.

One of the newest bonnets, or rather hats, is the Clarissa Harlowe; it has a high crown of light-colored satin and a straw border; the strings are of foulard, and very broad; the ornamentation is a cord of gold or silver round the crown with full tuft of feathers or a bouquet of flowers in front. It looks well also in black straw, with crown of ruby-colored satin. —Augustine, in Truth.

DICKENS' LAST LETTER.

Mr. Charles Kent has sent a last letter of Charles Dickens to the British Museum. A gentleman claims to have another letter written by Charles on the day of his death. It is as follows:

GAD'S HILL PLACE, HIGHAM, BY ROCHESTER, KENT,
Wednesday, 8th June, 1870.

DEAR SIR: It would be quite inconceivable to me, but for your letter, that any reasonable reader could possibly attach a scriptural reference to a passage in a book of mine, reproducing a much abused social figure of speech, impressed into all sorts of service, on all sorts of inappropriate occasions, without the faintest connection of it with its original source. I am truly shocked to find that any reader can make the mistake. I have always striven in my writings to express veneration for the life and lessons of our Saviour, because I feel it; and because I re-wrote that history for my children—every one of whom knew it from having it repeated to them, long before they could read, and almost as soon as they could speak. But I have never made proclamation of this from the house-tops.

Faithfully yours, CHARLES DICKENS.

MARRIAGE A HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

It may be of interest to know how they arranged marriages a hundred years ago. An old paper has the following description bearing upon the subject: "Married, in June 1760, Mr. William Donkin, a considerable farmer of Great Tossin (near Rothbury), in the county of Northumberland, to Miss Eleanor Shotten, an agreeable young gentlewoman of the same place. The entertainment was very grand, there being no less than one hundred and twenty quarters of lamb, forty-four quarters of veal, twenty quarters of mutton, and a great quantity of beef, twelve hams, with a suitable number of chickens, etc., which was concluded with eight half ankers of brandy made into punch, twelve dozen of cider, a great many gallons of wine, and ninety bushels of malt made into beer. The company consisted of five hundred and fifty ladies and gentlemen, who concluded with the music of twenty-five fiddlers and pipers, and the whole was conducted with the utmost order and unanimity."

Extract from the sermon of a prominent revivalist: "I feel that my Saviour wants me. Now, even now, do I pray that he take me to His bosom. Oh, would that He would take me now! Would you mind closing that window, please? I fear it will give me cold." Fact.

A naturalist has discovered that crows hold solemn court at which offenders are tried—a sort of crow-bar. We presume no bird is tried without caws, and that a true bill is necessary in every case.

General Spinola finds no difficulty in heating New York city at present.

LONG AGO.

'Twas Spring time, and all Nature stirred,
The season's pulse was young;
On bursting boughs full many a bird
His careless carol sung.
Beneath the interlacing shade
All wind-swayed to and fro,
A gracious youth and gentle maid
Swore fealty long ago.

The years had passed, the years had flown,
Sweet Summer filled the air;
There walked within the covert lone
Brave man and matron fair;
And round them, with a jocund glee,
There danced, in life's full glow,
A troop of children fair to see
In days now long ago.

'Twas Autumn next, the year grew pale,
The farmer reaped his grain;
Now walking slowly down the dale
Behold the pair again.
Their forms are bent. See in the hair
Some silver touches show;
Childless and sad they wander there,
And dream of long ago.

'Tis Winter. In the churchyard lone
The snow lies white and fair
Upon the simple mossy stone
That hides the aged pair.
They have their rest! 'Tis Spring again!
And in God's Land they know
A love not dimmed by age and pain,
Like that of long ago.

—Samuel Pascoe, in the London Graphic.

SHORT SERMONS TO THE PEOPLE.

Every political, press and pulpit demagogue in the land, seeking profitable popularity, acts on the same line of thought. First, praise the dear people's honesty of purpose, and credit them with virtues akin to the angels! Second, select a scapegoat to bear the sins of the world, cast upon it the rocks of denunciation, and let it be accursed here and hereafter. The plan is very simple and works to a charm, but it begins to lack novelty, and, as a matter of common justice, it is well sometimes to reverse the operation, although the task is perhaps an unpopular one, because all good Christians prefer a vicarious atonement to auswering in their own proper persons.

By what right do the people of this Republic denounce their chosen representatives upon a simple presumption of guilt, or merely upon the baseless assumption thereof? Yet so it is that official life is made dishonorable, and popular sentiment considers every man in office a thief, because, dear fellow-citizens, as you tersely put it, if a man has a chance to steal, and does not, he is a fool. That is your logic, and proves your own corruption—deny it if you can. From the very circumstances surrounding official life you have made honesty therein stale, flat and unprofitable. You demand short terms, low salaries and a price for your voices out of proportion to their value. You surround officials with every temptation to dishonesty, and, with a strange inconsistency, blame them for yielding. On the other hand, how do you reward the faithful ones? Experience answers, with ingratitude, poverty and neglect. He who panders to your prejudices or depravity is the god of the hour, whilst whoso speaks the truth you consider a superserviceable ass. Life, with you, is a fever of speculation, and the almighty dollar is the deity to whom you sacrifice friendship, love, truth, and all the virtues. Your government, good people, is but your self-incarnation, and you cannot accuse it without self-condemnation. Thus, whenever you feel disposed to crucify some public functionary, examine your conscience, as the Catholics say, and ask yourselves what you have done—or omitted doing—that this atonement is necessary.

There were but four just men in the Ark; there was but one good man in Sodom. Hence, when we hear the self-vaunted virtues of the people of this Republic, it becomes a matter of cynical speculation how many could stand the test of Fire and Water.

SALE OF A NOTED HOUSE.

Gad's Hill Place—the house that will be forever associated with the name of Charles Dickens—is in the market. Mr. Dickens gave £1,790 for the house as it originally stood. But it will bring at least five times that sum. When Mr. Dickens died, a reserve price of £10,000 was put on the property. In addition to the associations connected with it, Dickens practically rebuilt the house, and added considerably to the land originally pertaining to it. Among many other things he did for the house was to make a well, the progress with which was a somewhat serious matter to him. He used to say—"It is quite a railway terminus: it is so iron and so big." He also made underneath the famous tunnel which connected his lawn with the shrubbery, in which was placed the still more famous chalet presented to him by Mr. Fechter. The last thing he did was to build a conservatory, and it was only on the Sunday before his death that he had the great satisfaction of seeing this completed. He said to his daughter—"Well, Katey, now you see positively the last improvement to Gad's Hill." There used to be in the late Mr. Dickens' time an illuminated scroll which stood on the first floor landing, by way of greeting to all visitors. It ran thus—"This house, Gads Hill Place, stands on the summit of Shakspeare's Gad's Hill, ever memorable for its associations with Sir John Falstaff in his noble fancy—'But, my lads, my lads, tomorrow morning by four o'clock, early at Gad's Hill! There are pilgrims going to Canterbury with rich offerings, and traders riding to London with fat purses. I have vizards for you all; you have horses for yourselves.'"

Frésh. (anxious about his rank) to Professor of Mathematics: "What will be my rank for the term?" Professor: "That is not easily determined; it is less than any assignable quantity."

ART JOTTINGS.

"Sarah Bernhard" is the name now uppermost in art circles. It matters hut little whether the conversation turns to art on the stage or in the studio, Sarah Bernhardt, a lady of uncertain age, who, since 1862, has been connected with the French stage, is sure to he its principal subject.

She has been associated tbese many years with the troupe of the Comedie Francaise, a theatrical institution under the patronage of the French Government, and consequently we are prepared for a little of the claque accorded this late light of the (art) world.

Of all people who cater to the popular taste, the French take the lead, and when they were coaching M'lle Bernhardt for her London engagement, it is little wonder that they did not forget the sister arts—painting and sculpture,—and it is to he noticed how readily she has fallen into the English custom of private entertainments at one hundred guineas per night. Four of tbese she gives each week, appearing the remaining nights at the Gaiety. At these private soirees she takes her easel, sketches, chats and recites. Her efforts at art are usually portraiture, and she succeeds, according to good authorities, in executing an execrable dauh, having some little resemblance to the subject, but none whatever to a work of art. But she has succeeded in taking London by storm. Her evenings are all engaged, and they cry for more. The same people who pride themselves on their Royal Academy and admire the works of the R. A.'s, although it is well knowu that many of the worst dauhsters in England are among the numbers, are now going daft over this shrewd woman from over the channel. Sarah Bernhardt was never married, yet she is accompauied by her son, aged 13. Hc is her constant companion. She is received into England's drawing-rooms. The nohility vie with each other in doing her honor. Lately she preceded Lady M—— in going to the Salon a Mange. Nothing was said of it, however. In olden time charity did wonders; in our day cheek does it—nearly all. The London Truth has this to say of M'lle and her admirers: "Anent this same Sarah, it strikes me that any one who gives this clever young lady something like one hundred guineas for performing in private with one or two of her comrades a little piece de societe, intended to prove to the unbelieving world that she can model, is paying ahout eight times what he ought —unless, indeed, she be used as a hait to attract fashionable people to a house, in which case the investment may he a judicious one." Douhtless Miss Bernhardt is clever, and any clever woman can, with the aid of the artists we have seen from time to time connected with her name, soon learns to manipulate paint and mold clay into some sort of a likeness, and happily for such talent, the great art centres are overflowing with a class of connoisseurs who pretend to see great merit in every pretentious dauh, and prophecy a hrilliant future for the perpetrator of it. In due course we shall doubtless have this "Jennie at all trades" with us.

There seems hut little to say of local art just now. Ahout all the artists are out of town, or doing nothing if at home. Miss Strong has on view, at Morris & Kennedy's, a Scotch terrier, which in many respects is quite equal to anything she has yet done. The drawing is good, the pose and expression both excellent. The color is, however, a little faulty, and the hair fails of having the right texture. At the Art Association two new paintings are on view this week. One is an example of the old Dusseldorf school, as interpreted hy Paul Weher; the other illustrates the Innis school, as exemplified hy George Innis. We have a vivid recollection of how a wealthy connoisseur of this city, while in Rome, gave Mr. a commission for a large work, how in due course it arrived, was entered at the Custom-house with an invoice for a large value and consular certificate attached. This high value and an examination of the painting hy Uncle Sam's art sharps led to the belief that tbe Innis painting had heen stolen in transitu and a worthless dauh substituted. In their dilemma, beforè reporting the loss to the owner, other authorities were cousulted, who promptly decided that the picture was, sans douht, genuine, as no other artist could paint such a work, and probably no one would if they could. Nor can there he hut little douht, very little, that the owner has many times wished his valuable picture had excited the cupidity of some one and induced him to substitute something for the daub, which would give him some sort of pleasure to look upon, which this high cost work cannot have afforded him.

Now, to our remembrance, this huge canvas, at thc art rooms is a counterpart, so far as color and manipulation are concerned, of the one before referred to, and possesses uo merit whatever, except an atmospheric effect, produced hy the use of such colors as we find here. As to the other large picture, it has many good qualities. The distance is well handled, and many parts of it are strongly painted, hut the style of the work is decidedly behind the age—dowdyish shall we say. At any rate, there is none of that crispness which should helong to a subject such as this. Perhaps these pictures are interesting as exemplifying the extremes of two dogmas in landscape painting, the painfully realistic and the equally absurd imaginative.

Mr. Wm. Hahn has placed on exhibition, at Snow & Co's, a work containing a large number of figures, "Street Scene in New York." From a cart on Union Square they are selling the evening papers to the newsboys, who are seen in lively strife to ohtain the earliest papers. This style of subject has ever been Hahn's forte. He does uot execute his pictures with the nice finish of J. G. Brown, of New York, whose "Passing Show" will he remembered, hut they are equally as effective and true to life, if not more so. Hahn does not paint a dirty face different from what it is, or clean old and patched clothes with his hrush; in other words, he never tries to improve upon nature.

At this gallery there is also on exhibition a painting of "King Lear and the Fool," by August Scbauer, a German artist of note in his own country. The picture will be interesting to students of Shakespeare, as illustrating an interesting episode in the life of that good hut unfortunate monarch. Of course, the type of face in "King Lear" is German, and somewhat different from the usually accepted English interpretation of it, but it is nevertheless one which speaks plainly to the beholder, and is unmistakahly that of a lunatic, as is also that of the other figure a fool's. He is seen whispering to the old man, and telling him of the doings of his unnatural daughter till he exclaims, in the anguish of his heart:

> "How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is > To have a thankless child!"

The artist has twined a wreath of flowers in the poor old King's hair, as he wore them when near Dover, when Cordelia first beheld her father, and in her agony said to the physician:

> "Alack, tis he; why, he was met even now
> As mad as the vexed sea, singing aloud;
> Crowned with rank fumite and furrow weeds;
> With harlocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers,
> Darnel, and all the idle weeds that grow
> In our sustaining corn."

The work is a good example of the modern Munich school, and must he considered one of the hest yet received here from that section of the art world. It is not obtrusively German, from the American standpoint, which counts several points in its favor. Such a large number of the pictures brought from Germany are so strongly Teutonic in their character that the American public have, in great measure, sickened of them.

JAMES W. MARSHALL, THE DISCOVERER OF GOLD IN CALIFORNIA.

[Drawn by our well-known artist, A. Nahl, from a daguerreotype in the possession of Mr. H. H. Bancroft, supposed to be the only existing portrait of Marshall--at all events, as he appeared in '48.]

As the News Letter furnishes its readers this week with the portraits of the cream of San Francisco society, it is only fitting that a special place should be given to the man whose lucky discovery made our country and our people what they have grown to be in the brief space of thirty years. It is true, Marshall's discovery was a piece of sheer luck, and was made without any effort or forethought on his part; we may, indeed, truly say that there is not a man in the picture accompanying this issue who, as an individual, has not done more for the advancement of the State than the original finder of gold; but this will not make less interesting a brief sketch of the blind instrument of that chance to which California owes her present position.

James Wilson Marshall was born in Hope Township, Hunterdon county, New Jersey, in 1812. His father was a coach-builder, and he is said to have been brought up to the same trade; but he was a born mechanic, and by no means confined himself to any particular branch of work. Being of a restless disposition, he left home when 21, and for some years wandered over the Southern and Western States, generally supporting himself by working as a carpenter. While in Missouri he first entertained the idea of coming to California, and forthwith, in May, 1844, he joined a party which had been organized with that object. The party divided at Fort Hall, and Marshall joined the portion which decided to enter California by way of Oregon. In that Territory he passed a Winter, and in the Summer came down the Sacramento Valley to Sutter's Fort, where he arrived in July, 1845. Such an ingenious mechanic as Marshall was a great prize for Sutter, who at once took the wanderer into his employ. With the exception of occasional fights with the Indians, his life was now monotonous enough until the Bear Flag Party, under Fremont, hoisted their flag and declared California a free and independent State. Marshall, of course, espoused the cause of his countrymen, and after doing good work under the Bear Flag, was enrolled as a volunteer in the United States forces when that queer standard was replaced by the Stars and Stripes. He took part in all the important military operations which followed, and in March, 1847, received his discharge—but no pay. He then returned to Sutter's Fort, and resumed his more peaceful occupations. At this time Sutter had great need of a saw-mill. He had the resources wherewith to build it, and Marshall had the skill, so they agreed to set about the work as equal partners. After several ineffectual attempts to find a good site, Marshall at length hit upon a suitable place, at a spot called by the Indians Coloma, on the South Fork of the American River, some thirty-five or forty miles from Sutter's Fort. At that time Sutter had in his employ a number of Mormons, who had formerly belonged to the Mormon Battalion which had served the U. S. during the warin California. Several of these men and a number of Indians were placed under Marshall's orders, and work was at once commenced at Coloma. By Jan., 1848, the mill was nearly completed. It had been built over a dry channel, into which the water from the river was diverted, in order to save the labor of excavation. But the tail-race had proved not deep enough, and at the time we are now speaking of the chief work on hand was to deepen it. This was done by throwing out the heavy stones and loosening the gravel during the day, and at night opening the sluice-gate and letting the rush of water carry away the lighter stones and soil. Marshall used to go down to the race every morning, after the gate was shut down, to see what had been accomplished during the night, and, as all the world knows, it was on one of these occasions that he discovered the first glittering particle of gold.

The matter wasn't long a secret at the mill, and a closer search revealed more of the precious metal; but nobody seemed to appreciate the importance of the discovery except Marshall, and many doubted its being gold. To satisfy himself on this head, Marshall went down to the Fort a day or two later, and, in a private interview with Sutter, tested the yellow stuff, and established its genuineness. He and Sutter wished to keep the whole thing secret, at least until the mill was finished and they had acquired a clear title to the gold-field. But though the workmen promised to keep silent and proceed with their work for six weeks, the secret leaked out through the indiscretion of a Swiss teamster. This man was sent from the Fort to Coloma with provisions. At the mill he obtained some of the gold, and on his return he offered his treasure in payment for a bottle of whisky, at a store kept by Sam Brannan. After this, it was not long before the news reached San Francisco—then a little hamlet, containing a score or so of houses. The excitement and rush from every corner of the earth which followed, is a story too familiar and too long for repetition here. To return to Marshall. When the rush had fairly set in, he sold part of his interest in the sawmill, and went to prospecting for new diggings; but luck deserted him, and he failed to find any of value. To make matters worse, the miners somehow got an idea that he secretly knew where the gold was, and when, after dogging him from claim to claim, they failed to catch him unearthing the hidden treasure, they reviled him, and declared that he was purposely deceiving them. Ill-feeling ran so high against him, that he was finally compelled to go to the Southern mines, where he was not so widely known; but still he met with no success. In later years, when the diggings gave out, he returned to his old stamping ground at Coloma, where he lived, and, perhaps, is still living, in poverty and obscurity. Hargreaves, the discoverer of gold in Australia, was rewarded with $75,000 by the British and Australian governments. Marshall has never received a cent, but has been actually persecuted, plundered and left to rot in his old age. Such is briefly the history of the man and the event.

DEATH OF WILLIAM MITCHELL.

This well known and highly respected gentleman, Tax Collector of the city and county, died at his residence on Saturday last, after an illness of but a week's duration, the result of a cold which ended in pneumonia. Mr. Mitchell was a native of Sydney, N. S. W., and a Californian since May, 1850. He had been connected at various times with the city press, longest with the Evening Bulletin, where he rose to be cashier and business manager. This position he resigned two years ago, to enter public life as Tax Collector, winning in every situation, public or private, the respect and esteem of all. The news of his death cast a general gloom over the city, and the expressions of sympathy with his afflicted family were general and heartfelt. The funeral took place from King Solomon's Temple, under charge of the Masonic fraternity, and was attended by the various societies to which Mr. Mitchell had belonged, and by an unusually large concourse of citizens anxious to honor the memory of a good man.

THE GREAT CLOTHING HOUSE.

Colman Brothers have achieved the enviable reputation of being the largest and most important house on the Pacific Coast in the clothing trade, which draws to it so many enterprising and vigorous minds. In this city they have two establishments—the wholesale one at 107 Battery, and the retail business at the corner of Bush and Montgomery. Besides these, they have the largest and finest clothing store in Sacramento; and these advantages, supported by the resources of their immense factory in New York, 134 and 136 Duane street—one of the wonders of that wonderful city—enable them to distance competition and maintain their place in the front for excellence of material, style and finish in workmanship, and moderate prices. The unvarying courtesy and affability of this house are as remarkable as their untiring energy and enterprise. They are representative California men of the best type.

Private library to be sold by auction, on Tuesday next, July 22d. R. D. W. Davis & Co. will offer at their rooms, 209 and 211 Pine street, a remarkably fine collection of books in the best departments of literature. Among these are a set of the "Delphin Classics," of which but two are known to be in the State; the large edition of "Cook's Voyages," in perfect original binding, the much-coveted "Walpole Letters," "Knight's Shakespeare," an exquisite copy of the large paper "Percy's Reliques," and many other varities. Such an opportunity but seldom occurs to obtain the finest literary editions of standard works, and it is to be feared that prices will fall below what a real book-lover could wish to see rule.

"At the Play." Just one fact more in connection with this superb collection of portraits will doubtless be of interest to the general reader. As most of our male subscribers have reason to know, the Gentleman's Furnishing firm of Carmany & Crosett, No. 23 Kearny street, supplies the bulk of what are technically termed "fine" gents' goods to our better class of purchasers and society men generally. A review of the above picture made by that firm elucidates the coincidence that of the 250 and odd gentlemen represented in the engraving, 186 (or over two-thirds) are regular customers of Messrs. C. & C. A better testimonial to the class of this popular firm's custom could hardly be imagined.

"AT THE PLAY."

Short Sketches of some of the Notables in the Drama of "Life in California."

T. H. Goodman, General Passenger Agent of the Central Pacific Railroad; perhaps the most accomplished accountant in the whole army of railroad officials.

Lloyd Tevis, a horn diplomatist. Not only is he one of the shrewdest. and most wealthy husiness men on this coast, hut he is one of the hest and hrightest talkers to he met with anywhere.

J. B. Haggin is Mr. Tevis' partner, a cool, clear-headed man, who can dispatch husiness with lightning rapidity.

Wm. T. Coleman, a merchant Prince, who distinguished himself at an early day as President and leader of the Vigilance Committee, which saved San Francisco from the rule of the moh.

D. O. Mills, for many years President of the Bank of California and one of the "solid men" of California. His wealth is estimated at $15,-000,000.

Wm. Alvord, Ex-Mayor of San Francisco and now President of the Bank of California. A cultivated, high-minded gentleman.

Charles Wehh Howard, President of the Spring Valley Water Company. A rapid and sagacious husiness man and eminently fitted for the high financial position held hy him.

William Sharon, for many years the partner of the late Wm. C. Ralston, and now U. S. Senator from Nevada. He is the largest hotel proprietor in the world. He owns the Palace Hotel, the Grand Hotel and the Cosmopolitan Hotel of this city, three first-class institutions, which together have capacity for accommodating over 2,000 guests.

A. A. Sargent, for twelve years an honest representative of California in the Counsels of the National Government. Both as a memher of Congress and U. S. Senator, Mr. Sargent was distinguised for his industry and ability. He was probahly the most influential representative in Washington California has had for twenty years.

J. J. Valentine, the accomplished Superintendent of Wells, Fargo & Co's Express. A position he has held for many years. He has probahly no superior in the line of husiness he follows.

John Parrott, the eminent financier, worth $6;000,000, and all acquired by his forethought and husiness sagacity.

Newton Booth, the "scholar in politics." A graceful orator and thorough student, he fills the position of U. S. Senator from California to the satisfaction of his friends.

Claus Spreckles, one of the leading sugar refiners of America. In addition to his immense refineries in this city, he owns large plantations in the Hawaiian Islands. For his enterprise in developing the resources of Hawaii, Mr. Spreckles has recently had conferred upon him the order of Knighthood hy King Kalakua.

William Ingraham Kip, the Right Reverend Bishop of California, and a distinguished author.

Horatio Stehbins, the successor of Reverend Starr King, of sweet and immortal memory. As Pastor of the First Uuitarian Church of this city, Mr. Stehhins is known far and wide for his learning and eloquence.

Charles Lux, the largest land-owner in California, and a gentleman of great husiness ahility. He is a genial, kindly man, as well.

Henry Miller, the partner of Mr. Lux, is also distinguished for his superior talent in conducting large business transactions.

Thomas Bell, an eminent merchant and hanker, and does a large business with Mexico.

W. H. L. Barnes, an orator, scholar, wit, poet, soldier and famous lawyer; one of the shining lights of San Francisco. He can probahly do more things, and do them well, than any man in the State.

William M. Gwin, whose eveutful life would make a history of itself. As U. S. Senator, Dr. Gwin made a national reputation. He was a statesman of commanding influence, even in a Senate where sat Douglas, Seward, Sumner and Fessenden.

John Hemphill, the distinguished Pastor of Calvary Church. Though still a young man, he is eminent for his eloquence and learning.

Thomas H. Blythe, one of the large real estate owners of San Francisco. A bachelor millionaire.

Stuart Menzies, distinguished as one of San Francisco's most efficient Supervisors.

Edward F. Hall, a leading stock hroker, and formerly a partner of James R. Keene. Mr. Hall is a hright husiness man of high social position.

Hall McAllister stands in the very fore-front of the San Francisco Bar. He is a born lawyer, and ranks among the leading attorneys of the United States.

Frank McCoppin, the distinguished ex-Mayor of San Francisco. Both as Mayor and State Senator, Mr. McCoppin won an enviahle reputation, and is considered one of the handsome men of this city.

Fred. McCrellish, the popular proprietor of the Altu.

John P. Jackson, editor and proprietor of the San Francisco Evening Post. A hright and accomplished man, who has made a success of every enterprise he has undertaken. He has heen a lawyer, railroad huilder, stock operator and editor, in all of which occupations he has made a name to he euvied. Cal. Jackson is still a young man.

Wm. Norris, Secretary of the Spring Valley Water Company, and formerly President of the Oregon S. S. Co., stands deservedly high in commercial circles. He is a lover of hooks and pictures.

Philip Roach, one of the editors of the Examiner, is well known all over the State. He has heen a State Senator, and was appointed hy President Buchanan Minister to a Foreign Court, Mr. Roach is a man of high character, and speaks fluently several foreign languages.

J. T. Farley, the newly elected U. S. Senator from California, is one of the "powers that he" in the politics of this State. As a manager of men he has few equals. Of tine personal appearance, and a ready dehator, he will, no douht. take high rank in the United States Senate.

W. H. Platt, the celehrated rector of Grace Church, is noted for his profound scholorship and eloquent discourses. He was a lawyer of high standing hefore he took to the ministry.

Charles De Young is the talented and enterprising proprietor and managing editor of the Chronicle. His paper has a very large circulation, and was the principal jourual in the great contest in favor of the New Constitution.

Loting Pickering, the great antagonist of the De Youngs. His two papers (both daily) are a power in the land. Mr. Pickering is part proprietor iu the Bulletin and Call, hoth of them leading journals.

John McComb is a handsome Brigadier-General, and managing editor of the Alta. He is a genial and popular gentleman.

Thomas Flint has heen State Senator from the counties of Santa Cruz, San Benito and Monterey. He is one of the leading wool-growers of the State, and is an educated and accomplished man.

Donald McLennan, the founder of the great Woolen Mills at the Mission. An enterprising and puhlic-spirited citizen.

Frank M. Pixley, formerly a lawyer of extensive practice. He has heen Attorney-General of the State.

Edward Curtis. In the Mail Bag magazine we found the following attempted description of Mr. Curtis: "The trouhle, when a fellow has so many sides and all of them good, is to tell where to hegin. An accomplished writer and a well read man, who knows how to marshal his knowledge to the hest advantage, he is equally good at a joke, a recitation or a speech—a pleasant companion, any way you take him. When you discover that our friend is all these things, you hegin to think you know him. Never was there a greater mistake. You have only seen as much of him as he has cared to show you. The rest you won't learn this year, nor next either." For his scholarly attainments Mr. Curtis has had the title of L. L. D. conferred upon him hy the University of the city of New York.

James A. Johnson, the genial Lieutenant-Governor of California, was formerly a memher of Congress from the Sonoma District. He is universally popular and an able man. Few men in puhlic life have more personal frieuds or a larger political following.

C. T. Mills, a Doctor of Divinity and founder of the celehrated Mills' Seminary, is a well-known gentleman, with a mind well stored with the treasures and graces of a ripe scholarship.

H. H. Bancroft, the historian of the Pacific Coast, is a hard student and a terse writer. He has already puhlished several volumes of his invaluahle history.

A. N. Towne, the famous General Superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad, is heyond question one of the master railroad operators of the age. He manages the trains on over 2,000 miles of iron roads, and a fleet of steamhoats hesides. No transportation companies in the world are more ahly handled than are those under the immediate control of Mr. Towne.

James G. Fair, a man of prodigious memory and wonderful success in the development and management of large mining properties. He was the Superintendent of the great "Bonanza Mines" when those immense ore hodies were discovered, and superintended them in person during all the years when they were paying dividends of $2,000,000 a month.

James C. Flood, a man of original ideas and good address. Has all his life heen an apt student in reading men. Few persons are hetter judges of character than Mr. Flood. He is withal a natural gentleman, correct in his habits, very fond of his home and family, and an exemplary citizen in every way. In his husiness he is punctual and always keeps his word. A king of the stock market and San Francisco manager of the "Big Bonanza," he has necessarily made some enemies. No man doing such an immense business could do otherwise. His transactions in the Stock Exchange are supposed to amount, during the past five years, to over three huudred million dollars. Mr. Flood is also part owner of the Nevada Bank, the largest hanking institution in the United States. He is one of the wealthiest mine-owners in the world.

Leland Stanford, the word-renowned President of the Central Pacific, is a man of blood and iron. In his veins throbs the energies of a thousand ordinary men. He has with his partners huilt more miles of railroad hy far than any four men in the United States. Vanderhilt, Gould and Scott acquired their great railroad properties hy Wall street speculations or by purchase, hut Leland Stanford huilt nearly every mile he now controls, and this constitutes the wide difference in the achievements of these illustrious railroad magnates. As Governor of the State, hefore he hecame President of the Central Pacific, Mr. Stanford made for himself a great name hy the statesmanship and ability he displayed as Chief Magistrate.

Leland Stanford Jr., the only son of Governor Stanford, though only eleven years of age, has already displayed decided talent. He is an excellent engraver on wood, and has mechanical genius of a high order. He naturally takes to railroads, and is fond of studying the peculiarities of new inventionss, especially when they relate to locomotives, cars and other railroad paraphernalia.

Charles Crocker, who so ably superintended the whole work of construction of the entire overland road from San Francisco to Salt Lake, is now President of the Southern Pacific. At one time Mr. Crocker had under him 14,000 men—railroad huilders—an army greater than that with which General Scott won his grandest victory in Mexico. Prohahly through his hands has passed more than one hundred million dollars during the past fourteen years, a large portion of which has heen paid out for lahor. Mr. Crocker has a faculty of dispatching an immense amount of business in a very short space of time. He can handle an army of men and millions of money as easily as many men can handle a company or the contents of a grocer's till. Associated with Governor Stanford from the commencement of railroad huilding in California, he has won a national name in the great enterprises with which he is connected.

Stuart M. Taylor is the present City Recorder of San Francisco. He is a graceful orator and a popular gentleman.

Joseph Austin is one of San Francisco's Port Wardens and an old and highly respected citizen of this city.

D. Z. Yost was formerly private Secretary to Governor Stanford, and is now a successful and hrilliant member of the San Francisco Stock Exchange.

T. A. Harcourt was formerly one of the editors of the Overland Monthly. He is an accomplished literateur; in fact, one of the hest writers in the State.

G. G. Gariboldi is the celehrated artist and musician. The fine work in the great houses on Noh Hill is, much of it, from designs originated hy Mr. Gariholdi.

H. Channing Beals is the well known editor of the Commercial Herald, the hest statistician in the State.

Wm. A. Neilson was for eight years a distinguished memher of the Australian Parliament, and one of the leaders of that hody. Since he has made California his home he has heen engaged in literary pursuits. He is one of the most terse and effective writers on the press.

Frank G. Newlands is the son-in-law of Senator Sharon, and is a young and rising lawyer.

THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL.

There are signs of revival in this fragrant garden of the administration. The directors have come up fresh and hearty from their vacation, whether enforced or voluntary, with large collections of new documents and first-class witnesses for and against the teachers who have been, or are, or are about to be, suspected of something. Contumacious teachers, steadily reviled for six months as purchasers of questions which nobody sold, are hauled up again and assiduously nagged in public by the courteous Leggett and the unfailing Bacon. It does not yet appear what nominations these good men are in search of, though some little promises have been made in conventions, in a manner perhaps only conventional; but one thing is clear, for whatever offices these gentlemen may be named, it will be found that their views are eminently practical. They do not sell positions in the School Department; but neither do they run about hunting for midday at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

General principles are fitly illustrated by particular cases. President Hiester, for instance, when lately requested to nominate a person as janitress, wasted no words. The applicant was not rich, but she had a cow. Tradition affirms that this was all she had, and also that President Hiester was in urgent need of a cow to reinforce the incessant drain upon his milk of human kindness. The secret sympathy which brings two hearts to beat as one is not without a certain power over the mind: and it will not, therefore, surprise the philosophical reader to learn that the quondam owner of the cow is now a janitress in one of the public schools, while the useful animal herself chews the cud in President Hiester's back yard. It is not given us to know where or in what manner the President of the Board of Education himself chews the cud, but the fitness of the whole arrangement inclines one, like Mrs. Skewton on a similar occasion, to fold one's hands upon one's breast and say with those wicked Turks: "There is no What's-His-Name but Thingummy."

Money is no object with any of these gentlemen. They are not paid, and they give their time to the interests of the public, knowing that all good things will be added to them that love the Lord. Nor can we sufficiently admire the mystery of godliness, through whose working alone it has come to pass that one of the Board of Education has been enabled, since his election, to change his residence, previously discreetly hidden on the back lot of a more pretentious house, for a most stately mansion on a wide street, and to distribute the family cares among several hired domestics, in a household long unacquainted with the brisk energies and vigorous methods of Bridget. We see and wonder, how by worrying teachers and throwing dust in the public eyes, men turn away attention from their own questionable proceedings, and the unmolested Ewald.

The combination system of investment in stocks, as managed by Martin Taylor & Co., is remarkably successful. It has been carefully studied out, after a long experience in the handling of stocks, and recommends itself to the judgment of all as a plan free from the defects of other attempts in the same direction, while it brings together all the elements of security. The risk of an investment is reduced to the lowest possible point when able operators, thoroughly and constantly informed of even the slightest variations in value, are on the watch, with ample means to seize the critical moment, which makes in these cases all the difference between triumph and ruin. The small investor, by this method of combination, reaps all the advantages hitherto exclusively belonging to the capitalist. The three or four hundred dollars separately applied to a purchase by the owner, who is almost entirely in the dark, cannot, even at the best, achieve more than a trivial success; but merged with similar amounts from other investors in an imposing sum of $100,000 or $200,000, all the weight and force of capital are put at the service of each small proprietor, and the result is almost infallibly profitable to an extraordinary degree. It is in the power to bring together and to handle with efficiency these isolated small amounts that M. Taylor & Co.'s services are of incalculable value. Intending purchasers should ponder well and deeply this truth, so well put in the circular of these gentlemen: "To be successful, one must be prompt, active and decisive—seize opportunities at the right moment, and go with the tide." And this is exactly what they are able to do for their customers. Combinations are constantly forming, and terminate every seven, fifteen and thirty days. They are always for a specified number of shares—100,000, 50,000, 25,000 or 10,000. The first two are more generally advantageous as investments, because they are larger. In every case the purchaser of shares can see his liability beforehand, and calculate almost with certainty his chances of gain or loss; and while the former almost surely surpasses his expectations, the latter is under his hand from the beginning.

Mrs. Lewis' Fashionable Dress-making Parlors in Thurlow Block, Kearny and Sutter streets, are the resort of those who lead in society, and meet there to discuss the latest styles. Everything new and distinctive from the Paris artists is immediately brought before the critical eyes of San Francisco by Mrs. Lewis, and passed upon en petit comite in her magnificent rooms. There may be seen such marvels of taste and skill as cannot be met with elsewhere in the city. One dress alone, ordered for a grand ball at Vallejo, and now displayed in the outer parlour, could have been produced by none but the most accomplished artists, working under the eye of a faultless critic. The richness and beauty of this perfect robe and train affect one like a symphony, so exquisitely do colour and form blend and melt into harmony. With such a guide as Mrs. Lewis, our San Francisco ladies cannot fall below their reputation as the best dressed women in America.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society, one of the best known, and indisputably among the soundest and most powerful companies in the country, has adopted a new form of Simplified Incontestible Policy, which gives the insurer all the certainty of an investment in the public funds. The agency of this standard company in this city is in the hands of Wm. D. Garland, at 240 Montgomery street, and under his administration many policies have been issued throughout the State, and large awards have been paid to survivors, without a contest in a single case. To point out the advantages of a life assurance at this late day would be entirely superfluous. The one thing needful is, that the business man taking out a policy shall feel confident of the company's strength and sound management, and in these respects the Equitable is absolutely beyond reproach through its long history.

J. M. Litchfield & Co., merchant tailors, 415 Montgomery street, are making very nice suits as low as $40 and $45.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The past week has witnessed a succession of breaks, culminating, however, yesterday morning, and since then a sharp reaction has set in, showing a marked improvement along the whole line. The sales for account of margin buyers have been unusually large, though we are inclined to the belief that the principal sacrifices have already been made. Little or no information can be derived from the mines, and operations are based almost entirely upon the appearance of the market. Ophir seems to be coming to the front as a favorite gamble, and throughout the break has stood the slaughter bravely. Bodie took another tumble during the week, and at the close shows but little signs of recuperation. The news from the mine is particularly unfavorable, the north winze having failed to show the anticipated improvement, while the northeast crosscut is not looking so well. Mono, however, shows an improvement in the east drift, while the stock is well sustained. At the close the general market was considerably better.

It is with much regret that we announce the sudden death of a son of Mr. W. H. Bovee, the well-known real estate agent. This most promising youth, after partaking of a hearty meal, indulged in a swim. The sudden immersion of his heated body in the cold water brought on congestion, the cause of his untimely decease, at the early age of fifteen. The family have our sincere sympathy in the great hereavement.

The New York Dramatic News contains a blackguardly attack this week on Frank H. Gassaway, and incidentally mentions him as the theatrical critic of the NEWS LETTER. The attack itself is shameful; still, in justice to our theatrical critic, and as information for the "News," we have to state that F. H. Gassaway has not written a line of theatrical criticisms for this paper the past two years.

Mr. Joseph G. Eastland, we are glad to announce, returned on Monday last, from his absence in Europe and the East, greatly benefitted in health, and full of the old time vigor and energy. The presence of such men among us gives courage and confidence, and we feel that there's life in the old land yet.

Correction.—In last week's notice of Colman Bros. great business on this coast, we inadvertently stated that they had, in addition to their houses in this city, the largest clothing store in Sacramento. This was an error. What we should have said was that Messrs. Colman supply the largest house in Sacramento with goods.

LAURA'S PAIN.

Laura now doth sigh and languish
In a fit of woe and grief,
And the dewdrops of her anguish
Gem her pocket-handkerchief.

Wherefore should this breathing flower
Feel the arrows of despair?
Wherefore should she but an hour
Feel the throes of pain and care?

While perfume is to her blowing
From some swaying purple bell,
Still her tear-drops keep on flowing
From her soul's artesian well.

She'll not soon with "Yankee Doodle"
Make the parlor walls resound—
This is all because her poodle,
Clytemnestra, is in pound.

WINNING COMMERCE.

Our people should make the most of the land behind them, and of the water in front of them; by which we mean that they should fill up the interior of the State with thriving industry, and venture out on the broad Pacific in quest of markets. That is the way to create a great commercial port, and build up a permanent and wealthy city. Wheat-growing will not last forever, neither will the Comstock Lode. Both are good in their way; they have done much for San Francisco in the past, and they will, let us hope, do more in the future. But we stand in need of manufactures and of markets, especially the latter. It behooves us to cultivate commercial relations all over the Pacific. It is in that direction our commerce must extend, if it is to extend at all. We have promising fields in Mexico, South America, China, Japan, Australia, New Zealand and in the isles of the Pacific. Up to the present, it must be confessed that we have not made the most of our opportunities. China was to have been, and ought to have been, a perfect mine of wealth. We were to have supplied the teeming millions of that empire with pretty nearly all that they import. Yet, up to the present, we have hardly made an appreciable inroad into their trade. Their orders are still supplied by way of the Suez Canal. The same is true of Japan. With Mexico we are doing a trade that might easily be increased. With South America much more might be done. With Australia and New Zealand the opportunities are immense. They are great importing countries. Their population of three millions of English-speaking people absorb a large amount of manufactures. We have much to sell that they are ready and willing to buy. A more intimate acquaintance would show many opportunities for reciprocal exchange of commodities. The colonies were well represented at the Philadelphia Exposition. California ought to be equally well represented at the forthcoming exhibitions at Sydney and Melbourne. It is the experience of these times, that if you would sell your goods you must exhibit them to customers; it is also true that if you would sell, you must also buy. The Australians ask that we should take their fine wools, and offer to take in return American manufactures. Their offer is worthy of all consideration. It means business, an extension of trade and commerce that will advantage this city. We should be on the look out for just such opportunities. That is the way to win commerce. That is the way to build up an enduring prosperity. Better far the trade of a Liverpool than all the mines of Peru, or even of California.

THE JEWS AT HOTELS.

The uproar made last year over the exclusion of Jews from a hotel in the East seems to have advertised the business as well as could have been expected. Another publican has taken up the same line this year, and is likely to find his account in it. Two of the New York papers have fallen into the trap and given the establishment a very effective, gratuitous puffing. Henry Ward Beecher has not yet come out for or against the offending landlord, but, if the thing is dexterously managed, even this strong support will not be wanting. Except as an advertising trick, one is at a loss to see the meaning of this sudden warfare upon a religious community. Considered as a method of bringing oneself before the traveling public, it is worthy of the greatest commendation; and it is a little surprising that a people so keen to see the commercial aspect of a case should play so confidingly into the hands of the ingenious hotelkeeper. How he must smile as he reads of the Jewish indignation meetings and the wrath of the high-minded American journals! For his shekels are safe—they will come in upon him like a flood, and he will spoil the Egyptians. An inquiry into the family history of this enterprising man would reveal, we cannot but think, a closer relationship with some Biblical traders than he suspects. It is difficult to treat this matter seriously; and yet it is proper to say that the Jews show too little sense of their own dignity in taking any notice whatever of such gross devices for attracting custom. We recommend to them the following true story, which they can apply for themselves: Five or six years ago there was displayed for many months, on a house in Powell street in this city, a sign to this effect: "This house to let, or for sale, but no member of the First Baptist Church on Washington street need apply." Whether the house was let or sold, we never knew; but the sign was seen and read for a long time by thousands of people, many of them, no doubt, Baptists, and yet there was no indignation meeting, no upheaval of that sensitive religious body. People who have serious objects in view cannot waste time on lunatics or peddlers.

Baron Ferd. von Mueller, Government Botanist of Victoria, Australia.—Among the news items by the last Australian mail I find one as pleasing to myself as I think it will be to all lovers of the blue gum tree, which adds so much to the avenues and landscapes of California, viz.: that the introducer of them over the world—Dr. Ferdinand von Mueller, already a Baron of the German Empire, and decorated by nearly all the crowned heads of Europe, has been created a Knight of the Royal British Order of Knights Companions of St. Michael and St. George. His eminent services in benefitting the world with the results of his labors, rendered Sir Ferdinand von Mueller one of the greatest benefactors of mankind in modern times. Whole countries that had been malarious swamps for centuries have been reduced into healthy and productive lands by the results of his disinterested labors. Long may he enjoy his honors.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 84, as compared with 64 last and 93 for the corresponding week last year—males 52, females 30, Chinese 8. There were 5 suicides and 5 accidental deaths. The zymotics were: Typhoid 1, diarrhea 2, diphtheria 2, scarlatina 1. The other principal causes of death were: Phthisis 8, heart disease 6, pneumonia 4, cancer 3, paralysis, enteritis, liver disease, of each 2. There was 1 death each of infantile convulsions, diabetes, epilepsy, hœmoptysis, hepatitis, lung congestion, old age, peritonitis, syphilis, uræmia. Infantile mortality was unusually low. There was no death in the Third Ward, and only one in the First and Fifth. There were 12 in the Twelfth Ward and 13 in the Eleventh. Nine persons died in public institutions.

Deplorable Accident.—The many friends of Mr. B. W. Reagan, the Arizona capitalist, will be greatly distressed to hear of the terrible accident that occurred to him and his wife, while driving a restive horse at Oakland, Thursday afternoon. The animal took fright, the phaeton was overturned, and both occupants were thrown out and severely, if not fatally, injured. Mr. Reagan had four of his ribs fractured, and sustained serious injuries about the head, and has not yet recovered consciousness. His physicians despair of his recovery. Mrs. Reagan was badly cut about the head, but her wounds are not necessarily fatal. Mr. Reagan is part owner of the Silver King Mine, and one of the most enterprising citizens of Arizona. His many friends there will keenly feel his loss, should his injuries result fatally.

Denis Kearney isn't much of a hero, after all; indeed, he seems to be imbued with more than an average share of cowardice. How his legs ran away with him at Santa Ana is a matter of record. Yesterday he appeared to prosecute one Davis for an assault with a deadly weapon. He failed to prove his charge, though he gave up sundry engagements in the country and hastened to San Francisco for that express purpose. According to his own showing he cut a sorry figure, was knocked through a baker's window, was "struck on the mouth," and was badly used up generally. In response to all of which, he appears to have turned the other cheek to be smitten also. That may have been amiable, but it is exceedingly inappropriate on the part of the redoubtable General of the W. P. C., who was so loud in blood and thunder threats.

In cock-pits and at dog-fights Con. Mooney and his gang are, douhtless, very fine fellows, with very fine ideas of fair play. That is to say, it probably would not occur to them to set four or five rough-and-tumble bulldogs upon a pet poodle, or to pit the same number of game-cocks against a barn-door rooster. But beyond the narrow limits of their legitimate and highly reputable sphere, these gentlemen seem to reverse their code, and to consider four to one to be about the correct odds in favor of the sporting fraternity, when an inoffensive citizen is to be bounced.

The "Stock Report" might find some better occupation for its wit than sneering at Bret Harte's pecuniary obligations left in California. Mr. Harte is not the only man, in or out of this State, who has debts, and if he owes anything to the owners of the Stock Report it would be more manly for them to try to reach him in some less offensive way. It does not look brave to make use of one's own paper to attack a man behind his back. The business is a small one.

Deposition's twice as bad;
The Rule of Three it bothers me,
And Bismarck drives me mad! —Punch.

"If the ring carry the primaries all is over." "Go to the primaries and work," and much more of the same twaddle fills the papers day after day. Every man who writes in this way knows perfectly well that the men who live by politics carry and pre-arrange the primaries as much as they do the general business of nominations and the working of the machinery. Where are your records of better men chosen since the invention of this grand cure for all evils? What honest man has a chance for a nomination on any ticket merely because he is fit and honest?

It is loudly proclaimed that the attempt at intimidation of a judge, made by a morning paper, is not creditable to journalism. We believe you, my boy; but will you please mention anything that is creditable to journalism? Excepting, of course, what modesty forbids our naming.

"CALIFORNIANS AT THE PLAY."

Short Sketches of some of the Notables in the Drama of "Life in California."

The "News Letter's" faithful portraiture of Californians is meeting with gratifying appreciation. The resources of this office have been taxed to their utmost during the week to supply the demand for copies of the picture entitled "Californians at the Play." An edition of fifty thousand has already been exhausted, and the printers are again at work striking off more copies. This is a sale unprecedented in our city. Our prediction that the picture will find its way into every household in the State is being rapidly verified. Moreover, it is being mailed to all quarters. A more welcome souvenir to send to friends in the East and abroad could hardly be imagined. Last week we gave as much space as we had then available to short sketches of prominent men who appear "at the play." We continue that pleasant duty:

A. J. Bryant, Mayor of San Francisco, Chairman of the State Democratic Committee, and a business man of energy and enterprise, is a truly representative Californian. Whole-souled and in dead earnest about every thing his hand finds to do, he knows no such word as fail. Twice elected Mayor of San Francisco, he has held office during an exceptionally trying time, with credit to himself and advantage to the city. His capacity for work, great as it is, has been tried to its utmost. Exceptional and unusual duties have at different times been imposed upon him by the Legislature, he being made President of the Water, New City Hall, Police, and some half dozen other Commissions. He will leave office at the close of the present year. As the newly chosen chief of the Democratic Party in this State, it is expected that he will play an important part in the Presidential campaign of next year. His great energy and executive ability peculiarly fit him for the position. Observing men predict that the future has still higher honors in store for A. J. Bryant.

James R. Keene was born in London, and though at present one of the largest stock operators and speculators in the East, is essentially a Californian. It was in San Francisco that he made his money. Starting as a "curbstone" broker without capital, he soon worked his way to a commanding position as a stock operator. He accumulated money rapidly, and was understood to be worth about six millions of dollars when he left here two years ago. Since then he has operated largely in New York, Chicago and other Eastern cities, and with success. His local reputation for conceiving and executing bold and successful enterprises was great, but he has rather increased it by his successes in the wider field he has chosen for himself. Mr. Keene is a warm-hearted, generous man of noble impulses, who is held in high esteem in California.

John W. Mackay is an Irishman, and one of the Bonanza Kings. He, with his partners, Flood, O'Brien and Fair, discovered and largely opened the great ore body found in the Con. Virginia and California mines. He is one of the proprietors of the Bank of Nevada. A few years ago he was a working miner; to-day he counts his wealth by the tens of millions. He is believed to be worth not less than twenty millions of dollars.

The Hon. John P. Jones is United States Senator from Nevada. He was born in Wales, but came to America at an early date. Like J. W. Mackay, he is a successful miner. His discoveries in the Crown Point mine made him a millionaire. Senator Jones is a man of culture and taste above the average. He has made his mark in the councils of the nation. On the subject of finances there is no higher authority in the United States Senate.

E. J. Baldwin is another of our very rich men who owes his wealth to the gold and silver products of the Comstock lode. He is a successful operator in our stock exchanges. His money has been largely invested in enterprises beneficial to our city. He is the owner of the large hotel known as The Baldwin. His splendid stud of race horses has just won celebrity at Chicago.

His Excellency John C. Fremont, Governor of Arizona, has a name and fame that are world-wide. His early association with California will pass into history. His presence here antedated the gold discovery. He crossed the continent literally cutting his way through forests, and winning for himself the name of "The Pathfinder." He, with William M. Gwin, were the first United States Senators chosen by California.

The Hon. George C. Perkins is the Republican candidate for Governor of this State. His party justly claim that he is a strong nominee before the people. His friends enthusiastically support him, and the chances all seem to favor his election. His career is highly creditable. He came to California a sailor boy. On his arrival he wended his way to Oroville, where by honest industry he achieved a foremost position as a merchant. He most creditably represented Butte County in the State Senate. He subsequently became a partner in the firm of Goodall, Nelson & Perkins, the steamship proprietors of this city. He is the active business man of the concern, and in that capacity is esteemed by the mercantile and traveling community.

His Excellency William Irwin is the present Governor of the State of California. He was elected, four years ago, on the Democratic ticket. His administration has been well meaning, economical and honest. He will leave office, a few months hence, deservedly respected by all parties.

The Hon. Lorenzo Sawyer, Judge of the United States Circuit Court. A ripe scholar, and an able and upright Judge.

A. W. Von Schmidt, the great civil engineer of the State, who has done many things and done them well. Perhaps the most notable undertaking was the removal of Blossom Rock, long a formidable obstruction to the navigation of our harbor.

Judge Samuel Bell McKee is Judge of the District Court of the Third Judicial District. He has been nominated, on the Democratic ticket, for elevation to the Supreme Bench. A man of pure life and high resolves, he is greatly esteemed. Though a Democrat, he has always been elected to his present position in a district overwhelmingly Republican.

A. A. Louderback has for many years filled one of the most onerous and difficult positions in our city. He has been Police Judge. He has had to deal with the hoodlum and criminal elements during a most trying time. That he has done his duty firmly, fairly and honestly, is the general verdict. He has been several times re-elected, and is undoubtedly the right man in the right place.

The Hon. Samuel H. Dwinelle, Judge of the Fifteenth District Court. A man who loves the good things of this life—all of them. He has a sunny, equable, judicial temperament.

General C. I. Hutchinson, a pioneer honored and respected by all who know him, has carried out several large enterprises, and is the present head of the largest insurance agency on this coast.

Colonel A. Andrews, the prince of jewelers, as all in the business are ready to acknowledge. A man of the most varied personal experiences and accomplishments; he speaks all the leading languages, and has practiced his profession in every country of Europe. Colonel Andrews displays the most fertile fancy and the most admirable taste in design. All his productions are his own in conception, as in execution. He is an authority on diamonds and precious stones, esteemed as one of the best in America. In California he is the pioneer jeweler, and his pride has led him to establish what is conceded to be the most magnificently brilliant establishment of its kind in the world. There is nothing equal to it in Europe, from Paris to Moscow. A courteous and polished gentleman, Colonel Andrews has made a host of friends on this coast. He is a member of not less than twelve orders, and in the last campaign he was General of the McClellan Legion, and chosen by thirty-seven different clubs as Grand Marshal of the grandest procession ever seen on the Pacific. His store is one of the sights of America, and all strangers are equally charmed with the splendor of the establishment and the cordiality of the proprietor, who welcomes every one, whether an intending purchaser or not. His fund of information is always at the service of visitors, whom he treats in every case as if they were his private guests.

The Hon. Delos Lake, an able lawyer of extensive practice. He has been United States District Attorney, and Judge of the County and Municipal Courts. His handsome and characteristic face is very noticeable in the picture, "At the Play."

The Hon. Samuel Wilson, one of the ablest lawyers in the State; was a member of the late Constitutional Convention.

Henry E. Highton is also one of the luminaries of the Bar. His addresses to juries are forcible, perhaps sometimes a little heavy and ponderous, but always logical and effective.

Reuben H. Lloyd is one of the best known men in the city. A lawyer of large practice, he is as bright as a new pin, and as sharp as a steel trap. The client who intrusts himself to Mr. Lloyd's guidance must have an exceptionally bad case if he does not come out ahead. Educated to his profession in San Francisco, Mr. Lloyd is well able to hold his own with lawyers of Eastern or foreign training. "Reuben," as he is familiarly called, is quite a popular society man among us. He is unmarried.

James Adams, a city father, and an ex-sheriff of San Francisco. A sturdy, honest citizen, whom to know is to respect. He has won the sobriquet, by which he is perhaps best known, of "Honest Jim Adams." Honesty with him has had its reward. He is wealthy, and, as a consequence, is "comfortably fixed."

Wm. Lane Booker is British Consul at this port. He has held that office for many years, and having had the benefit of an extended official training, he is well versed in its duties.

Charles Kohler is one of our most esteemed citizens of German birth. Broad minded, large bodied, he is essentially a big man every way you take him. Kind, genial and generous, he has a clear head and a cultivated judgment. San Francisco has not within her borders a more estimable citizen. He is one of the foremost representatives of our great wine growing interest.

Thomas Acheson, a member of the Board of Supervisors, is a most active and useful citizen. Possessing considerable executive ability, he has made a worthy city father.

Henry B. Williams, of the well-known mercantile firm of Williams, Blanchard & Co. A merchant in the best sense of the term. As managing agent of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, he controls a vast business. The company's steamers run hence to Japan, China, Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii and Panama.

John W. Coleman, capitalist and stock broker. Mr. Coleman made one of the most efficient Presidents the Board of Brokers ever had. He has many warm friends, and is justly popular.

Captain Oliver Eldridge was agent of the Pacific Mail Company in its palmiest days, and in that position won the respect of the business community. He is one of the Commissioners charged with the improvement of Golden Gate Park, for which position his aesthetic tastes well qualify him.

William B. Carr has been for several years one of the most influential managers of the Republican party of this State. He is the owner of a large tract of land in Kern county, which he is making fertile by means of extensive irrigation works.

Emile Grisar, Belgian Consul, is a merchant prince, the wool trade of the Pacific Coast being largely in his hands.

Wm. F. Babcock is the managing member of the mercantile firm of Parrot & Co. As President of the Spring Valley Water Company, which supplies the city of San Francisco, he exhibited executive ability of the highest order.

Thomas Brown, Cashier of the Bank of California, is one of the best known men in the State. He fills the onerous position he holds with distinguished ability.

Peder Sather is a well known banker, and a most estimable citizen.

Joseph A. Donahue is senior partner in the banking house which bears his name. He is manager of the Mariposa estate. As a capitalist, who is always concerned in solid investments, he is a power in the State.

E. C. Fellows, Assistant Superintendent of the Central Pacific Railroad. He is the able assistant of A. N. Towne in the management of the great lines of railroad under his control. It is safe to say that Mr. Fellows is one of the foremost railroad men of the country.

General James Coey, a brave Union soldier, who bears the marks of battle still upon him. He is a warm personal friend of General Grant's. General Coey is the Postmaster of San Francisco, and is remarkably efficient. Many improvements in our local postal arrangements have been introduced during his period of office.

Samuel Brannan is a California pioneer par excellence. He came overland prior to the discovery of gold, and has ever since been closely associated with the State's progress.

Wm. P. Humphreys has been elected again and again our City and County Surveyor. Few men are better known, and none more respected. The city owes to him some of its most important improvements.

R. B. Woodward is a singularly energetic citizen, whose many enterprises have enriched him and benefitted the city. The What Cheer House, owned by him, feeds a thousand mechanics every day. The Mission Street Railroad, which is also his, carries thousands of people daily to their homes in the more distant portions of the city. Woodward's Gardens are the popular resort of our citizens. They are admirably managed, affording recreation and pleasure to thousands.

Mrs. Lillie Coit, a lady of refinement, of culture, of pleasing manners, and of a noble nature. She has long been intimately associated with all that is good in the society life of our city. No reference to our representative men and women would be complete that did not include her honored name.

The Hon. J. McM. Shafter, a large land-owner in Marin County, a learned jurist and a most able man. Should the Republican Party carry the State he would have strong claims to the United States Senatorship. He was a delegate to the Constitutional Convention.

Augustus Laver, architect. He is the designer of the State Capitol at Albany, New York, and of our new City Hall. As a draughtsman he has few equals, and no superior, on this continent.

The Hon. Joseph W. Winans, an accomplished scholar, an able lawyer, a pioneer, and a most estimable gentleman. He was a delegate to the late Constitutional Convention.

John H. Redington is President of the quicksilver mining company which bears his name, and is the largest importer of drugs in the State. A man of enterprise and worth.

D. J. Murphy, District Attorney for the City and County of San Francisco. He is a most able criminal lawyer, and as prosecuting officer he has well served the people. He has been a terror to evil-doers. Genial and of a kindly disposition, he has a host of warm friends.

Arpad Haraszthy is an enterprising gentleman associated with the wine-growing interests of the State. The wines of California are taking rank with those produced in the south of France. They are fast winning fame, and to that result Mr. Haraszthy is a principal contributor.

Fred. W. Macondray, of the well-known mercantile house of Macondray & Co. His firm is one of the oldest in the city, its good repute is known in many lands. It is largely engaged in the China trade.

Hon. Charles Clayton, grain merchant. Mr. Clayton faithfully represented San Francisco in Congress. He is an esteemed and popular citizen. He is being urged just now to become a candidate for the high office of Mayor of the city.

Charles Main, of the firm of Main & Winchester, importers. An enterprising business man. His sterling qualities of head and heart endear him to a wide circle of friends.

A. P. Hotaling, importer of liquors, does a large and successful business.

Theodore Wagner fills the important office of United States Surveyor-General with incorruptible fidelity and signal ability.

A. Colman, master clothier, who, from wielding the needle, has worked his way to the front rank of manufacturers.

Edward Cahill, the honest and genial stock broker, who has borne a reputation without fear and without reproach that dates from pioneer times.

REMENYI CONCERT AT DASHAWAY HALL.

Whether for his own pleasure or our gratification it might be a hard matter to determine—either or otherwise—Remenyi has paid us a second visit. While it may not redound to our hypothetical assumption of great classic renown to admit it, it is nevertheless a stubborn fact that as an accomplished, if somewhat eccentric violinist, Remenyi is a great favorite with our musical ladies, and we are not without many such in San Francisco. If Remenyi was less capable he would be more charitably dealt with by a nationally biased cliqueism, from which little emanates that is not the immediate issue of bigoted, clannish idolatry and dog-in-the-manger selfishness. As a fingerer we have not seen his equal here, and for brilliancy of execution this is the datal essential. His staccato and arpeggio bowings are ever masterly, and although his double stopping may on rare occasions be doubtful, his single runs cannot for correctness be surpassed; while with harmonics, for certainty, clearness and power there has been no one here at all to be compared with him. His tone altogether is not of the ordinary fiddler type, but of a finished order. As to sentiment and feeling, let us be truly thankful he has little, if any, of the order manufactured by Spohr, which was nothing but pretentious silliness simmered down to incipiency. To such an extreme did Spohr carry mere mechanism that he had himself and strongly advocated others to permanently divide off or sectionize their bows, so as to play certain passages in certain divisions of the stick. For elemental drudgery and general soundness the German musical system will hold its own, but of dash, fire and brilliancy it is innocent. Of the greatest permanent opera companies in the world—London and Paris—the orchestral leaders have never been Germans. It is curious that in London, the professional hot-bed of German idolatry, with a prolonged succession of Viottis, Spagnolettis, Moris and Tolheques, never once has a German been leader of the opera orchestra; and the same may be said of Paris, but this may be reasoned thus: The French crown-head has never been German and able to dictate taste to a rich and effeminate aristocracy. While it is a significant fact the greatest violinists that ever did exist, like the greatest pianists, have in neither case been of German nationality, however mixed up that may be, so Remenyi may rest content in the satisfaction that his detractors (and he has some) do not in general belong to the order with a natural aptitude to judge dispassionately, or command the native-born talent to lead public sentiment. With capabilities so conspicuous, how comes it that Remenyi keeps on repeating himself, and that, too, in a very hackneyed and worn-out channel? He has so far touched upon nothing profound or masterly—of uncommon efficacy and grandeur—as a display of proficiency in violin playing. Of the pianist, Dulcken, be no doubt fills the hill satisfactorily enough. As a performer, he is in no sense pre-eminently unusual. We have in this out-of-the-way place some little (though they may be old) misses who could give him odds and then lead him in Chopin idiosyncrasies. Miss Thurston does her best, and disarms comment.

Says Kalloch: "With my politics
The name of Jesus Christ I'll mix;"
And never dreams that such vain tricks
Will some day hurl him into Styx,
Where he'll be in a pretty fix,
The victim of the devil's kicks
And lusty licks from fiery sticks,
But that's what will happen to Kalloch.

Spring is so mild now that dirty tramps can lay on the grass of public parks, dreaming the happy hours away, while honest mortals are working for a living.

MORE PROPER SCHOOLING.

Crops may fail, Kearney may fizzle, and the dove of peace brood over H. B.'s and Republicans and Democrats; but one thing changes not, is not to be made straight, rejoiceth not in the truth, but abideth forever in the crooked and the dark way. Though the earthquake swallow us up, it will reject this indigestible Board of Education. Nobody can endure the Board, and nobody can purify it; nevertheless, it is not wholly useless to speak, for the sake of the Republic. The scandalously mismanaged investigation, which wearied and disgusted all the State last Winter, is not yet laid away in its tomb; and it seems likely to be present at the perpetual interment of the men who conceived and nourished it. These are Messrs. Taylor, Bacon, Leggett and Hiester. Most of the teachers, whom these Directors could hully, have been bullied and disgraced and pardoned, out of the infinite mercy of the great men; but there are left two, against whom some secret venom stirs up all the wrath of these minds, but little less than celestial. Mrs. Danielwitz and Miss Birdsall were charged by anonymous letters with having purchased the examination questions; and these four Directors have prevailed with the rest to compel these ladies to undergo a special examination, or forfeit their places. There is no fault found with the record of these teachers. It is acknowledged that they have done their duty; there is nothing to show dereliction on their part. But the anonymous letters accuse them! Certainly, and such letters can be had to accuse anybody of anything. The writer has seen, within three weeks, anonymous letters containing charges against Directors Taylor and Bacon; hut it does not therefore follow that the one is a thief and the other a swindler. A letter without a name, it seems to be necessary to tell these gentlemen, may have been written by any one of the Board, and even by any one of the four we have named. That is the way the public look at the matter. It is naturally concluded that men who can attach importance to anything so infamous and so cowardly, are quite capable of originating it. Innocence has no safeguard, if such documents are to be accepted.

There is not a man, not a woman, not a child, in this city, of life however blameless, against whom anonymous letters could not be written. Is any one of these Directors ready to have his wife or his sister attacked in this way, and forced to defend herself against the most villainous imputations, because men called respectable disgrace themselves by urging them? And what is the conduct of these respectable men in the discharge of their solemn trust? Take a case: A lady, desiring a position in the School Department, called on a Director and offered him $250 to have her nominated. The Director told her she had made a mistake; he did not do that kind of business. The lady withdrew, hut she was shortly after nominated hy Director Taylor and through his influence elected, and she is now teaching in one of the public schools. Men cannot help putting two and two together. It might be different if one of the two s kept out of the way.

It is to be hoped that Mrs. Danielwitz and Miss Birdsall will resist aliks the threats and the cajoleries of these four men, or the two, who specially put themselves forward, Messrs. Bacon and Taylor; for there is yet a remedy before the courts for injustice like that which these small tyrants are trying to carry through.

A BOHEMIAN LION HUNT.

The Bohemians are after Mr. Whitelaw Reid, famous as the most elevated editor on this continent. That is, his editorials are written at a greater elevation than any others on this side the Atlantic, the tower at the top of which the Tribune sanctum is situated being thirteen feet (by actual measurement) higher than the roof of the Herald building, which in its turn looks down upon every other newspaper establishment. As soon as the name of this exalted representative of journalism appeared in the list of passengers westward bound on the overland train, the Bohemians were on the qui vive. Certain "members of the press" (whom Psalm Williams does not recognize as of the most immaculate standing in the guild) resolved to get up a dinner, or a dejeuner, in honor of the distinguished visitor. Three or four of these obscure beings (who have never enjoyed the felicity of writing for the Bulletin, or received the seal of Deacon Fitch's imprimatur,) proceeded to tender the lofty young editor a dinner for the next ensuing Sunday, in the name of "the Press of San Francisco." He of the tall tower accepted. Then the gophering engineers of the job, who had elected themselves a committee to manage the affair, with full power to appoint sub-committees and run the banquet generally, commenced issuing invitations to such of the writing fraternity of this city as they deemed worthy of putting on a wedding garment and sitting at the feast. And then the agony began! Were the scribblers of the Sunday papers "members of the Press?" Could proprietors who never mount the tripod, and do all their editing vicariously, come under that classification? Should Deacon Fitch and Brother Loring be invited, and should Charley and Michael of the "live paper" be sandwiched between them? Would Parson Bartlett consent to invoke a blessing on a spread where Horsey Boruck and Pagan Seabough glared at him with eyes of irreverent mirth? At latest advices these and similar rugged conundrums were vexing the tired brains of "the committee." The model young editor had accepted the hospitality of "the Press of San Francisco." But, alas! the d—l was to pay, and the big committee, aided by all the little committees, were still struggling despairingly with the grievous problem: Who are the Press of San Francisco, anyway?

George F. Bragg.—This well known and universally respected citizen, a merchant of many years' standing among those prominent on Front street, died on Friday, the 18th inst., of pneumonia, contracted hut a few days before at the grave of his wife's father, Mr. Dupont. A long, quiet, honorable and useful life has been brought to an end suddenly, and, as his friends cannot hut think, at an untimely age, for Mr. Bragg's temperance and activity should have kept him, for many years to come, an ornament of the large circle which now mourns him.

Valedictory.—We notice, among the departures for England, that of Mr. H. W. Hammond, after a visit of a few weeks to this Coast. Mr. Hammond is interested in the wire-rope business, and has, we understand, taken large orders from Nevada and elsewhere. His purpose of establishing an agency for this business in San Francisco at the beginning of the next year will, we trust, be carried out, and to the success it deserves.

Life is a "Mr."y to a sober man, and a "mizzer"y to a drunkard.

THREE NAPOLEONS.

"1821.—1873. 1879."

Three men, three deaths, almost within our times,
And even we who sing of lighter ways
Of life, must panse and listen; in these days
Sad fancies hurst their ways into our rhymes.

It seems to us a strange decree of fate
That as each time came for these men to die,
England, like Death's sad envoy, should watch hy
These three, who bear the name that oue made great.

Not always sorrowing as now in tears;
For once her face was stern and grave of mien,
The night she watched the lonely dying scene
Of her Great Prisoner in the hy-gone years.

The broad-browed Corsican, whose eagles spread
From snowy Russia down to sunny Rome,
On a lone English Isle had found his home,
And dying captive, bowed his crownless head!

Time passed: again we hear the wondrous name,
Again the scepter rests within their hands,
And clear and loud there rings throughout the lands
One word, Napoleon! through the trump of Fame.

Again a death-bed watch must England keep,
Yet now no longer by the far-off wave;
But where her sweetest flowers guard his grave
The exiled Emperor sleeps the eternal sleep.

How strange that while the Emperor's dying breath
Should end thus peacefully, if in sad wise,
His sword hut half unsheathed this hoy-Prince dies—
Alone of all his race—a soldier's death!

No glory of a conquered world for pall,
Or victories won o'er hot seditious strife;
Only the glory of a stainless life,
Of gentle manhood passed before us all.

—Vanity Fair.

THE MOVEMENTS OF POPULATION.

The City of San Francisco contains three thousand people less than it did a year ago. A contemporary bewails this as a sign of evil omen. In our view it is a fact that is by no means to he deplored. It indicates that three thousand people have had the good sense to go into the country. They have probably ceased to he mere waiters on Providence, aud, having put their own shoulder to the wheel, have surely ere this made a new and promising start in life. They no longer live on the industry of others, hut have hecome producers. They are adding to the wealth of the State instead of eating it up. They have done just the right thing. In no other way could they have done the city so much service. They are placed exactly where they will do the most good, not only to themselves hut to the city and State also. If one-third of our city population would go and do likewise, the whole State would soon he in a much more prosperous position than it now is. The truth is, our city is too large; that is to say, there are too many people in it in proportion to the numher in the country. Over one-third of the entire population of the State is found crowded within some half dozen square miles of city sand dunes, whilst thousands of square miles of fertile country lands furnish homes only for the squirrel or the jackass rahhit. No idle, or even unprohtably employed men are an advantage to the city. By going where they can produce more than they can consume they will he doing the right thing exactly. They will he placing themselves where they can do the most good. It is a fact worthy of note that the inflow of population into the United States from Europe is on the increase. The numher of immigrants that arrived in New York during May is given at 18,100, as against 12,213 for the same month of last year. The total arrivals of immigrants during the year ending May 31st were 92,801, as against 71,091 for a corresponding period ending in 1878. The statistics in the Land Office show the emigration to the Western country to have been unprecedentedly great. As many as 1,200 entries of public lands were lately made in six days, which is said to he equivalent to the taking up of 192,000 acres of Government land. The movement of population has heen principally in the direction of Kansas, Dakota and Minnesota. It is a pregnant fact that California, with all her hoasted advantages of soil, climate and productions, does not attract one tithe of the stream of population that is pouring into the cold and comparatively inhospitable region of Minnesota. We are all talking politics just now, hut they are petty, miserahle little pot house politics, to be sure. If there were hut a dash of statesmanship introduced into them, we should he concerning ourselves about the important problem of attracting people to settle throughout the State. We want more people, hut we want them placed in the country. We have enough and to spare, for the present, in the city.

A charming etory of a hair has recently been told as having occurred at Vienna. A poor girl with heautiful hair went to a harher to sell it. He tried to make a close bargain, saying hair was plentiful this year, and declared he could only give her eight florins. The little maiden's eyes filled with tears, and she hesitated a moment while threading her fingers through her chestnut locks. Finally she threw herself into a chair and said, "Then take it quickly." The harher was ahout to cut off the fair tresses, when a gentleman sitting in one of the chairs interrupted him, and spoke to the girl. "My child," said he, "why do you sell your heutiful hair?" "My mother has heen nearly five months ill. I can not work enough to support us. Everything has been sold or pawned, and there is not a penny in the house." "No, no, my child; if that is the case, I will huy your hair, and give you one hundred florins for it." He gave the girl the note, the sight of which dried her tears, and he took up the harher's shears. Taking the locks in his hand, he selected the longest hair, cut it off, and put it carefully in his pocket-hook, thus paying one hundred florins for a single hair. He took the poor girl's address, in case he should want to huy another at the same rate.—Court Journal.

A "Facer."—Dissipated Tramp: "You'll know me ag'in, Guv'nour!" British Workman (who had certainly looked at him): "Not if you washes yourself, I sha'n't!"—Punch.

STATE DEPARTMENT.

Office of the Secretary to the U. S. Commissions to the Australian Exhibitions,
July 1, 1879.

The following Regulations for the conduct of the proposed Exhibition at Sydney, Australia, have been issued from the office of the Commission, Macquarie street, in that city. The attention of American exhibitors is invited to them. The rules adapted for the subsequent exhibition at Melbourne do not materially differ from those here presented, and will be published in due course. CHRIS. C. COX,
Secretary of the U. S. Commissions to the Australian Exhibitions.

UNITED STATES EXHIBITORS

The following instructions are issued for the information of the United States exhibitors:

Congress having made no appropriation for the payment of freight upon the goods sent to the Australian Exhibitions, and having assigned no Government vessels to the duty of transportation, the United States Commission will assume no direction whatever of the movement of goods either to or from Australia.

It is suggested, however, that they should be strongly boxed, distinctly marked, and shipped according to carefully prepared invoices, of which copies should be preserved by the shippers, and at least two copies in every instance be furnished the United States Commission.

Upon the delivery of the goods within the Exhibition buildings at Sydney or Melbourne, and the payment of all charges by the exhibitors, the United States Commission will see that they are properly assigned to the space allotted the United States, and that they are catalogued.

The expense of installation must he borne by the exhibitors, and the United States Commission will not be responsible for expense of any kind in connection with the handling, storage, or the loss or injury of exhibits.

Exhibitors will be permitted to select agents to unpack, have charge of, and watch and repack their exhibits, their authority to said agents to be filed with the U. S. Secretary of the Commission. Their appointment to entail no expense to the United States, and to be revocable at any time by the U. S. Secretary of the Commission.

No agents shall be recognized in any way until their authority shall have been filed with the Commission.

☞ POSTSCRIPT.—It has since been decided by the Executive Commissioner of the Sydney International Exhibition that exhibits will be received up to the closing, in March, 1880, and it will be arranged with the Victoria Commission to have them sent on in time for the opening of the Melbourne Exhibition in that year.

JOHN J. BLEASDALE, D. D.,
Acting on behalf of the Royal Commission,
120 Sutter street, and New City Hall.

REGISTRATION.

Republicans, Attention!

Headquarters Republican State Central Committee, Rooms Nos. 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 and 9, No. 703 Market street, southwest corner Third street, San Francisco, June 26, 1879.

"PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

California Theater.—The relative merits of Offenbach and Lecocq as composers admit of but little discussion, for the superiority of the latter is undeniable. Opera houffe of ten years ago was the quintessence of musical huffoonery. The plots and situations of all of Offenbach's were of a nature to allow of any exaggeration or eccentricity in acting. In fact, there was no limit placed upon the actor or actress' individual comicalities. The school of to-day is vastly different. The popular craving is still for the humorous, but it desires to be more legitimately moved to laughter. The librettos of Lecocq's works and of the late productions of Offenbach are in the required style. La Petite Mariee is undoubtedly one of Lecocq's most felicitous compositions. The music is charming throughout. The plot is spicily French. For an English or American audience, it contains too much dialogue to become a favorite. The plot is in no sense conveyed to the auditor by the action, and this renders the performance uninteresting. I have rarely seen even at the Bouffes-Parisiennes or at the Varietés anything so well played or mounted. The chorus was a little weak, it is true, but everything else went off swimmingly. The costumes were remarkable for their tastefulness and picturesqueness. The one worn by the "Podestate," in the second act, was so handsome as to deserve special mention. The leading characters were acted with that care and desinvolture which forms the great charm of the French stage. M'lle Aimée, as "Graziella," though rather mature in appearance for the character of an innocent young bride, was as usual the life and spirit of the performance. She sang all the numbers of her score remarkably well. Jouard, the baritone, is a good actor, but has a flat voice and moreover sings badly. Jutcau, Mezieres and the rest were as usual perfect in their respective parts. In the Grande Duchesse this company gave proof of more talent than in anything else so far. This is one of the earlier opera houffes, extravagant and comically ridiculous in the extreme. To my mind, it was the best performance of this somewhat hackneyed piece ever given in San Francisco. M'lle Aimèe is irresistibly chic as the peculiar sovereign; the oiseslin she sang with true feeling and tenderness. Jouard is a most remarkable "General Boum," and along with Mezieres as "Baron Puck" must be seen to be appreciated. Jutean plays "Fritz" very much as Dupuis, the Paris original, did, and this is sufficient praise. Poyard, though a rather indifferent singer, has proved himself one of the very best actors in the troupe. His "Montefiasco," in La Petite Mariee, and his "Prince Paul" in this performance, were both excellently played. The text being rather sketchy, opportunity is given the actors to fill it out, and they did this very wittily and cleverly. Taken all in all, it was a most amusing performance, and will undoubtedly bear repetition. La Marjolaine was played last evening for Aimée's benefit, too late for review. On Monday La Boulangere a des Ecus will be produced. An opera bouffe ball will shortly be given at this theater, under the auspices of this company. It was first announced for August 2d, then postponed until August 9th, but it has been finally decided to hold it on Thursday, August 7th. All details will be announced soon, and the management will spare no efforts to make it a complete success. It remains with the public to insure this. Let it recognize the enterprise shown, and this will be sufficient.

Baldwin's Theater.—The sensational intensity of some of the scenes in the play now running at this theater, coupled with the lesson of temperance the whole drama conveys, have excited public interest, and the audiences have been large. But the great merit of the performance lies in the individual efforts and acting of several of the cast. Mr. O'Neill's "Coupeau" is a masterly performance, deserving of unstinted praise. "Gervaise" is a character one would hardly suppose Miss Coghlan would care or like to play. She must feel that, however admirably from an artistic point of view she succeeds in acting the character, still the innate refinement of her manner, speech and appearance, is in the way. Miss Coghlan is a handsome woman, and the blonde wig of "Gervaise" becomes her well. The new-comer, Miss Lilian Andrews, is a decided acquisition to our local stage. She is effective without exaggeration. One of the best hits of acting in the whole cast is the delineation of the old croque mort by Mr. Jennings. This favorite actor has evidently read Zola's novels, for in make-up and conception it is true to the author's idea. For characters of this kind Jennings seems to possess particular qualifications. Mr. Morrison continues to play the French dandy workman, after the pattern of a Happy Valley hoodlum. There is not the slightest tinge of Gallicism about this impersonation; and it is greatly to his discredit, for Mr. Morrison in other instances gives proof of talent and intelligence. Where, O where, did Mr. Billings discover what he seems to think is the uniform of a Paris sergeant-de-ville? Leaving aside all other considerations pro and con, this performance deserves encouragement. It is a terrible phillipic against the evil of intemperance, the national sin of this fair land, and on this ground alone is worthy of public patronage. Steele Mackaye's play, Won at Last, originally produced at Wallack's, and since revived at the Madison Square Theater under the title of Aftermath, is to be the next novelty at this house. This is a very charming play, rumor says, and will undoubtedly be done justice to by Miss Coghlan and the rest. It will receive its initiatial performance on Thursday, the 31st of July.

Bush St. Theater.—Tony Pastor's Troupe has been playing during the week to crowded houses. Taste for variety performances is strong in this community. Mr. Pastor's present organization is the best of its class that has ever performed here. Among those who deserve special notice for the artistic manner in which they render their acts are Sheehan & Jones, who give a new sketch, called the Ash-box Inspector, which almost convulses the audience with laughter. In their terrific combat, a la Donnybrook, they display a mixture of fighting, wrestling, facial contortion and brogue that would make a Quaker meeting smile. John Morris gives a series of costume and character changes in full view of the audience, who are puzzled to know how he does it. Thatcher's funny speeches have the merit of originality and a freedom from the least tinge of vulgarity that makes him a great favorite with the audience, who seem never to have enough of him. The French sisters, who, by the way, are English and not related, are very pretty, and do some neat song and dance business. Niles & Evans, two young men just brought by Tony before the public, are very good in a burlesque on the typical English swell, and will in time rank high in their profession. Tony Pastor sings a budget of popular topical songs, and seems a greater favorite than ever. The closing piece was very tame, the characters being poorly sustained. We were at a loss to tell whether it was comedy, farce or tragedy. Mr. Locke intends in August to completely renovate this theater, besides making some important alterations in the entrance. This will be a great improvement, and can but augment the already great popularity of the Bush St. Theater.

Standard Theater.—The children have been playing Pinafore during the week to good business, and close with the performance to-morrow (Sunday) evening. It has been a most amusing spectacle, and those who have not seen it should not miss the few opportunities left. Children on the regular stage are generally parrot-like in their speech, and too artificial for anything in their action. Nothing like this is visible in this gallant little crew. It may be for want of contrast on the same boards with big folks, or else from the fact that the little ones feel more at ease being by themselves, but whatever the reason, these youngsters have all the self-possession and naturalness of their older confrères. Last evening the performance was for the benefit of the fair instructress, Miss Chissold. The house was large, and the attractions enhanced by several novelties on the part of the children. Miss Lottie Chissold has given proof of patient talent in teaching these young people, and deserves all praise. On Monday the Diplomacy Combination commence an engagement, which it may safely be expected will be a successful one. At one time it seemed as if through the exorbitant demands of one of the cast, this proposed production would fall through, but all difficulties have been smoothed over. Diplomacy is itself a very strong piece, and these ladies and gentlemen do full justice to it. The cast includes Messrs. Piercy, Keene, Billings, Frecman and Morris, and Miss Lewis, Varian, Young and Morris.

Grand Opera House.—Pantomimes, when well gotten up and well performed, are very attractive spectacles, and the boxing-night shows in London are among its principal theatrical attractions. The performance at this theater is, without exception, the most wretchedly bad I ever saw. Everything goes wrong—the tricks fail, the scenes won't move—in fact, it is a perfect fizzle. How any sane man could ever have for a moment entertained the idea that this performance could draw paying audiences, is something past belief. Still, the pantomime is amusing from the fact that it is a fizzle, and I confess to hearty laughter at the failure and breaking-down of even the simplest trick.

Pinafore.—The Emelie Melville Troupe have appeared, since our last issue, at San Rafael, Sacramento and San Jose. In all of these places their performances were completely successful. It is possible that they may make a more extended tour, and this would undoubtedly be a good and profitable enterprise. The powers that be have not as yet decided upon this question.

Chit-Chat.

Frank Mayo is playing Davy Crockett in London.——Lizzie Harold, our coming soubrette, is in Philadelphia on a short visit to "pop" and "mom."——Patti will open at the Gaieté, Paris, on February 16, 1880.——The Williamsons have paid Boucicault $5,000 for Australian rights in his new play.——James O'Neil gets $200 and Miss Coghlan $250 a week.——A New York manager has offered Faure, the French baritone, $200,000 for a seven-months' engagement in the United States, the cash to be deposited in advance in the Bank of France. All expenses of traveling and living for himself and family are to be paid by the American impresario. Faure has not yet accepted the offer.——Haverly's Lyceum, with the Georgia Minstrels, is the only New York Theater open.——Arthur Sullivan has just been created Mus. Bach. by Oxford University.——Sarah Bernhardt has written a comedy called L'Epingle d'Or, of which the heroine is a certain Miss Mary, an English cantatrice.——London has found out that Miss Kellogg is so modest that she never forces herself to the front. Strange nobody ever observed that here.——It is announced that Mme. Theo, one of the three leading stars of the Paris stage, will soon retire and open a confectioner's shop in the Avenue de l'Opera.——Mr. Coghlan has been engaged for the Court Theater, London, and will open in September.——The fuss the London critics and public are making over Sarah Bernhardt is simply nauseating, and has had the effect of causing everybody in Paris to remember her defects.——It is proposed to open a monster variety show in Paris at the Cirque Americain building.——The leading man at Booth's is to be John Clayton, Boucicault's son-in-law.——Neilson opens in Brooklyn October 5th, and then plays in this country continuously (only five nights a week) until May. This will be her last engagement in the United States, as it is not expected by her physicians that she will live two years longer.——The Union Square management expect to score another one hundred nights' run with the proposed revival of The Two Orphans.——Drink and the Comedie Français are still the furores in London.——After their tour through the interior, the Melville Amateurs will give a farewell week at the Standard. It is not true that on the opening Monday they will make a street parade.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Unerring Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s new circular. The combination method, which this firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y. Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1878, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent.; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent.; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 29th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. Stocks and bonds wanted. Government bonds supplied.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Boxing.—The sparring exhibition, held at the Mechanics' Pavilion last Wednesday evening, was the best show of the kind ever given on this coast. Not only was it a pecuniary success, but it was conducted with a decornm mnsnal at exhibitions of the manly art, and it will do much to make sport popular and respectable. The first set-to was between Edwards and McClellan, both men looking in good condition, though too heavy. In the first rounnd they did good work, Edwards showing great science in avoiding the powerful blows of McClellan, and making good counter hits. The second rounnd Edwards got in a good face hit that brought down the house. McClellan replied by an upper cut that showed him to be a man not to be trifled with. This round was in favor of Edwards, who made the most clean hits. The third round McClellan forced the work, but got no special advantage, Edwards parrying his blows cleverly and counntering in good style. He sbowed, however, that the work was severe enough to weaken him a little. Hogan and Haggerty were the next. Hogan seemed to lose his temper, striking wildly and getting the worst of the encounter. Donovan then set-to witb Chambers, making a pretty exhibition. In spite of his superior hight and weight, Donovan got no advantage in the first round, Chambers stopping most of his blows and putting Donovan on his mettle to avoid cross-counters and body blows. The second round Chambers, finding it difficult to reach Donovan's head, rushed in, planting his left in good shape, but fniled to get away quick enough to avoid n clinch, which resulted in his getting his head in chancery. The audience disapproved of this so strongly that they hissed, though we are at a loss to see any cause for complaint in Chambers heing overweighted, or Donovan proving that he understood his business. Next on the programme was a set-to between Riley and Maynard. Riley broke bis thumb a few days ago and consequently could not do himself justice, heing unable to upper cut, or, in fact, use his right hand nt all; but he proved that in good condition he would make a hard figbt with his antagonist. Sharp and Toland then insulted the audience by giving a "set-to" that would disgrace the veriest tyros. They left the impression on the minds of the spectators that they had been paid for their work in advance, and did not care to earn the money. The "set-to" that followed, between Edwards and Chambers, was the best match of the evening. Both men are perfect masters of the art, and did their best, proving themselves worthy of their Eastern reputation. Donovan then came on again and "set-to" with Sharp, who got enough in the first round and wanted to quit, but was prevented by Billy Jordan, the M. C. The evening's entertainment finished with a "set-to" between McClellan and Mnynard. The latter hothered his opponent a good deal, and displayed great cleverness and wonderful activity. McClellan fought a little too hard at first, striking blows that would have knocked Maynard out of the ring had he not evaded them; but when McClellan settled down he showed his skill to better advantage, and fought his man into the corner, getting him on the ropes, but declining to take advantage of it. ——Mike Donovan goes across the bay to train for his coming fight with McClellan. He is under the charge of Joe Winrow and Fred Gotobed. He will probably he seconded by W. Riley.——McClellan trains in town, making Maynard's gymnasium his hendquarters. He has not yet selected a trainer.——There is great probability of a fight heing arranged between Harry Maynard and Arthur Chambers. Both men express themselves as desiring the meeting.

Rowing.—The St. George and Columbia Rowing Clubs will hold a regatta on Oakland Creek about the end of September, of which further notice will he given. There will be seven races, the principal one being for the McKinley Cup, four-oaied shells; a race for second-class shells, race for four-oared lapstreaks, single scull race, four-oared harge race, race for ships boats, and duck race. The regatta will be governed by the rules of the Pacific Amateur Rowing Association, no entries heing admitted except from clubs helonging thereto.——The single scull race, between Dan Leahey, of the Pioneers, and Stevenson, of Vallejo, was won by the former.——There will he a single scull race to-morrow, at 10 A. M., between Leahey and Ed. Nelson, for $1,000 and the championship, over the usual conrse.——Balfour, Guthrie & Co. have challenged the Bank of British North America for a return match; the race to come off on the 16th of August next. The challenge has been accepted.

Pedestrianism.—The first bona tide six days' walking match for ladies ever held was won hy Madame Exildn La Chapelle at the Mechanics' Pavilion last Tuesday. The distance made was three hundred and six miles and five-sevenths.——A match is talked of between Frank Edwards and McIntyre for $2,000, the one covering the greatest distance in six days to be the winner. It will he managed by the Olympic Club.——Some sporting men of this city nre about to get up another six days go-as-you-please match for men, to take place within six weeks.

Shooting.—The Cosmopolitan Shooting Club had their first shoot at Milhrae last Sunday. Some good shooting was done by Messrs. Ault, Brooks, Cord, Villegra and Maskey; Ault winning first prize, a barrel of flour.——Grand sweepstakes match at Bird's Point, Alameda, to-morrow, nt 10 o'clock A. M. Fifteen members, at $10 cacb. Prizes, $75, $40, $25, $10; twelve birds each; ties, single birds at twenty-six yards; entries to hc made on the ground. Freeze-out and glass-hall shooting after the matcb.

Baseball.—Games at the Recreation Grounds last Sunday: Reno vs. Star; score, 7 to 4. Gatling vs. Cadets; score, 17 to 10. National vs. Company B; score, 6 to 24. Eureka vs. Eagle, Jr.; score, 27 to 21.—— At Oakland: California vs. Oakland; score, 8 to 2.——Games to-morrow at the Recreation Grounds: Reno vs. Eagles.——At Oakland Cricket Grounds: Knickerhocker vs. Athletic, for a purse of $500.

Picnics.—French Ladies' Relief Society at Shell Mound Park, Berkeley, Sunday. Special performance by the Ajmee Troupe.——Columbia Lodge, No. 127, at Sebuetzen Park, Alameda, Sunday.——Excursion to Cremorne Gardens, Martinez, Sunday. Steamer Whipple leaves Washington-street wharf at 10 A. M.

Yachting.—The race between the Con. O'Connor and the Consuelo, for $1,000 a side, was won hy the former, which made the distance over the regular course—twenty-eight miles—in tbree bours and twenty minutes. She was sailed by Marston, the Consuelo heing sailed by Captain Turner. It was a fair test, no mistake heing made by either hoat.

Fishing.—There is excellent trout-fishing at Cloverdale and Sulphur Creek.——A gentleman recently from San Andreas Lake reports an average daily catch of sixty.——Around Sacramento catfisb are very plentiful.——Several shad were taken in fyke nets, near Freeport, last week.

PEDESTRIAN INSANITY.

Pedestrian insanity is now epidemic in San Francisco. The paroxysm was at its hight week before last, when thousands of infatuated spectators, high and low, rich and poor, old and young, gentlemen and ladies, assembled to witness the termination of as poor a contest as ever graced the annals of pedestrianism, and to crown witb laurels a set of used-up cripples, whose best claim to public recognition was the patience and endurance with which they carried out their miserable task. Never was seen in public arena a more melancholy spectacle of used-up humanity after so short a tramp. With the sole exception of the winner of the belt, not a single man had been adequately trained and cared for. The commonest precautions against the ordinary contingencies of pedestriau contests appear to bave heen neglected. Men were taken directly from their work and urged by injudicions friends to efforts destructive of their strength. It was enough to draw tears of pity to see tbe noble-hearted McIntyre painfully crawling round the track, vainly struggling to maintain his place beside the well-trained Edwards, who alone retained his vigor to the end. One man was crippled hy obesity; another was ridiculously old. Bad shoes, bad food, bad care, made good men fail and weak men worse. Scarcely a man knew how to carry his body properly, use his muscles to the best advantage, and to economize his respiratory movements while securing perfect aeration of his blood. And to think that it was for this that the theaters have been deserted and the homes forsaken. If we are to have struggles of tbis nature let us at least have the best. We believe in the physical improvement of maukind, and in the wholesome desire of every one to prove his skill and test his powers to the uttermost, but we protest against exhibitions got up by selfish speculators to entice decent men from their peaceful avocations to enter upon contests for which they are totally unprepared against one or two professional candidates able to walk away early with the chief rewards.

"The World," the Flesh, and the Devil.

[By a Truthful Penman.]

Captain Barry, just returned from Australia, has "recognized" the Claimant as Thomas Castro, and the Claimant has "recognized" Captain Barry. This last is a truly prodigious effort of memory. The Claimant has been in prison nearly six years, and left Australia somewhere about nine years ago, so that the "boy" must have been very young when he saw him last; yet, he knows him at once! A black boy, too! We have known men remarkable for their quickness in physiognomy, who have declared the almost impossibility of recognizing black men after even a short period. Yet the Claimant, who forgets so many things, remembers this nigger, who must have passed from childhood to youth since be beheld him in the happy Wagga-Wagga days. Unfortunately for the Claimant, we are not all Guildford Onslows and Quartermaine Easts.——A few weeks ago a young gentleman whose friends live near Chislehurst arrived from the Cape. It was intimated to the Empress that if she cared to see him he would wait upon her. She was delighted, and listened with rapt attention to all he had to tell. When he described the assegai used by all the Kaffir and Zulu tribes she expressed a wish to see one. They were in the hall, and were forthwith produced. The Empress all but fainted at the sight of them, and then burst into a flood of tears. 'Do not think me weak,' she said; 'but until I saw these terrible weapons I never realized the danger my son ran." At that very moment he had been killed by assegai wounds, seventeen in number.——"Honor among thieves" does not always hold good. John Kelly, a footman, robbed his mistress, residing in Cumberland street, S.W., and one Shread, another thief, robbed Kelley of part of his booty. Both gentlemen have been committed for trial, though how it can be robbery to abstract from A what wasn't A's at all, but B's, is a moot point, we should say.—London Express.——Victor Emmanuel, son of King Humbert of Italy, has just been subjected to eight days' arrest, the withdrawal of his honors at table, and the forfeiture of military salutes. The offence committed by the little ten-year old Prince was the utterance of a threat while playing with the Marchesa Montereno's daughter. "As soon as I am king I will have your head chopped off," cried the heir of the House of Savoy, in a passion, and his father deems it wise to administer a salutary lesson betimes.—Ibid.——The frequenters of Hawkesbury Station, England, are mourning the loss of the clever fox-terrier dog, who used to ring the bell on the approach of the train, to the great amusement of the passengers. Poor "Pincher" performed this feat for the last time on Sunday evening; he then imprudently left the signal box, got upon the line, and was cut to pieces.——The Court Circular's correspondent, "Flaneur," says: "I see that American ladies are reviving the fan drill, a kind of amusement upon which Addison dilated in the Spectator when he spoke of private meetings to exercise fans. The American ladies, it would seem, however, practice in public; for I see that at the recent "carnival of authors," celebrated in the Horticultural Hall of Philadelphia, a squad of charming young ladies performed the following evolutions: Entrance march; the audacious flirt; handle your fans; unfurl your fans; flutter your fans; the majestic wave; the scornful wave; the coquettish flutter; the bashful flutter; the angry flutter; the merry flutter; the amorous flutter; the repellent flutter; gossip; salute; present your fans; shoulder your fans; carry your fans; furl your fans; charge your fans; discharge your fans; ground your fans; march; retreat; triumph; surrender; recover your fans; the greeting; farewell; salute; the Parthian retreat. This would be rather amusing at a ball, and the gentlemen might take it easy and look on at the manœuvres.——The Freemason says there are about 14,580 lodges in the world. In the United States and Canada the Freemasons number about 7,00,000, and we feel sure, from clear calculations, that in Europe they may be estimated at about 300,000 more. If we take South America and the East into calculation, we probably arrive at a grand total of something like 1,300,000, and with that "tottle" we must be content, eschewing fabulous legends and mythic millions. Probably the next few years will witness a rapid increase of our Order, and it is not impossible that, in the year of light and grace 2000, the Freemasons in the world may reach 3,000,000.——Vanity Fair, says: We continue our review of the results which would have been attained by those who took our advice, given under this head in 1876, as to twenty different investments." Vancouver Coal, which we next recommended, is an instance showing that even the best of commercial companies are liable to depreciation from circumstances over which they have no control. The output of this company is at present much larger than it has ever been, but so extremely low is the price of coal at San Francisco, that instead of paying, as it used, ten per cent., it just now barely makes its ends meet. But this depression is no doubt only temporary. We had at the beginning of the year 1876 recommended our friends to sell Hudson's Bay shares (26,) which were then at 21½; and on 3d June we remarked, "We recommend holders to sell them "even at the price." The shares have since suffered a further decline. They have for some time past been marked in the Times with the omiuous asterisk, and they can now only announce a beggarly dividend of 8s. a share.——The British Trade Journal, in noticing the Trade Frauds of California depicted in the columns of the News Letter, says: "There is hardly an article of food consumed in the United States which is not adulterated with impunity. Colored clay is made to do duty for coffee beans, cayenne pepper is adulterated with red lead, almost every description of pickle is charged with poison, "probably half the vinegar sold is rank poison," and "several mills in New England, and probably many elsewhere, are now engaged in grinding white stone into powder for purposes of adulteration." The stone powder is sold at 3c. per pound, and mixed with soda, sugar, or flour. Flour is also adulterated with plaster of Paris, hone dust, sand, clay, chalk, and other articles. In short, the catalogue of adulterations given by this Boston authority is so gruesome as to make one thankful that one lives in a land where some slight check is imposed upon wholesale poisoning. Wine, for example, appears to he often pure poison as sold in the States, and the practice of teetotalism is therefore necessary to the preservation of life."

A WHITE ROSE.

There was a day when from my hair, unhindered,
You might have taken
Its lush red sister, or pink apple blossoms,
Freshly wind-shaken.

Ah, that one day that was! I may not, even
For its sweet sake
Give you the pansies that are thought's dear solace,
In lone heart-break.

In all the train of days it hath no double—
Yet we unthinking,
Unknowing, blind, adown the heavens saw its
Sun go sinking.

Into our calm to-day its ghost comes gliding—
Known all too late!
Take from my hand its emblem, and the emblem
Of our strange fate.

Silence! its pale lips say: the snow-white silence
Of you sad stone.
Yet—lingering joy—the sharers, even of silence
Are not alone.

THE CHINESE SITUATION.

It is not assuming too much to say that all the signs of the times tend to prove the incontrovertible fact that the Chinese people located in California are a most important factor in her labor system, and that the eyes of the entire country are centered upon her, mildly wondering at the sanguinary language of the King of the Sand Lot and of the daily press of the State, when dealing with this question. Then our friends of the East turn with inquiring minds to the maps of the State of California and Oregon, and find a vast area of territory all idle, only awaiting labor for its development; they find many old worked-out river-beds, not worthy of the attention of white labor, utilized, and their hidden wealth saved by the work of the patient Chinamen; they see a continuental railroad, with branches extending north into Oregon and south into Utah and Arizona, and elsewhere, traversing vast plains and deserts, pioneering into new countries, with the end in view to build them up, yet knowing that years must elapse before the requisite expenditures in the enterprises can come back, in the shape of interest or dividends—roads that could not have been constructed with any but Chinese cheap labor. Island morasses, looked upon as valueless, have, through this same patient labor, been leveed and reclaimed, and now are among the most valuable properties in the State. The farmers cannot depend upon the vaunted white labor for the harvesting any more than the Southern planter can upon the negro for the gathering of the crops. Without the balance-wheel of the Chinese, California in many of its most natural interests would suffer vitally, and the common sense view of the situation should not be overlooked in the desire to cater to the taste of the "man who votes."

Recent advices from Washington report the safe return to Peking of Hon. George F. Seward, U. S. Minister to China, and it is now promulgated, from the State Department, "that he carried with him special instructions from Secretary Evarts to obtain an interview with Prince Kung and his associates, notifying them that the United States Government desires a modification of the Burlingame Treaty, to the end that restrictions be placed upon Chinese immigration to the United States. His instructions are of an urgent and specific nature, and he is directed to leave no room for doubt as to the earnestness of this Government in thus desiring to place some limitation upon Mongolian immigration to this country." We believe that the very sensible Chinaman will come here, treaty or no treaty, as long as our needs demand his presence and he can get value received for his labor. When white labor can develop the worked out river beds and low grade placer claims of the State, can build railroads and reclaim lands for reasonable wages, without "striking" three or four times whenever they get the "bloated hond-holding employer" in a tight place, then the influx of Chinese will very rapidly decrease.

Aside from the national aspect of the situation, the employment of large numbers of the Chinese in the cotton fields and sugar plantations of the Southern States is one of the possibilities of the future. The negro "continues to exodus," and thus opens wide the door for the only labor known that can work, and live, in that section of the country. The Chinese are naturally tillers of the soil; they grow cotton, sugar, rice and tobacco in their own country, and know how; they are not afraid of the broilng rays of the sun, for they can stand 115 degrees in the shade without a cover on their heads; and as for yellow fever and other climatic epidemics, they "have no fear." What if the Chinese should go South?

Were a steady and persistent effort to he made, they might he induced to take the overland trip, and if wages could be promptly paid, would work, and work faithfully and well, with an average result at the close of the season equal to the best in the old slave times, and their lahor would be low enough to insure to their employer a very handsome return on his investment. Sooner or later, we believe that a new era of prosperity will be brought about in the South through "Chinese cheap lahor," for we know from actual undertakings that white lahor in that region has signally failed.

We hear that Natchez is fast becoming a manufacturing center, and it is hinted that two large cotton mills now building there are to employ Chinese lahor. In New Orleans several of our Chinese companies have branch stores, and elsewhere the Chinaman is taking root. Only yesterday we learned of three who went to Indianapolis, and others to St. Louis. We are firm in the helief that the Chinese are a most valuable element in the labor of the whole country, and well worthy of the most thoughtful consideration. General Grant has visited the land of the yellow man. His impressions will be valuahle to a large mass of the American people, and we feel sure that Sand-lot sentiment will not find any indorsement from him.

Says the London World: "The Daily Telegraph ought to be well posted up in its Old Testament, anyhow. Yet it informs us that the subject of Sir Frederick Leighton's great picture is Jeremiah fed hy an angel!"

CUTTING THE CONTINENT.

Ferdinand De Lesseps is evidently in dead earnest. He means business. The payment of $400,000 to secure the franchise has been made. The great engineer is coming himself to America in November, and he promises that the first sod of the cutting shall be turned on the first of January next. Application for laborers has been made to the Emperor of Brazil. No doubt Chinese can be usefully employed, and we shall not be surprised if the work is almost wholly performed by them. They will stand the climate better than Caucasians. It is eminently fitting that they should be engaged in an enterprise the completion of which will bring their country so much nearer to Europe. There are those who believe that John Chinaman has a great destiny before him—that he is bound to become the workman of the world. If that be so, it is proper that he should have a hand in a work that will afford him a new and nearer route to the industries of the earth. He will be simply clearing his own way to his forthcoming conquest of labor. In a short time De Lesseps will open subscriptions for eighty millions of dollars, and it looks as if he will get them. The money assured, the canal is only a matter of a very few years. The Eastern press is still indulging in absurd opposition to De Lesseps because they do not like the route he has adopted. The United States sent representatives to the Paris Conference; the question was fully considered, and a decision dispassionately arrived at. There can be no doubt that that decision is a wise one. The Nicaragua route, favored by certain New York papers, is objectionable in many respects. It would require from twenty to thirty locks, which are undesirable for a ship canal. Moreover, earthquakes, which are of frequent occurrence, would be likely to injure the locks, and possibly destroy the entire work. The route adopted follows the line of railroad extending from Aspinwall to Panama. The line is a little over forty-five miles in length from sea to sea, which is about half the length of the Suez Canal. In its course there is a granite mountain which rises to the height of 295 feet above the sea level, and is four miles wide. But M. de Lesseps is by no means frightened at this obstacle. He proposes to cut an open trench clear through it. That accomplished, the remainder is comparatively plain sailing. We are persuaded that many a man already advanced in years will live to see this continent cut in twain by means of the Darien Canal. The work is one that dwellers on this coast will wish "God-speed." Its effects upon the world's commerce will be immense. It will marry the Atlantic to the Pacific, and bring the east and the west together.

WANTED, TWO MILLIONS.

The generous souls who consent to manage our mines want two millions this month. They have levied assessments to that amount, and have published the usual notices that if payment is not made within the next thirty days our shares will be sold. Well, now, it must be admitted that two millions are a pretty considerable tribute to pay in one month, especially as times go. We howl ourselves hoarse over the burden of the city's tax levy; we declare that it is too high; we plead that times are not what they were, and demand that the city government in all its branches should be run at prices to suit the times. We kick at paying some four our five millions for a whole year of city government, but submit with the docility of lambs to the payment of two millions in a single month to mine managers. For the one we get education, police protection, light, safety from fires, administration of law, street improvements, and all the other benefits of good government; for the other we get——well, what do we get? It puzzles us to tell just what substantial consideration is ours for those two millions. There are no dividends, and no prospects of any. It is true that we get a few gay and festive mine managers, a la Schultz, who, verily, are dear at the price. We get a system of gambling the most unequal, as against the non-dealer or outsider, that the world ever saw. But it is just that gambling game, and the love we have of it, that makes us submit to the payment of two millions a month. We expect to win, who ever else loses, and so we put in our stakes with a light heart. If we lose, we try again, and keep on trying until there is nothing to try with. That is the history of the business in a nutshell. When people are content to accumulate slowly but surely, when they make up their minds to eschew the gambling spirit and stick to their legitimate callings, then, and not until then, will business be on a sound basis, and not until then will prosperity be general and widespread. Those two millions a month mean a great deal. They mean depression of business, hard times, heart breakings, want, sorrow, and a thousand attendant evils. But then, we are a wonderful people. Where is the other city in the world that has the temerity to throw two millions monthly into so many valueless holes in the ground? There are signs that these people are getting just a little restive at the operation. They are going to investigate Schultz—that's all.

SUPREME JUDGES ON A STRIKE.

The July term of the Supreme Court has just commenced, with a calendar of some 500 cases, but the Judges appear to have gone on a strike. Anyhow, they have resolved to take up no cases, except a few criminal ones that will not permit of delay. Why this determination has been arrived at, the public have not been informed. It is an unfortunate resolve, that shows supreme indifference to the interests of suitors. It is believed, in well informed quarters, that their Honors mean to do little, if anything, more during their term of office. They are reported to be soured in temper, and deem themselves a discredited body, having but little power for further usefulness. That is a distorted and an unhealthy view of things, which ought to be dissipated forthwith. It is a morbid sensibility to slights that are not intended. If their Honors will start in to work with vim, and a determination to clear their calendar of the crowd of business that encumbers it, their digestion will be improved, their tempers mended, and they will better deserve the respect of the people whose servants they still are. We are of those who regret that the present Bench has been legislated out of office. We do not think that it is likely to be improved upon. At present the chances seem to be all the other way. Yet, if the present Judges undertake to leave a whole half-year's accumulation of work to their successors, they will lose many friends, and their enemies will say that the fact is evidence of the wisdom of their removal. When the Constitutional Convention had not decided the future, their Honors worked like beavers, and cleared their calendar for the first time in years. If, now that the future is decided against them, they go on strike, while regularly drawing their salaries, they will pass away to a merited oblivion. As warm friends of the present Judges, we urge them to make no such unworthy record.

INFLUENCE OF HARD TIMES ON THE ELECTION.

It may be taken for granted that in a normal state of affairs, with the working classes fully employed and contentment generally prevailing, the Kearney movement and the adoption of the new Constitution would have been simply impossible. They were, as might have been expected, the natural results of the dissatisfied condition of the laboring element, and unless conservative men desire to see the lesson of the 7th of May repeated in September, they should profit by past experience and take away from the demagogues their most potent weapon—the cry of Hard Times! It is admitted on all sides that, notwithstanding our great crops, trade is extremely depressed, and mechanics and laborers are, as a rule, living from hand to mouth. It is useless to appeal to the principle or patriotism of hungry or penniless men—they invariably gravitate to the side which magnifies their grievances and unsparingly denounces the presumed authors of their woes. Now, what in reality is the present aspect of politics? The Democracy does not exist as a political factor, and may be counted out of the fight. The Republicans, while apparently strong and hopeful of victory, contain many discordant elements, which are apt, at any time, to jump the track, and either abstain from voting or go over to their opponents. The H. B.'s and the Workingmen are practically pulling together, excepting on their State tickets. Now, should they secure between them a sufficient majority in the Legislature, they will possess all power requisite to their ends, and will not be scrupulous in using it. The whole question in a nutshell is, shall they be permitted to gain that position when prevention is possible? The idea is this: let our capitalists, manufacturers, and solid men generally, inaugurate without delay enterprises to give employment at living rates to the now discontented and unemployed workingmen. Assume that better times are coming and appeal to their self-interest to assist in bringing them about. The money spent in labor will return to circulation, stimulating trade and adding to your profits, whereas, now, by shutting up your funds, there is a positive loss. Money is like ice—it does not remain stationary, but must either increase or diminish. The content arising from employment will make the employé much more tractable, and, confidence being restored, we shall resume our normal prosperity. Else, it must be remembered that the 11,000 majority in May will be found difficult to overcome, especially with the considerable increase since then of "the dissatisfied."

WHERE BLOOD AND MONEY GO.

This age is boasted of as an exceedingly utilitarian one. The knight errantry, the false heroics and the improvidence of past times have, it is alleged, departed, never more to return. This is claimed to be a cool, calculating era of common sense. Life is deemed of all things the most valuable. Money comes next. How best to preserve our blood and our coin is a matter of supreme consideration to every man. Yet when we look at the frightful loss of both that has resulted from war during the past twenty-five years, one would imagine that life and gold have no appreciable value. The St. Petersburg Gazette calculates that the Crimean, Italian, Prusso-Austrian, Mexican, Franco-Prussian, Russo-Turkish and American wars, have cost 2,548,000 lives. This does not include deaths from diseases inseparable from war, nor the thousands of mangled and disabled men. The total cost in money is estimated at £2,473,000,000. Even then, says an English paper, the estimate falls under the actual figures, for the services of millions of men engaged in those conflicts were lost to their countries and to the world while they were engaged in cutting each other's throats, and, of course, the dead men produced nothing more for the benefit of their native land, which put them to so bad a use. If that money, so brutally wasted, and the services of those men, so badly employed, had been utilized in great enterprises, hard times might have been wiped from off the face of the earth. Africa might have been surveyed and opened up to population as perfectly as England; lines of railway might permeate it in every direction; the Dover Tunnel would have been bored; the Darien Canal dug, and yet the two and a half thousand millions scarcely touched! While we encourage wars at home or abroad, it is the wildest nonsense to speak of this as an age of common sense.

THE BOTTOM DROPPED OUT.

The bottom has dropped out of the Bulletin's raid upon Mayor Bryant. During the past three weeks there have been editorials almost daily. The city was to be defrauded out of untold millions. Possible and impossible water rights were to be purchased, and taxpayers were to be committed to an enormous expenditure. The process by which the gigantic swindle was to be accomplished did not appear, yet the thing was to be put through. The Bulletin swore that it was, and everybody was, in consequence, expected to yield an implicit belief, notwithstanding the evident improbabilities, and even impossibilities of its assertions. The Mayor had entered into a corrupt bargain to buy sundry water supplies at three times their intrinsic value. The thing was to be hurried through. Under the New Constitution, which the Bulletin opposed, no such robbery was possible. Hence it was necessary to put the job through before the end of the year. It knew just what was going on. It spoke with authority. It seemed to be on the inside. It told how the Democratic Convention was run in the interests of the Spring Valley Water Company, and how the New Constitution party was pulling the same way. It was a huge, infamous and unparalleled job—that it was! Mayor Bryant was the rascally engineer of the damnable conspiracy. More shame to him! These are but faint echoes of what the Bulletin told us evening after evening. Now comes the denouement. The water commission, of which Mayor Bryant is a member, has held a meeting and unanimously declared that it has no intention of buying any water rights whatever. Thus, in an instant of time, the bottom dropped out of the Bulletin's wonderful story. Verily, it still lies by day, and lies by night, and lies from the very lust of lying.

Judge Morrison has delighted the community by stopping the trade in Readers; but the Board of Education answer his decision by a circular, calling for a little discretion on the part of teachers, since the Board will have authority to decide upon text-books in January next. No doubt; but not this same Board, and therein is the point. What "discretion" means the Board do not say, neither does it matter. If the charge of text-books could have been carried with a high hand, it would have been; and perhaps there may be a few teachers who know too much about the juggling business. If these were recommended to be discreetly silent, there was some meaning in the circular.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier!" "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir, with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

Since our picture, "At the Play," appeared last week, this office has been perpetually besieged by parties who indignantly want to know why they weren't among the audience. This sort of thing has got to stop, as our time is valuable. Those who don't appear may consider themselves to be behind a pillar, or making a mash behiud the scenes; or, may be, they have gone out to get a clove; or, perhaps they took a seat among the gods that night, in which case their portraits are about three inches above the upper edge of the picture. Doubtless, too, a good many will find themselves in the vestibule by holding the sheet up against a strong light; while some sat so far back that they went clean through the paper when the picture was printed, or were driven so far into the lithographic etone that they can only be recovered with a cork-screw. Let no one, therefore, fail to take advantage of the last opportunity of buying the picture on the ground that hie phiz doesn't appear in it. By prospecting with a pen-knife, most people can find themselves somewbere, and those who think the bar-room a likely place will discover that resort by sinking a shaft under the left wing of the curtain.

Superintendent Mann was the first to discover the wisdom of Providence, long cunningly hidden from the rest of us, in making parents of both sexes. One shudders to think what might have happened if Providence had been caught napping about the time when parents were invented. But 'tis Mr. Mann who said it, and it's greatly to his credit. And he, or some one else, says likewise, that if Bennett, Jr., had not had a father he could not have done what he is doing; which seems reasonable, but one would like more light. Mr. Mann himself, for instance; is he willing to lay his hand upon his heart and swear (or affirm, as the case may be,) that, if he had had a father, he could have done something? This is an extremely serious business, and no man should trifle with it, even if he is a double-ender. Providence was no less wise in this case than in that of the pareuts, and effectually barred all Mr. Mann's pretensions by creating him out of Director Leggett's eloquence and the air of Sacramento.

Monarchs retired from business are not so entirely without resources as one might at first imagine. Each one of them is still the Lord's anointed and the fountain of honor; and as a matter of fact, they all do a snug little trade in titles and patents of nobility. In every country of Europe are thousands or men—counts, barons, marquises, etc.,—who have bought their title of distressed sovereigns, and only occasionally betray, by a foolish trick of speech, or a movement of the hand once familiar with the persuasive napkin, that their first years were spent in the kitchen. Americans have lately learned this royal road to noble descent, and a small tallow-chandler of an interior town has just burst upon the astonished world as the Marquis de Sebo, a diguity conferred upon him by Don Carlos for cash in hand.

The Vierra lamp-guides are beautiful to look at, but you have to be quick if you want to see them. They lift up in vain their appealing fingers to Heaven. The remorseless small hoy and the malignant tramp drag them down and twist them off in exactly 26 hours after their first appearance. To be sure, they are generally accorded a burial in the cemetery grounds; but even this brings no comfort to the weeping tax-payer. One feels like kicking the men who invent these senseless things, and the Supervisors who buy them. The plain way is always the one no city government will take. Why not paint the name of the street on the corner house, or on the shaft of the iron gas-lamp? These cannot be twisted round by festive young men in the small hours.

Ever since the collapse of that little speculation in chloral hydrate the Bulletin has been looking for a patent medicine, without partnership rights, and seems to have found one at last in a wonderful root, or tincture, or mixture, that cures drunkenness quicker than winking. One or two testimonials have been published which remind us of the retired physician whose sands of life have nearly run out, and it really begins to look as if the evening paper had struck a bonanza. Certain mysterious printed circulars, scattered along Market street on Wedneeday, become iutelligible when referred to this new enterpriss; and one is filled with admiration of the ingenuity which turns an honest penny in the very face of the medical societies and the law.

Statues are now turned out to order, and there is no excuse for our poverty in this respect. The only thing we have is the sublime Lincoln on Fifth street, which everybody takes for Senator Bones, with a carpenter's apron in his hand. Could not something be done with Dr. Coggswell, in a petrified state, ou the top of his tomhstone. He would make a first-class lodging-place for pigeons, if his arms were spread out and a scroll stuck in his mouth, with the words—"Prize Fool of the Century." Even Honolulu is to have a statue. We must kill our Coggswell speedily, or we shall be left behind.

Dr. Glenn, it is said, never reads the newspapers. What of that? Many great men never read the newspapers. Socrates, Plato, Julius Cæsar, Herod, Josephus and Judas Iscariot never read the newspapers, and they never wanted to. They couldn't tell you the price of Consols, or Erie, or Consolidated Virginia; they never heard of the Zulus, or Prince Napoleon, or Sara Bernhardt (Lord! how happy they must have been!); De Lesseps would be worse than a Turk to them, and their opinion of the coming election wouldn't be worth a straw. Dr. Glenn is a great man.

The New York Herald's wits have been frozen solid iu the search for the North Pole, and this accounts for its ridiculous statement that 130,000 San Franciscans signed a petition to the President for the release of a man known as the Truth-Seeker, now in prison. The people of this city would be glad euough to see a Truth Finder, but seekers after truth are common with ue as strawberries all the year; and, moreover, there are not 130,000 persons in this metropolis that know how to sign their names.

The Boston wool market is without activity, and nothing is doing in the foreign article. Per contra, Southern wool has been inquired for in Kansas, and there ie a lively movement from the Gulf States upward—mostly in medium unwashed.

The Reverend Robert Ingersoll has taken up tbe ohituary business, and while he is more diffuse than the great Childs, he can hardly be called more successful. On the whole, wo prefer the sweet, soft verses of the Philadelphian:—

Our little Josie's gone to Heaven,
Was called away at half-past seven.

The Reverend Robert is more prolix, and one cannot with brief time read him. Likewise, his rhetoric is cheap and tawdry, and because of endless yawning over it, one is like to faint away. It would he a noble deed to put him in a boat with Mr. Childs, and send them adrift to compose obituaries for each other.

How they stand it in Europe nobody can guess, but here everybody is crying out for a rest from Sarah Bernhardt. We have had enough of her, and gay and alert as she is there is a unanimous feeling that somebody ought to snuff her out. She furnishes her living room with skulls, and she herself is a skeleton in body and at everybody's feast. Let some one pack her into the coffin, which stands ready in her closet, and we shall take up a contribution to reward him. It's a wonder that Abraham don't take her to himself, though perhaps she harps too much on that little affair with Hagar.

The Darien Canal is done for, gone up, fizzled, flabbergasted, and whatever else is most significant of almighty smash. The Hastings Debating Society has decided that it would be injurious to the commerce of the United States; and now there is no balm in Gilead, no money in London, no laborers in China, no nothing nowhere that can save it. De Lesseps' name is Ichabod, and the Hastings Debating Society sit, metaphorically, on the ruins they have made, and generatione yet unborn are weeping; in point of fact, boo-hooing.

Mr. Tracy Turnerelli (his real name is Tupman), who devised the golden laurel wreath which has heen refused by Lord Beaconsfield, is now trotting around the country offering the unlucky gift to every man he comes across. 'Tis ever thus; the man and the meat are thousands of miles apart. And yet there should be enterprise enough left in California to forward the Emperor Norton by Wells, Fargo & Co. to London, and let Mr. Turnerelli crown him with the wreath of bays.

One of those revenges of nature, which come from time to time to show that the great mother does not sleep, is now brought to the knowledge of our citizens. The bay is covered with schools of smelts, immensely popular and public, and contrived a double debt to pay, by suggesting instantly the smells which possess the streets of San Francisco, and the schools we have heen holding our noses over for eight months. The world is full of wonders.

The bravest man of the century is a "Tulare Settler," who writes to the H. B. organ that he longs to see the "cowardly carcasses of Stanford, Crocker & Co. placed in the front rank of a motley brigade." Pity such beroism should he wasted. Could not the detectives hunt up this Achilles from the back office of the organ? He would be simply priceless to keep chickens out of a flower-garden, or to slay in single combat the furious carpet-moth.

What constitutes a wife? is the latest conundrum. We have received three hundred answers, varying in length from ten lines to ten pages, and shall publish them all in small doses between this and Christmas-time. Meanwhile, we offer an infallible test for rough and ready use. Until further inquiry you may safely assume that the woman a man neglects the most is his wife.

They have a queer population in Vermont. A Dr. Stokes, who has spent a year in jail on a charge of malpractice, has just been tried and acquitted by a "jury of his peers," the paper says—meaning, no doubt, twelve doctors charged with malpractice. In Texas the horse-thieves let a man off if he promises not to do it again; but Vermont rather betters this.

There is great discontent among the Russians in London, and their noses are all out of joint since the arrival of the Siamese Embassy. The Stroganoffs and Troubetskois have no chance at all against such names as Chamua Laraibhaiy and H. E. Phya Bhashakarawongse. Since these names were first published the flag has been at half-mast on the Russian Embassy.

In a decidedly non-committal article in Wednesday'e Bulletin, the public was warned that the fistic set-to at the Mechanics' Pavilion was likely to degenerate (or improve) into a prize fight. It is hard to say whether this was a wiley way of advertising the business or a religious kick from the Deacon. We prefer the former solution.

There is a young woman in Massachusetts dangerous to more than the peace of mind. She has been engaged, in succession, to three highly accomplished young men, and each of them, when the happy "Yes!" faltered from her lips, went away and drowned himself. Here is a chance for the champion swimmer of America.

Ex-Gov. Rice says that the most imposing buildings in Colorado are school-houses; and they do seem to have imposed upon him. We have much the same opinion of our own school buildings; hut no imposition in that line is regarded as complete in San Francisco, if the Boards are left out.

Mr. W. H. Mallock has a great deal to answer for. It is only two weeks since his new book, "Is Life Worth Living?" reached this city, and on Thursday a Chinaman said he didn't think it was, and cnt his throat.

The Stock Report, when it looks at the history of England'e recent wars, feels tempted to ask the British Lion: "Why don't you hit a fellow of your size?" How can he, when the Report refuses to give him a chance?

It must be some time since Mr. Gorham has looked into Dean Swift's works; and yet his late chivalrous performance seems to be an effort of uncouscious cerebration, working on the woful ballad of "Duke npon Duke."

Mr. Willard, a prominent citizen of an Oregon town, was kicked hy a horse last week and had several ribs hroken. Served him right; he shouldn't he eo prominent.

A Connecticut paper declares that the hardest-working man in that State is an iron molder. Likely enough, for no Connecticnt man ever was suspected of stealing.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoips and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

The honeymoon is always spoken of as the golden time of life, to which one looks forward with hope and on which a man turns back a regretful glance as the years carry him away. Yet the man who takes his meals at Swain's, 213 Sutter street, has a perpetual honeymoon of comfort and serene pleasure, unmarred by a single cloud. Hope is perpetually before him with each day that dawns, and retrospect has none but joyful pictures of the perfect dinners and lunches he has made. All months of the year are honeymoons at Swain's.

Men are ready to do anything to keep off the ravages of age, and secure to themselves something of the vigor of youth, while they descend the hill so quickly. They go to this Doctor and that, they take one tonic after another, and yet the very essence of youthful vigor and elasticity is within their reach in F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation Whisky. Properly taken, as a gentleman should take everything, it will keep up strength and vivacity to the last moment.

That was a peculiarly "set" conductor who refused to permit a gentleman to get his children aboard the horse-car; the conductor's objection being that he was putting on heirs.

Dr. Carver has been making the Britishers open their eyes; and it is reported that the fragments of glass from the shattered halls are made into jewels and worn by the aristocracy, amid the envious murmurs of applause from less fortunate persons. Smasher would have been a better name for him than Carver; and, like him, Montanya's Union Range smashes all others, and carves the life out of them. The best cooking apparatus ever known or seen or dreamed of.

A clear complexion and a healthy skin can never be obtained while the pores of the skin are obstructed or the blood is in an impure condition. Dr. Jayne's Alterative will, however, restore the purity of the skin, and will thoroughly clense the blood. It will also remove the obstinate state of the pores, and free the perspiration from all impurities and gross particles. A trial will establish its efficacy. Sold by Crane & Brigham, San Francisco.

Everyone is enchanted with the grand publication "At the Play." The crowds gathered at every window where it is exposed are as full of interest as they can be, recognizing with delight every face of the beautiful, the great and the famous among our people. Only one improvement has been suggested: that the hats, all from White's, 604 Commercial street, should be shown, to let us see a fitting finish to so many stately heads.

The Zulu evening toilet consists of a fan and a ring in the nose.—Exchange. What extravagance! They should be satisfied with the fan in the nose, and give the ring to the poor.

The political pot boils, and the noise of its boiling is heard all over the land, and people run to the front door to know what is the matter, the air is so full of a humming sound. No one knows the meaning of all the stir, and the strength of the men at the business unless he has seen their likenesses at Bradley & Rulofson's, the place for perfect pictures and the headquarters of photographic art.

McNally & Hawkins are the oldest, best known, most popular of all the gas fitters and plumbers in the city. Established for more than a generation, they have given their skill and taste to the fitting up of the finest residences, and their stock of bronze, nickel and gold-plated, antique, steel finished and burnished copper gas-jets, candelabra and fittings of all kinds for gas and water is new and splendid.

Lost at sea—The sight of land.

The reason why Joseph Cook was so speedily cooked in this community is that our people are clear-headed, cool, intelligent and wide-awake, as all men are who use Napa Soda. No cobwebs, no metaphysical conundrums, no halderdash can impose upon minds kept sound and clear by this fine beverage.

While claret is the true wine for dinner tables, the steady-goer, the blood-nourisher, there is no such beverage for the breakfast as a genuine white wine. The popularity of the Rhine wines comes from this; and the Rhine wine of the Pacific Coast is the Gerke, from Landsberger's. Even on the storied river the fame of this exquisite California vintage is well known and ratified by general consent.

The saddest reflection at the end of a day is that we have lost it—have done nothing good, learned nothing; and all must rejoice when they see an opportunity like that offered by Charles R. Peters, at the head of the Nevada Building Association, Virginia City. It has but 100,000 shares.

THE PANAMA CANAL.

NEW YORK, July 14, 1879.

The struggle for commercial advancement, for acquisition, for social admiration and favor and the responding compensation, have too often recalled the sad retrospect that Praed invites in simple and touching words:

"Many the thoughts that go unheard
That deep in the bosom burn."

Do you remember a letter I wrote you some ten years since—partly private, otherwise referring to the Pacific Mail and its prospective policy? You made an extract and printed it—some forty lines—under the heading of "An occasional correspondent from New York." The extract referred to the importance of Pacific Mail adopting a policy that would lead to a development of the Australian trade, by at once anticipating the future and securing against any other line the large benefit to flow from the growth of that connection. As the State increased in population, hence importance, the business controlled by the P. & O. Company could be diverted into the Pacific States.

The arbitrary course of the P. & O. Company would find its compensation in the loss of business as soon as the merchant could be satisfied with the stability of the new trans-Pacific line, and the traveling public assured that the comfort and security alike equal to the Cape of Good Hope! could be enjoyed.

That prediction of mine has been verified, and when read to some of the officers at the time from your paper, they laughed at it as the dream of a benevolent fanatic! who wanted to use other people's money to confirm his convictions.

The representatives of the entire trade circles—ship brokers, owners of vessels and merchants—as I appeared "on 'Change" the day of the notice of the appointment by the Journal of Commerce saluted me as President Lesseps, took off their hats and laughed at the joke created by the "wittiest man upon the floor!"

It is unnecessary to recite here the revolution in trade, etc., that canal has produced.

I see by the papers that there is a disposition to hound Lesseps because he has the nerve to undertake what no one in this country will do, either by effort or subscription.

Dexter A. Hawkins, a popular and able lawyer of this city, has been an earnest advocate, in fact is the originator, of the move for the adoption of educational laws by all the States, and by such means to increase the knowledge and power of a people who profess to govern their country by intelligence.

Hawkins, with all of his foresight on this subject, which foresight indicates a preparation upon the part of the masses to prevent after his death, (and "long may he live"), the union of Church and State, or the supremacy of any particular faith.

Hawkins evidently has not mixed much with our "prominent merchants," or he would give them a lecture that might not savor of sympathy with the Monroe doctrine, but would teach these "trade princes" that the work to be undertaken by Lesseps will bring more satisfactory results to the future prosperity of our country than any development since we seceded from Great Britain.

I hope to see your natural astuteness in an editorial that will shew its harvest, like to the mustard seed, in advocating aid and support in an undertaking toward which foreign capital will flow; and while the investor will obtain his satisfactory foreign interest, America will, our States and our people, enjoy the fruit which the distance of foreign countries cannot pluck.

There is a good deal of "cuteness" in our country, but we are too young yet to understand the wisdom of age, or to reverence the knowledge that our inexperience and youthfulness as a nation naturally forbids our possessing.

A Chicago man, whose lot and store is mortgaged for more than its value to an Eastern money-lender, will tell you that any expansion of this country or excessive growth of other cities can undermine the value of his property or diminish its future.

With equal confidence and a surer future, you, as an old Californian, can tell your people, and those here who decry the merit of De Lesseps, that the glory of their commercial strength will only begin to shew its character when De Lesseps completes the Darien Canal.

The whole subject, i. e. the direct and indirect benefit to your State and whole people, and the future acquisition of Mexico, which will follow the construction of the Darien Canal, is too exhaustive to take up in such an informal manner.

I cannot believe, with your admiration for Friedlander, the Grain King—yes, Brain King of the cereal production and wealth of your coast—I say, I cannot but believe you will take up this subject and let California appear as the first State to advocate the construction of the canal.

I may be quite young "to pit" my convictions against the wealth of our merchants, or the "finessing" or brains that have forced its accumulation, or even the underlying mental forces that daily ridicule such an enterprise, by refusing to keep it or calling upon political wire-pullers to insist upon a respect being paid to the Monroe doctrine. But I hope you will live to see the blunder hear its bad fruit, if any other policy except that of co-operation or approval have its sway.

I remember, as a boy, often riding or walking to the top of the hill behind the Presidio of San Francisco to see the sun set "in" and beyond the Pacific Ocean. I can remember the alternate bright and dull sky overhead all day, culminating in those scattered, fleecy clouds directly opposite to the Golden Gate, and as the sun went from sight of the eyes, the rays of the sun's reflection rested upon and gilded them. I fancied the picture then because I was young. I saw nothing in the phenomena to impress the mind. But I am satisfied now, to paraphrase Milton:

"From whence a voice,
From midst a golden cloud, thus mild was heard:
'Servant of God, well done!'"

Will be said as you look out upon the same scene of earlier years later on, and know that the Darien Canal is finished by Lesseps.

Superintendent Mann says the standard of scholarship has been raised in the schools by the frequent examinations held. We should like the remark better if it were not near election-time; and, furthermore, not one of the scholars examined has shown any acquaintance with the great truth, discovered by Mr. Mann last winter, that parents are providentially of different sexes. Does he call this progress?

NEVER MORE.

O sweetness that can never more return!
Thou art passed out of life—and whither flown?
The bard-pruned bough may heal, and sprout anew,
And some light hearts may all too quickly learn
To spare the brave and live without the true.

But as some painter that yet seeks in vain
The long-wooed color of his hungry eye,
And dreams it woven on some foreign loom,
To wake and find it missing 'neath his sky,
So have we lost a glory to the tomb.

Spring shall come round, and all her sounds be dear,
And sweet her lips with all-ambrosial dew,
The wooing sun shall set earth's heart astir,
And she rejoice, and we have rapture too,
But one hushed chord shall no more answer her.

Out of life's sunny woof one thread is drawn,
Death's face hath bleached for us her fairest dye;
One flower that bloomed is fallen—later flower
Will never shine as sweet against our sky,
Fill this blank place, that fragrant scent restore.

Ah, painter! take thy brush, for life is short,
And use the colors left thee—they are fair—
But carry still the hunger at thine heart
For that which is not there.
Henceforth upon thy pallette and my life
One unfilled place lies bare. —The Spectator.

THE PLAYGOER'S PIPE.

BY G. EDWARDS.

Ho! Keeper of the hoxes' keys, just list to me to-night;
Come, pop me in where I may smoke, and quickly hring a light;
And mind tbat you conceal me well from managerial view;
Here's guerdon for thy trouhle, slave—I'll pay for what you do.

Thus spoke I to a harpy on the outlook for his fees;
Theatrical attendants, if you pay them, strive to please;
The rules and regulations they'll permit you to defy,
And knowing this, I thought to have a whiff upon the sly.

He took the hribe, he popped me in, hut 'ere I struck a spark
He asked a special favor—"Would I please to keep it dark?"
Their rules, he said, were very strict—infringement migbt upset
His manager, who never smoked, and put him in a pet.

Thus cautioning, he went away. The play at once hegan,
But as it started, in there came to me a shrivel'd man;
His face was lean and wither'd, and his dress was black and tight.
What was it made me shudder so? what filled me with affright?

"It's very cold," I muttered, as my hlood quite chilly ran.
"D'ye think so?" was the answer hland of that same shrivel'd man;
"I don't feel cold"—and as he spoke a glow lit up his face—
"Come, if your not unwilling, sir, I'll gladly take your place."

We shifted seats, and then again I keenly scanned him o'er;
I saw that he was not so aged and wrinkled as hefore.
His cheeks were round and ruddy, and his hair had changed its hue,
And as I looked I felt quite sure 'twas some one that I knew.

Instinctively I pressed two hands on what I thought my hrow,
And then I saw—oh! horrid sight, methinks I see it now—
That they were withered, shrunk, and lean—forget it ne'er I can—
That he was me, that I was he—I was the shrivel'd man!

To shout I tried, but found my voice was harsh, and cracked, and thin;
"You thief, give me my body!"—all he gave me was a grin.
"Call louder if you like," he said; "I neither care nor fear,
For 'mid this din that voice so thin no mortal well can hear."

"Nice hody this of yours," he said; "it fits me to a T;
The arms a trifle short, it's true, but that don't trouhle me;
A front tooth loose—perhaps you find that spoils a pleasant chat—
Now, when you get your body hack, pray don't say I did that."

"Talking of arms, just let me ask you'll not throw mine ahout
So wildly, they are fragile, and perchance you'll wear them out.
Talking of teeth, just let me heg that mine you will not grind;
We have no dentists down below—in surgery we're behind.

"And now, perhaps, you'd like to know what 'twas that hrought me here;
Well, give me close attention and you very soon shall hear:
A smoker all my life, I loved tohacco or cigar—
Virginia, Birds-Eye, Golden-Leaf, beat all the joys there are.

"'Ere I was ten I used to smoke—at school I learnt the trick—
Sometimes it castigation hrought, sometimes it made me sick;
Yet toffee, apples, sugar-plums, nor jam bad charms for me
Like those of surreptitious pipe—I weary you, I see.

"No? Shall I, then, recount its joys? Would you through life have pax?
Would you avoid half human ills? Forget your income tax?
Of toothache he ohlivious? or grim poverty despise?
Find quick relief for any grief? Try 'hacca—you'll he wise.

"Ten pipes a day on earth I smoked; now, by a hated law,
For twice five years I have not had a single hlessed draw!
Down there to smoke is not allowed, unless the smoker first
Puts on a hody—curse the rule, I'd hreak it if I durst!

"Quite recently we have resolved that smoking ghosts, who get Permission from their owners, may—now, pray don't fume or fret—
Put on their bodies for a time—of course, they're only lent"—
"You fiend!" I cried, "you know right well you ne'er had my consent."

"It's vulgar to call names, my friend," the smoker quick replied;
"If I, like you, were angry, I should tell you that you lied!
You must remember, surely—I'll not overstate the case—
You gave consent most willingly for me to take your place."

And as the fiend thus rambled on, my anger higher rose;
I clenched his fist, I felt inclined to strike him on the nose.
Proverhial wisdom stayed my hand—discretion, we deline
The better part of valor, and I knew that nose was mine!

Just then, in tones familiar, came the words, "Good-bye; best thanks;
For you I would do, if I could, as much. Excuse my pranks!"
I was alone. The ghost had gone through roof, or floor, or crack;
I cared not how; 'twas joy to know I'd got my body hack.

Next morn a summons I received; was hrought hefore the heak,
Who heard my story, smiled, and said that my defence was weak;
And then remarked that if I would with ghostly folk hob-nob,
I might expect to come to grief—he fined me forty bob.

M. DE LESSEPS' CANAL.

Vanity Fair, the well-kuown society paper of London, states the following facts regarding the Panama Canal: It says that M. de Lesseps will within a short time issue proposals for a first subscription of £16,000,000, aud that the work, it is reckoned, will cost altogether £32,000,000 sterling. The money, it thinks, will he forthcoming, because the Suez Canal shares, which were issued at £20, are now worth £30. The canal will follow the line of the railroad, the distance heing a little over 45 miles from sea to sea, tbat is, about half the length of the Suez Canal. The highest elevation is 295 feet, and M. de Lesseps intends cutting an open trencb through this part about 300 feet deep and about four miles long. Vanity Fair says, among other advantages enumerated, that the canal will give a shorter route to China and Japan, and place within easier reach the great corn-growing districts of those Western States of North America which now find so much difficulty in transporting tbeir grain.

M. de Lesseps has, we are informed hy telegraph, incorporated a company, with a capital of 400,000,000 francs, or £16,000,000, though in all prohability this is an under-estimate of the total cost, regarding which exact calculations have not as yet heen made. We would remark, however, that the Panama Canal will not sborten the route to China, nor, we helieve, to Japan, as the Suez Canal route has the advantage of shortness, and convenience in having so many ports of call botb in Europe and Asia. As to hringing grain from the Western States of North America, which must mean the Pacific States, as California and Oregon are the only wheat-growing States that it can possibly affect, we do not place much importance on the canal. Expensive modes of transit may suit with tea, silk or indigo, articles of great value; but wheat, worth from one cent to two cents per pound, must go hy the very cheapest mode of trausportation, and that, we helieve, will continue to be by the clipper ship going round Cape Horn. Tbe line of the route through the Suez Canal touches on countries with about two-thirds of the population of the world; the line of the Panama Canal passes by a few paltry islands in the West Indies, and then to the west coast of South America or the Pacific States, or over the comparatively uninhabited Pacific Ocean to Australia. It has no field of husiness at all to bo compared with the Suez Canal.

BUSINESS FAILURES.

City of San Francisco:

First Six Months.	No. of Failures.	Liabilities.	Assets.
1879	122	$3,918,964	$2,438,271
1878	116	1,827,627	$1,150,968
Increase in 1879	6	$2,091,337	$1,287,303

The State of California, outside of San Francisco:

First Six Months.	No. of Failures.	Liabilities.	Assets.
1879	156	$1,801,314	$912,029
1878	139	1,343,607	863,942
Increase in 1879	17	$457,707	$48,087

State of Californuia, including San Francisco:

First Six Months.	No. of Failures.	Liabilities.	Assets.
1879	278	$5,720,278	$3,350,300
1878	255	3,171,233	2,014,911
Increase in 1879	23	$2,549,045	$1,335,389

It is evident from these figures that the improvement in business that has set in at the East has not yet extended to California.

THE COSTA RICA RAILROAD.

The Government of Costa Rica is engaged in constructing a line of railway from Port Limon, on the Gulf side, to Punta Arenas, on the Pacific, passing through San José, the capital city of the Republic. The line will bo completed in ubout eighteen months, and will form a strong opposition to the Panama Railroad. The finances of Costa Rica are in a healthy condition, its annual revenues being upwards of $3,000,000, while the expenditures are $1,800,000, and its credit abroad is considerably higher than that of most of the republics to the south of us. The most difficult portion of the road is already built, and in running order. Tbere is a very profitable field in Costa Rica for the extension of California's commerce, and whoever takes time by the forelock will reap ahundant profit. Already our imports of coffee from that country are of the first importance; but there is every reason why our capitalists should invest some of their surplus cash in the coffee plantations, and realize the benefits of production as well as of importation. The Sandwich Islands investments afford a good example of the wisdom of this theory.

In Stanstead, Canada, a man sold ten-cent packages, "warranted sure death to potato-bugs; no risk of poisoning animals, as with Paris green." The packages were not to he opened until time to use them. Oue victim having three, opened one, and found two square blocks of wood, on one of which was written: "Place the bug on this block and press firmly with the other."

A LOVER'S QUESTION.

A litle mole is growing, John,
Just underneath my chin ;
It gives me so much grief, dear John,
I'm growing pale and thin.
Another one is coming, John,
Just here heneath my ear,
And I will he disfigured, John,
For life, I sadly fear.
And so I want to ask you, John,
Will e'er your love grow cold ?
Oh, answer me at one, dear John,
Will you love me when I'm moled?

BOOK NOTICES.

The Christ of the Apostles' Creed. The Voice of the Church against Arianism, Strauss and Renan, with an Appendix. By Rev. W. A. Scott, D.D., L.L.D. New York: A. D. F. Randolph & Co.

In this volume the reverend author states, with great ability and fairness, the argument of the Orthodox Church for the received theories of the personality and the mission of Jesus. The Apostles' Creed, as Dr. Scott well puts it, is common to all believers in Christ; and the discourses here brought together illustrate with vividness and eloquence this immortal document. The scriptural learning displayed is wide and genuine, and the years have not diminished the venerable writer's force or dimmed his natural enthusiasm in the cause of his Savior. The appendix treats the aspect of modern thought on this vital subject with remarkable temperance and courtesy, and recognizes, with a robust intelligence, the service done to the deeper studies of criticism by the scholarship of Strauss and Renan. It is no doubt hy an oversight that Dr. Scott allows himself to say, on page 412, that the age of Augustus was the age of Josephus, Tacitus, Cicero, and Seneca: a collocation of names which cannot, by any permissihle license, he brought within the Augustan age.

The Fortnightly's most noticeahle articles for July are the "Simple Way out of the Indian Difficulty," "Modern Parliaments," "The Colored Man in Australia," "Agricultural Prospects," and the leader on "Cardinal Newman." Mr. Lowe's cure for the financial troubles of India is a paper currency, redeemable in gold; and he argucs his case with great ingenuity. Prof. Pearson shows that the initiative in political thought has passed from within the parliaments of to-day to the public outside ; the chief function left to the legislature heing the discussion of details which have heen thought out and ratified elsewhere. The Colored Man in Australia is not the man and the hrother, hut our friend John Chinaman, and Mr. Wisker describes the measures adopted to exclude him from the Colonies, with a general approval of the feeling against him as, on the whole, an undesirahle immigrant. One argument in answer to the claim of the Chinese for a place in Australia we do not remember to have seen hefore. "If," says Mr. Wisker, "China is crowded with people and must seek relief, why do not the Chinese found colonies of their own, instead of settling where they rouse a fierce hostility?" The Earl of Airlie considers that the drift of the Agricultural changes and difficulties in England is towards measures to facilitate and cheapen the transfer of land; measures which he thinks would he advantageous to all classes. The hook reviewlis chiefly concerned with Theophrastus Such and Mr. Robert Browning's "Dramatic Idylls." The question of popularity has been already decided against both of these, the general public consenting to take George Eliot's psychology only when mixed in with a story; and Theophrastus Such, like the knife-grinder, has no story to tell : while, at the same time, Browning's scorn for grace and heauty and perverse diving after unfishahle pearls weary most readers.

PRACTICAL BOAT-SAILING: A Concise and Simple Treatise on the Management of Small Boats and Yachts under all Conditions, with Explanatory Chapters, etc., supplemented by a Short Vocahulary of Nautical Terms. By Douglas Frazar, etc. Boston: Lee & Shepard. 1879. A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco.

This little volume is excellent. The language is direct and easily intelligihle, and there is no waste of words. All the essentials of hoat management are so treated that the heginner may have a certain confidence in approaching the practical application of the principles here laid down. More than this no hook could give, for there is no making a seaman without wind and water. Yet something may he learned on land—for instance, the making of knots, as explained by Mr. Frazar and illustrated by diagrams ; the steering and sailing rules ; the handling of hallast, and other details. Practice is needed in all cases ; hut a yachtsman who begins his salt-water life with a comprehension of this treatise begins with great advantages, and our San Francisco amateurs are constantly recruiting and adding to their number. With our glorious hay and the long stretch of coast outside, we have a houndless field for the cultivation of this most manly and healthful recreation.

The Coast Review, for July, is full of suggestive facts. The legal status of the co-operative companies, and their extraordinary mortality as compared with that of regular life insurance companies, form the subject of three articles. The fire record for the first four months of 1879, for the United States, is a singularly gloomy one, as shown hy this comparison :

	Fire Loss.	Ins. Loss.
1876	$23,227,900	$13,239,900
1877	21,608,600	12,700,700
1878	21,828,500	12,776,800
1879	32,381,600	19,662,300

The marine disasters for the six months ending June 30, 1879, are recorded as not num rous but important.

Captain Codman's New Book.—One of the finest books of the season is a volume of travels entitled "The Round Trip," by Captain John Codman, the celehrated litterateur of Boston. The author of this charming and instructive work describes the country he saw and the people he met in his journey of 10,000 miles through Idaho, Utah, Nevada, California and Oregon. There is a vast amount of information hid away in this modest volnme, which will amply repay any man for reading it through. For sale hy Billings, Harhourne & Co., No. 3 Montgomery street.

Western Addition Music Hall.—The third series of entertainments to he given at this hall will commence Friday evening, August 1st, with Led Astray. MISCELLANEOUS.

M. Hyacinthe Loyson has been advocating the practice of confession so strongly in his conferences at the hall in the Boulevard des Capucines that many of his friends believe he is retrograding towards the Church of Rome.

The Clothworkers' Company have voted £105 to the guarantee fund of the committee for establishing the new Somerville Hall, for the higher education of women, at Oxford.

Canon Beadon, of North Stoneham, Southampton, who was believed to be in his 103d year, died on June 14th.

On June 16th the Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress entertained at luncheon at the Mansion House the members of the Comédie Française, now playing in London, and several gentlemen and ladies connected with the English dramatic profession.

About 2,000 miners are out on a strike in the Tamworth District in consequence of a notice from the colliery owners that it would be necessary to enforce a reduction of wages. The strike was followed by a wanton destruction of property by organized gangs of the miners at several of the pits.

The remnants of Temple Bar, which have stood opposite a portion of the new law courts during the past eighteen months, have at last been removed, and not a stone of the structure is now left as marking the boundary between the cities of London and Westminster.

The first shot from one of the 100-ton guns was fired at Woolwich on June 16th. The experiment, which was one of much interest, was conducted under the supervision of General Youngbusband, R. A., the head of the gun factories, and President of several scientific committees. One shot is said to be sufficient to sink the strongest ironclad.

There is every probability that the Gothard tunnel will be completed by the end of November. The point now reached on the Airolo side is 1,281 meters, that on the Goeschenen side 649 meters from the center of the mountain; and it is expected that the junction of the two galleries will be made some 300 meters from the center, on its southern side.

The cost to the London Corporation of freeing Epping Forest for the use of the people for ever has amounted to close upon £40,000, nearly half of which has been absorbed in legal expenses.

The honorary freedom of the city of London has been presented to Sir Rowland Hill.

Twice during the past week there was neither charge nor summons for hearing at the Mansion House, and kid gloves were presented to the presiding Alderman on each occasion.

A man 110 years of age is reported to have arrived at Portadown, having just come across from America to revisit the country from which he emigrated in the eighteenth century.

The Emperor of Austria has just been presented with a suit of clothes. The wool from which the garments were made was upon the sheep's backs eleven hours before the suit was completed. The same thing was done at Newbury, in Berks, last century.

In consequence of the reduction of the number of lashes to be inflicted in the army, it has been decided to observe the same limit in the Royal Navy.—European Mail, July 5th.

The wealth of Arizona is beginning to come to light. In a communication dated July 17th, from Mr. Robert Collins, Superintendent of the Cumberland Mine, it is stated that an interest in the Leviathan, which is seven miles from the Cumberland, and said to be on the same ledge, has been disposed of for $500,000. On the 23d (last Wednesday) we were informed by Mr. Irelan, the assayer, that Gen. Fremont has succeeded in effecting a combination of capital, to the amount of several millions, for the purchase of property in and around the Cumberland and Dats Creek districts. He said, further, that a portion of the Leviathan had been sold for half a million. This corroborates the statement made by Mr. Collins, though, to those who know him, there can be no need of additional testimony. A gentleman, inquiring about the Cumberland, said, when he heard the name of the Superintendent, that he needed nothing more to assure him, so high was the reputation of Mr. Collins in Australia for ability and probity. The ore received from the Cumberland continues to show richer and richer; and the Superintendent's report, which has excited such eager curiosity regarding the mine, will soon be supplemented by publication of the assays from the office, 417 California street.

The "Wilderness."—Native Indian butlers, especially those attached to regimental messes, are great in the nomenclature of their menus. We remember once to have been somewhat puzzled by the occurrence of the word "wilderness" toward the end of our dinner bill of fare. Master butler was summoned, and it appeared that his dictionary gave "wilderness" as a synonymous term for desert (the extra s was of no great moment), and the former word having a more noble appearance, he had boldly employed it. In the jungles we had as a rule no "wilderness," but we were once reduced to making our entire dinner off a plate of rice and the remains of a tin of black currant jam, and on another occasion off a cocoanut and some brown sugar.—Fraser's Magazine.

There is no change in the money market. Rates, according to the Commercial Herald, are nominally 9@10 per cent., and there are but few transactions. In miscellaneous stocks there is nothing doing, and the mining share market remains depressed, with free assessments. The Herald sees the good time almost at hand for this coast, crops of all kinds being abundant and good, and all conditions favorable to a solid prosperity. The failure of the wheat crop in the East, and in various European countries, including Russia, our great rival in the markets, will secure good prices for our surplus grain this year.

No feature is more attractive than a good set of teeth, and the one condition which secures this is regular cleaning with a pure dentifrice, like that prepared by Dr. J. A. W. Lundborg, Geary and Stockton streets. This preparation is soft as velvet, pleasant in flavor, and leaves the mouth perfectly clean and sweet; and Dr. Lundborg should feel it a duty to bring this tooth powder within reach of the public, by putting it in every drug store.

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Post street, between Mason and Taylor. The Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor, will preach on Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7½ P.M. The public cordially invited. Sunday School and Bible Classes, 9½ A.M. Prayer and Praise Service at 6½ P.M.

THE AVERILL MIXED PAINT

Is manufactured from strictly pure White Lead, Zinc, and Pure Linseed Oil, to which is added Water Glass, which chemically unites the ingredients and holds them in solution, so they cannot separate. As a house paint it has no equal, producing a brilliant glossy finish, impervious to the weather, and

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, the beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, which for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of the tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in the Pescadero river.

FRANCE AND THE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

France has the reputation of being gallant and chivalrous, but the way in which her Government has acted in the matter of Prince Napoleon's death seems to show that whatever she may have been under kings and emperors, she has lost those qualities under the coarser regime of the republic. It is acknowledged on all sides that the death of the Prince practically put an end to the hopes of the Bonapartists, and left the Government nothing to fear from that direction. But even had the effect been the contrary, it was no time to show an ungenerous and mean hostility. He who had once been the petted darling of the fickle people, the descendant of men who had made France glorious, even if they had made her unhappy—lay cold in death and harmless forever. She who had lately been Empress of the French, and had more than once been regent of France, was now not only a widow, but childless, hopeless and heart-broken. At this juncture, when surely even the hottest hatred might have turned to forgiveness and pity, the French Government refused to let its President send a simple message of condolence to the bereaved mother; studiously avoided any demonstration of respect or mourning; peremptorily forbade all who were connected with it to attend the funeral, and now, the telegraph informs us, has severely punished several officers who attended the Requiem Mass at the church of St. Augustin.

Even the German Court, whose arch-enemy the father was, went into mourning for the son, and it remained for England, the old foe of the boy's grand-uncle, to perform the last sad rites for the nephew. The French Government and newspapers have seen fit to growl at England for honoring the dead Prince and comforting the anguished mother, but every growl they utter sinks them lower in the estimation of the world. Old England has ever been a safe refuge for the exile, whether friend or foe, and the polite Frenchman has much to learn from blunt John Bull in such trifling matters as magnanimity and true nobility of heart. While President Grevy scowled at the bereaved Eugenie, Queen Victoria was condoling with her in private—the widow comforting the widow, the mother lately robbed by death of a daughter, consoling her who had just lost a son. While the French nobles, who would fain be loyal, were indecently withheld from the funeral by threats of disgrace and banishment, the English Princes of the Blood Royal were bearing the coffin to its grave.

SCIENTIFIC SUICIDE.

A dreadful case of suicide was discovered this morning (says the Brisbane Telegraph of the 28th May), at Graves' Café Royal Hotel. A man named R. S. Stevens, who had recently arrived from Sydney to endeavor to find employment under the Education Department, was found in his room with his throat cut, perfectly dead. The unfortunate man had formerly been employed as a school teacher at Nanango, and had been in low spirits ever since his arrival. He had been heard to express a wish that he could return to his family. This morning, when a servant went to call him, no response was given to the summons, and on looking into the room through the skylight, he was seen lying on the bed deluged with blood. The police were communicated with, and the door was forced open, when it became evident he had been dead some hours. Some bottles of chlorodyne were found, which had been apparently emptied into a tumbler and consumed, with the exception of about a teaspoonful, while the razor, with which the fatal wound was inflicted, lay close by the bed.

Several papers—such as certificates, records of promotion, etc.,—were found. Dr. Hobbs was called, and pronounced that death was caused by a severe gash under the left ear, which had severed all the arteries. There is little doubt that the unhappy man was insane at the time of the deed. A letter was found, which stated that the writer was not mad, but far from it. As a student of Huxley, Darwin, Tyndall, Clifford and Bain, cum multis aliis, he had come to the conclusion that man was simply the apex of the animal kingdom, and that, therefore, when tired of life, he had a perfect right to leave it when he chose, and that he was aware that his body would pass into various gases, and become part of the cosmic whole. It is also stated that he merely wrote the letter so that there should be no misconception as to how he died.

NATURE'S SOAP FACTORY.

On Smith's Creek, in Elko County, says a Nevada paper, there is a most remarkable stratum of steatite resting horizontally on a steep bluff of volcanic matter, which flanks the eastern side of Smith's Creek Valley. The stratum of steatite is from three to ten feet in diameter. It is easily worked, and is a veritable soap mine. In fact, the farmers, cattle men and sheep herders in that region, all use the natural article for washing purposes. Chemically considered, this peculiar clay is a hydrated silicate of alumnia, magnesia, potash and lime. When the steatite is first dug from the stratum, it looks precisely like immense masses of mottled Castile soap, the mottling element being a small percentage of iron oxide. Prof. Stewart received a sample of this natural soap, prepared by a firm in Elko, who have undertaken to introduce it into the market. It is similar in appearance to the Castile soap sold in large bars. Nothing is added to the mineral but a trifle more alkali and some scenting extracts. Its detersive qualities are as powerful as those of any manufactured soap.—Arizona Sentinel.

Important Discovery in Gardening.—Peter Henderson, the veteran gardener, made a very significant statement during the course of his remarks here before the Convention of Nurserymen and Florists. This statement embodies the remarkable fact that if garden seeds, when planted in the Spring, are firmly pressed when under earth by the ball of the foot at the time the gardeners are putting them in the ground, they will invariably grow, drouth or no drouth; and, what is still more important, they will spring up earliest, and grow faster and mature better than any of their kind which have not been subjected to this discipline. The same rule of pressure, he says, holds true in regard to transplanting trees, shrubs and plants. Henderson said that though he had been extensively and steadily engaged in the business of gardening for more than a quarter of a century, yet he had not made and proved this discovery until a few years ago.—Cleveland Herald.

From South Africa.—Cetawayo is reported to have said that his opponent is correctly described by the names of three islands, to the neighborhood of which he is advised to return—viz.: Scilly, Wight, Man.—Judy.

THE IMPENDING CONFLICT.

It is somewhat singular, but nevertheless true, that the great conflict between labor and capital which has so long been expected in the civilized world should begin in California, one of the outposts of civilization. With the adoption of the new Constitution the contest was fairly inaugurated, and there is now no retrospection on either side. If labor is to rule, its triumph must be upon the ruin of capital; but if the latter is to come out victorious, it means such a subordination of labor as will make it impossible for the conflict to be renewed. It is useless to disguise the fact that the vote of 7th May has had an influence coextensive with the Union, and that influence will continue and gather strength unless it is met in the September election by a negatur as decisive as that which elected to continue the agitation. In the face of these things, why do men hesitate to make up their minds on the side of conservatism. To hesitate is to lose. As you make your beds, so shall you lie upon them.

A good story is told of a London city merchant who lost a gold watch, quietly advertised for it, and paid for its recovery £10 to a man who confessed that he had stolen it. Being anxious to know how it had been done, this condoner of felony asked for the story. The thief, having the ten sovereigns safe in his pocket, stated that he had run up against him in Bow Lane, and so abstracted the watch. With admiring attention the owner of the watch showed the thief out of his house, and returned to congratulate himself and to tell the story to his wife. When he got inside again, however, he found the watch gone a second time, and the £10 with it.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of Calvary Church is to be celebrated to-morrow (Sunday). This Church was founded in 1853, by the calling of Rev. Dr. Scott from New Orleans to the pastorate, and over which he presided with great ability and success until the breaking out of the war, when he resigned and went to Europe with his family. After this he was again called to this coast as pastor and founder of St. John's Presbyterian Church, of which he is still the earnest, faithful and laboring head. Dr. Scott is yet in the sixties, but is uncommonly vigorous for a man of his years.

One would scarcely have imagined that it was possible for one man to realize as much as £70,000 out of paper collars and cuffs, considering the short time they have been in vogue. Yet this is the amount left by the late Mr. Francis Stephen Foley, of Enfield, a well-known paper collar manufacturer, who recently died. His business goes to his eldest son, and as the popularity of "paper linen" is still as great as ever, there is no reason why he should not make another £70,000 out of the concern.

Mr. Donald Mackenzie, the well-known African explorer, sailed from Bristol in the steamship Corsair, Captain William Reed, bound for the new trading station of Cape Juby, which he has lately fixed upon. In accordance with the treaty lately entered into with the chiefs of that part of the continent, he expects to open up a large trade with the interior, with a view to which he has purchased from a Bristol firm the well-known trading brig Amazonia, and dispatched her to the same point to serve as a tender to the expedition.

Four Chinamen have committed suicide in as many weeks past. This is a new departure for John to take, and it looks very much as if he preferred Hell to California under the new Constitution. If this sort of thing should keep on Kearney's occupation will be gone, and he will either have to return to his dray or cut his throat and follow the heathen to Hades, where he might agitate against the Devil's monopoly of souls and protest against the employment of Chinese to make hot fires for Irishmen.

That distinguished star of the fashionable world, Mrs. Langtry, has taken passage in one of the White Star liners, and will shortly leave London for New York. The lady is understood to seek rest in a trip across the Atlantic and a quiet tour through the States. In all probability she will visit California and Vancouver's Island.

Young ladies who use hair dyes should take warning by the death of a girl at Manchester, Eng., who, in order to keep level with the fashion of the day, bought a bottle of hair dye for the purpose of turning her black hair into a golden hue. She used the preparation for some time, but very soon fell ill, and at the inquest the evidence showed that her death was mainly due to blood poisoning, caused by the hair dye.

Only thirty to hear Kearney speak at his last meeting. This calls for action and a heroic treatment. Santa Ana fired up the lagging zeal; Davis, on Hayes street, stirred the embers. One more heating might help the agitator to subside with a show of submission to destiny. Now he is petering out.

One of Mr. Irving's female admirers (says the World) petitioned for the chain which he had worn as "Hamlet" for a hundred nights. She sent him another in exchange, which is also to pass to a devotee, after a hundred more nights. Beautiful feminine romance! Another lady leaves a hoquet morning by morning at his door.

There is great danger of the collapse of the W. P. C. If that body goes in, who will go out? Only D. K. Suppose both events came to pass—could we survive it? We should then have upon our hands the broken and dishonored fragments of a once-glorious, etc. And what could we do with the Sand-Lot?

A lisping boy was out in the back yard pounding on a tin-pan. The father came home tired and sullen, and being disturbed by the noise, cried out: "What's that turned loose in the back-yard—a wild animal?" The little fellow answered, "Yeth, thir; it's a pan-thir."

The total of the nation's liabilities is, according to the June statement, $2,349,567,482. The debt has been decreased in the last year $8,579,575.

THE STOCK MARKET.

At the beginning of the week the market took a lively tumble, after which a sharp reaction set in, infusing considerable activity into the leading stocks, but the advance was short-lived, and stocks are quietly settling back again to old figures. The rise was occasioned by the mysterious whisperings of favorable reports from the drillings of the 2,400 level of Sierra Nevada, and the heavy orders from the inside gave a color of truth to the rumors, which had the effect of thoroughly demoralizing the shorts. Nothing definite can be known regarding the condition of Sierra Nevada and Union until cross-cutting takes place, which cannot be for five weeks at least. In the meantime, the market will probably remain quiet and tend towards a lower range of values. Of the outside stocks, Bodie is not looking so well as at our last writing. The stopes are getting poorer, while the indications in the winze are not at all favorable. At the close the market showed a slight improvement.

Sydney International Exhibition, 1879.—An inspection of the ores of silver, gold and quicksilver, which Dr. Bleasdale has collected for the Sydney Exhibition, is the most extensive and varied ever exhibited in San Francisco. It will be on view at the Pavilion during the Mechanic's Fair this month, and will be forwarded to Sydney by the October steamer, together with the wines, brandies, etc. There will be on view the samples of grain and grass seeds, which the Doctor obtained at Portland, illustrative of the produce of Oregon, and alongside of it a somewhat similar collection of California grain. These and the numerous other miscellaneous articles, such as eggs of birds indigenous to the State, shells, butterflies, paints, oils, gums, etc., will form a new and separate feature in the Mechanics' Exhibition.

The Pacific Mail Co.'s steamer City of Sydney sails for Hawaii, New Zealand and Australia on Monday next. She takes a full compliment of passengers, also a number of articles for the Sydney exhibition. C. C. Cox, the Secretary of the American Commission, is a passenger.

The increase of debt is due to payments on account of arrears of pensions and from United States notes held for redemption of fractional currency as provided by the act of June 21, 1879.

It is strange that our daily city papers have not chronicled the fact that J. C. Henderson, who signed the contract for the new and largest steamship ever built for the Pacific Coast, in New York last week, is our old and well-known friend the popular engineer of the steamship Oregon, of the Portland line, which vessel he also superintended from the time the keel was laid until she was finished, and engineered by him to this port.

The Thames and Mersey Insurance Company, of Liverpool, is a sound and substantial association, with a capital of $10,000,000, and well known throughout the world. His nomination to this responsible office has given great satisfaction to his numerous friends, and cannot but be advantageous to the company.

SPEAK SOFTLY.

Speak softly, gently ever !
There is no wiser part ;
For harsh words pierce like steel
The yearning, loving heart.
As gems reflect in brightness
Every flitting beam,
Let words reflect in kindness
Love's sunny, love-lit gleam.

Speak softly, gently ever ;
There is no better plan—
For angry words can never
Effect what kind ones can.
For, oh ! a soft word spoken
May move the stubborn soul
That still would prove defiant,
Should words of thunder roll.

Speak softly, gently ever !
Words breathing naught save love !
And soon our hlghted Eden
Will hloom as realms ahovs !
For faith and fond affection,
In true love-knot entwined,
With firmer cords than temper'd steel
Each happy heart can bind. —Public Opinion.

MIDDLEMISS AND MINE MANAGEMENT.

Mine management in San Francisco too frequently passeth all understanding. A trustee appears to be an individual who may do what he pleases with other people's property. That is what Schultz did, and a high-toned grand jury held him harmless for doing it. The case of ths man Middlemiss, in his management of the Brilliant Mine, exemplifies how the thing is done. The facts are extraordinary. A president, secretary and treasurer run the institution. Middlemiss is the president. Since February they have levied $30,000 worth of assessments. They pay themselves salaries. A friendly but nominal superinteudent is employed. They have voted themselves $25 for each and every meeting they bold. At that figure it is perhaps not to be wondered at that their meetings are frequent. We look at minutes and see how the thing is done. Here are fair average entries : "May 30th, 1878. Present, Middlemiss, Smith and Stone. Minutes read and approved. Adjourned to May 31st." That's twenty-five dollars' worth. The next day they come again, and the following entry appears : "May 31st. Present, Middlemiss, Smith and Stone. Minutes read and approved. Adjourned to June 2d." That's another twenty-five dollars' worth ! Similar entries follow on ad infinitum. For meetings thus held they need more office accommodation, for the secretary appears as authorized to engage it and "furnish it suitahly." At this point it is proper to ask what these men manage ? One would suppose from the bigh salaries, the frequent meetings, the engagement of additional office room, etc., that there is something tangible to manage. Well, there is. The assessments need to be legally and regularly levied, carefully collected, and duly distributed. That's all. The company is carrying on no other operations that we can learn of. It has no works, no miners employed, and has not even a hole in the ground. It has, or is supposed to have, a mining location at Gold Hill, Nevada. The president would appear to have been iu douht about that the other day ; anyhow he drew $500 to go up and see. He is good at drawing coin, for the hooks indicate that his personal account is overdrawn some $900. One would suppose from that fact that the company is in good funds. Quite a mistake ! The president has just heen authorized to negotiate a loan of $3,000. Evidently another assessment is in order. The reader will be at no loss to see that these men have a soft thing. We allude to these facts now not for the first time. They meet with no explanation and no answer. The man Middlemiss has thougbt it worth his while to try conclusions with us in a libel suit, but not because of our description of his imprudent management of the Brilliant Mine. That music he dares not face. He prefers to go upon some comparatively innocent banter, which appeared in a card written by a valued correspondent. While he is silent about that which is really grave, he need not be so loud about that which is merely gay.

SEVERAL THINGS TO BE EXPLAINED.

At Western Addition Hall, on Wednesday evening last, Colonel Withington, an old "college chum" of Mr. J. W. Taylor's, made a little speech to the effect that the Republican nomination for City School Superintendency was due to the old chum of Colonel Withington ; and be wishes he may get it. Perhaps he may ; hut there are several things to be explained before even the Republican nomination can save him. What is the true inwardness of tbat little affair of $250, offered to another Dirctor for a place by a lady, whom Mr. Taylor put iu the School Department? What is the reason that people persist in associating Mr. Taylor with the mysterious and timely disappearance of John A. Moore ? Why does every one say "Ewald" whenever Mr. Taylor's name is pronounced, and a trip to the East spoken of ? Why bis fervent zeal for investigations, up to a certain point, and his lukewarmness when that point is reached? Why does he especially favor anonymous letters, and why do they flow to him as naturally as water goes down a waste-pipe ? For what reason did he make such a bitter fight in the Board last December to regain the chairmanship of the Committee on Furniture and Supplies, which he had lost ? The dead-lock which he occasioned at that time interfered with the discharge of public husiness for several weeks ; and the public has not forgotten it, and would like to hear his reasons for it. At tbe same time, it might not be amiss for Mr. Hiester to give us a little light on his circular to the teachers, asking for their influence with the Republican Convention to have him nominated as Sheriff. Mr. Hiester is in an exceptionally good position for explaining himself, since he has control of a newspaper and frequently blows his own trumpet therein, to the edification of mankind. A few solid reasons for electioneering among the teachers would give dignity to the circular, and, perhaps, rally two or three votes to his support. But, in any case, Messrs. Taylor and Hiester have ths floor. What with cows already come, and nominations that are to come ; what with purses of $250, offered to somebody, and hy no means lying around loose ; what with dead-locks and the perpetual Ewald, there is the material for a little eloquence from each of these gentlemen. We are all ready to hear them.

Martin Bulger, the efficient Superintendent of the Pacific Mail Company, is a rough diamond in his way, as everybody knows ; but he sometimes meets with bis match. Au employé, most industriously engaged in painting the stern of one of the compauy's steamers, indulged himself in whistling a lively air. Bulger was on the deck, and at a loss for some time to tell where the souud came from. At last, discovering bis man, he said, brusquely, "Say, young fellow ; do we pay you for whistling?" "No, sir," said the man ; "that's thrown in for nothing."

THE JUDGES OF OUR CRIMINAL COURTS.

Under the new Constitution the present classification of our Courts is abolished. There will be no Municipal, Crimiual or District Courts, but all will be merged under the one general title of Superior Courts, for which twelve Judges have to be chosen at the forthcomiug election. The fact ought not to be lost sight of, that two or three of the twelve require to be specially qualified for the conduct of the city's criminal business. Judge Blake, it is understood, declines to be renominated, wbich is to he regretted, for he has made a carefnl, painstaking and firm expounder of criminal law. It will be difficult to fill his position with an equally competent official. Judge Ferral has been nominated by the Workingmen; he will be indorsed by the Democrats, and in that event will he elscted. Judge Louderback, it is understood, will receive the Repuhlican nomination, and good citizens of all parties will vote for him. His re-election ought to be beyond a peradventure. He has filled the position of Police Judge with great fidelity, and distinguished ability. The experience he has gained must not be lost to the public service. No man has done such service as he in dealing with the hoodlum and criminal classes. Firm, rcsolute, and yet fair beyond question, he has proven himself ths right man in the right place. He ought to be one of the twelve Judges elscted, undoubtedly.

A child drank concentrated lye on Tuesday last, and died, poor little thing. Patriotic citizens take theirs in every style—concentrated, diluted, compounded, amalgamated and mixed—and it seems to make them fat, which shows that patriotism has its uses.

HONORABLE, HUMOROUS, HUMBUGGING BILKS.

A more pestilent gall was never displayed than that of the Bilk organ and its party. Glancing for a moment at the grim humor of nominating a land monopolist on an anti-monopoly platform, one is next struck with the glaring inconsistency exhibited in selecting as candidates for office men who were avowed opponents of the New Constitution. Of course these perverts avow their reconstruction, but like the cry of "anything to beat Grant" such tactics seem like "anything to get office." Then their claim of possessing all the virtue extant perhaps does not run counter to the true inwardness of a party which professes its willingness to share everything belonging to everybody else. It must be amusing to Republicans, Democrats and Workingmen to have themselves denounced as disreputable liars and scoundrels in one breath, and in the next to be implored in the name of the American Eagle, Saint Patrick or any other man, as they value their lives, their fortunes and sacred honors, to save the country by voting the Bilk ticket. As for their Mongolphobia, that deceives nobody. Poor, patient John has only to retaiu the Bilk "duds" to force the party into liquidation in more senses than one. Your gain is too transparent, good Bilks. "Thou hast pared tby wit o' hoth eides, and left nothing in the middle." Kearney has been "heard" several times since the 7th of May, and the Sand-lot is not yet squelched. The Republicans have vigorously bounced you out of camp, and the fierce Democracy have decapitated your ticket. There was an instance once where a headless rooster existed for sometime, but it was also a fact that he was neither ornamental nor useful. Now this party of Headless Roosters, it will be found, made a mistake in living after they should have died. There is yet time to rectify the omission, but in any event the Bilke will bilk ouly themselves. They are too well known to make anything else possible.

THE "LOTTA FOUNTAIN."

Among the many striking displays of taste and skill of whicb San Francisco may justly hoast, the most remarkahle ie, heyond question, the "Lotta Fountain." The design of the structure was very bad—it could hardly have heen worse—hut so long as its color was dull brown, or a far-away imitation of bronze, its defects were scarcely noticed; now, however, since it has been painted in all the colors of the rainbow, with variations, its deformity bas become painfully evident. The object in painting the fountain like a barhers pole, "only more so," is a mystery. Of course the painter was permitted to work his own sweet will in the matter, as no sane and sober man in authority could ever have instructed him to do what he has done; and the question arisee, why did he adopt the harlequin style? It may be tbat he was a man of taste, and that he intended to bring upon the fountain the ridicule it richly deserves; or, perhaps, he felt sure that sucb a monstrosity would not be endured, and that he would he called upon to re-paint it, thue securing another profitahle piece of advertising. Perhaps the intention was merely to perpetrate a huge practical joke at the expense of the residents of tbe city; but if tbat was the idea, the painter has abused the license awarded to practical jokers. At all events, although the fountain, in its present condition, would he a great success in Central Africa or the Fiji Islands, or, poeeibly, among remote trihes of North American Indians, it can only excite ridicule where it ie, and give strangers visiting the city the impression that the taste of our people is peculiar, to say tbe least. It ie safe to say tbat nothing to be compared with tbis fountain, as it now appeare, can he found in any other city in the civilized world; and tbe sooner some painter, less gifted than the genius last engaged upon it, is employed to re-paint it, and return it, as far as possihle, to its former state of semi-obecurity, the hetter.

TREASURER'S ANNUAL REPORT.

Treasurer Hubert has filed his annual report in the office of tbe Clerk of the Board of Supervisors. The Treasurer says: The amount of money on haud this year sbows a larger halance then ever before, which is accounted for by the fact that all outstanding loans bave been called in. Tbe statement of receipts and diehursements is as follows:

RECEIPTS.

Balance to credit of City and County on June 30, 1878	$425,771 24
Receipts during the year....	6,775,518 08
Total....	$7,251,287 32

DISBURSEMENTS.

Demands paid during the year....	5,528,352 71
Credit balance....	$1,722,936 61

In conclueion, the Treaeurer eays: "It gives me pleasure to report that I bave been ahle to call in bonde of different issuee for surrender, and it ie to be regretted that all the bonds ieeued by this city and county under the different Acts passed by the different Legislatures are not iseued on the same principle. It would save the city and county considerahle money, whicb now always has to be provided for and paid out for interest due semi-annually.

THAT CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

The Committee appointed by Congress to inquire into the causes of the depression iu trade and industry, hegan its initial labors in Chicago on the 28th ultimo, and if one were to judge hy the telegrams, the aforesaid committee is simply being made tbe means of puffing the unparalleled prosperity of the metropolis of the lakes, and advertising its altogether superlative advantages to the outside barharians of the Union. Everything is couleur de rose, as might be expected in such a phenomenally gigantic city, which counts New York and St. Louis as mere suburhs, to say nothing of Duluth. It is, of course, nothing to the point to say that New York and Boston hold a death-grip (otherwise yclept mortgage) upon all that is worth owning in Chicago, and that the debts arising from a certain conflagration some years ago have not yet been wiped out. Indeed, one hrash farmer aeserted that all the farms in Wisconsin were mortgaged to their full value, and we believe a similar state of affairs would he shown to exist in Illinois if tbe average Chicagoan did not have sucb a (perhaps natural) antipathy to telling the truth. For holdly asserting and plaueihly maintaining a transparency, we commend Chicago to the world, and confidently expect on Judgment Day to see its people classified amongst the goats. We, of course, will he found amongst the sheep. That committee must cbange its ground speedily or degenerate into an advertising medium for Chicago. P. S.—No cbarge for this "ad."

TO MEDICAL MEN.

A man named J. Linstrom Burrows, or J. Burrows Linstrom, is going around among medical men inquiring as to their diplomas, and creating the impression that he is so employed by the News Letter. We repudiate him. He is not authorized hy us, and we know of no good purpose that can he promoted by what he is about. Medical men should show him tbe door without ceremony, for he has no authority to busy himself about affairs in which he has no concern; and when he does, he obviously raises the presumption that he has a motive, which is probably not a disinterested one. The police are now actively engaged in enforcing the anti-quackery law, and they are doing it, we believe, with reaeonahle efficiency. To them the work properly helongs. They are very capahle of carrying it on without the interference of this questionable busybody. We recommend them to make strict inquiries into the doings of this man Burrows, with a view to learn whether or not he ie legitimately making money hy bis interference in what is exclusively their husiness. We shall be glad to hear from medical men upon whom he may call, and will take care that his doings are duly investigated. We have some good reaeons for tbese suggestions. Burrows is of middle hight, with eandy colored bair, and whiskers.

Business continues to be depressed, with the exception of the jobbing trade for the interior. The Commercial Herald calls attention to the remarkahle contrast hetween this state of things and the activity which prevails in New York, and can eee no valid reason for the stagnation on this side. Is not the lack of competition one among several reasons? If we bad a Boston and a Philadelphia pushing us hard, sbould we not be more wide-awake and more energetic? There has been something of an improvement in miscellaneous stocks, and prices are rather on the rise. Mining stocks are variahle, with smaller transactions. Money is plenty, with rates unchanged—9@12, nominally. The Herald undertakes to teach the Cincinnati Enquirer the difference between real money and fictitious; a fruitless task, for tbe Enquirer helongs to the class of journals which love to argue wrong-end-first. A hanker's daughter runs away with his coachman, after resumption; therefore, resumption made her run away. The Enquirer talks foolishly of finance, after resumption; therefore, hecause of resumption. But to admit this were to fly in tbe face of nature, wbich denied the Enquirer a commodity of hrains.

The "Templar's" long and perilous voyage of 320 daye from New York has finally terminated by her arrival here July 31st. She belongs, we believe, to the Bellingham Bay Coal Company, having been purchased soon after leaving New York. In the north Atlantic the Templar experienced very heavy weather, receiving damages that compelled her to put into Rio for repairs. While there the captain was taken with the yellow fever and nine of the crew died of it. After the recovery of the captain and the ship had received necessary repairs ehe resumed ber voyage for this port. When hut a few deys out from Rio the "yellow jack" again made its appearance, this time Captain Armstrong, bis wife and daughter, and several of the crew heing very sick with it. The captain's wife and two seamen died and were huried at sea. In addition to all this misfortune, June 24th the first mate fell overhoard and was drowned. The vessel has now heen quarantined and will he thoroughly ventilated and fumigated before coming to the wbarf.

During the week there have heen large sales of Gas from 88 to 90, and now 90½ is hid, without finding sellers. The stock of the Bank of California has also been freely dealt in, and is in demand at 69¼ as we write, in anticipation of the effect of the proposed reduction of her capital stock from $5,000,000 to $3,000,000. The stock of the National Gold Bank and Trust Company is offered freely at 55 without finding buyers; whilst that of the two other local hanks, the "Pacific" and the First National, is freely sought for, hut as there are only about twenty stockholders in the list of each of these two corporations, it is easy to see that the stock is very difficult to huy, and equally so to sell. Spring Valley Water stock is offered ratber freely at $83½. There is a large amount of money in private hands seeking employment, hut bolders are very cautious in the selection of collaterals.

The Great Chiarini Circus opens shortly. A treat is in store for all circus-goers, who well know Mr. Chiarini's wonderful faculty of horse training, as well as the great aggregation of talent he presents.

THE LITTLE WOMAN.

Don't talk to me of Olympus' maids,
"Divinely tall and fair"—
Of Cleopatra's imperial form,
Of Juno's stately air.
Those mighty dames, with redoubted names,
May erst have held their sway:
'Tis the little woman—bless her heart!
Who rules the world to-day.

With her wilful, winsome ways,
Her artful, artless smiles—
Her airy grace, and her fairy face—
Her wisdom, wit and wiles,
She mocks the pride and she sways the strength,
She hends the will of man,
As only such a despotic elf—
A little woman—can.

Though her pathway may lead through the darkest ways,
She always finds a light;
Though her eyes be dazzled hy fortune's rays,
She's sure to see aright;
Though her wisdom he of no special school,
Her logic "just hecause"—
The first has settled a kingdom's fate,
The last has made its laws.

'Tis the little woman that goes ahead
When men would lag behind,
The little woman who sees her chance,
And always knows her mind—
Who can slyly smile as she takes the oath
To honor, love, ohey,
And mentally add the saving clause,
"In a little woman's way."

Would the diamond seem such a perfect gem
If it measured one foot round?
Would the rose-leaf yield such a sweet perfume
If it covered yards of ground?
Would the dew-drops seem so clear and pure
If dew like rain should fall?
Or the little woman he half so great
If she were six feet tall?

'Tis the hand as soft as the nestling hird
That grips the grip of steel;
'Tis the voice as low as the summer wind
That rules without appeal;
And the warrior, scholar, the saint and sage,
May fight and plan and pray,
The world will wag till the end of time
In the little woman's way.

THE EX-KHEDIVE OF EGYPT.

The following extract from a private letter has heen sent to us, and will he interesting to our readers:

"My dear ——, . . . Before leaving Egypt, of course I went to see the Khedive—the ex-Khedive as he is now. Suhsequent events have made the interview interesting, so I will send you my notes of it. It was two days after Mr. Vivian, hefore going on leave, had told Pharaoh that he (Vivian), speaking quite unofficially and as a true friend, was sure that ahdication was a necessity if he wished to avoid deposition and keep the rule in his family. It was the day hefore M. Tricou conveyed the same idea, hy no means in the same friendly language, and without the same justification of old and pleasant acquaintance; so I fell upon troublous times. I was not kept long waiting at the palace. Bankers, or people who in Egypt are called hy courtesy bankers, were hanging ahout, hut I was received at once. There was the same pleasant smile, the same empressement, the same cordial greeting; but the ex-Khedive looked worried and his face at first was very grave. You kuow what he is like, I have often told you: a little man, middle aged, dressed in a hlack official coat, hlack trowsers, and a red fez, stout, short-necked, with hig ears, and a very plain face until he begins to talk, and then the intelligence makes you forget the plainness, and you go away thinking him good-looking. He produced cigars from his hreast-pocket, called for coffee, and settled himself down for a talk on the sofa hy the window, taking even more care than usual that he should have the light at his hack. Nohody was in the room save ourselves. We first talked of his palaces. He said he lived in the country at Gizeh Palace, hut he came into town for husiness; his work was long and hard, he added—he hegan at 6 and ended at midnight —hut 'short sleep means good sleep.' When I said Gizeh was very pretty and ought to he very camfortahle, he said it was; hut he grumhled hitterly at the cost of it. All the palaces, he said, took a lot of money and returned nothing. The grounds of the Gezireh garden he had partly converted into a kitchen garden to lessen the cost, and he had got rid of all his wild heasts there. (Some of them starved first for want of food). Gizeh cost him annually ahove £9,000 more than its cultivated land yielded. 'And the figure was right,' he added; 'I examined the accounts like a chef comptable de premier force.' 'It was machinery that did it,' he added; and he douhted whether steam pumps, with their cost of maintenance, were advisahle at all in Egypt. And then he got on to one of his great hohbies, irrigation and agricultural progress in Egypt. High-level canals tapping the Nile in Upper Egypt, and a vast barrage at the head of the Delta, spreading the waters all over the Nile valley, would, he said, douhle the productiveness of the country; 'hais comment faire, mon cher, l'argent manque,' he ended with a sigh; and his face grew grave and he smoked hard and silently. In a minute or two he hegan again, talking rapidly and filling up the gaps when his French failed him with his well-known 'comme çi, comme ça,' etc. It was Gordon now he talked of, 'the greatest and best of my officials.' News of the final suppression of the slave-dealers who were in revolt in the Bahr Gazelle district had just reached him hy telegraph from Khartoum, and he was delighted. Then he told me anecdotes of Gordon's hravery: how he never went armed, and how once he went into the camp of the Darfur King to parley and refused any guard whatever: 'Et il avait raison; c'est l'audace qui gagne; depuis lors personne n'ose le toucher.' When I chimed in with the commonplace that just confidence in oneself was a great force, he replied with a sigh: 'A quoi bon cette confiance en soi, mon cher, quand vous avez tout le monde contre vous—il vous faut aussi des hommes et de l'argent.' He then changed the talk to Zululand, and made me describe minutely the cause of quarrel, the number of men engaged, the position of the territory, and so on. Next he went to Afghanistan, and asked if the fighting was really finished. Then he passed to Burmah, and seemed surprised when I said there was nothing in that 'scare.' After thinking a little, he said: "Yes, hut you have too many colonies; they are a weakness;' and when I assured him all sensihle English folk would have no more, he laughed and replied that that was all very well, hut then I was in the Opposition at home, and it was not the Opposition that would decide. 'But you are quite right to criticise,' he added, 'and ahuse all aggression as unjust.' And then he ended the audience. I went next day hy invitation to breakfast with him; hut hetween the two interviews, M. Tricou, the French Consul-General, had heen and told him his ahdication was necessary. This was the second warning. He was almost ahsolutely silent; ate little and only drank water; and as I took leave he apologised for his silence, saying he was busy and preoccupe.

That is the last I shall ever see of Ismail Pasha. A week afterward his son was reigning in his stead."

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ALTA CALIFORNIA," SAN FRANCISCO.

—— NEW YORK, July 16th, 1879.

Dear Sir:—I have read with much surprise your editorial of Tuesday, July 8th, headed "M. Lesseps and his Proposed Canal." You seem to have put aside the good results to flow toward your own State and your own country by the construction of the Darien Canal, simply to deal in a personal attack upon a man of M. Lesseps's distinguished position. The world at large, as you know and understand, accepts individuals and enterprises by the success that accompanies them. Even admitting that M. Lesseps might have conceived the project of the Suez Canal, from the fact that earlier races had already been engaged in a similar work with less extensive length and less cause for commercial facilities; even admitting that he was opposed by the strongest European Governments from political suspicions and objections, and that the interests which aided its completion almost despaired of success; still he risked his reputation, and accepted the doubts of the selfish and short-sighted diplomats and business men as only incentives to the prosecution of the work. The very nation that feared political drawbacks has become the chief patron, and this great work, i. e., Suez Canal, has changed the entire character of her marine, with attending advantages to other countries all over the globe, and made Egypt the gateway to the Indies, and placed England in the foreground as the barrier to the Russian advancement for the control of more territory.

Do you suppose that the projected railway from Syria to the Indies, with Cyprus as a monitor, would have been proposed unless the Suez Canal had changed the relations of the countries bordering on the Indian Ocean to the varied interests of the European continent? Do you suppose that England alone is to be benefitted by this grand onward march of civilization and the material development of sections of a continent which the Monroe doctrine forbids us to join in, but does not interfere with our competing for a portion of the trade? If our peacefulness depends upon distance from such an enterprise, possibly we may be generous and let other countries enjoy the profitable results of any trade flowing from an investment of capital, that our Monroe doctrine induces us to keep here.

When you take up a theme like the "Darien Canal," and make it the cause for creating personal and national prejudice against a man whose zeal and persistency have overcome obstacles, and invited the most thoughtful reflections upon the future political interests and conflicts in connection with the Government near to and far away from the Suez Canal, I fear you are losing that manliness of action and freedom of thought that gave your paper its position during the memorable Vigilance Committee days of 1856. You object to Mr. Lesseps' route for the Darien Canal, and almost demand that our Government should resist its construction because the money expended by our Government in surveying for a route has not been considered as an equivalent for the selection of that preferred by our officers. If our Congress for years has been opposed to any appropriations for internal improvements, by which our own people were to be benefitted, do you suppose they will appropriate money either for their own offices or Mr. Lesseps to build the Darien Canal? If the capitalists of our country would invest no money in the Suez Canal because it was too far away, and our far-seeing merchants ridiculed its construction because they saw no immediate use for it, you will soon discover that they will take the same view of the Darien Canal, but, after construction, will be delighted to use it and pay the transit fees, because it will be economy for them to do it. If your Monroe Doctrine means that at some future time the Americans (of the United States) are to extend their domain to Patagonia, I do not think you are wrong in protesting against Mr. Lessep's ambition.

If you believe that the enormous tonnage yet to seek the Pacific should go via Cape Horn, because Mr. Lesseps, and those who accept his faith and judgement, is and are willing to put up their money to carry out the project, you also know that the tonnage will continue to pass around Cape Horn, because neither the United States nor its people will subscribe. The construction of the Panama Railroad is the best proof of that statement, and in place of the men who gave their personal means, aided alone by foreign capital, and their abilities, being honored by their country and its people, as Lesseps has been throughout the continent, they are left to the memory of their families only!

I suppose my old State has been benefitted by the Panama Railroad Company to the same extent that Clipper ships via Cape Horn improved upon ox-teams from the Mississippi River to San Francisco Bay; to the same extent that the Transcontinental Railway has advanced the State's interests, and reacted in a similar measure upon the country this side of the Sierra Nevadas—"the great American Desert!" The American Press should rally to the support of Mr. Lesseps, and not intimate interference unless the route laid down by our officers should be adopted: unless our Congress and our people intend to construct it! Mr. Lesseps does not intend to conciliate this country unless the finances of this country contribute to the Canal, any more than you will concede your convictions in the management or editorials of your paper unless the "marplots" pay for it!

The construction of the Darien Canal means the conquest of Mexico! It means the extension of the State of California, unless you prefer Lower California to be under another local government. I do not believe there are many Americans who would care about living south of Mexico, if they knew as much about the country as some of us who have crossed the narrow Central American strips of land. It will be a long time before this country need have any anxiety about any disregard for the Monroe doctrine, and to insist that foreign Governments and foreign capital should respect it, simply means that we have or intend to establish protectorates, which is not the policy of our Government or its people! When you refer to the Canal as a "swindling scheme," you must remember that you have not surveyed all the routes, nor has the Canal been finished and proved a failure; and your words are mis-used and you mislead the ignorant. You cast aside by such irrelevant language all the future prospective good that will belong to your coast and your city by the enormous increase of trade that will flow into your harbor from purely economic reasons.

Every progressive step by labor or capital is a benefit to the masses, and, with the Darien Canal completed, San Francisco becomes to Asia what New York is to Europe. Let De Lesseps' name be withdrawn from the construction of the Darien Canal, and the project will fall as readily to the ground as the Panama Railroad would have done save for the nerve, resources and influence of Aspinwall and Cbauncey.

Give your paper to indorsement and not to carping! Respect the rapid changes that are acting as a Revolution upon all obstructive rules and policy. Let a future generation take care of the Monroe Doctrine, so far as it relates to Central American countries, because, long before that period arrives, our nation will have been tried by the forces Macauley has predicted will arise, and, passing through them, we can dictate terms to the stockholders of the Darien Canal, and De Lesseps will have been glorified. Yours truly, ADVOCATE.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Unerring Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s new circular. The combination method, which this firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y. Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1878, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent.; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent.; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 29th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. "PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Baldwin's Theater.—So much has been said about the merits of Steele Mackaye's play of Won at Last, that its production was awaited with curiosity. It enjoyed a long run at Wallack's, and was lately revived at the opening of the author's own theater. It seems incredible that the play at Baldwin's should he tbe same thing, for it possesses so many faults that its success cannot he imagined. Tbe subject is an admirable one. The story is that of a perfectly blase, phlegmatic man of the world, who marries, at his dead fatber's testamentary request, a girl who loves him passionately, and who believes her affection is returned. On the wedding day the confiding girl discovers that her husband is perfectly indifferent to her, and her mental anguish is hightened hy the appearance on the scene of a former Parisian mistress of bis, who has married an American, and pursues him with her love. The gradual awakening of the better feelings of the man, hardened through attrition with the world, the love for his wife, a noble and virtuous girl, which is slowly but surely creeping into possession of his heart and soul, and the final happy culmination, form a beautiful story, and one can easily imagine a good play based upon it. But, as written by Steele Mackaye, it is absurd and farcical. The lines are either stupid or ridiculous—some of them so much so that it is past belief that an educated, sensible being could ever have written them. There is the usual American dramatist's error of introducing exaggerated, impossible characters, but this seems to be the peculiar idiosyncrasy of that class, and must he endured. Mr. Mackaye preteuds to follow the French school. This play is, in treatment, utterly at variance with the teachings of that school. Plausibility and truth to nature are cardinal principles with modern French writers, and these canons are magnificently violated in this play. Mr. Mackaye, with this story, so pathetic and true, bad an opportunity to write a good American play, but failed to grasp it. I cannot believe that, in its present dress, with its childish, idiotic lines and ridiculous business, Won at Last passed the gauntlet of New York critics. And still an evening passed at this theater is a very enjoyable one. The stock company is an admirable one, and in the last play some of the talented members have good opportunities. Won at Last was excellently well acted. Miss Coghlan, as the heroine, was all that the most captious critic could desire. In the first act the girlish, inexperienced confidence she feels in a perpetual honeymoon, and the true modesty of her manner and demeanor, were admirably portrayed. The next act allots to her conflicting emotions difficult to represent. The struggle between the dignity and pride of the woman, the trampled upon but still existing love, is one requiring talent and intelligence to depict. By simply saying that Miss Coghlan fills every requirement of the role, all possible praise is awarded. Every new character this lady appears in substantiates the opinion expressed at her first appearance—that she is hy far the best actress in her line that ever came to this city. O'Neill has a ratber thankless character on his hands, but plays it in his usual manly style. This gentleman is doing intelligent, conscientious work now, a strong contrast with his former careless, don't-care way. Jennings played the character of an old Professor with rare delicacy. It is a part suited to his prominent peculiarities of voice and manner, and this, coupled with true artistic acting, formed a very satisfactory picture. The little scene at the return of his supposed lost-at-sea son was a touching bit of pathos. Miss Corcoran surprised the audience again hy her clever rendition of the Frenchwoman, "Mrs. Bunker." The vernacular was properly pronounced and spoken, and the dialect faithful to nature. This little lady is brim-full of talent, wbich is rapidly maturing. The house was good on the opening night, and ought to continus so, for Miss Coghlan's acting is a rare treat, and it is to hs feared she will leave us soon. The New Babylon is underlined.

Bush-Street Theater.—Ths strong hold that variety entertainments have on a majority of our people is well evidenced hy the throngs that nightly fill this theater. Tony Pastor has brought with him a company which, iu its peculiar line, is truly an admirable one. To me there is a certain sameness and staleness about all the jokes and acts of performances of this character; hut, after all, what is the difference if one laughs. It is better in all things to refrain from aualyzing the causes that move our feelings or emotions and accept the effects. For the appreciation of the fun and humor of a variety show, no particular amount of inherent intelligence or of momentary mental taxation is necessary. In this way it has attractions for hoth the refined and vulgar. To the latter it is ths quintessence of fun and amusement; it is wit to the hight of their understanding. To ths intelligent and intellectual it is a relaxation from the mental activity and worry co-existing with a highly developed condition of the brain. In tbis must lie the causes of the popularity of variety performances in this country—popularity so great that managers become very rich, and song and dance and specialty people command salaries that are ridiculous in their magnitude. In this troupe there are some very clever people who deserve special mention. George Thatcher is a droll and humorous genius. He tells his jokes and anecdotes in such a dry, mirth-provoking way, that he is nightly received with shouts of laughter and applause. The French sisters please through very pretty faces and skillful manipulation of the clogs. Bryant and Hoey, who are old favorites, repeat their laughable musical act in a slightly altered form. The troupe is strong in Irish dialect artists; the two teams, Sheehan and Jones and Kelly and Ryan, being very clever in their particular line. Tony Pastor himself sings the usual kind of songs, the merit of which lies solely in their perfect (if I can coin a word) apropos-ness. The hill is to he changed weekly, and several novelties are in reserve. Political allusions are hardly in place on the stage, and such idiotic gags as some of the performers indulged in during the week should he excised by the stage-manager.

The Fourteenth Industrial Exhibition of the Mechanics' Institute will he opened on Tuesday next, August 5th, at 2 P.M., hy Exercises at the Grand Opera House, Mission street. The public is learning to expect these displays every year, and to count upon them for a season of mingled pleasure and improvemeut; and there is every reason to helieve that the attendance at the opening will he worthy of the untiring exertions of the managers. The programme includes an address hy the President, music and singing, a poem by Miss Julia C. Jones, an oration by Dr. Guard, and an Exhibition March, composed for the occasion.

Standard Theater.—The revival of Diplomacy has undoubtedly been a judicious move in the history of this theater. The audiences have been large and seemingly well pleased. This play is witbout exception one of the strongest comedies on the modern stage. It is admirably constructed, the different incidents, exciting and interesting as they are, seem so true, and follow in such natural sequence, that the whole play is as a picture from real life. The easy, conversational tone is the one that this triumph of Sardou's ingenuity requires for proper development and execution. The great merits of ths performance given hy tbe Montague party was in the proper appreciation of that fact. The tout-ensemble of that troupe was perfect. The present combination lacks this featurs, but makes up a little for it by the stronger individualization of some of the characters. This performancs is deprived of the care and finish of the other party, but is, nevertheless, very creditable. The compliments and favors that have been showered upon Miss Lewis for her impersonation of the "Countess Zicka" have produced the usual result of exaggerated praise. In her efforts to improve a good piece of actiug she has only succeeded in making more prominent those particular points that were the blemishes of the former representations. In tons and gesture she is now at times extremely exaggerated, and her play of features has become, if I can so express it, more sardonic. All these defects are of a naturs that permits of easy improvement, especially at the hands of a woman of talent, and no one can deny Miss Lewis' claims to this title. The principal characteristics of poor Montague's acting were a certain indescribable aristocratic eass and gentlemanly self-possession that was very agreeable to behold. If the part assumed by him required such points, it was a successful piece of acting; if not, it was then readily seen that Montague was but an indifferent actor. His "Julian Beauclerc" was, taken all in all, a charming picture, but lacked the essential of manliness. His emotion, as portrayed in the great trio scene of the second act, was weak and effeminate. Mr. Piercy's conception and carrying out of the character is a decidedly preferable one. More particularly in the above mentioned scene does a comparison inure to his credit. The grief and sorrow experienced hy a man wounded in his love and honor is depicted by Mr. Piercy in a manly, honest way, pity-inspiring in its truthfulness to nature. If study can efface two faults that this actor is afflicted with, he has undoubtedly a promising future. These faults are: a too marked self-consciousness that imposes itself, and a nasal twang, noticeable only when the pitch of the voice is raised. Mr. Max Freeman plays "Stein" with all the ahility and talent this genial actor possesses. In all the details and adjuncts, Mr. Freeman gives evidence of intelligent study and proper discrimination. At his hands the character receives all the attention possihle, and becomes one of the most prominent figures in the play. The audience nightly testify their appreciation by a recall to Mr. Freeman. All the other characters are in good hands. The setting of the play is neat and tasty. The children's Pinafore is still produced in the afternoons to fair houses. It might he proper to suggest to Mr. Keene that in polite society it is not customory upon introduction to a lady to encircls her waist familiarly.

California Theater.—Aimée and her company have produced, since last issue, La Marjolaine and Mme. Favart. The Alice Oates troupe familiarized us with some of the beauties of the former operetta, but, as usual, failed to give us the correct thing. This work of Lecocq's is replete with pretty airs and elahorate instrumentation. Though this company is musically weak, it is so strong from a point of view of acting, that that weakness is lost sight of in the admirable tout ensemble presented. Little Beaudet was as cute and cunning as ever. The peculiar charm of this little girl lies in the combination of perfect youth in appearance, with great maturity in the rouerie and chic of a bouffe actress. That she is a pupil of Aimée is evident from her every move and gesture. Aimée, herself, was at her best, and sang the "Un petit sou" plaintively and pathetically. The admirable acting of Mezierés and Duplan made this production greatly the best so far. They arc both good comedians. Mezierés, in his line of character impersonations, stands very high, and there are hut few actors on our own stage his equal. A good word is deserved, as usual, by Juteau Jouard, the latter for his acting only, as his singing is anything hut artistic. The voice is hard and flat, and shows great tendency to getting out of tune. Mme. Favart is Offenbach's latest composition. Annoyed and aggravated by the success of Lecocq, who, through richness of melody and elaboration of harmony, had entirely supplanted him, he sought to reassert his rights and regain his position hy the composition of this operetta. It is an evident attempt at the comparatives higher style of opera bouffe music, hut is, as such, a failure. Offenbach's peculiar talent is the writing of rollicking bouffe tunes, coarse and vulgar, musically speaking, and admirably adapted to the text set to them. Here and tbere sprinkled among his many operas you will find hits of delicious harmony classically pure, hut they are few and far hetween. In 1866 hs made an attempt at something of a higher order, and composed Robinson Crusoe. This contained some pretty numbers, hut as a whole, proved that he could not cope with the requirements of opera comique. Additional proof of this fact is given hy the music of Mme. Favart. The few things in it that are pretty are those composed in his old style, and they are hut sparse in number. The rest of the score is an imitation of Lecocq, and a poor one. The subject of the opera is a rather interesting one. It was admirably performed hy this troupe. Aimée and Juteau sang their respective parts neatly and acted them well. The latter remark can be applied also to Jouard. Mezierés gave another one of his remarkahls characterizations as "Pontsahlé." His impersonation of the senile, decrepit, hut still lecherous old man, was an artistic performance. It was actually disgusting in its apparent truthfulness. These two operas were produced with all the wealth of costume this company possesses. They are remarkable for heauty and elegance. La Boulangere a des Ecus, was played last nigbt too late for review. Next week the hill is a varied one. On Monday and Wednesday Giroflé Giroflá, on Tuesday Les Brigands, on Friday La Belle Helene, and on Saturday Le Petit Faust. This will maks thirteen operas produced during this season—a rather extensive repertoire.

Opera Bouffe Ball.—In New York the masked balls given every year hy the Arion Lieder Kranz and Cercle de L'Harmonie are notable events, looked forward to from season to season. Tbe hall that takes place next Thursday is of a similar character, and will undoubtedly have the corresponding sweets. The rules adopted governing the maskers ars admirahly adapted to further all jollity and fun. On the floor, masking will be compulsory with the ladies and optional with the gentlemen. This is a remarkahle good feature of the ball. A woman under a mask adds to all her other charms that of mystery, and gives impetus to the most agreeable of emotions imagination. Masked, a man becomes more heavy and helpless, and cuts but a sorry figure. The above rule ensures a success. At the door, gentlemen coming in will be required to show their features, but the masked secrecy of the ladies will remain inviolate. The arrangements for decoration, music, supper, cloak rooms, dressing rooms, etc., etc., are all of the most perfect kind. The music will be a particular feature, and the floor large and roomy. The scene will be a brilliant one. All the costumes at the command of the different theaters will be brought into requisition. To many of us, who have spent winters in Paris or New York, this ball brings up jolly recollections of nights at the Grand Opera or Academy of Music. If the people out here would once get into the habit of these things, they would wonder how they ever got along without them. So all of you bring costumes, and a general rendezvous is announced for next Thursday evening.

The Grand Complimentary Testimonial tendered by the legal profession of San Francisco to the estimable gentleman and actor, Mr. Samuel W. Piercy, is certainly the most notable theatrical testimonial ever given in this city, inasmuch as this gentleman is almost a native of this city, having arrived here with his parents at the age of six months. He is so widely and thoroughly known in San Francisco that words of commendation seem almost superfluous. Mr. Piercy left us a mere novice in the profession which he early espoused. He has returned full of honors and with a reputation which has been fairly earned. He will appear as "Iago" in Shakespeare's play of Othello, and the cast will include Mr. T. W. Keene, Miss Jeffreys-Lewis and several members of the legal profession, including Eugene N. Dupuey, John M. Chretian, Lucian Tewksbury and James H. Ryan. We feel assured in predicting the Grand Opera House will be crowded on the evening of Friday, August 8th, the time fixed for this grand testimonial. Miss Lilian Andrews plays "Emelia" for Mr. Piercy's benefit.

Chit-Chat.

The Ballet girls for the new spectacle at Niblo's will be mostly Italians. They are already en route from Italy.——Capoul is advertised to appear with Paola Marie September 11th, but his coming is still in doubt.——Linda Dietz canceled her engagement at the Union Square to be near her mother, who lives in ill-health in London. Miss Dietz will join the Haymarket company.——Boucicault makes occasional visits to Brighton beach.——Henry Ward Beecher will lecture at Cape May.——Neilson has been gambling at Monte Carlo.——Joe Polk will have a new play on the road next season.——Katherine Rogers is spending the Summer on Long Island with her four daughters, who are at school on the Hudson.——Raymond was so affected by the heat in New York recently that he refused an offer to match half dollars.——Fatinitza is to be done in Philadelphia by children.——Pearl Eytinge will act a short engagement in this city in September.——L'Assommoir has been translated into Flemish.——Mapleson agrees to pay Cary $75,000 for five months.——Little Willie Deutsch swears he will bring back Patti.——Eastern papers predict that Currie, the Texas murderer, will never hang.——When Sarah Bernhardt stands alongside of David Davis she will look like a sunbeam shining upon a haystack.——Emmett and Mayo are big successes in England.——Henry Irving will not come to this country this season.——Alice Harrison has received an offer in London and will remain there.——Sam. Piercy may possibly belong to Steele Mackaye's Madison Square Theater next season.——Off the stage Juteau is a small, very dark-complexioned man of 45.——Aimée is worth $200,000. After the local engagement she returns to Europe. Her age is about 38.——The great attraction at the California for baldheads, etc., is the plump Chartre with the rosebud mouth.——On the second night of La Grande Duchesse the role of "Gen. Boum" was assumed by Vinchon, the chorus-master of the troupe, and he made an instantaneous and wonderful hit. It was an admirable effort.

Grand Pacific Coast Six-Day Pedestrian Tournament, Commencing About September 20th, 1879,

Under the Management of Messrs.

W. S. LAWTON and D. R. McNEILL.

These gentlemen having for many years been thoroughly identified with amateur athletic sports in this city, the citizens of San Francisco, who are desirous of witnessing a six days' contest which they are satisfied will be conducted with good faith to all, have solicited them to take the management of an Entertainment of this kind, and feeling assured that they have the confidence of the public and that their personal guarantee will be accepted that the programme will be carried out as represented, they have decided to conduct an Entertainment of this kind, and have engaged the MECHANICS' PAVILION for that purpose, and now offer the following inducements to Pedestrians. One-half of the net proceeds will be divided among the contestants, as follows:

The contestant accomplishing the greatest number of miles in the 142 hours shall receive 50 per cent. and a diamond and gold medal valued at $250, to be known as the Pacific Coast Champion Medal.

The second man will receive 30 per cent. and a gold medal valued at $100.

The third man 12½ per cent. and a silver medal valued at ——.

The fourth man 7½ per cent.

The medals will be the absolute property of the winners. All other contestants accomplishing 350 miles will receive $100; 375 miles, $150; and 400 miles, $200. As a guarantee of good faith, an entrance fee of $100 will be charged, and must be paid as follows: 25 per cent. on entry; the balance on or before September the 10th, when the entries will close. Contestants are requested to enter their names as soon as possible, in order that suitable arrangements may be made for their accommodation. Any other information required may be obtained by calling on or addressing

"The World," the Flesh, and the Devil.

[By a Truthful Penman.]

The following story of the loves of two girls tends to show that feminine affection may he carried too far. Miss Lillie Over and Miss Ella Hearn were hoth pretty and attractive, and they resided at Pokomoke, Maryland. They had heen "classmates at the same seminary, where they hoth graduated with high honors," and they became intimate friends. Oue day Miss Over requested Miss Hearn to accompany her for a walk. What followed is related by the latter young lady hefore her death: "Lil got awful mad, and came up to me and said—'Before heaven, Ella Hearn, if you don't go into the woods with me to-morrow, I'll never ask you to go anywhere else.' Next day Lil came around; I was sewing. Lil got up to leave two or three times, and snatched my work from my hands. My ma told me to go to the door with Lil. Lil turned hack, shut the door, and asked me would I take hack what I had said, and attempted to kiss me. I pushed her down and then laughed. Lil said I hurt her a little. When she got up she commenced talking. I told her to go home. Lil then asked me if I loved Ella Forster hetter than her, and I answered: 'Yes.' Lil stepped hack and said: 'Repeat that and I'll shoot you.'" And this threat Lil carried into effect with so fatal an aim that Ella Hearn died of her wound. Lil is now heing tried on a charge of wilful murder, and she "insists that the shot which put an end to the life of Ella was an accidental one, and that this ill-starred friend died of chloral, administered hy the physicians after the shooting."——At a hall at Paris the other day, ladies were given a sort of cheque-book with counterfoils. On these cheques were printed: "Good for ——— dance." These they gave signed to their intended partners, and then wrote the name of the partner on the counterfoil. By this means all mistakes were avoided.——Depression in the diamond trade is undouhtedly a bad sign of the times. We know a fashionahle diamond merchant in the west. For June last his sale transactions amounted to only £4,000. In June 1878 they were £14,000, and as compared with an average of £20,000 in the same month of preceding years.—London World.——Another story ahout the Great Sahara (Bernhardt). That a Personage went hehind the scenes and was introduced; that the Personage removed his hat and replaced it; that the Great Sahara turned to a number of admirers who stood bareheaded hy, and said with exquisite moquerie, "Couvrez-vous, messieurs!"——An interesting experiment is being tried at the London Zoological Gardens. Eggs laid hy an ostrich have heen cunniugly painted to resemhle an emu's, and placed under a male emu to he hatched. Should they come to light and life all right, fancy the feelings of that emu when they develop! One can foresee domestic hroils.——The exact date of the Prince Imperial's death was not the 1st of June, as generally misstated, hut Saturday, May 31st, at four in the afternoon. We gather from a letter from the seat of hostilities that he was slightly lame, owing to an ahscess in the hip, and this may have prevented him from vaulting into the saddle with his usual alert skill. He was very active, and was a noted runner at the athletic sports of the Woolwich cadets. But the quickest and lightest of men are not always in form.——Roman loungers were treated to a rare spectacle lately on the Via Appia; a hicycle race hetween two ladies, who hoth helong to the hest society, and are celehrated for their heauty. They appeared on their iron steeds arrayed in the most coquettish of Spanish hats, vests and tights. The fair winner was Madame Le Ghait, the wife of the First Secretary of the Belgian Legation.—— We shall he much surprised if the hall recently given in Mr. Gladstone's old house hy Lady Olive Guinness he surpassed by any entertainment this season. The hostess's sister-in-law, Mrs. Guiness, had what may he called a floral fete of marked hrilliancy only a week hefore; hut on this occasion the flowers were, in heauty and ahundance, hitherto unheard of in London, though perhaps to he equaled at Rome or Nice. There were festoons of real roses, hanks of gardenias, and mantelpieces of stephanotis; while here and there towered huge hlocks of ice, with hot-house hlossoms frozen into them. The effect was admirable; hut we are not surprised to hear that it was attained hy an expenditure of rather over four thousand pounds. What chance has the commonplace hall-giver after this? Mrs. White of Ardharroch must look to her laurels.—World.——At Hurlingham he said to her: "Yes, the sky is overcast, and there is no sun. But the good people tells us there is always something to he thankful for, so we must he thankful that there is any sky at all." She, languidly: "Yes; I suppose we ought to he thankful for that. If there were no sky, we helow would see the legs of the saints—and there is a Lord Chamberlain.—World.——Marceline Guiot, twenty-six years of age, has just heen condemned to death hy the Court of Assizes of the Vienne for one of the most abominable crimes on record. She forced her stepdaughter, a little girl of eight, to take with her soup sixteen pins, two needles and some pieces of wood, and the unfortunate child perished in the most horrible torments. There could he no recommendation to mercy even from a French jury in such an atrocious case.——It is pleasant to hear that the Whyte-Melville Memorial Fund is progressing. So greatly was the late Major Whyte-Melville liked in the huuting-field that Northamptonshire farmers have sent up half-sovereigns, while hunt servants, many of whom had never seen him, hut only knew him through his hooks, have given their humble half-crowns.

It is argued that the sale of heer favors the cause of temperance, in that it crowds out stronger liquors. A man with a small keg of beer in his stomach has no room for a hottle of whisky.

WEAVING THE WEB.

"This morn I will weave my web," she said,
As she stood by the loom in the rosy light,
And her young eyes, hopefully glad and clear,
Followed afar the swallow's flight.
"As soon as the day's first tasks are done,
While yet I am fresh and strong," said she,
"I will hasten to weave the beautiful web
Whose pattern is known to none but me.

"I will weave it fine, I will weave it fair,
And ah! how the colors will glow!" she said,
"So fadeless and strong will I weave my web
That perhaps it will live after I am dead."
But the morning hours sped on apace;
The air grew sweet with the breath of June;
And young Love hid by the waiting loom,
Tangled the threads as he hummed a tune.

"Ah! life is so rich and full," she cried,
"And morn is so short though the days are long!
This noon I will weave my beautiful web,
I will weave it carefully, fine and strong."
But the sun rode high in the cloudless sky;
The burden and heat of the day she bore;
And hither and thither she came and went,
While the loom stood still as it stood before.

"Ah! life is too busy at noon," she said;
"My web must wait till the eventide,
Till the common work of the day is done,
And my heart grows calm in the silence wide!"
So, one by one, the hours passed on
Till the creeping shadows had longer grown;
Till the house was still, and the breezes slept,
And her singing birds to their nests had flown.

"And now I will weave my web," she said,
As she turned to her loom ere set of sun,
And laid her hand on the shining threads
To set them in order, one by one.
But hand was tired and heart was weak;
"I am not as strong as I was," sighed she.
"But the pattern is blurred, and the colors rare
Are not so bright or so fair to see!

"I must wait, I think, till another morn;
I must go to my rest with my work undone;
It is growing too dark to weave," she cried,
As lower and lower sank the sun.
She dropped the shuttle, the loom stood still;
The weaver slept in the twilight gray.
Dear heart. Will she weave her beautiful web
In the golden light of a longer day?

BOOK NOTICES.

Classical Writers. Edited by J. R. Green. MILTON.—By Stopford A. Brooke. D. Appleton & Co., New York. A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco.

If the growing generntion does not know the great men of the past, it is not for want of information to he had. What with Primers and Handy-Books, such as Appleton is publishing every day, one needs to hide himself if he will not learn. These hooks are almost always well-written and hy competent critics. Mr. Brooke's Primer of English Literature has made him a kind of authority with the public, and the present volume on Milton brings together all that is needed for an introduction to the reading of him; for therein lies the real value of these publications. Unless they rouse a desire to know the authors treated of, at first hand, they have failed to do their best; and Mr. Brooke's judgment is so far independent and manly, even in the presence of the great poet, that a student should go to the Poems from the perusal of this essay with something of a fair conception, both of the genius and the character of Milton.

MONEY. A TALE. By Jules Tardieu. D. Appleton & Co., New York. A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco.

One of the handy-volume series, and a very entertaining little thing. Pierre Roland, a journalist, has money left him hy a rich baroness, who admires his high sense of professional honor. He sends for an old friend and his daughter from the country. On the way down the daughter, who is extremely pretty, of course, saves the life of n child playing on the railroad track, hy signaling to the engineer, and then gives him a honquet tied with her handkerchief. The engineer is the son of a rich man in Paris, and, after many mystifications and small tangles, Marguérite and Paul are happily married, and everyhody feels hetter. The translation is a little forced and stiff.

THE "NORTH AMERICAN," for August, has no great variety, and the editor does not seem to have exercised his power of discrimination in an entirely laudable way, when he admits such padding as nn article hy Wendell Phillips on Garrison, nnd Mr. Jno. L. Stephens' superficial talk about Mehemet Ali. Phillips has worn out the patience of the most long-suffering, and never can, hy accident, speak a reasonable word; while Stephens was a mere tourist, without education of any kind to fit him for understanding serious mntters. Mr. Freeman's article on "The Power of Dissolution" is full of informntion and suggestion. "The Work and Mission of My Life," hy Richard Wagner, is immensely entertaining, with its unconscious vanity and reckless misstatement of tendencies in life and art. Why must patriots, political or artistic, he perpetually whirling their hats in the air? The "Diary of a Public Man," wisely left anonymous, is of no significance to anyhody. It notes down the mere rumors of the day, trivial, even if they were well-founded. The "Future of Resumption" is one more contrihution to the much he-written money problem, and does not dispose of it. Mr. Jno. Fiske's notices of "Recent Works on Ancient History and Philology" are extremely interesting and well-considered.

"APPLETON'S JOURNAL," for August, is full of most interesting articles, many of them permanently valuable. Matthew Arnold's study on Wordsworth, Francisque Sarcey's account of the Comedie Frnnçaise, Morison's "Miraheaus," the few vigorous translations of the yet untranslatahle Theophile Gautier, Schopenhauer's Thoughts on Men, Books and Music, and Mr. Macdonald's Cornish Saunter are papers one wants to keep. With these nre sketches, and sporting papers and novels, and the Book Notices, always well done.

KALLOCH AND COX.

Kalloch and Cox are fitting candidates to face one another. Parsons both, they are both blatant political humhugs, who hedraggle the cloth to which they belong in the mire. What has San Francisco done to he cursed at home and disgraced abroad by these unsavory candidates for the chief magistracy of our city? We are told that these men are put forward as an offering to the religious sentiment of the community. It is stated as a fact, and there is some evidence that it is true, that the church-going portion of our people are ranking themselves on the side of Kalloch, and believe that morality and religion will, in some unexplained and mysterious manner, he promoted hy his election. We have many good reasons for our opposition to this man, hut perhaps the most weighty one is, that his candidacy is a slur upon religion and an insult to good morals. We can imagine nothing that is more calculated to hring religion into contempt than the nomination of this had representative of it. His record is not that of a man of average cleanliness. It is impossihle to discuss him without befouling one's mouth. The giving of most exceptional prominence to his name cannot be for the advantage of the Church. Moreover, there is surely something unseemly in a Christian minister wallowing up to his neck in the filthy pool of politics. Partisan strife and the doctrines of the meek and lowly Jesus do not go well together. There is an unfitness in the combination that ought to strike religious people above all others. The manner in which this man Kalloch is conducting himself evidences the incongruity of his position. Here is a specimen: "Mr. Kalloch said the day he was nominated he drove down to Union Hall and engaged it for the night before the election; also, all the streets around it. A few days ago the Republicans went down there and said: 'We want the hall.' They were told they couldn't have it, for Kalloch had engaged it. 'What!' said they, 'that d——d preacher.' Well, I got ahead of them, and they will find that that d——d preacher will get ahead of them all the time. Three cheers and a tiger were thereupon given for Kalloch." That was a speech addressed by Kalloch to Kearney and his followers. Kalloch has evidently been converted to hlasphemy and vulgarity hy Kearney. Will any well-wisher of religion say that the spirit or language of such a speech is calculated to favorably impress non-religious people? Bah! We apolgize to men of sense for arguing thus seriously with fools. If the religious sentiment of San Francisco demands Kalloch, then heaven save us from the religious sentiment of San Francisco.

EMPLOYING CHINESE.

An eleventh commandment has been added to the decalogue, more patent than all the other ten. It is that employment shall not he given to a man if he happens to have heen born in China. Californians are not remarkable for their particularity about the other commandments, hut about this one they are of the strictest sect of the Pharisees. That is to say, they are if we are to believe the daily press. No man must dare run for office that ever permitted a Chinaman to clean his hoots. It is said that a promising candidate for Governor lost his nomination because, being tumbled into the hay by a capsizing yacht, he submitted to being rescued by a Chinese fisherman. He saved his life, hut committed the unpardonable sin, which forever will deprive him of the right to serve his country in official position. Seriously, there is a good deal of humhug about this latest test of official availability. If no man is to he voted for who has ever had a menial act performed for him hy a Chinaman, then it is very certain that we shall have to send elsewhere for our office-holders. The rule, rigidly enforced, would exclude us all. Wbite had a Chinese cook, Perkins collects fares and freights from Chinese, and Glenn permits them to save his falling grain. Yea, even the sand lots are not free from their touch. Boots are made, cigars are manufactured, and shirts are washed for sand-lotters hy the "moon-eyed lepper." Even our bahes drink the milk that is drawn from the cow hy John Chinaman. Query: Would that disqualify the child in after life from receiving the votes of free and independent emigrants from the Emerald Isle? Great heavens! where is this evil to stop? Who is to be free from the contaminating touch of honest John, all the way from China? Begorra, if we don't etop the hathen coming here, even the hlue-hlooded Patrick from Ireland will lose his conspicuous and manifold qualification for office-holding. The thing is getting serious and must be stopped—that it must. If a revelation of the eleventh commandment is to send us to perdition, who among us may expect to he saved? In that case, there is none good—no, not one. Even Kearney had his child carried to the grave, the other day, in a hearse, the owner of which employed a Chinaman. He should be deposed from the Presidency of the W. P. C. forthwith.

ATTEND TO THE ELECTION OF THE JUDICIARY.

There is danger that the next Judiciary of this city will he the weakest ever chosen to administer the litigation of the most litigious people on the face of the globe. One cause for this, perhaps, is that the salary has been reduced to a point at which it ceases to attract men of the requisite talent. It is a huge mistake to underpay judges. It is false economy. Bad decisions will inevitahly cost more money than would suffice to procure the services of the very ahlest men as judges. But low as the salary is, hetter men are obtainable than many that seem likely to he elected. The truth is, too little attention is heing given to the election of the Judiciary. There are so many offices going, and so many people scramhling for them, that attention is not sufficiently focussed upon the delicate and difficult task of selecting honest and capahle judges. Party spirit is rife, and purely partisan tickets are likely to he successful even in the case of the Judiciary. This is a misfortune that can he, and ought to he, avoided. Judicial talent is the monopoly of no one political party. We eincerely trust that no independent voter will vote a straight party ticket for the Judiciary. The nicest discrimination should be used in choosing the very hest men from all the tickets, and a sturdy resolution should he formed to vote for such men, quite regardless of party nominations. If that process of seeking the survival of the fittest is diligently pursued, we may get a fair Judiciary. It is the only sure way that remains to us, now that purely partisan nominations all round are decided upon. It looks as if the Republican State ticket will he elected, and yet it would he a calamity for all the Republican nominees to be chosen to our next Supreme Court. On general principles it would be an evil to have that hody filled from one political party. Moreover, on that ticket there are two of the very worst nominations for the Supreme Bench that have heen mads by any party. Who, for instance, believes that Wheeler ought to he elevated to the Supreme Bench? A weak lawyer, and a duhtful man in every way, his name ought to he scratched by every thoughtful Republican. Tbe party can gain nothing hy his election. The choice of an honest Judiciary should engage the very best attention of all good citizens.

A LITTLE SISTER OF CHARITY.

[An Actual Incident of a Hotel Reading-room.]

A gamhler and a rake was he
Whose days and nights were wild,
A wan and weary midget she,
A crippled beggar-child.

Reclining at his ease he lay,
When, lispingly, she said:
"Please give me somethin', sir; all day
I hasn't had no hread."

But he is moody with the fumes
Of a prolonged dehauch;
And drink the appetite consumes
Like flax hsneath the torch.

He speaks the truth, then, when he says,
Turning impatiently:
"I've eaten nothing these three days;
Go, hrat, don't pester me!"

She goes—poor, shivering little one—
Into the cold, dark night;
Unheeding her, the man hroods on
In comfort, warmth and light.

An hour goes hy—he feels a touch
Upon his folded hands;
There, leaning on her tiny crutch,
The hahy-beggar stands.

"Please, sir, take this, (a copper cent),
I'se sure that you must he
(Her eyes were filled with wonderment)
Much hungrier than me."

"Three days! Wby I can hardly keep Alive a single one!
No—take it, please, I'se goin' to sleep,
An' sban't feel hungry then."

A flush of shame sweeps o'er his cheek,
Hot tears hedim his eyes,
His quivering lips refuse to speak,
Then, kissing her, he cries:

"Thou tiny minister of grace,
A woman's heart is thine;
Lift up thy hlessed little face,
Let thy lips hallow mine."

"I'll keep thy copper for thy sake
Until my dying day,
And thou, sweet child, my gold must take—
To-night I shall not play."

A SPEECH TO BE REMEMBERED.

A great deal of twaddle is heing uttered at this political campaign. Issues are heing discussed that have more of buncombe than good sense in them. But there was one notable exception the other night. The speech of Mayor Bryant, because of the practical subjects it discussed, stands out in hold relief and in striking contrast with the insufferahle hosh of these times. The stump was never so weak as now. It spouts and spouts in one everlasting wish-washy flood. It spends its hest efforts upon Glenn's farming, Perkins' sailor-boyism and White's Kearneyism—just as if the destinies of cities and States depended upon such trivialities. The people are much more concerned in knowing whether their government is efficient and economical. To those questions Mayor Bryant applied himself, and in doing that dealt with telling facts and figures with the weight of one having authority. He showed just what the city is paying for good government, and whilst the expenditure in the different departments is still a matter of close scrutiny and criticism, with a view to greater economy and efficiency in the future, the hroad fact remains that the administration of affairs during the past four years will bear comparison with that of any former period. Many substantial improvements have heen made, a considerable portion of the city has heen permanently paved, the Channel street nuisance has heen ahated, the new City Hall has made progress, new schools bave heen huilt and an increased number of children educated, the people's park has been greatly improved, a fres library has heen established, and nearly one million has been added to the Sinking Fund to pay off the city's indehtedness incurred hy previous administrations; and while all these things have been accomplished, ths total of the city's tax levy of last year was only a trifle more than that of 1875, divided, as it is, among a larger number of people, and spread over an increased area of property. That is the showing which the facts and figures justify. An ounce of proof is worth a pound of assertiou. Mayor Bryant has made a most important contribution to the discussion of public affairs. He has shown just what the city gets and what it pays, and in doing that he has supplied the hest possible justification of his own administration. He has now given a most practical turn to the consideration of city matters. If future discussion will keep in that groove, and if candidates will vie with each other in suggesting economies, and how to promote efficiency, they will be engaging themselves, like business men, with the matters that really concern us at this time.

THE NEW TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Since our former notices of the American Union Telegraph Company, and its possible effect upon Western Union, we note that the stock of the latter corporation has declined ten per cent. in the New York Stock Exchange. The indications are that it will go down to at least 50, if not further, and such a result is to he expected, when it is borne in mind that the new company expect to complete their lines at a cost of about one-fourth of the capital at which Western Union is stocked. Late improvements in telegraphy are given as the prime reason, hut we suspect that the watering of stock is the principal factor in the movement. Some leading Californiа capitalists are said to be large investors in the American Union. We shall eagerly watch the progress of this scheme, which promises a great reduction in rates and superior facilities for business men and newspapers. It cannot be completed too soon.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier!" "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir, with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

Dramatic authors don't always have a fair show at the outset, whatever the managers may say. At least that is what a young friend of ours—who writes plays because his name happens to be Buckstone—thinks, and these are the facts he put in evidence: He says that he called at one of the Bush-street theaters the other morning, and said to the manager: "Well, sir, you told me to call in a couple of weeks for your opinion of that play I left with you." "Play—play!" said the manager, rubbing his care-corrugated brow, "what play?" "Why, mine; don't you remember—realistic California play, Snorter Jake, or The Days of '49?" "Oh! yes, of course. Well, what about it?" "Well, as it's been here over two months, I dropped in to know whether you have accepted it." "Well, the fact is," said the autocrat of the boards, shutting the door and assuming a confidential air, "the fact is, your drama is a remarkably strong work, my dear sir; remarkably strong, but it needs—it needs pruning." "Does it?" "Yes; and then there's the third act. The action all through it needs livening up some, and the tableaux at its end isn't strong enough." "Want something more striking?" "Exactly, and then you'd better introduce a comic character or two; and—lem me see—wedge in a song or something." "How would a clog dance strike you?" "Well, I don't know about that. But by all means try to kill the heavy villain earlier in the last act—kill him with poison, if possible, pistols frighten the ladies in the audience, you know." "Think so, do you? Is that all?" "Ye-e-s, that's all I can think of just now. Here's the manuscript," fishing it out of a pigeon hole. "Just oblige me by opening it," said the author gloomily. The manager did so, and it disclosed nothing but a few quires of blank paper. And with an unearthly scowl the dramatist stalked out, leaving the astounded manager as much confused as one of his craft was ever known to be. And yet we talk about the encouragement of native talent.

The public will be glad to learn that Mr. Skithers, the eminent clog-dancer, who last appeared at Maguire's old theater about fourteen years ago, is to have a benefit next week. Mr. S. is rather old to do much dancing, but then he slipped down on a banana peel last week, and his friends immediately arranged for him a Grand Complimentary Testimonial. Miss Aurora Malone will also benefit next week. Miss Malone, it will be remembered, was the young lady who made an unsuccessful debut here in a minor part, some two years ago. Miss M. is suffering from a bad cold, and it is to be hoped that the public will respond liberally. It will gratify the great body of our theater-goers to learn that Tommy Skidmore, the eminent young lemonade seller in the lobby of the California Theater, will be the recipient of a testimonial benefit on the thirty-third of this month. This is tendered him by a long list of our prominent bankers and merchants, as can be seen by announcement in another column, and over forty brokers' clerks are now selling tickets. Mr. Budweiser Boothe, the eminent shoemaker, will take a benefit shortly at Platt's Hall, which has been hired for the purpose. Mr. Boothe is not a distant relative of Edwin Booth, as is erroneously reported, but has concluded to drop the final "e" from his name, which entitles him to a benefit. The public can find no worthier object for their generous patronage than Mrs. Pat Slushey, the eminent seamstress, who will take a benefit at the Grand Opera House this evening. Mrs. S. is not strictly a professional, but she sprained her ankle badly while coming out of the Standard Theater last week. Little Mike Slushey will sell his mother's photographs during the act—ankle, sprain and all. These photographs are cheap at 50 cents. Come one, come all!

The London correspondent of an Eastern paper represents that the "fashionable world of the British metropolis" was thrown into a state of excitement recently by the startling piece of society intelligence that "at an aristocratic dinner party the host led Sarah Bernhardt down to dinner first," in a company where "there was a Duke," and where "Marquises and Earls were as thick as Generals and Colonels in Arkansas." It is no wonder that such an outrage against the conventionalities should have produced a sensation in the British metropolis. Of course, all intelligent Americans are too familiar with the laws of precedence which govern the etiquette of the English dinner to require to be told that the host should have offered his arm to the Duke, and taken him in first. The Earls and Marquises should have come next, arm in arm, in the order of rank. As for M'lle Bernhardt, she having no title, the correct thing would have been for her to go in last, with the butler. The slighted Duke seems to have acted with great moderation under the circumstances; for, as every one knows, he would have been perfectly justified by the British social code if he had rebuked the host for the indignity of giving precedence to a plebeian woman by drawing his revolver and putting a bullet into his abdomen. That is the usual course pursued in cases of this kind by all high-spirited English noblemen.

It comes over us like a breath of the sweet South to read that the negro Williams, arrested on suspicion of having passed near the Roddan'e house, at Wheatland, at the time of the distinguished outrage on an iron-bar, five or six years ago, will soon be called up for examination; that is, some time between this and the year 1887. The energy of those Wheatland people is appalling. They are on the track of the cup of cold water said to have been asked for by the negro in April or May last, and if the heavy fogs continue, they believe that one or the other of the girls may wink with her left eye before long. Needless to say that if any corner of the State is green in the dry season, it is not Wheatland.

Alas! Grant isn't coming! And now the question is, What will Achilles A. Tudor—we beg the poet's pardon, Hector A. Stuart—do with that "Ode of Welcome?" After these painful months of incubation the result shouldn't be lost to the world. By the bye, the Hon. Barney P. Moon, ex-Alderman of New York city and a prominent ward statesman, is announced to arrive here next week. Could not the high-descended bard adapt the ode to the occasion? Ulysses S. Grant! Barney P. Moon! There are about as many poetic feet in the one name as in the other.

The Glasgow "Mail" says that Talmage wants earnestness, and originality, and knowledge of effect. For a canny Scot the Mail is singularly dull. Nothing of all these does Talmage want; he only wants the coin of the realm—and he gets it.

The official inquisitor of the Washington Herald having recently brought his boring apparatus to bear upon one A. C. Buell, suddenly struck oil of an unusually rich quality. Mr. Buell, as soon as tapped, declared that the country was not only going to the devil, but was almost there. The American people were all cynics in politics; they expect no good of their public men. If they find a man sincere, they call him a fanatic; if they find him honest, they call him a d—d fool. The American character, so far as there is any," says Mr. B., "is a compound of the bad manners of the English and the bad morals of the French, both made worse than the originals by awkwardness in the copying." This is truculent, if not truthful. But, in addition to these graces, it seems that "we (the Americans) have begun to absorb the hoggish traits of the German race," and to "drink in at once the beer and the venality of the Dutch." Mr. Buell seems to be a typical American. The bad manners and the hoggishness are apparent, and we may safely assume the rest:

"For he himself has said it,
And it's greatly to his credit."

The Boston "Post" states that the Duke of Argyll was actually permitted to pass through the Hub without a municipal demonstration! No brass band dogged his footsteps. The Common Council did not corral him in a hotel parlor and compel him to shake hands with all the hores and bummers connected with the Government; and the Mayor did not inflict upon him his windy eloquence in a half-hour speech. These singular facts would seem to warrant the cheerful conclusion that snobbery is dying out in the American Athens. But, alas! later advices destroy the pleasing illusion. It appears that the Common Council had gone off to a clam-bake, the Mayor was laid up with a sore throat, and the Boston bands are so high-priced that in these hard times nobody could be found to pay the piper. But O. W. Holmes will send the Duke a poem.

"Pull Dick, pull devil." Hallelujah Cox for Mayor! Reverend S. Kallawag for Mayor! How happy could we be with either, were t'other dear charmer away! Reverends to the front! Why not choose the clergy, in a lump, for everything? They make such a mess of religion they ought to do better in politics. Let's vote for them all. The Bishop of California would make a good Governor, Bishop Wingfield Lieutenant-Governor, Hemphill for Chief of Police, Stebbins for Auditor—no, that won't do, he wants others to hear him. We might make him the Board of Education, and Dr. Stone would do to run with the machine as Fire Commissioner.

The Californian "Historian of the Future" will be apt to rub his eyes when he comes to chronicle the first political contest in the State under her new Magna Charta. When he begins to study up the current literature of the day in search of material, he will find it demonstrated that Perkins, the "Black Republican" candidate, voted against the Fifteenth Amendment; that White, the "Workingman's" candidate, never did a day's work in his life; and that Glenn, the candidate of the Anti-Monopoly, Anti-Chinese party, is a land-monopolist on a prodigious scale, and tills the 55,000 acres of his monopoly by the aid of Chinese labor!

We are authorized to state, and in point of fact have seen the documents, duly certified, which prove that George C. Perkins never did charge ten dollars a dozen for addled eggs to a lone widow sitting by the shore of the sounding sea; and Farmer Glenn, we are also in a position to affirm, did not hunt down with Cuban bloodhounds and crucify on a redwood tree three innocent white laborers, because they were not Chinese. These infamous falsehoods, which are making the tour of the world and startling the remote Botocudo in his wilds, will henceforth excite only the loathing and contempt of those who have any to spare.

The Trustees of the Public Library, at their last meeting, had an "informal discussion," in which they wrestled strenuously with the conundrum: What is the correct manner of presenting Library bills to the Board of Supervisors? The Hon. J. S. Hager was in the Chair, and he ought to have an opinion on a point of social etiquette. For ourselves, we are clear that the correct thing would be to present the bills on a silver salver. The Supervisors would appreciate the elegance of that style; and if the messenger were a strong man, armed to the teeth, he might be able to get out again with the plate.

An Italian riot is expected to occur in New York every minute. It seems that the residents of that nationality erected in Central Park a statue of Columbus, holding the globe in his hand. The very next morning it was discovered that some infamous advertising man had crawled up and painted on the globe, "Use Skidmore's Pills." All the New York militia are under arms as we go to press.

An interesting collection of bald-pated old fogies, calling themselves "The National Board of Health," recently resolved, in solemn conclave, that their Secretary should be forbidden to "furnish any information to the press." The fun of the thing is seen in the fact that the reports and bulletins of this humptions and exclusive "Board" are made up entirely of items collated from the columns of the newspapers.

An Englishman, just returned from Cairo, informs Truth that the donkey-boys name their beasts after European celebrities; and that the most satisfactory jackass he found was the Bishop of London. If this Briton will take the trouble to come to the Pacific Coast, he will find reverend jackasses that can give the Bishop of London odds and leave him out of sight or hearing.

Zadkiel does the prophecy business for Great Britain and Ireland, and Benner for the United States, with general applause. When he declares, however, as he does in the last issue, that fat hogs will rule low this year, he takes an unfair advantage of the public, since he can bring his own prophecy to pass at any moment by throwing himself on the market.

Bro. Pickering commences a leading editorial in his issue of Thursday with the important announcement that "The office is now in communication with one of the heaviest raisin houses of Malaga, Spain." From this we infer that the business of Bro. P.'s paper is no longer to be limited to peanuts. Henceforth it will be "peanuts and raisins."

Mrs. Bazenbee, of Hayes Valley, has applied for a divorce because Mr. B. came home late the other night, fearfully "set up," and, holding a string of salt mackerel over her head, solemnly assured her that he had been to Saucelito all day fishing.

It is contrary to the law to cut down trees in Cyprus, and if G. W. had tried his little hatchet there he would have saved young America a great deal of trouble and disgust. The ways of Providence are inscrutable.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

It is very properly declared that the United States cannot rest contented with anything less than a complete neutralization of the Darien Canal, with guarantees entirely satisfactory to this end. Nothing else could have been expected, for we ourselves have said it and its greatly to our credit; and it is equally sure, or even more so, that entire neutralization of hunger and thirst and the consequent ills of life is the lot of those who are fortunate enough to take their breakfasts and lunches at Swain's, 213 Sutter street. The very best dining-rooms in the city, and the choicest of all things, in or out of season.

There seems to be some danger of the disappearance of the old Irish language as a spoken language, and scholars are deploring the fact, while they seize and preserve every distinctive feature of it before it fades into the limbo of forgotten things. The death of a national speech is a mournful event, and touches the thoughtful observer like the loss of a friend. For this latter there is happily a compensation. No one whose photograph has been taken by Bradley & Rulofson can ever pass away from this world. We may meet him no more, but the very light of his face remains with us.

The man who composed "Take Me Back to Home and Mother," is playing a banjo in a concert garden at Vicksburg.

The advent of the mysterious and colossal helmet in the courtyard of the Castle of Otranto has never been explained to the readers of that thrilling romance; and irreverent suggestions have been whispered that the author himself did not know where it came from, or what to do with it after it was landed. In plain English, he is said to have been smothered by the head-piece he invented. The exact opposite of this is true of White's hats, from 614 Commercial street. These are so essential to the finish of the man, that one feels lost without them.

The destruction of houses by fire in Russia is most appalling, if we are to believe the published statistics; and there seems to be no reason for doubting their correctness. One reflection forced upon the mind by the contemplation of so much ruin, is that nothing of the kind would have been possible had the plumbing arrangements of these houses been confided to such men as McNally & Hawkins, the oldest house in San Francisco, and the best-supplied with every improvement in water and gas pipes, chandeliers, faucets and lamps.

The "Liebig Extract of Meat Company" has its great factory, covering 20,000 sq. ft. on the Uruguay River, in the midst of the countless herds of cattle that roam the Pampas. The consumption in the season is often 1,000 to 1,200 head in a day; all well-developed, sound animals of at least four years of age. Every tin of the extract is tested at the factory, and again on arrival at Antwerp, and the standard of purity is inflexibly maintained. One pound of extract represents 45 lbs. of best beef, and the uses to which it is applicable in household economy are every day extending.

A small boy threw a lump of ice at another boy on Market street, and came very near being arrested for carrying congealed weapons.

It is thought that the new German tariff will greatly disturb the currents of trade, especially for Austro-Hungary, which must hereafter largely depend upon the wearisome navigation of the Danube. But why should the navigation of the Danube be so wearisome, when every one knows that the river is a noble one and the scenery on its banks most striking? The answer is plain: F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation Whisky has not yet been added to the resources of the steamers, and life is dull, uncheered by this admirable stimulant.

The report of large purchases of war supplies on account of the revolutionary party in Mexico is not generally credited in New York, where every inquiry has failed to bring to light the "tried and trusted" person who is said to have been acting for the principals in the matter. The case is very different with Montanya's Union Ranges, which have been so thoroughly tried that they are trusted in every part of the country, and cannot be kept out of sight. People will have those and no others; and people know what they want.

No exercise more decidedly strengthens the lungs and expands the chest than swimming, and to indulge in this properly one requires the open air and sea. At the Neptune and Mermaid Swimming Baths, foot of Larkin and Hyde streets, Prof. Mohor, who is a most accomplished teacher, gives every care and assistance necessary to inspire confidence even in the most timid novices. The beach is natural, and the waves come in direct from the ocean, so that the conditions are exceptionally good, whether for beginners or for those already skilled in the art. The supervision is strict, and everything is done to make the establishment worthy of public support.

The Chilian Government is making very large purchases of arms and military goods of all kinds in the East, to the great delight of manufacturers; and all purchases are paid for, cash down. This is the right way to do a wrong thing, for this amount of money wasted on these tools for killing would restore and preserve harmony and kindly feeling between Chili and Peru if it were invested in Landsberger's Private Cuvée, the most exquisite and agreeable wine known to men.

ART JOTTINGS.

Mr. Geo. H. Burgess, a painter whose specialty heretofore has heen portraiture in oil and water colors, has just placed on view, at Morris & Kennedy's, a large painting representing "Changing the Shift." The artist, in signing ths picture, says that it is "partially from a painting hy Frenzeny." Some years since, a water-color picture was executed hy that artist, and from this, or a photograph of it, Mr. Burgess has produced a work of which he ought to be thoroughly ashamed. In referring to Mr. Burgess, as a painter of portraits, it should have been said that he is hetter known as a retoucher of photographs. For many years he retouched in India ink, later on in water colors, and still later in oil. It is little wonder, then, that, in attempting a work such as "Changing the Shift," he should have made so disgraceful a failure—copy, though it is—for a work of this character requires the very highest grade of artistic skill. And to think that a painter, who ought never to aspire to anything outside of retouching, except it he to paint a miniature on ivory, should for a moment consider himself competent to arrange forty figures on a canvas of this size, and produce therefrom a work of art. It is astounding! And to think, too, that a man making any pretensions to art culture, either as an artist or connoisseur, who has resided for so many years in what is usually known as something of an art center, should paint such a work and he in hlissful ignorance of its execrable character.

The painter has generally followed the original drawing, or sketch—for such it was—and little mistakes in pose which crept into it, as they usually will in hastily executed drawings, havs heen elahorated in this picture to a painful degree. For example, in Frenzeny's drawing too much and unnatural motion is given to a hrawny fellow who has just emerged from the shaft, and is making his way hastily to the door. In Mr. Burgess' picture this fellow appears to he running. The chap sitting on the timher, Frenzeny had in an exceedingly easy attitude, lighting a pipe. Mr. Burgess seats him in a most painful position. Of course, in a large painting the faces had to he more elahorate, and sucb a looking set of heings as one secs here does away entirely with any idea he may have had regarding the perfect physique of those Comstock miners whose lahors have given so many millions of coin to the world, the past few years. These fellows not only look like criminals, hut they appear to hs near akin to the early visitors of sidewalk heer-harrels.

And when ws coms to texture, there is no differsnce whatever hetween that given to the accessories and tbe figures themselves. The iron floor, the wooden ceiling, the huge timhers, the men's clothing, and even the flesh itself, are all alike, so far as distinctive quality is concerned, and one can only he discerned from the other hy the form. The shirt on a man's hack, in this picture, is, of course, supposed to hs of a textile fahric, hut the painter has rendered it just as if it were of wood. A sameishness of color pervades the entire picture; the painter seems to bave mixed it with no confidence in himself, and he has hit upon such tints as make it all hut impossihle to render an ohject with any degree of luminosity.

There is just one spot in the picture which may be considered good, and that is Col. Fair's portrait. The striking and violent contrast hetween this and the rest of the picture is seen at a glance, and tells hut too plainly in what direction Mr. Burgess' talent as a painter lies, and the very fact of his having rendered this one figure so conspicuously, when hy its position it is not entitled to it, must he taken as conclusive evidence that the painter is quite ignorant of the most necessary quality in a genre work of this character– relative position.

The painter says after his autograpb, "Partially from Frenzeny's sketch!" What does he mean hy this? From what is the other part of the picture taken—from nature? Is he not aware that, although a figure may he changed here and an ohject there, it is a copy pure and simple? The few changes, even if they were an improvement, does not, can not, redeem it. It is safe to say that there are not six artists in the United States who could treat, to a successful conclusion, a subject such as this, upon so large a scale; and why a painter of practically no experience with such subjects should make himself ridiculous by attempting it, is truly marvelous.

It will he remembered tbat some years since a large photographic picture was made of the officers and attachés of the Bank of California. The photographs of each figure were pasted to a large canvas in the desired positions; the whole was then retouched in India ink. This was done hy Mr. Burgess, and a most excellent work it was too, of its kind; hut the artistic ahility to do such work is of quite a different character from that called for in the picture under review.

Wm. Keith has on view at this gallery a superb work, "Landscape with Cattle." It is the first work we remember to have seen hy this artist where he has rendered cattle so successfully, although they are not as prominent as in many of Fred. Voltz's or Van Marc's pictures. They, however, compare favorahly with the efforts of these masters, while the landscape could not well he excelled hy any one. Mr. Keith is husy at work upon a sketch taken during his recent southern trip, and which he believes will he the greatest success he has yet achieved.

Rix has returned from the north with material for several new pictures, which he purposes pushing to completion at an early day.

Art at the Fair this year will he about as usual. At any rate, undsr the present management the galleries will not he farmed out to any Eastern dealer in the "queer," and, of course, such stuff of home manufacture would not he appreciated. The fact is that, even admitting the advisihility of making an art display at a mechanic's fair when we have a puhlic art gallery capahle of displaying twice as many paintings as are produced, the gallery is altogether too large and harn-like. Even a work of exhihition size is lost in it, and for small pictures it is still worse. Mr. Bicknell's group of portraits ougbt hy all means to go there.

Charles Kertell has completed a hust of Tohy Rosenthal, which for a wood carver, whose works heretofore have afforded more amusement than instruction, must he considered a success. The likeness is unmistakahle, the expression tolerable, hut ths pose is had—too dramatic. Tohy Rosenthal carries himself with an easy and cultured mien.

A. A. Cohen has pronounced White an honest man. There, that settles the question. But what is A. A. after now! Slapping the Chronicle in the face and patting Kearney on the hack means something. If White had paid A. A. as he paid Casserly—i. e., greenhacks for gold—we wonder how A. A. would have pronounced then. Eh?

A country cannot he called peaceful when its Congress is in session.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Pedestrianism. Weston was presented with a handsome piece of plate and a gold watch and chain at the Alexandria Palace, near London, July 6th. Sir John Astley and G. A. Sala made the presentation.——The six day's walk at Agricultural Hall, London, walking time limited to 14 hours a day, was won by Vaughan, who made 330 miles; McCarty, second, 327 miles; Pettit, third, 301 miles.——Steve Brodie, known as the New York Newsboy, arrived here last Tuesday. He comes to the coast to walk Frank Edwards for the California belt. The match will probably come off in September.——Mr. Lawton, Superintendent of the Olympic Club, and Mr. McNeil, of the Caledonian Club, have made arrangements for a six day go-as-you-please match, to take place at the Mechanics' Pavilion on or about September 20, 1879. Valuable medals are offered, and in addition, 50 per cent. of the gate money will be divided amongst the winners. This is as it should be, and we are glad to see two such well known and highly respectable gentlemen as Messrs. Lawton and McNeil undertake the management of the contest. The reason that sport in California has languished so long is that hitherto gentlemen of means and position have held aloof from professional contests, and as a natural consequence such contests have almost invariably been gate money fizzles.——George Hazael has deposited £25 with the publisher of Bell's Life to walk Weston for the world's championship, or join a sweepstake with Rowell and Blower Brown.——A six hour's walk will take place at Saratoga Hall, Geary street, on Monday, August 3d, commencing at 12 M. The contestants are H. Williams, L. C. Straus, L. D. Switters, M. Goldsmith and A. Ellingbouse, all of whom are under 17 years of age.——London, August 1st.—Six members of the London Athletic Club and six other amateurs have given notice of their willingness to go to America.

Fishing.—Good pike-fishing along the Feather river.——Young sturgeon are reported to bite freely in the Sacramento river, near Baunon's slough.——Big Meadows, Plumas county, is one of the best places in California for fly-fishing. Streams are numerous, and have enough large pools to allow the angler to use as much line as necessary.——The Gwalhallo and its tributaries are at present the best trout streams near the city. A party of San Francisco gentlemen, who spent a week on this stream, caught over four thousand fish—one gentlman taking eighteen buudred alone. They report that the fish are in splendid condition. The easiest way to reach this stream is by rail to Duncan's Mills, thence by stage to the river, where there is a good hotel, in which first-class accommodations can be had for one dollar and a half per day.——Fly-fishing on Lake San Andreas is now very good. The fish are abundant, and take the fly ravenously, both casting from shore and trolling.——Pilarcitos Lake also affords good sport.——Lake Chabot, at San Leandro, is a paradise for fishermen, the trout being large and in full flesh; in fact, they are the finest lake trout in the State, both for sport and the table.

Rowing.—The single-scull race between Leahey and Nelson for an advertised $1,000 and the championship was rowed at Long Bridge last Sunday. The course was from a stake-boat off Channel street around a stake-boat off the Powder Works beyond the Rolling Mills, a distance of one mile and a half, and return. The start was made at 11:05, Leahey going to the front at once, pulling thirty-eight to the minute, and keeping this lead all through. At the Powder Mills he was six lengths ahead, winning easily in 27:05; Nelson's time being 27:40.——Leahey has telegraphed to W. Cottsworth, of Victoria, B. C., accepting his challenge for $1,000 and the championship, and offering to pay his expenses here in the event of a match being made.——The sailing race for Whitehall boats, last Monday, was won by Henry Hoyt, in the Captain Guion, Sea Gull second, Jabez Howes third.——A telegram has just been received from Mr. Cottsworth, stating that he will not row Leahey unless boats with stationary seats are used. Of course, this puts all chance of a race out of the question, and entitles Mr. Leahey to the championship of this coast.

Boxing.—Arthur Chambers and Harry Maynard signed articles on July 30th to fight a fair, stand-up, glove contest for a purse of $1,500 and the light-weight championship; the meeting to take place within two weeks from date. Both men have gone into active training. W. Edwards will second Chambers, W. Riley will most likely second Maynard. It is highly creditable to the pluck of Harry Maynard that he should have arranged a meeting with so redoubtable a champion as Chambers, and we think a lively fight may be looked for.——Mike Donovan and W. McClellan are both training very hard for their coming battle. Mike's headquarters are at Joe Dieves' Three-mile House, San Leandro road. McClellan stays in town, but keeps very close.——Since the above was set in type, the match between Maynard and Chambers has been declared "off."

Baseball.—Games last Sunday at the Recreation Grounds: Reno vs. Eagles—score, 20 to 2; Gattling vs. Franklin—score, 13 to 9. At Oakland last Saturday: Oakland vs. Athletics—score, 9 to 4; Knickerbocker vs. Athletics—score, 11 to 1. Games next Sunday at the Recreation Grounds: Knickerbocker vs. Star. At Oakland: California vs. Mutual.——On Sunday, August 10th, the Knickerhocker and Omaha Clubs will come together, and, as both clubs are pretty evenly matched, a good game may be expected. As yet it has not been settled as to whether the game will be played here or in Oakland. Due notice of the selection of place, however, will be given next week.

Picnics.—Italian Bersaglic Sharpsbooters, Willow Grove Park, West Berkeley, Sunday.——California Jager, Fairfax Park, Sunday.——Workingmen's Benevolent Society, Badger's Park, Sunday.——Caucasian Joint Picnic, Shell-mound Park, Berkeley, Sunday.——Columbia Lodge, No. 127, I. O. B. B., Schuetzen Park, Alameda, Sunday.——Excursion to Cremorue Gardens, Martinez. Steamer S. M. Whipple leaves Washington street wharf 10 A. M. Sunday.——Excursion to Sonoma. Steamer Herald leaves Washington-street wharf 9 A. M. Sunday.

Bicycling.—David Stanton rode a race against three trotting horses, at Lillie Bridge, London, July 10th. At twenty-one miles Stanton was so far ahead that the horses were withdrawn. The bicyclist kept on till he had made forty miles; time—2 hours, 21 minutes and 28 seconds. His time from twenty-six miles (1 hour, 30 minutes and 2 seconds) being the best on record.

Harriman, the Maine pedestrian, who was second to Rowell in the great six days' walk in New York, has just accomplished another pedestrian feat. He has walked off with another man's wife. The outraged husband at present holds the stakes.

Shooting.—Deer hunting in the mountains around Salinas, Santa Cruz and Cloverdale is the sport of the season for our city sportsmen. Some of the largest bucks seen for many years have been killed this season. The law as it now stands, forbidding the killing of does and fawns, has a good effect, as it saves many hundred deer, and bucks are more plentiful every year.——At Bird's Point last Monday C. Robinson shot a match with R. B. Johnson for $100 a side. The former won easily; score, 6 to 4 at single birds, and 3 to 1 at double birds. H. Parker and Mr. Johnson then shot a draw at six nigh birds, a freeze-out draw by Robinson Lambert, both killing all their birds and dividing the money.——A target match was shot at Berkeley last Sunday between Lieutenants McElhinney and Jenkins, one hundred shots at two hundred yards. The latter won; score, 411 to 406.——There will be a grand pigeon shooting tournament at the Sacramento State Fair next week, that will bring together all the best shots in the State——There is some talk of matching John Ruth, of Oakland, against the Utah champion, to break 500 glass balls, Ruth to use a Ballard rifle and his opponent a shotgun——Deer are plentiful along the ridge between Deer Creek and Yuba.——Doves are plentiful a short distance north of Sacramento.——Snips shooting commenced Friday, August 1st. A dispatch from Reno reports bags of forty at Truckee Meadows, a few miles from Reno.——Hares are very abundant in the Santa Clara Valley. There will be splendid coursing when the grain is cut.——A target shoot is now progressing at the Presidio. It commenced yesterday and will finish at 12 M. to-day. There are thirty competitors, ten from each military division of the Pacific coast, from whom will be selected a team to represent this coast at Creedmoor in September.

ARIZONA.

Last week the News Letter gave an account of the terrible accident to Mr. B. W. Reagan, one of the owners of the Silver King mine, and now we have the sad duty of chronicling the death of this estimable gentleman. The news will be most distressing to his many friends in the Territory.

Col. Harvey Lake, an old pioneer of Arizona, who died last week at Maricopa, was buried in this city on Tuesday with Masonic and military honors. Col. Lake left San Francisco but a few short days ago, with the intention of mining and shipping the ores of the Ajo Copper Mines, having entered into a contract with the company to do so.

We hear of a party of seven mining engineers, who left New York on the 28th ultimo for a tour through Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. They make the journey in the interest of capitalists of New York and Philadelphia, and will doubtless be welcome guests in the mining localities that they may visit.

The Aztlan Mill, owned by a new York company, was burned by supposed incendiaries on the 19th ultimo. The loss aggregates $12,000, and is a serious disaster for the Groom Creek and adjacent districts.

The Tiger Mill is running smoothly, turning out bullion at the rate of $2,000 per day.

The Big Bug mining district has become the favorite with Chicago capitalists, who have at present some twenty properties bonded and favorably entertained. The Gross and the Storm Cloud mines are reported as sold for $16,000. Gov. Fremont having reported favorably of the Crook Mine, one-half of it has been sold in New York, and early in the present month active work, upon an extended scale, will be commenced. Gov. Fremont has done a great deal, during his Eastern visit, to foster the interests of Arizona and to bring them into prominent notice, for which his constituency should feel a large share of gratitude. We expect shortly to see him in this city, en route for the territory. In 1875 or '76 was discovered, some twenty-eight miles northeast from Prescott, a very extensive copper deposit, the lead croppings being from 12 to 16 feet wide, with ore which assayed as high as 40 per cent. The owners of the property have recently begun its development, and their prospects are most encouraging. Most of the travel to Arizona from the East now goes by way of the Atcheson, Topeka and Santa Fe railroad, which route, in comparison with that via the Union Pacific and San Francisco, is shorter in time and the expense is less. The news from the Silver King and Tombstone districts continues encouraging, and new mines are daily being located and developed. The drift of capital appears to be steadily heading for Arizona, from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis, and we are much mistaken if these favored localities do not absorb a large share. The pump at the Vulture mine was, at last accounts, working well, and the mill was to commence work on the 21st ult., with a very large supply of good ore on the dump.

The weather in Arizona just now is intensely hot, and will so continue for some weeks. When the cooler season comes, we have every reason to believe that a large number of enterprising men, controlling capital, will visit the territory.

BILKS IN CHURCH.

Last Sunday was the 25th anniversary of Calvary Church, and the Senior Elder, James B. Roberts, was called upon to make a statement of its condition, progress, etc. This he did, showing commendable progress in every good word and work. But what surprised and grieved us most was that an Elder in the Church of Christ should stand up before the pulpit and an audience of one thousand persons, and, after complimenting them, declare "that there were bilks in the church!" Not Honorable Bilks, but men who persistently subscribe literally to the church debts just to swell the list, and yet who never pay, and, for that matter, never intended to pay. Hence it was, he said, that the church was now in debt $10,000. This same Elder went on to say that the sexton had much trouble in endeavoring to please every one in regard to church ventilation. A fat woman wanted more fresh air, while others not so favored desired the windows closed, etc. Then he fell upon the young men who go to the theaters and stand in the lobbies for hours inhaling tobacco smoke, etc., "and yet they come to church and complain of the want of pure air." Barring these vulgarisms and the Elder's egotism the report was every way creditable to the church and congregation.

ZAMLOCK.

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Post street, between Mason and Taylor. The Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor, will preach on Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7½ P.M. Sunday School and Bible Classes, 9½ A.M. Prayer and Praise Service at 6½ P.M.

THE DAY BOOK
FROM
Saturday to Saturday

St. Petersburg, July 26th.—The Minister of the Interior reports 3,501 fires during June, causing a damage of over 12,000,000 roubles. Five hundred and eight fires were of incendiary origin. The theater in Kremlin, Moscow, has been burned by Nihilists.——PARIS, July 26th.—The Municipal Council has renamed a large number of streets, including the Boulevard Haussman, named during the reign of Napoleon III.——NEW YORK, July 28th.—Argument will he heard to-day in the Supreme Court by Justice Porter, on the application of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company for an injunction restraining the city from collecting the unpaid tax laid ou the company in 1874.——WASHINGTON, July 28th.—The Secretary of the Interior Saturday rendered a decision in the application of the New Idria Mining Company, of California, for a review of the department's decision of 1871, which rejected their application for a patent for 480 acres of mineral land in California. Secretary Schurz concurs in the decision of 1871, "in holding that a larger quantity of land is embraced in this application than was contemplated or authorized by law." By the decision the New Idria Mining Company, hy its purchase of property, "did not acquire the right to have or take a patent for more than 160 acres of land."——NEW YORK, July 28th.—At a largely-attended meeting of the trades, including piano makers, cahinet makers, varnishers, carvers, molders and wood workers, on Sunday, resolutions were adopted favoring the shortening of a day's labor to eight hours, pledging themselves to drop the question of wages.——SEATTLE, July 28th.—The fire Saturday evening proves to have been disastrous. The huildings destroyed are all wooden structures, occupied principally hy saloons, warehouses, shops, etc. Some leading husiness houses are heavy losers by the removal of their goods, which were greatly damaged and lost.——NEWARK, N. J., July 28th.—Four thousand Germans, in mass meeting yesterday, protested against the enforcement of what they termed the obsolete Sunday laws, which are chiefly directed against Germans, and at war with the spirit of liberty and humanity.——NEW YORK, July 28th.—The Report of the Canadian Commissioner of Fisheries presents valuahle statistics of the fishing industries throughout the Dominion. In 1877 the value of the total catch was $12,029,955. Last year it amounted to $15,-315,679. Fresh salmon packed in ice represented a value of $306,982, while the fish in cans was worth $988,576. Of this, British Columbia represented the larger proportion. On Fraser River 2,500 white men and Indians are engaged in fishing. Chinese do the work of canning. It is proposed to stock Fraser River with the young of California. Seven estahlishments are devoted to fish culture in the Provinces.——PARIS, July 28th.—The Senatorial Committee on Ferry's Education Bill has voted all the clauses except three, one heing Article 7, which forbids memhers of unauthorized societies from teaching in the schools.——MEMPHIS, July 28th.—Ten additional cases were reported to the Board of Health this afternoon, six negroes. The special policemen engaged in taking the census of the city, completed their task to-day. Their report shows the population of Memphis to he 16,110; whites, 4,283; hlacks, 11,287; adults, 10,551, children 5,559. Of the whole, 8,743 have had the fever, leaving 5,367 susceptible to the disease.——PARIS, July 28th.—In consequence of the ravages of the phylloxera in French vineyards, the Minister of Commerce and Agriculture promises, as soon as the Government Commissioner has reported on the question of planting American vines, he will give immediate effect to its decision.——VERSAILLES, July 29th.—The Chamher of Deputies, hy a vote of 249 ayes to 166 noes, has adopted the proposal of M. Proust for the demolition of the ruins of the Tuilleries. The site will he transformed into a garden.——SAN FRANCISCO, July 30th.—The amount of customs dues paid in this port this month is $548,-453, making a total since January 1st of $3,292,988, against $3,520,845 for the corresponding period in 1878. There are now in port under engagement to load wheat twenty-two vessels, of 30,000 tons, having a carrying capacity of 900,000 ceutals. There are 35,000 tons of disengaged tonnage in port, and 170,000 tons on the way here.——Whole fields of ripening grain in West Chehalis county, Oregon, have heen found to he shriveled.——The hurning of stacked hay in Santa Clara county is of frequent occurrence.——Fires on Willow Creek, Amador county, have hurnt much timber and dry feed.——Battle Mountain, Nevada, will ship over 100,000 pounds of wool this year.——Lieutenant Farrow and Umatilla scouts have discovered the "Sheepeater" Indians on Crooked River, Idaho, 100 strong. Farrow will attack as soon as a position is secured.——Much excitement prevails in Beaver county, Utah, over the discovery of placer gold on Gold Creek, forty miles from Beaver.

LIVE FOR SOMETHING.

Live so that your virtues will excel your vices, and shine hrighter and hrighter as the years grow less and less. Live so that you can look to the past without regretting that you have done too little in this life. Labor for something noble and praiseworthy. Live so that in passing from this to another shore you will leave hehind you

Footprints on the sands of Time.

Live for something. There is no one but what can do some good—no one who need say, "I can accomplish nothing;" none who need spend their lives in idleness. Life is a blank hook, every page of which must bear something worthy of record, or a blot that can never be erased.—Social Notes.

Moscow still holds its own as the London of Russia, in spite of St. Petersburg and its port and palaces. Moscow commands the commerce of the Empire, and stands at the top in the Report of Customs Duties, which it heads with 15,000,000 of roubles in 1878, against 9,200,000 roubles for St. Petersburg, a falling off from 1869, when St. Petersburg reached 11,000,000 and Moscow not quite 9,500,000. The Russian custom duties for 1878 were 58,000,000, exceeding those of 1877 hy 27,000,000.

An elegant assortment of Gold Watches and Chains at Randolph & Co.'s, corner Montgomery and Sutter streets.

CHARLES MATHEWS AND J. L. TOOLE.

The following letter was addressed by the late Mr. Charles Mathews to Mr. J. L. Toole. It is still in possession of the last-named eminent comedian, and it has never been published. It may prove amusing to many of the readers of the Era Almanack:

"BELLE VUE MANSIONS, BRIGHTON, August 6, 1873.

"MY DEAR TOOLE:—Were you ever in a mess? If you never were, I can explain it to you, having been in several; indeed, I don't mind confessing to you that I am in one now, and strange to say, you are perhaps the only man who can get me out of it. You need not hutton up your pockets, it isn't a pecuniary oue. Only fancy, after thirty years' practice and experience, I have made a mistake in my dates, and for the first time in my life find myself engaged to two managers at the same time! Now, they say a man connot serve two masters, but I can—if they will only come one after the other—only one at a time—one down, t'other come on; but to play at Bristol and at the Gaiety on the same night (and keep it up for a week), I don't see my way to accomplish. In a moment of enthusiasm I engaged to begin with Chute on September 29th, and I had scarcely done so when Hollingshead reminded me that I was hooked to begin with him on that date, and that it could not he altered. Conceive my dismay! Chute holds fast—'can't be altered'—so does Hollingshead—'can't be altered.'

"Now, Toole—dear Toole—BELOVED Toole—can't you play a week longer at the Gaiety? CAN'T you let me begin there on Monday, Oct. 6th (as I thought I did), and get me out of my dilemma? CAN'T you make this sacrifice to friendship and put three or four hundred more into your pocket? Virtue is not its own reward, but an extra week of fine business is.

"Now, Toole—adored Tooley—best of men—first of comedians—most amiable of your sex—burst into tears—throw your arms round my neck and soh out: 'Do with me as thou wilt—play me another week—play me another three hundred, and he happy."

"Breathless with anxiety, yet swelling with hope, I await your answer. Pity the sorrows of a poor old man, and even telegraph 'Yes,' rather than keep me in suspense.

"What's a week to an able-bodied low comedian? Child's play. Why, you'll he wanting to throw in morning performances as well to keep you from rusting. It is a chance for you—avail yourself of it and bless me, and I'll bless you, and Hollingsbead will bless us both, and Chute will bless us all.

"With my intermediate blessing, ever faithfully yours,

"C. J. MATHEWS."

SUPPER AT PEKIN.

The repast was charming. What dishes, bowls and plates there were! Birds'-nest soup, sharks'-fin soup, chicken broth, lapwings'-eggs soup, and countless other dishes, all cooked to perfection—from the fish, with sharp sauce, to the apricot kernel milk, and the sweet salad of young radish-tops. Loutalou offered us, with his chop-sticks, a piece of roast duck. We reciprocated by taking, now from the dish, now from our plate, pieces of fowl or pork, and placing them on his. "A preserved Canton orange for Miss Perfumed Jade," a water-chestnut for another lady, for each guest, if he wishes to he polite, must pass half his time in heaping up his neighbors' plates with different kinds of food, and accepting, with many "tching, tching," or "touo shie," all that is offered him in return.

An Arkansas paper puts it this way: "We knew a man that won enough money on the horse race Saturday to hire a negro to hoe cotton a week."

THE AVERILL MIXED PAINT

Is manufactured from strictly pure White Lead, Zinc, and Pure Linseed Oil, to which is added Water Glass, which chemically unites the ingredients and holds them in solution, so they cannot separate. As a house paint it has no equal, producing a brilliant glossy finish, impervious to the weather, and

Will Last Twice as Long

as any other paint made. It is of pure white, and any Shade or Color desired, mixed ready for the brush, so that any one can apply it.

Our wagon and machinery paints, from the more common colors to the finest vermilion, are specially desirable.

Our fire-proof roof, barn and bridge paint, manufactured from oxide of iron, is the best and cheapest paint for the purpose that can be produced.

Put up in ¼, ½, 1 and 5 gallon cans, and in barrels, sold by the gallon. Send for sample card of colors and price list. Address,

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, the beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, which for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of the tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in the Pescadero river.

"BIZ."

Money continues to be superabundant, yet securely locked up—idle for want of employment. Interest rates here, as well as elsewhere, are lower than ever before known. There seems to be a want of confidence in the future. Improvements going forward in the city are very meagre, but few buildings being erected, yet building material is cheaper than ever, and the cost of erection far below any previous period in our history. Recently there seems to be an increased inquiry for Real Estate in desirable localities for residences. This is particularly noticeable upon California street and other streets traversed by cable railroads; California street property seemingly having the preference by reason of its altitude and the superior birds-eye views obtainable as one glides along in the Palace Cars that are ever kept scrupulously clean and neat. These cars now run out to Cemetery Avenue direct, and are attracting much pleasure travel in that direction.

The Bag Ring, with its fifteen millions of Burlap Grain Sacks under lock and key, continues to call forth considerable comment upon 'Change and elsewhere. It is very generally understood that last year's combination sold out their entire stock to present holders, and at low figures. It is said that the Bags are being carried at 7½ per cent. interest. Wm. T. Coleman & Co. are the agents. Lazard Freres are said to be parties to the lock-up, but whether the Jute Bag Factory Company are entirely disinterested in the movement is not altogether clear. Our own opinion is that farmers and interior traders are better supplied with Bags than is generally supposed. We know that farmer Glenn, the embryo Governor, has secured his 340,000 Grain Sacks, and so of Dr. Toland, Parrott, and other large grain producers. Oregon is also well stocked, and so it goes. We are not believers in the Bag Ring combination price—11½@12½c.

Borax.—This month and for the year onward there is to be an increased output over that of the last twelve months, but not to an extent to break prices. Eastern orders are here for 400 tons at some abatement from the prices ruling the past twelve months—say 6½@8½c.

Case Goods.—Our canners are very actively engaged putting up Peaches, Tomatoes, etc., having had thus far a fine season, good fruit in abundance, and at low rates. Salmon from the North is coming forward in moderate supply, but the bulk of the Columbia river catch and that of Frazer river will be shipped direct to England. Our best customers this season seem to be Chicago and other cities East of it. Sales of 5,000 cases Salmon to go by rail may be noted at $1 12½ for 1-lb. and $1 75 per dozen for 3-lb. tins. The Oregon steamship State of California brought us 7,400 cs. Columbia river Salmon.

Wheat and Flour.—The arrivals are now steadily increasing in volume, but shippers are less anxious buyers at last week's prices of $1 75 for No. 1 Shipping, and now only offer $1 70@$1 72½ for best samples. The City of Pekin, for Hongkong, carries several thousand bbls. of Flour, at an average cost of $5. We note sales, this week, of 2,000 bbls. Extra Genesee Mills for Callao, and 1,000 bbls. of same for Central America. The price of Superfine is $4 25; Extra Superfine, $4 50@$4 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $5 25@$5 75, the latter rate for Silk-dressed Extras.

Barley.—The Eastern demand seems to be filled for the moment. The bark Colusa has sailed for Wilmington to load 1,500 tons Brewing for New York. The Fr. bark Delphine Melaine has 1,200 tons Chevalier, for Melbourne. We quote the latter, $1 50@$1 60; Feed, 75@80c., and Brewing 87½c. for New, $1 05 for Old.

Coffee.—The market continues firm at 15c@16½c for fair to best quality of Central American Greens.

Sugar.—Eastern supplies are now coming forward more freely than for a long time past; several thousand hhds of Refined having been bought for this market prior to the late advance of ¼c per pound in New York. All this could and would have been avoided by a little good management. It is bad business for our refiners, who feel called upon to keep down prices here much lower than they would otherwise do. We quote Island Raws, 6⅞c@8c in bags and kegs; Bay Cube, 9¾c@10c; California Crushed, 9¾c; Yellow Coffee, 7⅞c@8¼c.

Rice.—The stock of China is large. We quots Mixed, 4⅝c; No. 1 China, 5½c; Sandwich Island, 5½c.

Teas.—On the 6th inst. S. L. Jones & Co. will sell at public auction 3,500 packages of Comet Oolongs and Japan Greens, of the importation of Messrs. Macondray & Co., all well worthy the attention of the trade.

Metals.—The market is sluggish for all leading staples and quotations are more or less nominal.

Quicksilver.—Holders very generally asks 34½@35c, but the City of Peking will carry supplies bought at 34@34½c.

Coal.—Supplies from the North coast and from British Columbia are liberal, selling at low prices. The cargo of Liverpool Steam, 2,300 tons, per ship New York, is reported sold at $6 25.

Freights and Charters.—But few charters have been written during the week for any voyage. The tonnage en route to this port, so far as known now, aggregates 165,500 tons, against same time last year of 210,000 tons. The disengaged tonnage in port 40,000 tons, against 58,000 tons same period last year. We have on the berth, at date, 25,000 tons against 56,000 tons same date last year. The present Spot rate for Wheat to Havre or Liverpool, direct, 44@45s.; to Cork or Queenstown, for orders U. K., 50s.; or to the Continent, 50@52s. 6d., according to the port of discharge. Coal freights from the North coast and British Columbia are nominal at $2 50, but engagements to any extent could not be secured, even at $1 50, owing to coal strikes at Seattle and Wellington mines.

Mr. Julius M. Keeler is likely to be chosen Republican candidate for the City Superintendeucy of Schools. Mr. Keeler was the organizer of the Oregon public schools, afterward took charge of the Pacific University, at Forest Grove, in that State, and later became Superintendent of the Public Schools in Portland District. His qualifications are undoubted, and his record a most honorable one; and his experience as an officer of Cavalry during the war cannot have lessened his executive abilities.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 62 as compared with 84 last, and 76 for the corresponding week last year. There were 6 Chinese. Four accidents, but neither suicide nor homicide. The zymotics were: 2, diptheria; 3, typhoid fever; 2, infantile cholera; 1, croup. Diseases of the respiratory organs are less fatal. There were: 5, phthisis; 5, pneumonia, and 1, bronchitis. The other principal causes of death were: 3, infantile convulsions; 3, enteritis; 3, heart disease. Two each of brain disease, Bright's disease, debility, and one each of apoplexy, alcoholism, puerperal convulsions, epilepsy, old age, pyœmia tumor. There were no deaths in the Third or Fifth Wards, and one only in the First and Eighth. Ten persons died in the public institutions.

Photography has its disadvantages. A friend of ours who has just returned from Egypt tells us that the donkey-boys of Cairo call their quadrupeds by the names, not only of our eminent men, but of the fashionable beauties whose photographs adorn our shop-windows. He successively gave a trial to Mrs. Langtry, Lady Lonsdale, Mrs. Wheeler and Mrs. Cornwallis West. The first he found very lazy, the second had a disagreeable habit of rolling in the sand, the third walked well but trotted unevenly, while the fourth was skittish, and threw her head up in a jerky manner. Then he hired Sir Stafford Northcote, but this beast, although sure footed, was slow in his movements, and after riding several other of our statesmen, he fell back upon the Bishop of London, whom he describes as a very serviceable jackass. But our friend, who is a very fervent member of the Church of England, was much pained by the boy to whom the Bishop belonged frequently beating him with a heavy stick, and addressing him as a "deevil." Our friend suggests that the Foreign Office should instruct our Consul-General to protest against the names of English divines and English ladies being given in this irreverent spirit to Cairo donkeys, and certainly it does seem that, if Lord Beaconsfield is not sick of his "spirited foreign policy," there is an opportunity for a stern exercise of his Lordship's Imperial instincts toward the Cairo donkey-hoys.—London Truth.

The Terrace Baths, Alameda, are attracting hundreds of people in this glorious weather. The water is pleasantly free from chill, and many remain in the water an hour or more without shivering with cold. It is always high tide at the Terrace, it being constructed like a dam. The water is changed nearly every night, and is sparkling and clear, causing the most luxurious sense of enjoyment. Everything is well-ordered and respectable; and there is a separate department for ladies. Last night there was music for the entertainment of the crowds who went over; and we should not be surprised to see 1,000 there this evening, reveling in the warm air and soft water and delicious moonlight.

ZAMLOCK.

Mrs. Lewis, Thurlow Block, corner of Kearney and Sutter streets, is the fashionable dressmaker of the city and State. Her fitter is the most experienced in the city, and able to tell at a glance, as the celebrated Worth does, where the dress is at fault or where it needs another touch. Her dresses give a satisfaction in wearing, and fit with an exactness not attained in any other establishment. All the fashionably-attired ladies of our first circles go to Mrs. Lewis, as a matter of course; and her orders from the interior cities and the coast are increasing with every day.

It is often remarked by visitors to this coast that our California belles are as remarkable for exquisitely tinted complexions as their fair English sisters, and their cousins and their aunts, and they are surprised at the fact, seeing the dryness of our climate. The truth is, and we violate no confidence in publishing it, that M'me Rachel's Enamel Bloom is on the toilet table of every San Francisco lady, and to its admirable quality of protecting the delicate skin is due the preservation of the charms native to our high-bred beauties.

Surprising the Irish.—Price has just finished three of his finest and most costly sets of famous carvers, for John D. Barbour, of Barbour Bros., the well-known thread and linen manufacturers of Lisburn, Ireland. No doubt they will be as much surprised in Ireland as they were in England, France and Germany to see such cutlery made in a new country like California. With all the experience of the Sheffield manufacturers, their finest work will not compare with that of M. Price, of this city.

YEARS AGO.

She was seated close beside me,
On a May day, years ago:
Heart of mine you must not chide me,
I was but a boy, you know.

'Tis no secret, I'll reveal it,
Heart of mine, 'twas long ago:
This lock of hair, if I did steal it,
I was but a boy, you know.

Was she pretty? Did I love her?
Heart of mine 'twas years ago;
And that pang of bliss is over,
I was but a boy, you know.

"Was she rich?"—now that is funny.
Heart of mine 'twas long ago:
What cared I for lands or money?
I was but a boy, you know.

And you parted—how you missed her,
Heart of mine 'twas years ago: [her,"
"And you pressed her hand and kissed
I was but a boy, you know.

Do I love her yet—O, olden,
Precious past, thou heart of mine,
See, this lock of hair is golden,
And the head that wore it—thine.

WHO ARE THE ZULUS?

An expensive English war, and the murder of the Prince Imperial, give an interest to the question, "Who are the Zulus?" The reader who desires a lengthy, detailed and historical answer, will find it in an exceedingly readable book recently published in London, of which Captain Lucas, of the British Army, who has long resided in South Africa, is the author. For the purposes of this article, it may be briefly stated that the Zulu Kingdom is of comparatively recent origin. Its founder was a bloodthirsty and ambitious savage, named Chaka, who, hearing in 1813 from some shipwrecked English sailors of Napoleon the First, formed the insane idea of rivaling the great Corsican conqueror. He had just then succeeded to the chieftainship of a petty tribe dwelling on the sea coast, and as he subdued tribe after tribe, they were compelled to take the name of Zulu, which in their language means "heaven." That Chaka was a most remarkable savage, and had a great talent for war, is undoubted, since he invented what may be termed the Zulu Phalanx, and that peculiar method of fighting which proved so fatal to the British at Isandula. He saw, with true Napoleonic instinct, that owing to the scarcity of cover in Zululand, it was better to fight in the open ground in heavy masses. Some of these were forty deep. The attack commences at rifle-range. The center, then, is trained to give way, as though in rapid retreat, the wings making off to the right and left. Their enemy then naturally pushes off in pursuit. At a given signal, the Zulus halt, and wheeling, rush upon the foe with frightful yells, protecting themselves with their shields, and dealing death with their short assagais. Every soldier carries three or four throwing assegais, but his chief reliance is the short, heavy bladed assegais, for close quarters. During the present war they have, at long range, made use of the Martini Henry rifle. The officers march in the rear and communicate their orders by swift runners, trained for that purpose. In battle, the General, with his staff, seeks some rising ground, and keeps one of the oldest regiments as a reserve, as was the custom with Napoleon. From 1813 to 1828 Chaka carried out his terrible policy, devastating adjacent countries and forcing the inhabitants to acknowledge his rule. A more cruel monster never ruled even in Dahomey. His ferocity proved his ruin, for, hearing that his troops had suffered a defeat, he ordered the execution of two thousand of their wives, among whom were the wives of his two brothers, Dingana and Umlanganc. These conspiring against him, caused him to be murdered while he slept. The two brothers then fought to settle the succession, and Dingana, having slain his rival, became King of the Zulus. This monster invited some seventy Dutch Boers to a hanquet, to talk over some disputed question, and massacred them, and suddenly marching upon their settlement, murdered nearly seven hundred women, children and old men. This treacherous bloodthirstiness is the foremost characteristic of the present King, Cetewayo. He has been a terrible scourge to the Boers on the one side and to the English settlers of Natal on the other. The British Government could not, in justice to its South African subjects, permit this savage to longer continue robbing and murdering the settlers. Either he had to be subjected or the settlements abandoned. It is said that the Chaka family, in some degree, resembles that of Napoleon, whom the Zuln chief desired to imitate. The death of the heir of Napoleon, hy the hands of the Zulus, gives an interest to the resemblance.

Of these electors, thirty-five States and Territories of the Union furnished 16,911, while fifty-four foreign States furnished 21,097. Of these latter, the United Kingdom is credited with 12,035, and Germany comes next on the list with 5,644; leaving 3,418 from the rest of the world. These statistics do not fully represent the cosmopolitan character of our people, because there are numerous unnaturalized persons from other countries. Our present population being in excess of 300,000, the registration above enumerated gives one voter in every eight inhahitants. There are now upwards of 25,000 children (native born), hetween six and seventeen years of age, attending the public schools, who, as they attaiu their majorities, will materially alter the complexion of the hallot.

CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCIATIONS IN LONDON AND IN SAN FRANCISCO.

England has besn passing tbrougb a period of ssvsre dspression, and ths shop-keepers, mors particularly in London, ars feeling the hard times more than most other classes, owing to the growth of co-operative associations for the supply of articles of domestic consumption. These associations are incorporated under the Limited Liability Act, and to a great extent ths customere are ths shareholders. The principle is to make a large turn-over at a very small profit, and thus to dispense with the shop-keepers and to save the large profit whicb the London tradssmen have hitherto put in their pockets. The effect of these co-operative stores bas been so serious in London that deputations of shop-keepers have gone to the leading members of the Government and to prominent members of Parliamsnt, to try to induce them to make it illegal for any person, in aay position under the Government, to participate in the management or directorship of these companies. This step has been taken because the movemsnt was begun by members of the civil service, who felt tbat ths proits of shop-keepers wers so exorbitant that they wers wasting annually a large part of their incomes, which by co-operative action they could easily savs. The straitened circumstances of large classes, within the last fsw years, have caused tbem to resort to these co-opsrative stores, where they can supply themselves at but little over wholesale prices; and ths sbop-keepers are finding that uot only are they suffering from hard times, but that tbey are being dessrted by tbeir formsr customers. This has spread alarm in their ranks, and promises to affect very seriously ths valus of property, because, in a city like London, good positione for shops are sought after, and do a great deal to sustain ths value of property. Rents are thus coming down, and, altogether, it is probahls that thsre will he a rs-arrangement of ths retail trade of London on a mucb mors economical basis than hitherto. A saving of probably ten per cent. on the cost of living will prepare the Londoner to meet tbe competition of ths world, which is every day growing fisrcer.

And now ws come to San Francisco, and we offer the opinion tbat the rsnts that havs been paid on Montgomery street and Kearny street have been, all things considered, much higher than those paid in Regent street or Piccadilly in London, wbere the principal fashionable shops are situated. Retail profits in San Francisco have been enormous, though no doubt now very much rsduced; and we think thers is ampls room here for the introduction of co-operative stores, where large business and fractional profits will pay the shareholders, and at the same time make up to a considerahls extsnt to the hulk of consumers for their diminished incomes. Economy must be practiced here as elsewhere, and to he ahle to live cheaply by cutting off gigantic profits is to remove a grisvous hurden with which the opsn-handed and extravagant Californian has all along been handicapped. Every saving to the consumer is a benefit to the State, and the time has passed in the history of our El Dorado when lavish expenditure could he a matter of indifferenc. Times ars depressed, all classes are complaining, and it is only through industry and frugality that general prosperity can he restored. The Sand Lot and the new Conetitution have done much to paralyze all business, and now we must suit our modes of living to our diminished incomes and diminished expectations of income. In this matter of co-operativs stores there is a field for genuine benefit to this whole city of consumers, and we trust that hy some conjoint action of leading citizsns a movement of such vast importance will bs hsgun. If this is the most euterprising city in the world, and there is no doubt it is, why should tbis promising field for co-operation remain unoccupied?

ENFORCING THE QUACKERY LAW.

The police have recently been engaged in a good work in enforcing the anti-qnackery law. It is mest and proper that so important a penal law should be put in force hy the duly constituted autborities. It is useless for the Legislature to pass laws if they ars to remain a dead-letter on the statuts-book. Laws are framed and passed to subserve good purposes, and are presumably intended to be real, active, live instruments for the suppression of wrong. Tbe presence of uneducated, impudent, death-dealing quacks in such large numbers in tbis city was an intolerable nuisance, and a great danger to the many wbo had no means of discriminating betwesn ths dangerous charlatan and tbe true physician. The wretched impostor, who intruded himself into ths sick-chamber, who gained admission to the holy of holies—to the inner sanctum of our families—was a rascal whose punishment could hardly be made severe enough. He was a public snsmy, who has rightly been placed under the han of a most righteous law. It is trus that the law might have heen a better one. It has allowed a number of rascals to escape. The setting up of thres free and sasy examining hodies was a great mistake. There has been a most shameless laxity in giving licenses to unworthy and incompetent applicants. But, admitting this, there yet remains a considerable residuum of good in ths working of the law. Quackery is at last made illegal, odious and punishahle. Ths policeman can now lay his hands on the rascally quack. The officer specially detailed to this duty appears to he attending to it efficiently. Several prosecutions have been successful, fines havs been imposed and quacks are quitting the business. These are desirable results. We congratulate ourself and our readers upon them. Tbe News Letter's contribution to this good work will not soon he forgotten. There is now an active and healthy public opinion upon this subject that will never again tolerate the shameful state of thin,s which existed when ths News Letter began its memorable raid upon quacks and quackery. The polics ars doing well. When they have driven out all ths unlicensed rascale, thsrs are eome licensed ones that they may well turn their attention to. Thsre are several murdering abortionists with ehingles on Kearny strest.

A blonde youth, of Bohsmian proclivities, runs tbs Honorable Bilk machins. He is tbe Secretary, and exhibits Herculean prowees in reporting the progress of country clubs. Conscious that on him alone depends the fate of the Bilks, he said the other day: "I am my own adjutant, quartermaster-general, and Heaven knows what all." "Yes," remarked a brother Bohemian, "and your own trumpeter."

We always thought that if there was not "a hottomlese pit" in California thers ought to he one. It turns out that there is. Why it has selectsd this particular period in which to open a yawning mouth is very apparent. There are too many wicked politiciane around. Nature hath made nothing in vain.

ADMIRAL AMMEM'S CHEEK.

It seems impossible for the American to he connected with any earthly enterprise, no matter what its naturs may he, hut what speculation, jobhery and fraud must immediately show their heads. In their churches their parsons and deacons are on the make—or somehody is sure to say they are; to he one of tbeir legislators is prima facie evidence of being corrupt; tbeir business-men must have a swindling "corner" in something. In short, your Yankes sees a "job" in every bush, and, if it isn't his own, bs sets up a howl ahout it which might wake the dead.

Nevertheless, we might expect that such a dignified and sublims undertaking as the construction of a canal to connect the Atlantic and Pacific might prove an exception to this rule, wheu we consider that the project is being considered from a purely scientific point of visw, and has not yet assumed a monetary aspect, that it is under the auspices of the first Powers, and that practically the bonor of the civilized world is staked on its faithful performance.

But the International Canal Congress bas not escaped tbs accusation of fraud, and, of course, the accuser is an American. That he is an Admiral in the United States Navy and the chief representative of this country in the Congress itself, makes his offenss all ths more grievous. Admiral Ammem sees two parties of "speculators" in the Congress, and to accuse men, who practically represent tbeir respective governments in a scisntific dsbate, of using their position to speculate on their private behalf, is the sams thing as calling them cheats and knaves. One of the Admiral's "speculators" is Lieutenant Wyse, of the French navy, and according to this gentlemanly American tar, uo less a man than De Lesseps is the Lieutenant's chief confederats. "Moreover," says the gallant Admiral, "thers were enthusiastic manifestations of approval whenever a vote of 'Yes' (in favor of the Panama route) was given, which would hardly have been the case bad the audience regarded the action as dspending wholly on the natural conditions or physical causes." The Admiral evidently thinks that if scientific meu signify their approval in the ordinary manner, when their professional opinions are indorsed by a majority, they must have some "personal interests" to subserve. In conclusion, the Admiral recommends tbat the United States Government ignore the decision arrived at hy a vote of 75 to 8 in ths European Congress, and take the whole matter into its own hands hy renewing the discussion in this country. Maybe there isn't any impudence in this proposition.

But, aside from the Admiral, a later telegram treats us to a specimen brick of hombast from ths New York World. Among other things, that Fourth-of-July cracker remarks that "the whole world will be apprised of the determination of the American people not to permit the establisbment on the Isthmus of Panama of a European protectorate over the commerce connecting ths Atlantic and Pacific States." Now, it is not at all surprising that Smith, Jones or Rohinson should endeavor to earn his penny a line by scribbling such ridiculous ruhhish, hut it is a trifle strange that a journal whicb pretends to a dignified position should humor ths young gentleman hy printing it. May we venture to inquire what "the American people" are going to do abont it if "the whole world" should calmly "apprise" this mighty nation of its intention to build a canal where it (the whole world) saw fit? To hear thess spoiled darlings of ths Press prattle, one would think that the soaring American Eagle had only to flap its wings in order to flabbergast the universe. But in this particular matter of the canal, the hird will find itself "out and injured" unless it stops screaming and behaves better.

NO USE BUCKING AGAINST THE RAILROAD.

The locomotive is harely half a century old. George Stephenson declared his discovery to an assemhlage of English engineers on the 27th of Octoher, 1829, and on the 17th of September, 1830, the first railroad was opened between Liverpool and Manchester. The iron horse did not come into the service of the world without much opposition, hut its marvelous power was not to he resisted. The hucking against the locomotivs has always hurt the power that hucked. This result was early foreseen. George Stephenson foretold it even before he was allowed to maks a start. Said a member of the committee of the House of Commons: "Suppose your engine were coming along at the rate of eight or niue miles an hour, and a cow happened to he in the way, wouldn't that bs very unfortunate?" "Yes," replied Mr. Stepheuson, in his hroad northern dialect, "vsra unfortunate for the coo." The Great Engineer was right. Tbe "coo" was as nothing when pitted against the locomotive. Our own Indian tried to lasso the thing, hut he lost his arms for his temerity. He might bs powerful when holding on to a huffalo, hut he was nowhere when fast to a steam engine. All attempts to stay the triumphal progress of the great motor have heen alike futile. The irou horss has mounted the steeps of the Sierras, pierced the Alps, and will soou even divs under the ocean from Dover to Calais. Its onward march is irresistible. In less than half a century 200,000 miles of railroad have been constructed, enough to encircle the earth nearly ten times. The United States alone have 82,000 miles, and are building more every day. It is estimated that the capital employed in huilding the railroads of the world amounts to $15,000,000,000; an enormous capital for a single industry not yet as old as hundreds of thousands of living men. Here is a fact in political economy never seen before sincs the world hegan. It has exercised a predominating influencs over all human rslations, sensihle not only in the material relations of life, hut in the intellectual and moral condition of civilized people. It has, in a degree, annihilated tims and space. Railroads have entirely changed the conditions of production. They, with steamships, have enabled thinly settled localities of the world, to produce immens: crops upon virgin eoil, and compete with and triumph over tbe denser population hut worn-out eoil of older countries. If fifty years of steam communication have produced such an astonishing result, what may we not expect at the end of a second half century? The locomotive has got a long start on its destined journey. It is under a full head of steam, and it will now, more than ever, he unfortunate for any stray "coo" that may get in its way. Yet there is, hereabouts, eome talk of an animal weaker and sillier than a cow, proposing to buck against the locomotive. Thsy call the creature a politician. If he puts his carcass on the road he will get terribly mangled, sure. The locomotive can take care of itself, eo can the capital employed in running it. The fifteen hillions of money investsd in railroads will not permit itself to he confiscated hy politicians. One per cent. upon that sum would huy all the politicians that have ever lived, from the days of Moses until now. No; Railroads cannot he coufiscated, nor can the locomotive he stopped. Its triumphs have only juet hegun. They are hut fools who attempt to huck against it.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The market for the past week has been one of unusual activity, and for a time it looked as though the long expected market was at hand. Simultaneous with the commencement of drilling in Sierra Nevada and Union the North End stocks advanced rapidly, upon supposed favorable results of the drill, and the mystification that attended the whole affair seemed to incite more speculation than the hitherto open method of cross-cutting. As nothing definite can be ascertained regarding the condition of the lower levels, the "street" are completely in the dark as to results, and the matter remains enveloped in complete mystery. For the past two days it has been apparent that a heavy unloading has been going on, and at the close a still further unloading is observable. Of the outside securities there is little to note. Bodie continues to look badly, while a great improvement is noticeable in Mono, the adjoining mine, the improvement being in the joint east cross-cut on the line. Stockholders of the Bonanza mines have been made happy with another dividend of fifty cents, though it is generally believed to be the final one. At the close the market was a shade stronger.

The Commercial Herald's review of the import and export trade for the first six months shows the following: Ships entered, 1,604; tonnage, 710,518. In 1878 the figures were 1,532 and 697,320; in 1877, 2,006 and 821,592; in 1876, 1,955 and 760,182; and in 1875, 1,997 and 871,597. There is a decrease in steam tonnage with China and Japan of 14,112, and with Australia of 3,438; and an increase of 8,606 with Victoria, and 2,210 with Panama. Freight money paid in 1879, $1,006,724; in 1878, $1,690,767. Merchandise exported by sea, in 1879, $14,210,601; in 1878, $11,687,776. Receipts of treasure, in 1879, $28,733,648; in 1878, $35,519,761. Treasure exported (exclusive of amounts by U. S. mail), in 1879, $9,029,321; in 1878, $23,530,448. Money paid for duties at Custom House is less by $22,786, in 1879. The coinage at the Mint was, double eagles, $12,540,000; half-eagles, $108,750, and standard dollars, $5,500,000. Money has been in plentiful supply for the six months, and at moderate rates, but little called for. The Herald thinks the depression has reached the lowest point, and that we are on the eve of revival.

SILVER.

We recur to this subject to note with satisfaction that, according to official advices from the National capital, one of the greatest obstacles to the thorough international re-monetization of silver has been removed, by the German Empire giving in its adhesion to bi-metalism. There is now no doubt that a conference of the nations will be held, at no distant day, and we take this opportunity of again calling general attention to the pre eminent right of the Pacific Coast to be represented in the Conference, and the pre-eminent ability of Senator Jones to represent it. The restoration of this metal to its natural place in the economy of exchanges means, beyond doubt, a widespread and active prosperity for all the silver-producing States and Territories. In this connection, we also note an increased demand in the East for the circulation of the much, and undeservedly, abused standard dollar.

The French Government and the Coinage of Money.—The French Government has hitherto had the coining of money done by private contract, but the disadvantages of that course have become so marked that M. Leon Say, the Minister of Finance, has had a bill passed through the French Senate authorizing the Government to carry on the coining as a public undertaking. France, Belgium and Holland are the only countries that have the coining done by private contract. The French Treasury proposes to discount Mint receipts for the deposit of bullion, thus making the bullion immediately convertible into cash, as in England is done by the Bank of England.

MR. A. A. COHEN AND THE RAILROAD PEOPLE.

Mr. Cohen is a man of undoubted ability, and has carved out a career for himself in this State that has placed him to-day in the finest residence in Alameda county, and in the enjoyment of a large fortune. How his wealth was acquired we shall not inquire into too closely, but we shall simply state the fact that he has been brought before our Law Courts on very serious charges as to the acquisition or the appropriation of money, and that if the citizens of California were looking round for a man whose character was without stain or without reproach, they would place Mr. Cohen very far down on the list of eligible candidates. One of his chief legal escapades was that in which the Central Pacific Railroad Company, two or three years ago, accused him of breach of trust in acting as their agent. The trial was a lengthened one, and Mr. Cohen himself, though assisted by some of the best lawyers in the State, made a remarkably able speech, in which he introduced some of the raciest personalities and criticisms, regarding the chief members of the Railroad Company, which have ever been made in this land of free tongue and free press. Since that time Mr. Cohen has been the sworn enemy of all the railroad people, and the self-appointed advocate of public rights against railroad wrongs. One thing perfectly evident is that Mr. Cohen made the bulk of his own fortune out of the very system he condemns; and when he comes before a Platt's Hall audience to explain to them how the railroad magnates made their immense fortunes, and how the people of California ought to confiscate a large part of that wealth, the very first proposal which he ought to have made should have been that he was prepared to pay over to the State his share of what he thought the railroad people had unjustly acquired. But Mr. Cohen had and has no such sense of consistency, no such sense of justice and honor. His feelings of private hatred and desire for revenge cause him to try to turn an ignorant and unreasoning outcry to his avowed purpose of vengeance; and from such a man as Mr. Cohen we cannot expect any exalted idea of private virtue or disinterested conception of public duty. It would have been better for the party with whom he for the time finds it to be his interest to act, if he had remained in the cool shades of his Alameda chateau, nursing his wrath in the repose and obscurity which are the natural ending of a distinguished career in a line of success which does not approve itself to honorable men. In this community Mr. Cohen is a strong man in business arts, but when he moves out of the orbit of his own private devices, he is as thoroughly alone, as utterly without recognition by all that is best and worthiest in this State, as if he belonged to a world that shall be nameless. He may play the part of a guerilla skirmisher in support of a party that are frantically calling Ishmaelites and all other stray souls, whether saints or devils, to their assistance; but this same party know very well that the name of Mr. Cohen is not one to conjure with, though in the extremity of their desperation they are not unwilling that he should give vent to his spleen so long as the party are not called upon to indorse Mr. Cohen himself.

With the figures that this gentleman has produced as to the fortunes of the railroad magnates the public are already perfectly familiar, so that Mr. Cohen on the railroad question, instead of being a new revelation, is simply a thirty-times-told tale—full of sound and fury, spoken by an enemy, signifying nothing. He shows that these railroad magnates have in their hands the largest property on the Pacific coast, and the suppressed inquiry that seems everywhere on the tip of his tongue without his having the boldness to utter it is: why is this vast property not in my hands, the great A. A. C., with a few crumbs for some of those Honorable Bilks that find in me merits congenial to their feelings and purposes? We can only say to this professional detractor of men who have done so much for this State and for the Pacific States generally, that every available dollar that they can command is being thrust into railroad and other enterprises for the development of the country; and as half of the projectors of this vast railroad system have passed to their graves while still in the midst of their gigantic labors, so it seems destined that the remaining projectors will never relax their immense efforts in the extension of railroad communication so long as health and strength are left to them. They are no idlers, retiring or retired from their labors and enjoying their fortunes. They are to-day the foremost men of enterprise in the State, and what they can do with their large resources and their extensive connections, no other men nor corporation can do. What capitalists in the State or out of it would have built the Southern Pacific Railroad without a subsidy from the Government? It is easy to criticise, and to sneer, and to detract, but the responsible people of this State quite understand the advantages of a large corporation like the Central Pacific people weaving a net-work of railroads all over the Pacific States, that no other than a large and wealthy corporation could hope to effect. All the fortunes that they possess have been acquired by strictly legal means—and that is more, perhaps, than even Mr. Cohen, the enlightener, can say for himself. At the same time, the public have their rights as well as the railroads, and we have no doubt that as between these two conflicting interests, justice will be done by the Commissioners. It would, however, ill-become the free and enterprising citizens of this State to act on the advice of a subtle pettifogger like Mr. Cohen, who has purposes of revenge, not of public duty, to promote. Amid much selfish action that this State has witnessed, the principles of justice have always ultimately prevailed, and we believe that with the exception of the ignorant and unthinking rabble, and of the envious and unscrupulous detractors and demagogues, the heart of California is still true to that fair field and no favor that has built up the State and has led some men to wealth and left others with but little of this world's goods. To pronounce the word confiscation is to undo the work which for more than a century Americans have been proudly building up; and we do not think that California is the State that will take the lead in pronouncing the doom of American republicanism by violating the legal rights and vested interests of private property. If private envy is to take the place of public duty, then our institutions will have proved a failure, and all thinking persons will feel that it would be better to return to monarchical institutions than be robbed by the sand-lot demagogues and their silent abettors among people who ought to know better. We have, however, an abounding faith in the great good sense of American citizens, and to them we think the cause of justice may be fearlessly and safely committed.

"Have you any objects of interest in the vicinity?" the tourist asked the Burlington man. "I have, I have," eagerly replied the other, "but I can't get at it to show it to you. It's a ninety days' note, and it's down in the bank now, drawing interest like a horse-race or a mustard-plaster." The traveler smiled as though an angel kissed him. But it hadn't.

ART JOTTINGS.

It is a little singular that so pretentious a picture as "Changing the Shift" should have met with so little notice from the press. While yet in Mr. Burgess' studio a very flattering notice of it appeared in one of the dailies, but, subsequently, and after it was exposed to the public, the same journal said of it, that "being a copy in all that is interesting, we shall not criticise it." We understand that the criticism which appeared in the News Letter last week did not meet the views of partiee in interest. For this we are sorry—very—but that it was just, there can be no question. If, however, the artist, or his friends, feel aggrieved, they will doubtless meet with little difficulty in finding some one to defend the picture as publicly as it has been defamed, provided, it can be demonstrated that it is susceptible of defence.

The usual collection of "all sorts" appears in the Fair this year, but in the absence of a catalogue it is impossible to review the collection with any degree of satisfaction. The rooms of the Art Association have been completely denuded for this exhibition at the Pavilion, not a single picture remaining on the walls of either of the two galleries. The Tojettis are executing a large canvas there, and it will doubtless demonstrate their great abilities as decorative artists.

Mr. Bradford is said to have completed his large Yosemite picture, and it is to be hoped that before long it will be shown to the public. Of all works produced by an artist, none are so profitable to exhibit as those painted to fill commissions; it stimulates other patrons of the Fine Arts to go and do likewise.

THE REGISTRATION FIGURES.

The registration of voters is now so nearly completed that it becomes possible to estimate the relative strength of existing parties. The fact comes painfully to light that the sand-lotters are unexpectedly numerous. They are by no means a majority of the whole. There will be at least 35,000 voters registered. It is estimated that of this number the Workingmen's full strength will be about 14,000 votes, leaving the balance of twenty one thousand to be divided among the other parties. These figures are estimated by those who have had the best opportunity of judging, and we believe them to be approximately correct. Taking them to be so, the result of the very important city election that takes place three weeks hence is reduced to a very simple matter of figuring. That twenty-one thousand votes cannot be divided between three parties in such a way as to leave one of them with a majority over the workingmen's fourteen thousand, is pretty certain. The prime factor in the calculation that ought to engage the attention of all good citizens, is that there is a clear majority of all the voters against the Kearney crowd. The earnest, patriotic endeavor of all thoughtful men ought to be directed to uniting that majority in favor of a capable and honest ticket. The good government of the city is not a question of party; it is one that affects equally citizens of all parties. San Francisco has time and time again set aside mere partisan nominations by uniting upon a Peoples', Citizens' or Taxpayers' ticket. Never was the need for non-partisan nominations so great as now, and, deplorable to say, never was the probability of being cursed by the partisan ones so imminent as at present. Surely, in the face of the great danger that is presented of the city being overrun by the Goths and Vandals of the sand lots, there is practical wisdom, not to say patriotism, enough to induce honest, thoughtful citizens of all shades of opinion, to lay aside their little differences and unite for the common good. The forthcoming election is exceptionally important. Every office in the City Government is to be filled. The Judiciary is to be chosen. The faithful and capable administration of the laws is a matter high above all party considerations. It concerns every man who desires to be protected in his rights of property and person. It is one of vital moment to every law-abiding citizen. A Board of Supervisors, with vast powers for good or evil, is to be chosen. School Directors are to be elected, and obviously they ought to be men imbued with a deep sense of the value of education. Now, can any citizen, of good understanding, conscientiously declare that the ignorant crowd of nobodies, who for the most part constitute the Kearney ticket, offer any reasonable assurances that they are the right men in the right places? They are little known, and what is known of them is not good. They are ignorant and irresponsible. They are the result of the passion of a class, and that class the lowest and least cultured. It is the bottom coming to the top; it is ignorauce, stupidity and prejudice, against brains, educatiou and enlightenment. It is the men who have not, against those who have. It is the unrest of the dissatisfied, against the success of the successful. It is an attempt to subordinate the fittest to the unfittest. In the trial of such an issue, thoughtful, educated taxpayers, ought to be united as one man; they ought to be in one fold, and fighting shoulder to shoulder for the common good. This is no time for a division in the ranks of responsible men, when the irresponsible ones are joined to do mischief. The success of the most ignoraut class in capturing the city government in all its departments, would be deplorable in every view of the situation. We are persuaded it would work dire mischief at home, and it would give our city an unsavory reputation abroad that would be most damaging to our future prospects. The mischief can be averted, and it ought to be. If it is not, we envy not the scorn that in the evil days which are to come will fall upon the heads of the stupid partisans of this hour, who have the power, but not the will, to save us from the impending calamity.

OPEN ON SUNDAYS.

The year has brought the regular Mechanics' Fair, opened on Tuesday last with good promise of success; and once more people begin to ask why the Exhibition is to be closed on Sunday. It is most likely that the Board of Managers has not even yet thought of considering this matter; and it is to be feared that the four or five weeks during which the Fair is to last will pass away before any decision is come to. Yet it is high time that the Puritanical opposition to a measure, in every way so moral and so useful, were silenced. The police arraugements for the preservation of order in the building have always been good, and there is no reason to fear that they would be found inadequate on Sunday, any more than on Saturday. What, then, is there to be feared, if the building is openod to the puhlic on Sunday? Many Jews visit the Exhibition on Saturday, without being therefore worse Jews or worse citizens. Why may not Christians have a similar privilege? If the piety of the former can endure the contact with the array of industrial efforts and triumphs, may not even the faith of the Christian survive the shock? And if it cannot, is it worth saving?

We know that the Lord's Day must be kept holy, and we frequently see it so; but if people can enjoy an innocent hour or two at Woodward's Gardens, or on the beach, or at the Park, on Sunday, why must they be saved from the Fair as from hell-fire? Many of the clergy set their faces against the opening of galleries of art and exhibitions of industry on the Lord's Day with a reckless fury, which confounds men whose countenances are more subject to wear and tear; but, curiously enough, it is never reported that these shepherds are met with in the neighborhood of the Barbary Coast on Sunday, trying to seek and to save that which is lost. They prefer to heat the air from their pulpits and to fight shadows. In all countries, even the most conservative, innoceut and improving recreations are being offered on Sunday to the general public. Here is a display full of suggestion, of food for thought, and for intelligent curiosity; and for many, who are obliged to earn their bread during the week, the display is wholly lost, because the Rev. Tbis and Deacon That decree that it shall he so, and the managers fear to offend them and their toothless friend, Mrs. Grundy. We say nothing of working men, hecause they are now gentlemen of elegant leisure; but there are some industrious people, mechanics and others, who cannot afford to spend an hour at the Fair during the week. And, even if tbere were no mechanics in the community, the Fair ought to be open on Sunday, and the Board of Managers should take heart of grace, meet this afternoon, and settle the thing at once.

The young man who loved above his station was always getting out at the wrong depot.

The Naglee Brandy.—This famous, absolutely pure brandy will be kept and retailed in the Wine Room of the Mechanics' Pavilion during the exhibition. We have been shown today a private letter of General H. M. Naglee's to a friend, in which the General says: "I have had all that I could do to fill the orders received, commencing with August." His enthusiasm about his old chemically pure brandy is now making him its appropriate return.

The greatest nuisance in a house is a smoky chimney, and with bad coal even the best chimney will smoke, as if it resented the imposition put upon it. Mr. J. McDonough, 25 Market street, has just received per ship Gilroy 2200 tons Hamilton Scotch Splint, the best coal known for house use. It makes very little ashes, deposits no soot, and burns with remarkable evenness, making a steady, hot fire, which can be graduated according to pleasure. Full weight and moderate prices have made and established Mr. McDonough's business.

SKELETON SKETCHES.

A Tragedy of the Desert.

[Note.—The history of this singular paper is briefly as follows: Some years ago, a sergeant in a cavalry company stationed at a frontier post near the Colorado Desert (for the sake of the parties concerned we suppress names, places and dates) disappeared suddenly from the Fort. There had always been a mystery about the man. His education, breeding and bearing showed him to be a gentleman, and it was supposed that he was English. But though much liked by officers and men for his gentle manners, he was too reserved for any to attempt to gain his confidence, and who he was or what had induced him to enlist in the ranks, is a secret to this day. When he disappeared it was hard to believe he had deserted, for such an act seemed entirely opposed to his scrupulously honorable character; but all conjecture was silenced for a time by a still stranger event: On the same day there also disappeared the daughter of the commandant, a young lady gifted in mind and person far beyond ordinary women. Not the least singular part of the affair was, that it never occurred to any one at the Post that they had gone together, for neither had ever been known to speak to or of the other, and all who knew the girl would have scouted such an idea. Search for both proved fruitless. His name was dropped from the roll as a deserter, and she was mourned as the victim of some unusually daring band of Indians, who, it was thought, had waylaid her while taking one of her customary long and solitary rides. Some of our readers will doubtless remember the sensation caused by the matter. Nearly three years later, the bones of both were found together in the heart of the Desert, and near by lay an old Russia leather pocket-book containing the terrible record which we now commit to print for the first time. How the original came into our hands matters not. Suffice it to say that, though the secret was long kept for her father's sake he is now dead, and the necessity for silence exists no longer. The document is naturally incoherent, fragmentary, and, in many respects unsatisfactory. The reader must interpret its awful suggestions as best he can, and decide for himself what portion of it was written under the influence of delirium. Perhaps only those who are familiar with the weird horrors of the Colorado Desert can fully appreciate it.]

JULY 3D.—Now, while she sleeps, I will begin to record as I intended the splendor of the life that is dawning upon us. It is four days since we left the Fort, and all danger of pursuit is past. Pursuit? Who would follow us into the desert? Who would dream that we had ventured into the Valley of the Shadow of Death? What are its perils to me? I am as sure of finding that oasis as I am that Irene loves me. They say that there is neither tree, water, grass nor any living thing in the direction I am taking, but I know better. My ancient Spanish Friar knew more than they. He saw the oasis with his own eyes; he laved in its sparkling streams, ate of its delicious fruits, and reposed in its shady groves. True, that was near three hundred years ago, but so much the better. The book in which he wrote of his travels would be less rare were it less old, and others might discover my Edeu. I have his distances and his directions—somewhat vague, of course, but have I not studied them for months? We have provisions and water enough to last for days, and our horses will carry us a long way yet. Yes, I am sure of my oasis; and there, alone with my beloved, forgetting all else and utterly forgotten, the dream of my life will be realized. Forgetting, do I say? Aye, there even my past may be buried. I have sought solitude and I shall find it, for my Paradise is unknown to man. Even the savages have no knowledge or tradition of it. Like the white man, they abhor the desert and fear it. They skirt its hideous borders, but this, its jeweled heart, they have never seen.

JULY 5TH.—Two days since my last entry, and we have traveled fast, yet the horizon is still unbroken. But I have been very careful to follow the Friar's directions, and am content to wait. Sleep on, my poor Irene, the weariness of which you complain not must end in rest to-morrow. How I dread to tell you that the second horse has just died!

JULY 7TH.—This is terrible! My darling can walk no farther, and the water is nearly gone. My God! what have I done! The sight of those poor little blistered feet and that wan face might turn a devil's heart to pity. She tells me that she is "only tired," and that I must kiss her once and then try to save myself. I will die first. Lord, guide us and have pity on us!

JULY 8TH.—The sun bas driven Irene mad, I think. She looks and acts very strangely. We have dragged ourselves several miles since yesterday, and she declares that a Shadow is following us—a shadow without a substance. There is only one swallow of putrid water left. I gave her a mouthful to-day; I must keep this for her till to-morrow. Poor child! poor child! Accursed that I am, I dare not ask either her or God for pardon.

[This apparently ends the entry for the day, but the dates cease after the 8th. From this point the manuscript often becomes absolutely illegible, though in other places the writing is firm and distinct. Horrid oaths and blasphemies, too, begin to appear. These, together with some perfectly meaningless sentences, we have omitted, but the curious can see the entire MS. at this office. The respective paragraphs were evidently written at separate, though by no means lucid intervals.—EDITOR.]

I have seen it—the Shadow which Irene saw. It dogged me for an hour at noon, and then faded out of the sand. For it lies on the sand as the shadow of a man might. It moves whithersoever it will, and has no visible cause. Irene has gone. I think the angels have taken her from me. But a hideous hag, who sings nursery songs and calls herself Irene, hobbles at my side and will not be driven away. I know she wants to steal the mouthful of water I have saved, but I am going to drink it myself when she isn't looking.

Last night the hag pointed to the westward, and I knew the Shadow was coming. She has told me its name, but I dare not write it; she has defined its shape to me, but I may not describe it. It crept up to us in the moonlight, it circled about us, it passed between us, and whispered as it went. The hag was speechless with horror at the answer I gave, but when I struck her she wept.

I have heard the Voices of the Desert, and they have told me what I must do. I tried to conceal it from the hag, but she caught my eye and knew all and trembled. "Take my blood," she cried, if you will; but I am Irene." Then I cursed her, and for the lie she told she shall quench my thirst. But I am weak and must wait till she sleeps.

I could not wait. She moaned with terror as I crept upon her, but I gave her no time to struggle or cry out. I am saved. From her blood has sprung a plashing stream of bright water, with grassy banks. I have tried once to drink, but stooped and found mouth and eyes full of hot sand. But I shall be stronger soon, and shall reach the stream and drink it dry. Ha! What bird is that that dares flap his wings in my very eyes? The poor vulture is thirsty———

[Here the MS. ends abruptly.]

The dog, after stealing a hone, is seen to walk off with his s-wag.

"STAY."

I might speak of my love without blushing,
For your proud heart at last has been won,
Yet the blood to my hot cheeks is rushing
As I think of the way it was done.
So you thought it presumption to woo me
Because of my riches, forsooth!
Ah, darling! how little you knew me
If such were your fancy in truth.

You avoided me all through last season,
Though you loved me—I knew it full well;
And I easily guessed at the reason
That your pride was too stubborn to tell.
And last night, as we stood by the river,
And you said "farewell;" as you know
'Twas a parting that might be forever,
Love, how could I bear you to go?

You could tell me with no word of warning
Of the step you were going to take—
But your pride and my own I was scorning
As I sobbed, "Dearest, stay for my sake."
Then your answer came softer and fonder,
As you owned what I always had known—
You braved all society's slander
To call me your darling, your own.

And yet, though you're mine, mine forever,
This poor heart is ready to burst,
And I wish, with a blush and a shiver
That I had—had not spoken the first.
Let you go? No; that were not in reason,
The ivy must cling to the oak;
Though my blushes charge my love with treason—
You'll try to forget 'twas I spoke.

A TELL-TALE COMPASS.

Mr. Henry A. Severn, of Herne Hill, has invented a very clever little instrument called a tell-tale compass, by which the captain or master of a ship, when down in his cabin, may know whether or not the ship is sailing her course or is wandering from it. He uses the constant position of the compass-card and the varying one of the ship, so as to produce an electric contact, which rings a bell in case the angle made by the line of actual progress with the course to be steered exceeds a certain deviation on either side; and he proposes that the bell rung in case of deviation on one side shall be different in tone from that rung in case of deviation on the other side. His invention is a veritable symbol of the chief inventions of the age, which are always employed in superseding the responsibilities of individual watchfulness by mechanical warnings that allow of intermittent zeal. Even in matters of pure conscience we are very apt to prefer to trust to the sudden warning that some electric contact with social feeling is suddenly joined or interrupted, rather than exact from ourselves a rigid and vigilant scrutiny of our own course. A kind of social alarm is the fashionable conscience of the age.—Spectator.

The ex-Khedive Ismail Pacha was well known in Parisian high life. Physically, Ismail is a man of middle hight, with wide shoulders and a greyish-red beard. He is a great lover of the fine arts, especially of music. Extremely suspicious, Ismail Pacha has for many years been in the habit of eating only of dishes prepared expressly for him by his mother in the harem, and brought to him in a locked case of which he possessed the second key. A similar precaution was also taken with regard to his linen, which often led to extraordinary complications in the affaires de menage.

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

California Theater.—The last week of the Aimée troupe has been replete with good things. The patronage has not heen up to the merits of the performances, something to he regretted. La Boulangere a des Ecus was a capital performance of an admirable opera bouffe. It is fun and laughter throughout the entire three acts. Duplan, Jutean and Meziéres were at their hest, and pleased the audience immensely. Mlle. Aimée displayed some beautiful costumes, and played with all her zerve and chic. Mlle. Gregorie, a nare too scldom seen on the hill, deserves especial mention. The most charmiug bits of music are in her part, and she sang with remarkable tenderness and expression. Her voice lacks volume, but this is more than compensated by its touching sweetness. Giroíle Girofla attracted a fair house. This performance lacked the finish of the other productions, showing signs of insufficient rehearsiug. Considering the length of the reportoire, this is not to be wondered at. The different characters were in good hands. The "Mourzouk" of Jouard was hoarsely sung and not ferociously enough acted. Mlle. Raphael appeared in the second act in a gorgeous costume of cherry silk too heautiful for description. Les Brigands was played on Tuesday night. Mlle. Aimèe interpolated a new Spanish song, La Paloma. It was a most delicious rendition. Three encores bardly satisfied the excited enthusiasm of the audience. Last night La Belle Helene was given for Mezieré's henefit, and the season closes this evening with Le Petit Faust. It is Miss Gregorie's benefit, something to be noted. This opera bouffe season has proved that such performances possess little or no attractiou for our general public. It is a matter of serious douht whether a regularly organized company of this character will ever again visit this coast. This troupe was in all respects a capital one, possessing among its members several artists of great merit and talent. Next Monday evening a young artist with the solitary name of Imogene will make her first appearance. She is a comparativcly unknown lady, of the Lotta school, and as they hoth appear at the same time, we will bave occasion to compare their respective merits. This actress' appearance on the stage must be ascribed to dillettantism, as rumor doth endow her with a large share of the world's goods. But nous verrons.

Baldwin Theater.—Won at Last has run to fair husiness through the week. This was to be expected, or rather hoped, for the acting is of a nature deserving patronage and appreciation. To-night is a gala performance—the farewell benefit of Miss Coghlan. The original intention was for her engagement to last through the winter, hut the want of taste displayed by the public in refusing to recognize the lady's eminent talents, have led to a cancellation. The management had a right to expect that a first-class stock company would be properly encouraged and supported hy our theater-goers. This has not heen the case—a fact sincerely to be regretted, for it is now a ccrtainty that no manager will try and run his theater on a stock company basis; and after all, that is the only legitimate system, dramatically and artistically. Since her advent, Miss Coghlan has appeared in many characters, in every one of which she has scored an artistic success. All her impersonations have the charm of uature, truthfulness and plausibility. In the quieter phases of love and happiness, or in the stronger pictures of passion and cmotion, she always preserves the highest development of true art—truth to nature. Miss Coghlan fills all the requirements of a thorough artiste, and it is as such that we take leave of her. May the admiration and appreciation of the intelligent few compensate her for the neglect and indifference of the masses. On Monday Lotta hegins an engagement at this theater, opening in the play of Musette. This is the little lady's first visit here in some years, and she will doubtless be well received.

Aimee's Opera Bouffe Ball —This event of the season has taken place, and was in all respects a success. The arrangements on the part of the management were as perfect as possible, and it only depended upon the co-operation of those present to make the affair, through personal and individual participation, a carnival of fun and jollity. At first, there was a pervading atmosphere of solemnity, which augured ill for the ball. Over one thousand spectators were quietly sitting and standing around, waiting for no one knows what. The grand march was a very slim one. Gradually the stiffness and reserve of those present relaxed, and the scene became more and more gay. Up to 12 o'clock the success of the ball was a matter of douht, hut the example set by Aimee and her followers set everyhody agoing, and the verdict to-day is one of unqualified satisfaction. Bal masques are matters of common occurrence in this city, but there never has heen one which so resembled the annual Eastern and Parisian carnivals as this one. The condemnatory remarks of a morning contemporary as to the decency of the ball are entirely uncalled for, and not carried out hy the facts. As the small hours of the morning approached, the fun and excitement increased, but while restraint was unknown, unbridled license did not prevail. The attendance was large. There were not many distinctive costumes present, but an innumerable amount of dominos. We helieve that last night has started the fashion of these balls, and that in future they will be of annual recurrence. The success of this enterprise is a gratifying one, and none deserve it more than the California Theater management.

J. Harry Shannon, the Boy Orator, is the latest wonder of this wonderful age. How a boy, but nine years old, should he ahle to repeat from memory many of the masterpiecs of the world's great orators, with correct emphasis and appropriate gesture, is a mystery past finding out; and it is in vain that the papers throughout the East bave appealed to the men of science to explain the marvel. Science can only confess her weakness, and stand amazed at the fact. His memory is never at fault, and his speech flows like a river. His first evening in San Francisco will be on Monday next, the 11th, at Metropolitan Temple, and even that ample hall will, no douht, prove inadequate to hold the crowd of intelligent persons.

Standard Theater.—The children's Pinafore was revived for this week, and played to fair houses. The cast was tbe same as before, with the exceptiou of the part of the "Captain"—a young gentleman being substituted for Miss Lizzie Ayres. Next week these youngsters will produce Trial by Jury, and judging by the precocity displayed, they will assuredly repeat their Pinafore success. Little Flora Walsh will undoubtedly do full justice to the character of the fair plaintiff, and a pleasant eutertainment may be expected. Manager Kennedy has a mysterious attraction in reserve—Zamloch—of which more anon.

German Theater.—The German dramatic season opened last Sunday evening to a crowded house. During the vacation Mrs. Genee has visited Europe and effected engagements with different artists of talent. The admirable company of last season has been strengthened hy these additions, and the result is the hest stock company in the country, English speaking or otherwise. The performance Sunday evening brought out most of the old favorites, and introduced hesides Miss Mary Walden and Mr. Oscar Diehl. They were favorably received and will undouhtedly add to the general ensemble. Dr. Klaus is a rather amusing comedy. It has been translated into English, but without success, this due to the sketchiness of the plot and the excess of "talk," two things the English stage cannot tolerate. In itself it is wittily written with amusing situations. Next Sunday (to-morrow) Magda Irschik, a tragedienne of great repute, will make her first appearance in America. The play selected for this occasion is Schiller's Maid of Orleans.

The Standard offers a wonderful bill for the coming week, with the great Austrian magician, Zamloch, who has an endless repertoire, crowned by his amazing trip through the Infernal Regions. Commodore Nutt as "Timothy Tottles." The first presentation of the comic opera, Trial by Jury, in all making a most capital bill. Every evening and at Wednesday and Saturday matinees, there will be a distribution of one hundred and six elegant and costly presents; there will be six principal gifts, such as gros-grain black silk dress, full suit of clothes, gold watches, silver ice-pitcher, set of China for tea-table, and at the matinees, in addition, a magnificent doll, with trousseau complete. Nothing more lavishly mounted in scenery and appointments has ever been produced in San Francisco, and we foresee an unexampled success at the Standard. The principle gifts will be on exhibition daily at the silk-house, Sutter and Kearny, at Benedict and Smith's, and at Ackerman's.

Western Addition Dramatic Association.—This combination produced Led Astray last Friday evening, August 1st. The different characters were played by some of the best of our local amateurs, and the whole performance can be termed a success. As a rule amateur entertainments do not call for notice or criticism, hut some of the dramatis personæ were so ahly filled in this instance that we will call this an exception. The different ladies and gentlemen acted with so much ease and self-possession, showing no signs of awkwardness or fear, that they deserve unmitigated praise. We will specially mention Miss Witherby and Miss Ashley among the ladies, and Messrs. Davis, Doyle, Chandler and Gilmore among the gentlemeu as worthy of the well-merited applause bestowed by the sisters, cousins and aunts in front.

Bush Street Theater.—Tony Pastor's troupe is a versatile one, with many resources. The bill this week has been an entirely new one. Sheehan and Jones give a remarkable Irish sketch, the French sisters warhle and trip, and Geo. Thatcher tells his "And the villain still pursued her" story. These are the most salient points of the entertainment, worthy of particular mention. The rest of the troupe are all first-class performers, and do excellently well in their respective acts. Next week the burlesque, The Canal Boat Pinafore, will be produced, and, judging by the reports heard from the East, this must he a very laughable affair. It will be, hesides, the last week of this company. These facts are sufficient to attract good houses, and Manager Locke will undouhtedly be seen with a face wreathed in smiles.

Chiarini's Circus.—This exhibition opened on Thursday evening to a full tent. The company is an excellent one in its line, and the different feats—equestrian and acrobatic—are cleverly done. The principal features are the trained animals, which are the best ever seen here in a circus. The whole performance is a good one, and will undoubtedly receive the patronage it deserves. It is a long while since a good circus has opened in this city, and we all like to see one once in a while, if only for the sake of our boyhood reminiscences. The tent is pitched at the corner of Mission and Seventh, and is large and commodious.

A GLANCE AT JUDGE FIELD'S POSITION.

San Francisco, August 4th, 1879.

Dear News Letter: In speaking of Mr. Tilden's suggestions in regard to Presidential candidates, a late paper says that on account of the recent queue decisions, Mr. Justice Field, were he nominated for President, would not receive the support of California. The intimation is further put forth that this decision is an indication of Mr. Field's general views on the Chinese question, and that such views being in opposition to popular sentiment here, would be justifiable cause for depriving him of the support of our people. Now, a more narrow-minded inference never was drawn. The writer has not exchanged ten words with Judge Field in as many years, and is not in position to state his views on the Chinese question. It is, however, a very easy matter to get at those opinions, and the chances are nine in ten that Mr. Justice Field is as much opposed to further Chinese incursions as is Mr. Denis Kearny, or the most blatant Hibernian within our gates. In the queue decision he says:

"We are aware of the general feeling—amounting to positive hostility—prevailing in California against the Chinese, which would prevent their further immigration hither, and expel from the State those already here. Their dissimilarity in physical characteristics, in language, manners, and religion would seem, from past experience, to prevent the possibility of their assimilation with our people. And thoughtful persons hope that some way may be devised to prevent their further immigration. We feel the force and importance of these considerations; but the remedy for the apprehended evil is to be sought from the general Government, where, except in certain special cases, all power over the subject lies. To that Government belong exclusively the treaty-making power, and the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations, which includes intercourse as well as traffic."

These words are conclusive, and none but the most pronounced unfairness will take it for granted that this queue decision necessitates a belief that Judge Field is unsound on the Chinese question. Mr. Field is a Judge of the Supreme Court, and not a weather-cock to veer with every breeze of popular sentiment. He was put in his place to interpret the law, and he is bound to do this regardless of private wishes or of political possibilities. The fact of his making this queue decision is one of the strongest assurances that he is a man not to be influenced by dread of the effect such decision might have on the popular mind. Judge Field knows, as we all do, that he is a very prominent possibility for the next Presidency. He knows, too, how unpopular is any apparent leaning towards the Chinese in this community. In event of a Presidential campaign he would naturally desire to have the support of California. That he had the moral courage to put forth this queue decision is a practical proof of his integrity, his firmness and his lofty disregard of anything that might tempt him to swerve in interpreting the law. Such firmness and elevation above personal considerations show the very material which would make a good President, and when these traits, as in the case of Judge Field, are combined with massive intellect, high culture and most delightful social qualifications, they make up a sum total almost too desirable to be hoped for in our next President.

The assertion that the queue decision is "doubtful law" is open to a wider argument than is here allowable. The writer is no politician, is not partisan in feeling, and is fully convinced that our State must be purged of the horrible festering Chinese ulcer that is eating its way everywhere. But truth is truth, and must be while the world endures; and to a calm, dispassionate mind there can be no doubt that the Supervisors exceeded their power in the ordinance passed on the 16th of January, 1866. Having condemned our Celestial brother to fine and imprisonment, there was no more right or reason in obliging him to give up his cherished pigtail than there would be in compelling a Jew prisoner to a diet of ham and sausage, or a Parsee to drink muddy water. To a careless outsider these seem trifles. To those interested they are matters of religious belief, and hence of vital importance. We have in our land "many men of many minds." So long as they assimilate with our ways and customs, let them stay and be happy. So soon as we find, as we have in the case of the Chinese, that they cannot conform to our habits and ways of life, the general Government must make such laws as will cover the case and remove the incubus which threatens to smother us. But, until such action of the general Government is established, we must, in self-respect, deal out strict justice, and this is all Judge Field has done, unfriendly critics notwithstanding. The Presidential view of the case is a very uncertain quantity to deal with. One thing, however, is pretty clear. No matter who our next President may be, he will in no way, intellectually, morally or socially, be the superior of Stephen J. Field, and in place of attempting to undervalue him, we Californians should uphold his arms and do all in our power to secure for our State the proud distinction of having furnished a President so creditable to us as Judge Field would be were he placed in the elevated position he could fill so well.

SILEX.

DECEASE OF A RESPECTED CITIZEN.

Mr. Charles Washington White, an old and well-known Californian, died suddenly at his residence in West Oakland, on Monday last, at the age of seventy-two years and fourteen days. Mr. White was a remarkably active and vigorous man, and had gone home on Friday in his usual health. Late in the day he was taken with chills, which seemed to be subdued during Saturday and Sunday, but returned on Monday, and in a short time carried him off. A native of Brooklyn (N. Y.), Mr. White had emigrated to Valparaiso, from which place he removed to California in 1849—one of the first among the arrivals of that year, and in every sense of the word a pioneer. He early established himself in the ship chandlery business, which he continued to carry on, enjoying the respect and esteem of all as a high-minded and honorable business man until about five years ago, when the failure of his eyesight compelled him to retire from active life. Since that time he had resided in Oakland, where his days passed calmly by, his spirit being full of a cheerful content and quiet resignation, so that to those who knew him he seems to have been taken away untimely. Mr. White leaves a widow and four children, one of whom is Mr. Henry White, the hatter, of this city. Had he survived till the 18th September, he would have been able to celebrate his golden wedding—a mournful reflection to the widowed heart he has left behind.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Yachting. The San Francisco Yacht Club, at a meeting held last Thursday, decided that the postponement of the regatta was illegal, and that the regular time having passed, to hold the regatta to-day. All the necessary arrangements have been made. Messrs. Goodall, Perkins & Co. have loaned one of their tugs for the Judge's boat. The start will be made as follows: At 12:55 P. M. a gun will be fired from Long Bridge as a warning signal. At 1 P. M. the outside yachts will start. At 1:10 P. M. the third-class vessels will start, and at 1:20 the second and first-class vessels will start, ten minutes being allowed after the signal for each class is fired for the vessels to cross the line. The entries are as follows: First-class (schooner yachts)—Consuelo, Pearl, Black Horse. Second-class (yawls and sloops)—Frolic, Startled Fawn, Emerald, Clara. Third-class (yawls and sloops)—Virgin, Lively, Twilight. Fourth-class (catamaran)—Zarefa. The Con O'Connor, Fleur de Lis, J. C. Cousins and Confidence will take out parties to witness the race. The prizes are as follows: First prize—Prize Flag, open for all except catamarans. First-class—Silver Ice Pitcher; second-class—Marine Glass; third-class—Barometer; outside sloops—Fruit Dish; outside plungers—Silver Butter Dish; catamarans—Prize Flag and Pickle Dish.

Pedestrianism.—The contest for the Astley belt will come off about the middle of September in New York. Rowell, "Blower" Brown, Weston and O'Leary are already entered. Some sporting men of this city have deposited the entrance money for two Apache Indians, who they claim can go 600 miles in six days.——The match between Frank Edwards and McIntyre is off.——The employees of the Western Union Telegraph Company, San Francisco office, will compete in a 21-mile walk at the Bay District Track, Sunday, August 10th, for prizes of $50, $30, $15, $5. Start to be made at 12 noon. Admission to the track free.——Von Berg and Tourtelott have just finished their six days walk in Virginia City. Von Berg won by 33 miles. It is stated that 308 miles were made, but as yet we have no evidence that the scoring was conducted in such a way as to entitle Von Berg to claim a record.——Six entries have already been made for the six days match to come off here in September.——Police Officers Bush and Burdick walked to the Cliff House and back last Monday for $50 a side. Burdick, who claims to be a better walker than Edwards, was badly beaten.——The six hours walk for boys under seventeen, last Sunday, was won by M. Goldsmith. Score 31 miles 7 laps. L. D. Switters second, A. Ellinghouse third.

Shooting.—George Routier, of Sacramento, at a bat shooting match last week, killed 59 birds out of 60.——The Sacramento Sporting Club will hold a grand pigeon tournament during the Fair, open to all. Entrance fee, $20; birds free. Entrance money to be divided in cash prizes. Entries to be made before August 15th.——Grouse and quail are plentiful around Donner Lake.——Dove shooting is good at Redwood City, Menlo Park, Mountain View, Pleasanton and on the line of the N. P. C. R. R.——Deer are plentiful around Salinas and Cloverdale.——The match for the Chronicle Cup, between W. E. Gerber, of Sacramento, the present holder, and Chas. W. Randall, of this city, will take place September 7th. The postponement until that day is caused by Mr. Gerber's other urgent business engagements.

Archery.—The interior Clubs are doing good work, and will make a fine showing if another tournament is arranged.——Another Club has been organized in Sacramento, called the Eureka Archery Club.——The Red Cloud Club, of Sacramento, had a shoot for prizes at the Capital grounds last week. The ladies' medal was won by Mrs. Inwall; score, 114, 30 arrows, 25 yards. The gentlemen's medal was won by Mr. J. Collins; score 57, 30 arrows, 40 yards.——A tournament is proposed to take place at Sacramento during Fair week.

Baseball.—Games last Sunday at the Recreation Grounds: Knickerbocker vs. Star; score, 15 to 2. MacMahon vs. Company B; score, 10 to 5.——At Oakland—Mutual vs. Athletic; score, 7 to 1.——Games to-morrow, at Recreation Grounds: Omaha Club, of Omaha, vs. Knickerbocker. This will be one of the most interesting games of the season. The names of the Omaha Club are: Cantillion, left field; J. Whitney, pitcher; C. Whitney, second base; Dolan, catcher; Bailey, right field; Bohn, third base; Willigard, first base; Hibben, short stop, and Quill, center field.

Rowing.—All the Clubs are getting to work for the coming regatta.——The Neptune boys are beginning to take more interest in getting a good crew. They have lots of good material, and ought to make a first-class showing.——There is some talk of sending Dan Leahey to Australia to row Trickett.——A race between the Adam's and Alaska's barges, for $200 a side, is talked of—fifteen men to each barge.——The Tuscarora's gig wants a match with any similar boat in the harbor.

Boxing.—Maynard states that he has retired from the ring, but he professed himself as ready to meet Patsey Hogan for any sum he could name.——Chambers has issued a challenge to fight Maynard for up to $2,000 a side, at any weight he chooses. If the challenge is not accepted to-day, Chambers and Edwards will leave for the East Sunday.——The coming glove contest between Donovan and McClellan is exciting a great amount of interest.

Fishing.—Shad are caught in the Sacramento river every day. This looks as if the climate agreed with them, and in a few years they would be a regular article in our markets.——Pilarcitos lake is affording splendid sport; trout are plentiful, and bite greedily.——Lake Chahot, at San Leandro, is full of splendid fish. The trout are the best lake trout in the State.——Good fly-fishing in Lake San Andreas—the most dangerous lake of an afternoon in the State.

Novel Match.—A queer match has been made at Santa Cruz: Johnny Igo, the splint runner, is matched to run a mile holding on behind a sulky drawn by the trotting mare Nell Briordy, at full speed. The mare can trot in less than 2:40.

Bicycling.—Mr. H. L. Cortis, of London, has just won the fifty mile championship, making the fourth championship he has won this year; time, 2 hrs. 56 min. 1.8 sec.

Geo. Stewart is a commission stock broker, doing business at 208 Montgomery street. He recently bought thirty shares of University Gold Mining Company's stock, on the order of a customer, and paid fifty cents per share for it. He, however, falsely claimed that he paid sixty cents, and collected that sum, together with his commission. He, therefore, beat his customer out of three dollars; a small sum, to be sure, but one that nevertheless illustrates a dishonest transaction. A man who would go for the paltry sum of three dollars would hardly be expected to hesitate if the temptation were greater.

"The World," the Flesh, and the Devil.

[By a Truthful Penman.]

At the Prince Imperial's funeral, the Princess of Wales wrote with her own hand on the card which accompanied her wreath of violets, "Died a soldier's death, fighting for our cause." The whole of the inscription on this wreath is well worth quotation, since it indicates the spirit in which the Royal House of England did such ungrudging honor to the memory of a cherished and lamented guest of that country. But first, the words of the Queen, thoughtfully written in French by Her Majesty and attached to the wreath of golden laurel leaves which she laid upon the coffin, should be given. Written in the Queen's own hand, the words are: "Souvenir de vive affection, d'estime, et de profonds regrets de la part de Victoria Reg." The Princess of Wales wrote: "A token of affection and regard for him who lived the most spotless of lives and died a soldier's death, fighting for our cause in Zululand. From Albert Edward and Alexandra, July 12, 1879." The gentlemen nearest after the chief mourners bore wreaths in their hands—the violet wreath, with the Princess of Wales' card, which she had placed with her own hand on the coffin; a wreath of white roses, from "Albert Edward Prince of Wales;" a white wreath, from "Louisa, Victoria and Maud of Wales," and one from "Edward and George of Wales," sent by the young princes to the friend whose daring and skill in manly exercises were specially calculated to attract boyish admiration. Prince Leopold's offering was an immortelle, with the words written by him on the card, "Hommage d'affection et d'estime de la part de Léopold." The Duchess of Cambridge sent and had placed upon the coffin of the lamented Prince Imperial a cross of violets, with her name and the inscription, "A la mémorie du jeune et bien aimé héros, Louis Napoléon."——M. Clément Duvernois, whose death has just been recorded in Paris, had tried his hand at more than one trade before turning first a Minister in extremis of the Second Empire, and next a convict in the Poissy jail, on account of his connection with the Banque Territoriale bubble. He had been a journalist in Algeria, a colonist in Mexico, and a good many other things. Once he came over to London with a monopoly in his pocket of all the sewer-produce in Mexico; he had obtained it from Maximilian, through the medium of the milliner in ordinary to the Empress Charlotte. He was about to sell it in the city for a very large sum, when the news arrived of the tragedy at Queretaro. The Mexican Empire had collapsed, and with it the Mexican Sewer-Produce Company went to the dogs. Duvernois returned to Paris and started a newspaper. He was not long in being introduced to Napoleon III. by his tailor, and became a Minister. He was a man of ready wit and energetic intelligence; but somewhat too lax in morals, even in his generation. One of his political aphorisms is worth quoting as a characteristic outburst of Bohemian cynicism: "La politique? Changez d'opinion quand c'est utile à votre fortune, et de café quand vous voulez changer d'opinion."—World.——An American engineer, who, being engaged in the construction of a railway in China, has had unusually favorable opportunities of examining the famous "Great Wall" built to obstruct the incursions of the Tartars, gives the following account of this wonderful work: The wall is 1,728 miles long, 18 feet wide, and 15 feet thick at the top. The foundation throughout is of solid granite, and the remainder of compact masonry. At intervals of between 200 and 300 yards, towers rise up 25 to 30 feet high, and 24 feet in diameter. On the top of the wall and on both sides of it are masonry parapets to enable the defenders to pass unseen from one tower to another. The wall itself is carried from point to point in a perfectly straight line, across valleys and plains and over hills, without the slightest regard to the configuration of the ground, sometimes plunging down into abysses a thousand feet deep. Brooks and small rivers are bridged over by the wall, while on both banks of larger streams strong flanking towers are placed.——Little Annie plays so hard in these vacation days that she does not become so round and rosy as her mother would like. Not long since, as she was having her Saturday night bath, her mother said: "Oh, Annie, dear, what shall I do with you? I believe you grow thinner and thinner every day!" Annie thoughtfully regarded her mother for a moment, then asked very seriously: "Am I thin enough yet, do you think, to be mother of a paper doll?"—Boston Transcript.——This, from the World, is neat: "We have been requested to notice the recital of a young American, who is thought to be a nice singer and a nice pianiste; only she is thought to be a nice pianiste by those who hear her sing, and a nice singer by those who hear her play." It reminds us of Yates' description of a riverside villa, where "in the summer the river was at the bottom of the lawn, and in the winter the lawn was at the bottom of the river."——When the coffin of the Prince Imperial was opened by M. Pietri it was found that the body had undergone so little change that the face was as recognizable as it had ever been. The wounds were all clean cut, and the face still wore that expression of peaceful repose which was noticed when the body was first found.—Vanity Fair.——One more interesting scrap anent M'lle Sara Bernhardt, and this is from her own lips: She has received a commission to execute a bust of Lord Beaconsfield before leaving England.——The gunboats for the Chinese Government have had a satisfactory trial at Newcastle, and will proceed to Portsmouth, where they will be inspected by H. E. the Chinese Minister.——It is difficult in the present day to realize the fact that wheat was at one time unknown in America; yet prior to the discovery of the continent by Columbus there was no cereal in America approaching in nature to the wheat plant. It was not, observes the American Miller, until 1530 that wheat found its way into Mexico; and then only by chance. A slave of Cortez found a few grains of wheat in a parcel of rice and showed them to his master, who ordered them to be planted. The result showed that wheat would thrive well on Mexican soil; and to-day one of the finest wheat valleys in the world is near the Mexican capital. From Mexico the cereal found its way to Peru. Maria d'Escobar, wife of Don Diego de Chauves, carried a few grains to Lima, which were planted—the entire product being used for seed for several successive crops. At Quito, Ecuador, a monk of the Order of St. Francis, by the name of Fray Jodosi Bixi, introduced the new cereal; and it is said that the jar which contained the seeds is still preserved by the monks of Quito. Wheat was introduced into the present limits of the United States contemporaneously with the settlement of the country by the English and Dutch.

BOOK NOTICES.

Putnams' Economic Monographs. Why we Trade and How we Trade By Prof. J. Watson. The Land Question and the Present Commercial Crisis. By Horace White. Our Business System and the Civil Service. By A. L. Earle. Free Trade. Sermons in Protectionist Manufactures. By I. S. Moore. An Essay on Free Trade. By Richard Hawley. Hard Money and Labor. By Hon. Carl Schurz. National Banking. By M. L. Scudder, Jr. International Copyright. By G. H. Putnam. For sale at Billings, Harbourne & Co's.

These brief but pregnant pamphlets are part of a series that are being issued by G. P. Putnam's Sons, of New York, the work of disseminating such economic literature being assisted by the New York Free Trade Club. They are all written by men who have made a special study of the subjects, and some of the authors are in the very front rank of American economists. They all deal with questions of immediate and pressing interests to the people, exhibiting in brief compass the drawbacks of protection to trade and the merits of free commerce with the world, besides giving valuable information on other vital economic questions on which people generally are but ill informed. This series of pamphlets, published occasionally and in very cheap form, constitute one of the very best means by which our intelligent but very busy people may be enlightened; and the merit of these publications is such that it seems to us they are worthy of being re-printed in a volume or volumes as a standard work.

SPEECHES AND REPORTS ON FINANCE AND TAXATION. By Hon. John Sherman. New York, D. Appleton & Co.; San Francisco, Billings, Harbourne & Co.

This volume of 640 pages contains thirty-nine speeches on questions of finance and taxation, and two of Mr. Sherman's Annual Reports to Congress in his capacity of Secretary of the Treasury. The speeches were nearly all delivered in the Senate of the United States, beginning with that on the "Morrill Tariff Bill," on May 7th, 1860, and ending with that on the "Legal Tender of Silver Coin," on June 8th, 1876. The chief subjects embraced in this selection of his speeches are varied, but they are topics which, at the time, were of absorbing interest. There are speeches on the issue of Treasury Notes, on the issue of United States Notes or Greenbacks, on National Bank Currency, on Funding the National Debt, on International Monetary Staudard, on Coinage, on Income Tax, on Re-issue of Greenbacks, on the Resumption Act, on Fractional Currency, etc. During a long period Mr. Sherman was Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate, and, therefore, these speeches have considerable importance, as he had ample means of ascertaining the facts of which they are mainly composed. But when he comes to deal with economic principles Mr. Sherman shows his weakness, although it is a weakness common to most American politicians who have drifted into finance by the force of circumstances and the exigencies of party management, rather than by previous training or special aptitude.

DEVELOPMENT OF ENGLISH LITERATURE (Old English Period). By Brother Azarias, of the Christian Schools: Professor of English Literature in Rock Hill College, Maryland. New York, D. Appleton & Co.; San Francisco, A. L. Bancroft & Co.

This work when completed, for we have before us only the first of three volumes, will be of inestimable value to students of English literature, and still more so to professors. Written by a Professor of English, and intended for professors, the author necessarily avoids minor matters; still the style is so clear and elegant, and the chapters so short, and the selection of characteristic specimens of the earliest English so judicious, that the work cannot but be interesting and instructive to any one who desires to see how the language of to-day has been gradually elaborated through ages. The author tells us that "The present volume traces the growth and development of Old English thought, as expressed in Old English literature from the first dawnings of History down to the Norman Conquest. It goes back of the written word to the life, the aspirations and the motives that gave it expression. It seeks in the manners and customs, the religion and law and government and international relations of the Old English people, the sources whence the literature of that people derives its tone and coloring. For this purpose, the author has laid every available source of information under contribution. Dry landgrants, antiquated law codes, the decrees of councils, the lives of saints, legend and history, the researches of scholar and critic and antiquarian, have all of them directly or indirectly been brougbt to bear upon the subject, and have been made use of to throw light upon the purely literary document." Again: "A people's literature is a criterion of a people's civilization. It embodies what is most enduring in thought, and records what is best worth remembering in deeds." The 210 pages contain a vast amount of interesting information delivered in the most pleasing form that matter of the kind is susceptible of.

THE DECLINE OF PUBLIC SPIRIT.

It is always an unpleasant, and sometimes an unprofitable task to say unpleasant things, no matter how true they may be, nor how necessary it may be to say them; but in the present condition of affairs the News Letter does not propose to be derelict in its duty, however much it may be compelled to tread upon the corns of our praise-loving public. Time was, some fifteen years ago, when any scheme to benefit the city or State, by whomsoever projected, met with ample encouragement, not alone in words but in hard cash, from the giants who ruled in those days. No petty jealousies were allowed to stand in the way of what might benefit the people at large, but each man put his hand in his pocket and said, like old Stephen Girard: "I sympathize so much," and the result was—success! Then it was that California's reputation for public spirit was built up, and spread abroad to the four corners of the world, to our enduring profit. To be a Californian, of that epoch, meant something creditable, but, alas, how different now! We are simply grubbing along upon the reputation of the past and doing nothing for the future. Instead of supporting our dignity as the third commercial center of the Union, we allow ourselves to be outdone in enterprise by any inland city which, with not a tithe of our natural advantages, bids fair to outstrip us in the race for position by that very energy and public spirit which is now, so unfortunately, gone into a decline with us. At Paris we had but a beggarly representation; at Philadelphia, California was a by-ward among the great States, and now at Sydney we appear to be destined to a similar nonentity. It cannot be charged that the Press have been guilty of shortcomings in this respect. They have rung the changes upon "extension of commerce," until the subject has become threadbare. The responsibility rests with the Chamber of Commerce and our merchants. If they are not blind to their own interests they will speedily devise ways and means to obliterate the prevailing impression that public spirit in California is dead. We repeat it: public spirit is dead. Unless there is such a thing as resurrection—and that immediate—the future of San Francisco, and of the State, must be far below all legitimate expectation.

OUR NEXT GOVERNOR.

The signs of the State canvass all point one way. They indicate that the Hon. George C. Perkins will almost certainly he our next Governor. It is true that assertions to the contrary are maintained with great vehemence. The New Constitution party are an unknown quantity in politics. Their strength has never been submitted to the crucial test of an electoral count. There is, therefore, no satisfactory evideuce before us that they have any considerable following. They hold meetings, talk well, and make loud vauntings of what the interior counties will do for them. They claim that they will have twenty thousand majority over the Republicans outside of San Francisco; hut when one asks for the signs that entitle them to speak with such confidence, no satisfactory answer is vouchsafed. We are thus left to form our own judgment, and not being passion-blinded partisans, we think we can reckon the thing up quite as well, if not something hetter, than those who are more actively employed in this terribly lying campaign. Our unhiased opinion is tbat the election of George C. Perkins is now almost heyond a peradventure. It is true that more than three weeks yet remain in which to change things. In that time there is no telling what may take place. But we think that nothing that can seriously interfere with Republican success is now likely to he sprung. The enemies of Mr. Perkins have about exhausted their ammunition. He has been under fire for several weeks, and all the colorahle stories that it is possihle to invent ahout him are about played out. The live paper's stock of lies seems to be falling short. There are no new oue's forthcoming. The old ones are refurbished and trotted out morning after morning, until the thing is hecoming monotonous and wearisome. We think we are not wrong in taking this as an indication that the enemy's fire is pretty well drawn, and that Mr. Perkins has already encountered all that can be seriously urged against him. That being so, his position from this time forth is likely to improve and strengthen every day. He is making an energetic and winning campaign. He improves as he goes along. That speech which he delivered the other night, on his return to the city, was a most admirable one. We think that, take it altogether, it was the happiest effort that has heen made by any speaker dur ng this campaign. Its temper was charming—he praised his competitors, and laughed his enemies out of counteuance. When a man feels in that humor, when he has done the worst of his fighting, it is very certain that he is in good fettle for what remains. Moreover, it is evidence of a consciousness that his success is assured. He who wins may laugh. Besides the excellence of its temper, the speech was strong in every other respect. He touched various subjects, and handled them all ably and well. In fact, he surprised even those who knew him best. The truth is, Mr. Perkins is exhihiting a daily improving capacity for public station that exceeds the best hopes of his friends. That he was a ready and capable husiuess man everybody knew; that he could be equally ready and capahle in the discussion of large public questions, remained to he proven. The proofs are coming more rapidly, and are more conclusive than had heen anticipated. He has already demonstrated that he has the capacity to make a model Governor, and we believe he will. His election will be a cause of satisfaction to dwellers in our city generally. He is one of us, a resident in our midst, genial, affable and easily approached; we will know more of our next Governor, and, let us hope, get more good out of him than we have out of some of our past ones. It is seldom that the Governor of the State has heen selected from San Francisco. We are persuaded that George C. Perkins will so discharge the duties of the office that country residents will not hereafter fight so shy of city gubernatorial candidates. It has heen long said that a city man could not be elected Governor. George C. Perkins will annihilate that belief, and in doing that will honor himself and reflect credit upon San Francisco.

A PETTY PRESS.

The Bulletin and Call are giving all the aid they can to the city ticket put up hy the scalawags of the Sand-lots. Their proprietors can have nothing in common with that crowd. Messrs. Fitch & Pickering know full well that the nominees they are supporting will not hear examination. They know that the man Kalloch is a dangerous demagogue, whose election will hring this city into contempt throughout the entire nation. They know that men have been nominated for School Directors who cannot write their own names, and who are likely to be controlled hy influences inimical to our public schools. They know that the nominees for Supervisors are, for the most part, tramps of low degree, lacking every qualification essential to the intelligent discharge of the duties of the very onerous and responsible offices to which they aspire. We say that Fitch & Pickering know these things. They, of all men, have heen pronounced against Kearney, and all his works. Back numbers of their papers teem with denunciations of the low, ignorant drayman, whom they would now exalt into a municipal dictator. The motive of their present course is but too uransparent, and it is as ignohle as it is obvious. Anything to beat the Chronicle is their motto. We are not lovers of that sheet, not by a great deal, but we should esteem ourselves recreant to our duty as journalists, aud to the best interests of the city, if we were to allow our disapproval of a particular paper to drive us into the perpetration of a great wrong. The support of the Sand-lot ticket means a menace to the intelligence and property of the city. It is whispered that Fitch & Pickering have an understanding with Kearney that his candidates, if elected, are to assist in their official positions to punish the enemies of the Bulletin & Call. The appearances are that way. Kearney enters their editorial sactums as if he owned them. He is bepuffed and written up in the Call as if that paper were published for his special henefit. This is mean, beggarly, mischievious business, hut it is in keeping with the rule-or-ruin policy which Pickering & Fitch have ever practiced.

Mr. W. W. Traylor has been nominated as a Candidate for the State Senate, from the Ninth Senatorial District, hy the republican Convention; and the nomination is most emphatically indorsed hy all good citizens. If all the selections were as good, every man who cares for the honor of the city and State would vote for the Repuhlican ticket without hesitation. Mr. Treylor is hut little known in politics, his time having been devoted to his own affairs, which he has attended to with energy, iudustry and uprightness; and the public will gain in him, if elected, a faithful and conscientious guardian of its hest interests.

Eve always enlists the sympathy of the gentler sex when they reflect that hefore marriage she never had a chance to play off another fellow against Adam.

A PRECIOUS PAIR.

Quoth a sly renegado named Gorham:
"All my ducats are gone; to restore 'em
I'll oil up my jaw
And get paid to hee-haw
For the Bilk Party—though I ahhor 'em.

"I'll go for the Central Pacific
In a manner that's simply terrific
Till to me they make offers
Of cash from their coffers
Not to let my tongue be so prolific.

"I'm a liar complete, without equal,
And my lies sound as truth, for I speak well,
I'm an ingrate of course,
And devoid of remorse—
What these gifts can't accomplish my cheek will."

This was heard hy a party named Gohen,
A Hehrew—rich, nosey and knowin';
Quoth he: "Mr. Gorham,
I'll help you to score 'em,
For revenge sake, I don't want their coin.

"Once the Railroad was my admiration;
Now I wish it the deepest damnation;
For, though humhly I licked
Stanford's hoots, yet he kicked
Me out of his great corporation."

Thus, reader, you scarcely can wonder
At all the political thunder
Which booms from these two—
The Adams-Bank Jew,
Who breeds hate, and the sneak who wants plunder.

FOR MAYOR.

The nomination of Bradford P. Flint for Mayor is an excellent one, which meets the approhation of all friends of honest, efficient and respectable government. A citizen of long standing, of high character, of energetic characteristics and of undoubted responsibility, he is in every way worthy of being chosen the chief magistrate of this great city. As hetween him and the unsavory preacher, there ought to be no questiou of the result. Mr. Flint is a prominent merchant, who has been a resident among us for the past thirteen years. He is known for his business integrity, his quiet, self-contained demeanor, his firm adherence to his convictions, his thoughtful sense of honor, and his general availahility for good and useful work. His party have selected a man whose strength before the people will increase as the campaign proceeds. He will hear examination and criticism, and the more of it he gets the more obvious will it hecome that his nomination was a wise one. We could wish that the other parties may indorse his candidature. There should be a union of honest, thoughtful, conservative citizens, in order that the ahominable crew from the Sand Lots may not be permitted to wreck our city government. We have our say on that suhject elsewhere, but we feel that we cannot too frequently or too earnestly urge the importance of all the good elements in society uniting in order to defeat the had ones. The success of the riff-raff who constitute the Kearney ticket would be an everlasting blot upon the escutcheon of our city. No citizen, in that event, will care to admit while abroad that he hails from San Francisco. A city whose chief magistrate is a Kalloch, whose school directors cannot write their own names, and whose City Fathers are tramps, would he a cause of shame and confusion of face to all dwellers therein. With such a man as B. P. Flint as a candidate, the city ought to he saved from the infamy which threatens to overwhelm its good name.

SOME REFLECTIONS.

Should the result of the Septemher election be different from what it might have heen had the sound advice of the News Letter, given early in the campaign, heen followed, the fact will then he patent to all, as it has long heen to dispassionate observers, that there is a plentiful lack of brains in the old political parties, and a houndless disgust with the methods now in vogue to control puhlic affairs, with the sole view to the monetary aggrandizement of a select few, who have been, and are, willing to sacrifice the hest interests of the State for temporary personal gain. We have frequently pointed out that the effects of popular dissatisfaction will remain, until the causes thereof are removed, and with that purpose in view have urged those in authority to loosen their purse-strings and hy giving employment, hy means of necessary works, remove the prevailing stagnation, set the money in healthful circulation, and so do much to restore the interdependence of capital and labor. While both classes hold aloof from each other, in an attitude of antagonism, it cannot be expected that in political affairs they will counsel amicahly together for the puhlic good as of old. It is not yet too late to attempt something in this direction, and we once more urge the feasihility of renewed industrial enterprise. Matters cannot go on forever in this stagnant condition, and the sooner the ice is broken for a desirable change the sooner will we again enter upon the highroad to prosperity. And hy making an immediate heginning the good result of this advice will appear when the ballots are counted.

The political polemics of the New Constitution organ in this city are slightly monotonous in their character. A Republican spouter urges Perkins' superior qualifications for Governor. The organ promptly replies: "The railroad is an overshadowing monopoly." The Republican avers that unless California can be carried in September, a Democratic President will he elected next year. Answers the organ: "Freights and fares must be reduced." The Republican flaunts the gory shirt and deprecates a "Solid South." Reply: "Railroad discriminations are ruining the business of California." The same marvelous logic is employed by the H. B. organ in controversy with the Democrat and the Sand-Lotter. "Morrison is a hetter man for Chief Justice than Bennett," says the Examiner. "The railroad anaconda is strangling the State," retorts the organ. "The Chinese must go!" yells the Kearneyite. "Stanford and Crocker are sonless monopolists," bawls the organ. And to think that the argument is to go on until the third of Septemher!

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier!" "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir, with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

He had never tried it before, but he was naturally a self-reliant man, and felt confident of his ability to do it. Moreover, his wife had gone into the country. Therefore, carefully selecting from that lady's work-basket the thickest needle and stoutest thread (as is the God-given instinct of his sex), he resolutely set himself to the task. Spitting upon his fingers, he carefully rolled the end into a point, and then, closing one of his own optics, he attempted to jab out the needle's solitary eye. But the thread either passed by one side or the other of the needle, or humped itself against the glittering steel and refused to be persuaded. However, while he reflected upon the difficulty which must attend a rich man's entrance into the Kingdom of Heaven, the thread suddenly bolted through the eye to the extent of an inch, and, fearing to lose this advantage, he quickly drew the ends together and united them with a knot about the size of a buckshot. The button was a trowser one, but he liked the dimensions of its holes, and it was only going into the back of his shirt, anyhow. As he passed the needle gently upwards through the linen, he felt a mingled pity and disdain for men bungled over such easy jobs; and as he let the button gracefully glide down the thread to its appointed place, he vowed within himself that if ever he married a second time it should be for some nobler reason than a dread of sewing on his own buttons. The first downward thrust had the same happy result, and holding the button firmly with his thumb, he came up again with all that confidence which uniform success inspires. Perhaps the point of the needle did not enter to the bone, but it seemed to him that it did, and his comment upon the circumstance was emphatic. But he was very ingenius, and next time he would hold the button by one edge and come up through the hole nearest the other. Of course he would. But the needle had an independent way of suiting itself as to holes; and it chose the one where the thumb was. The remarks which followed would have been quite out of place at a prayer-meeting. Then the needle got sulky. It didn't care about holes, anyhow, if it was going to be sworn at for finding them, and the button might have been an unperforated disk for all the apertures which that needle could thenceforward he made to discover, without infinite poking and prodding. It always came though when it was least expected, and never where it was wanted. Still he persevered, and it was not until he finally discovered that he had stitched over the edge of the button and had sewn it on the wrong side of the shirt that he utterly broke down.

The Nicaraguan Government has part of a ship canal ready for business, and is determined to put forth energy in finishing up the rest. So the New York telegrams say, and we admire the Nicaraguans. It is some time since we knew of this affair, but we kept the secret, out of consideration for De Lesseps. The canal is cut through the solid rock during the day, by eight-hour labor; it is then taken in at night and locked up in the President's bed-room, where fine bulldogs of the best breed keep watch and ward by turns. The President sleeps in a section of the canal till the laborers come to rouse him at daybreak, when he asks them, like the slave in the "Arabian Nights," if they are content. They hold up their heads and say "Yes," when he blesses them with forty stripes save one, and the canal is uncoiled and the cutting proceeded with. The boring-tube is armed with the face of a New York reporter, and the rock extracted is buried in a hole dug for the purpose. The earth dug from the hole is swallowed by the Nicaraguan Government to avoid discovery. For the rest of this thrilling romance see New York papers whenever you please.

Something should be done with these people who force fountains upon us. It is a most indecent way of calling us whisky drinkers, and we ought to take it out of them while we can. Robert Apple, who has left us $10,000 for a pump near the Market-street Ferry, was cunning enough to see Naples and die; so that we can't conveniently get at him until after the election. But Dr. Cogswell we have always with us, and there is no reason why he should not suffer for his own Montgomery Avenue sin, and vicariously for Apple. If there are sanitary objections to burying him in the street, he might be dried in a kiln and hung on his tombstone for a perpetual scarecrow to philanthropists; or, he might be reduced to impalpable powder and sent round as snuff to the most prominent reformers of the world.

More horror from Wheatland. They have actually sat upon the negro Williams, and have marked his excited eye; but it turns out that, after all, he's nothing to nobody. They found him not guilty, if he will drink no longer water, but whisky straight. Ida Dunn, when put upon the stand, said she hadn't lost any iron bar, and she didn't seem to believe that there was any brutal outrage stowed away in Cora Heslep's writing desk. The jury brought in a verdict, the judge stretched his legs and got up, and they all went round the corner to see a man. The profits of this little horror business to the town in these three months are just $4,826; not a bad speculation in dull times, even though $3,163 of this sum go to the grocery man.

A telegram from London says that prospects are brightening in India, and that the rubber crop will suffice to keep the people alive until rice is ready to harvest—stay their stomachs, as it were; but whether the India rubber is swallowed, or whether the crop spoken of is a disrespectful allusion to the Hindoo stomach itself, as capable of indefinite extension and contraction, we are at a loss to guess. Anyway, one thing is clear—that India rubber is what the Indians live by, and manage to stretch out their days. The stretching done by telegraph operators is of another kind, and naturally suggests, as a reward, the utilizing of telegraph poles to stretch from.

Prince Napoleon's prayer is certainly an affecting one. It does not lack fervor, but tested by Professor Tyndal's prayer-guage, it cannot be pronounced "effectual." Dr. Cox might meet this skeptical suggestion by insinuating that it appears to have been addressed rather to the admiration of the French people than to the Throne of Grace.

Mr. Gorham's lower maxillary still wags. The latest victim of the terrible weapon that once did such fearful execution upon the Philistines is Senator Booth.

The testimony before the Coroner's jury that has been investigating the recent Baltimore boiler explosion, which resulted in a number of deaths, goes to show that neither the boiler, nor its makers, nor its owners, were at all to blame. A number of "practical machinists" swore vigorously to the excellence of the boiler. The employés of the proprietors testified, in an equally stalwart manner, that there was no neglect in the use and care of it. The whole mystery was satisfactorily solved by an expert, who, being duly sworn, explained that "the boiler was tricky, and had an unaccountable way of increasing the pressure on its gauges," besides which "it was not responsive to its safety valve." This, of course, relieved all parties from an unpleasant sense of responsibility. What can be expected from a tricky boiler but an occasional exhibition of playful eccentricity?

Oh! Mr. Murray! Who'd ha' thought it? After all that talk about the Adirondacks, and the "Perfect Horse," and the Park-street Church, to get up and get, to mizzle, to absquatulate, to dust, in this unfeeling way, and leave folks to imagine everything ugly about you and Mrs. Hodgkins! It's too much. But Mrs. Hodgkins is a brick. She is indignant at the insinuation of an elopement; for she has all the Rev. W. H. H. M.'s private papers, and understands his business, and he would rather die than do anything dishonorable. And she will arrange matters. If anybody can, she can. As for Murray, he was worried with work, poor fellow; and now something else worries him, and takes all the snap out of him, and the good man has not a word to say for himself. A very limp and shaky Rev. Wild Horse Hodgkins Murray.

The Jury were entirely right.—It was plainly a case of "emotional insanity," and nothing else. No Kentucky jury could fail to perceive that a chivalric Southern gentleman like Mr. Buford would never have discharged the contents of a double-barreled shot-gun into the back of an amiable and inoffensive acquaintance, had he been in his right mind. It is true that the shooting was clearly proved, and that the act was deliberate, and apparently intentional. In some unsophisticated communities the want of immediate provocation would have tended to enhance the atrocity of the deed; but in Kentucky, where this sort of thing is better understood, the logical inference from the lack of sufficient provocation was, either that the accused was insane, or that he didn't do the deed at all.

One of Mr. Pickering's young men devotes a brief but able editorial to the instruction of the British Premier on the evils of land monopoly and the curse of a hereditary aristocracy, assuring the pupil that Americans understand these things much better than in the nature of the case Englishmen can be expected to do, and adding: "If Beaconsfield wishes to learn the results of land division, let him turn his eyes to France." Pshaw! Why should Beaconsfield turn his eyes to France to learn anything when it is so much easier to consult the columns of his Call?

Dr. Glenn's organs have gradually toned down their denials that he had incurred the inexpiable guilt of having occasionally given a six-bit job to a Chinaman. The negatur was at first vehement and sweeping. The Doctor had never, no never, perpetrated such an atrocity. But now the never is modified to "hardly ever," and the candidate's official apologist and next friend solemnly informs the public that "Dr. Glenn represents his employment of Chinese to have been in most cases involuntary." Pickwickian, so to say.

We observe that Judge Stephen A. Field is mentioned by the Eastern papers as among the two or three most prominent candidates for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. This must, of course, be highly gratifying to the Judge, and yet it can hardly be a sufficient consolation for the pain he must have experienced in seeing his famous Chinese queue decision reviewed and reversed by one of Mr. Pickering's young men in a three-and-a-half inch editorial in last Monday's Call.

Jno. B. Gough is 62 years old, has traveled 420,000 miles, delivered 8,000 lectures, and has not spent a day in bed from illness in 33 years; all the result, presumably, of cold water. But there's many a fat old whale that can bang him. We have seen one that was at least 80 years old, and must have traveled 42,000,000 miles, and spouted not less than 10,000,000 times; and we don't believe the old buffer ever spent a half-a-day in bed.

A striking illustration of the materialistic and utilitarian tendencies of the age is to be found in the title of the new song: "Can You Support Me Darling?" which is just now all the rage in Eastern drawing-rooms, and has quite superseded the Pinafore selections. The author is said to have been a prospective mother-in-law, and the esoteric rendering of the question is suspected to be "Can You Support Us?"

"The style for sleeves is growing shorter and shorter."—Jennie June, in Fashion Notes. "The mode for skirts continues getting shorter."—Fashion Notes (half a column further down). Now, the terrible question suggests itself, what will happen when these two tendencies from opposite points meet half way? when Jennie's occupation will be gone, and there will be no more Fashion Notes?

A man in Sacramento stole a five-cent loaf to satisfy his hunger, and was sent to jail. Whence many tears of maudlin editors, who have not cut their eye-teeth. The whole thing was a put-up job of Kearney's, and has been worth, so far, six votes and a half. If the soft-minded editors keep on puffing, the agitator may lose all but the half.

Longfellow and Fields were once walking together along a country road, when they met an angry bull. At least, so the story goes; but we doubt it, for Jas. T. Fields has nowhere mentioned his dear friend, the bull; and he would rather have been tossed than miss such a chance.

They are making a great fuss in New York over a man that stopped a horse on Broadway. If the man was large enough and heavy enough, we don't see why he shouldn't stop a horse, or any other man, on Broadway. After all, fat men must have been made for some purpose.

Some men are walking round with an assortment of bets that De Lesseps will have no subscribers to his canal in this community. We are ready to bet that De Lesseps may manage to survive even this wintry neglect and find a few pence somewhere else.

The Alta says the war between Peru and Chile is a foolish and useless contest; and yet it goes on! But then the Alta has been waging a foolish and useless contest with commonsense and English for at least seventy-five years. Go easy on Peru and Chile.

Some one says our statesmen are not free moral agents, and we believe it. We never heard any one of them accused of morality, though traditions with regard to their free agency in various interesting matters are not unknown.

CUTTING OF THE AMERICAN ISTHMUS,

Under the Presidency and Direction of

M. FERDINAND DE LESSEPS,

President-Director of the Suez Canal.

800,000 SHARES

OF 500 FRANCS EACH.

In pursuance of the By-Laws lodged with Mr. Champetier de Ribes, Notary in Paris, 10,000 shares are reserved for the civil society of original grantees on account of the concession and surveys transferred by them to Mr. Ferdinand de Lesseps.

The remaining 790,000 shares are offered to the public for subscription.

The amount of each share is payable as follows:
25 francs on application.
100 francs on allotment.

The remaiuing 375 francs will be called up successively and according to the requirements of the undertaking upon notice from the Council of Administration, published at least three months in advance.

Immediately after the constitution of the Society, steps will be taken for having the shares officially quoted.

After payment of 250 francs, the shares may be converted into warrants to bearer by resolutiou of a general meeting.

Every proprietor of twenty shares is a member of general mectings.

An interest of five per cent. on sums lodged will be paid to shareholders duriug the execution of the works.

The public subscription will be open in Europe and in America on WEDNESDAY and THURSDAY, sixth and seventh of August.

The allotment of shares will be made in proportion to the total subscriptions, without distinction of nationality.

Subscriptions will be received by the COMPTOIR D'ESCOMPTE DE PARIS, in Paris, at 14 Rue Bergere, and in the United States through their correspondents, Messrs. BROWN BROTHERS & CO., New York, and BANK OF CALIFORNIA, San Francisco.
[August 9.]

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoips and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

Found at Last! What writers have been looking for, sighing for, and a few, a very few of them, praying for—a pen that will do its work steadily, continuously, without need of inkstand or blotting-pad. The MacKinnon Pen resembles a handsome pocket lead-pencil, and can be used with the same readiness. It has capacity for twenty-four hours steady writing, needing only to be filled one morning to last till the next. The point is in iridium and practically indestructible, and the ink flows without difficulty, just as wanted and not more. The stroke on the paper follows the motion of the fingers, and the moment the hand is lifted, the flow of the ink ceases. Messrs. A. S. Spence & Co., 24 Geary street, are the agents for this city, and the only dealers who furnish this perfect invention.

According to Mr. Richard Wagner, the Musician of the Future and the Apostle of the German Idea, the work and mission of his life is to free mankind from a slavish belief in other things, and make them enter into the joys of Paradise by worshiping him as the incarnate German Idea. We all want a little paradise, but not on these terms, thank you, Mr. Wagner. A mild roasting seems preferable; particularly when we are able, by keeping our common sense, to breakfast and dine at Swain's, 213 Sutter street. The mission of Swain is to make people eat better meals than can be found elsewhere: and be accomplishes it.

The merchant who employs young saleswomen is continually having his goods miss-represented.

Cleanse the blood of all impurities, and you neutralize the virus of many diseases at their source. In all diseases of the Skin, the Glands, the Fleshy Fibre, the Secretive Organs and the Bones, all Scrofulous Complaints, Cancer, etc., Dr. Jayne's Alterative is a standard curative; and while it is a fault in many medicines that before they reach the disease the patient is prostrated beyond recovery, no such drawback attends this remedy, for it sustains the strength of the sufferer, while eradicating the cause of his complaint. Sold by Crane & Brigham, San Francisco.

"Harper's Weekly" says that it is worth the while of every good citizen to do what he can to feel sure of waking up in the morning under the same orderly government which protected him when he fell asleep; and General Grant in the White House is that government. Why in the White House only? Let Bradley & Rulofson furnish one of their splendid photographs of the General to every citizen. They are perfect likenesses, even more silent than the original, though speaking, and they don't smoke.

A lady might as well get her to a nunnery as not to dress in the latest style, and the only security for wearing a fashionable hat or bonnet is to deal with Mrs. Skidmore, 1114 Market street. Her styles are always the latest and most exquisite productions of Parisian taste; and her parlors are always crowded with the leaders of society. Mrs. Skidmore is now making a Clearance Sale of her recent stock, in order to receive new importations; and everything is offered at cost.

The fellow made a bad bull when he went to steal a squash and got gourd.

"Corpulent" writes to the New York Star that steamers should have stronger gang-planks. He weighs 300 pounds, and lately, when going on board a steamer, found the plank bend like a crescent under him, and he could get no help from the hands. He says this is a growing evil; but if he is not satisfied with 300 pounds, when will he be? The cure is simple enough: F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation Whisky would put him in fighting or jumping trim at once.

The hero of a German story says he presed his burning lips to her rosy mouth, and "she returned my kiss, and my soul was no longer in my body; I touched the stars: the earth went from under my feet." But his hat, which had won the maiden's heart, was of the most exquisite style, just introduced by White, at 614 Commercial street. The original may he seen there under a glass case.

Bernhardt will wear Sara toga at watering places.

An enthusiastic poet writes in a late English paper some lines to Sara Bernhardt, in which he calls upon her to "Say, dost thou feed on milk and honey-dew?"

Nothing of the kind, I assure you, sir. Mdlle. Bernhardt merely uses Mme. Rachel's Enamel Bloom, which is absolutely harmless and keeps the hue of youth upon her face. This fact we learned direct. Messrs. Chas. Langley & Co. are agents.

The Rev. Ed. H. May, rector of an Episcopal church in Washington, has been buying Kentucky lottery tickets for some time, hoping to get money enough to build a church; and on the 15th of July he struck it rich. No. 78,718 was the ticket that drew the capital prize, and now he can have his church—or something else. But the man who buys one of Montanya's Union Ranges has no need to wait on Providence. His capital prize is secured, and brings him in returns three times a day.

During the year 1878 there was an increase in the number of newspapers published in the United States of 460. This vast growth in intelligence coincides with and is attributable in a great degree to the constantly aumenting demand for Landsberger's Private Cuvée, which is the wine intellectual communities cannot do without. Orders are constantly received from Europe.

Hickory nuts, containing living curiosities, are not what they are cracked up to be.

McNally & Hawkins have the largest and most completely assorted stock of chandeliers, gas fittings, brackets, lamps, and every article in gas fitting and plumbing work, in every style, gilt, bronze, nickel and silver-plated and burnished. This is the oldest and most popular house in the city. Their new store under the Grand Hotel is splendidly furnished.

Men should look not alone on their own things, but each one also on the things of others, and help one another. This is the way Mr. Chas. Peters understands charity and practices it. He is now directing the Nevada Building Association, Virginia City.

Lawyers in court are always in the "objective" case.

In this season of the year there is no drink comparable for healthfulness and cooling power to the genuine Napa Soda. In Oakland its efficacy against the tendency to typhoid fever has made it the universal beverage, and the demand for it increases daily.

THE DAY BOOK

FROM

Saturday to Saturday.

Versailles, August 2d.—The Senate and Assembly are prorogued and will reassemble in Paris tbe 25th of November or 1st of December.——BERLIN, August 2d.—The new law relative to the administration of Alsace-Lorraine goes into force October 1st.——ROME, August 2d.—Quarantine is imposed on vessels from the United States, because of yellow fever.——CAPE TOWN, July 15th.—Lord Chelmsford has resigned, and is returning to Durban.——NEW YORK, August 2d.—A Tribune's Washington correspondent interviewed Casey Young, Represeutative from Tennessee. He says Chinese labor has been tried on some of the cotton and sugar plantations, and declares that the Chinese are the best laborers that can be found for the alluvial region of the lower Mississippi. He says they are quiet and industrious, and do not meddle with politics. He declares that, on the other hand, negroes are "born politicians," and that some of them are the best political managers in the South to-day.——YREKA, August 2d.—Rust has made its appearance on nearly all the late-season grain in Scott Valley, and will lessen the yield considerably. Grasshoppers have made their appearance in Shasta Valley in great numbers, but are too late to do much damage.——VIRGINIA, August 2d.--Work was resumed to-day in the south lateral branch of the Sutro Tunnel. Mr. Sutro says he is about to start two mills for the Company, and will soon have 300 to 400 men employed.——MEMPHIS, August 3d.—Twelve new cases were reported to the Board of Health, to-day, six colored. The death rate to date has been 33⅓ per cent. The Howards, to-morrow, will open a supply depot, from which will be furnished nourishment and stimulants to the indigent.——LONDON, August 3d.—A dispatch from Lishon reports that a gazette bas beeu issued stating that New York and New Jersey are considered infected with yellow fever. In regard to other Atlantic ports, action is suspended.——LONDON, August 3d.—Sir Garnet Wolseley's dispatch to the War Office is as follows: "I propose to form a brigade of artillery and engineers and a squadron of cavalry for Transvaal. I am reducing expeuditures."——CONSTANTINOPLE, August 3d.—Contracts for the supply of coal to the British ironclads now in Besika Bay, mention the Mediterranean ports, Galipoli and ports in the Sea of Marmora as possible places of delivery.——LONDON, August 3d.—A correspondent at Vienna announces that the Archduchess Christine and her mother have left for Biarritz, where, it is believed, they will be visited by the King of Spain.——LONDON, August 3d.—A dispatch to the Times, from Calcutta, says the Madras Government is taking more energetic measures to suppress the Rumpa Rebellion, and has increased the number of troops. Cholera has disappeared from Cashmere.——LONDON, August 3 l.—The Times' Paris dispatch reports that the Exploration Committee of the Sahara Railway recommended the Government to send out Soliellet to visit the unexplored regions between parallels 15 and 25 of the north latitude.——NANCY, August 3d.—An enormous crowd was preseut at the unveiling of the statue of ex-President Thiers. De Marcere, Miuister of the Interior, declared that the Goverument was resolved to maintain a conservative Republic and the just influence of France in Europe. Jules Simon dwelt upon the firmness of Thiers in resisting even his own party. Simon concluded: "France is saved. Sbe possesses forever a Republican Government, and liberty to thiuk, teach and write. The definitive form of the Revolution of 1870 is a conservative, liberal Republic, such as M. Thiers created."——VIENNA, August 3d.—The evacuation of Bulgaria is completed.——ST. PETERSBURG, August 3d.—The Golos says the permanent occupation of Merv would necessitate simultaneous operations from Turkestan and the Caucasus. It is necessary, in view of the English success in Afgbanistan, to form a base on the Persian border in case England should wish to take Herat.——PORT TOWNSEND, August 4th.—The bark Gem of the Ocean, which left Seattle July 29th, coal laden, for San Francisco, went ashore in a dense fog on Vancouver's Island, about seven miles east of San Juan harbor, on Friday last, at 8:15 P.M. The ship lies in an exposed position, the bottom being rocky. The sails and rigging can be saved, but the hull and cargo of 934 tons of coal will probably become a total loss, the latter being very fine, and liable to cake when wet. Cape Flattery is southwest by west, a quarter west, bearing to the wreck.——NEW York, August 5th.—Francisco Rodriguez Sanahrin, a Cuban, and Joze Benecio Bevelagna, have been arrested here on a charge of manufacturing Brazilian notes. The police also arrested, to-day, Segundo Lopez, Paul J. P. Donovan aud John Morarity, alias Armstrong.——A Staten Island brewer has large orders for beer from France aud Australia.——The Peruvian war ships Huascar and Union have visited Chilian ports, destroying launches and capturing the steamer Rimac with an entire regiment of cavalry, besides three vessels loaded with coal and copper.——The steamship Louis David, from Antwerp for Naples, was wrecked during a fog off Ushant, France. Twenty-seven persons were drowned.——Venard de Saint Anne, originator of the project for bridging the English Channel, estimates that it will require seven months for experiments, and a million francs to pay preliminary expenses.——Debate on the Uuiversity Bill has begun in the House of Commons.——In Staffordshire, Eng., 3,400 colliers bave struck.——The stipends of the Spanish Bishops have been reduced one-fourth by the Government.——The French grape and beet-root crops will not be more than half as large as last year.——The attempts at revolution in Mexico have been suppressed.——NEW YORK, August 6th.—Poor's Railroad Manuel gives the following: During the year ending December 31st, 1878, 2,694 miles of uew line were opened, the total mileage in operation in the United States at that date being 81,841 miles. The construction of routes has again been entered upon with activity and spirit. A remarkable feature has heen the enormously increased tonnage in the face of a large falling off of earnings, due to very great reductions in charges for transportation. Since 1873, the year in which the earnings of our railroads reached their maximum, the increase of their tonnage has equaled 50 per cent. A reference to the statements of the several roads will show that at the time at which there has been the greatest complaint of hard times, the movement of merchandise has steadily and largely increased.

COHEN AS A RAILROAD CRITIC.

He who criticises may himself be freely criticised. The measure he meets out to others he fairly challenges for himself. A new railroad critic has arisen; a sort of latter day saint among the Honorable Bilks. If no more honorable, he is certainly no less of a bilk than his confreres. In evidence of that, a leaf out of a comparatively modern history might be read, which would certainly serve to point a moral and adorn a tale; but we forbear. We charitably stay our hand, and mercifully let the critic off with less than his own measure of criticism. Mr. Cohen himself will realize, if others do not, how much he thus escapes; he will marvel at our powers of resisting this great temptation, and, if duly thankful, will bless his lucky stars that he has been treated with a degree of mercy he hath not to others shown.

Annestying the past, then, we advance to meet the critic on his chosen ground. Mr. Cohen has entered the arena of public discussion as a railroad opponent. He has joined the noisy but little hand of dissatistied and dismissed railroad servants. He is one of them, Gorham is another, and De Young is a third. They have all before to-day met around the same pay-office. Cohen knows how much it cost to humor that useful official, the Secretary of the Senate. His little epistolary suggestions on that point addressed to "My dear Governor," will not be forgotten by him. Neither will Gorham's most severely cutting story of how the "live paper" was ruined be forgotten by the public. The Chronicle's sudden splurge with its new dress, press and fixings, will be remembered. People wondered how they were obtained. Gorham illustrated the thing exactly. The erewhile servant-maid was met tricked out in ribbons and furbelows that she could not have come honestly by. "Why, dear me, Mary, what has happened?" inquired the former employer. "Oh! please, sir; I have been and got ruined!" was the reply. Gorham said, "that is what is the matter with the Chronicle; it has been and got ruined, and the railroad is the seducer." At that time Cohen also was feeding at the railroad crib. He was drawing a big salary for making fat contracts with himself. As described by himself, it was the most enviable, and at the same time the most extraordinary employment that ever fell to the lot of mortal man. Paid ten thousand a year to act as agent for the railroad, his principal business appeared to be to negotiate contracts with himself that were of a most profitable character. He bought land at the lowest price, and sold it to himself, as railroad agent, at the highest. He contracted with himself to receive a sort of royalty on every ton of coal used by the railroad, and, under oath, he testified that this was precisely what he was expected to draw his salary for. His employers differed with him in that view of his position, and dismissed him. Ever since then he is the ungrateful dog who seeks to bite the hand that fed him. Such are the triumvirate that would ruin what they could not rule.

Said an unctuous bilk the other day, who was glorying in the latest accession to the ranks of his party: "What Cohen doesn't know about fares and freights is not worth knowing." That is an opinion that may possibly be shared by many people. But it is an entirely erroneous judgment, nevertheless. He is destitute alike of experience, knowledge and authority on that subject. It is true that for a time he owned the Oakland railroad and ferry boats. But they involved no great question as to freights, and as to fares he then thought that nearly double the present charge was a fair one. So little of a railroad man was he, and so utterly did he fail to grasp the future, that he sold out what has since become the most profitable of all the railroad's connections. He had his chance, and missed it, and, now that it is too late, is sorely troubled because he did. It may be supposed that his subsequent employment hy the Central Pacific people gave him an opportunity to become acquainted with the intricacies of fares and freights; hut nothing could be further from the truth. He was never in any way connected with the traffic business. He is, therefore, no authority in regard to that branch of railroad business. He may he a law student, hut is very far from being a practical railroad man, and therefore his opinions are of no more value than those of any other citizen. Moreover, those who believe in his ahility the most are the firmest in the expression of the opinion that he is not gifted with that quality of mind which masters the hard, dry facts of complicated fare tahles and freight bills. He is, therefore, not an authority, and by nature never can be. He is simply drawn to the subject hy a desire to pay off an old grudge, and to get even with those who dismissed him. Just that and nothing more. Cohen in the role of a reformer, for reform's sake, is too ludicrous a conception for any one to entertain who knows him.

His object, as we have shown, is merely to get even. To accomplish that end he insists upon methods that do violence to his knowledge as a lawyer, and to his instincts as a financier. He knows that hy the terms of the New Constitution the question of fare and freight charges has been submitted to a judicial trihuual clothed with all the necessary powers to call witnesses, examine accounts, and generally to do whatever is necessary to enable it to form a fair and dispassionate judgment on the very large questions of which it is made the sole judge. Its mode of procedure is clearly defined. It is to "examine the hooks, paper and records of railroads and other transportation companies, and for this purpose shall have power to issue sub-poenas, and all other necessary process, to hear and determine complaints, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and to punisb for contempt the same as other Courts." That is the modus operandi. Its object is plain enough. It is the providing of means by which a fair, judicial judgment may be made up. Violent as was the opposition of the framers of the Constitution to the railroad, they never dreamt of such violence as that now urged by A. A. Cohen. He wants no inquiry. In the eager pursuit of revenge, he will await no judicial finding from those sworn to deliver one. The case must be prejudiced, and Cohen must dictate the judgment. He has fixed tbe figures, and declares them to a fractional exactitude. There must he a reduction, and it must be to the extent of thirty-three and one-third per cent. No more and no less. Tbe Railroad Commissioners are to be pledged to precisely those figures. The plain instructions of the Constitution are to he set aside, sworn officers are to forswear themselves, property in railroads is to be confiscated, railroad men are to he "cinched,' and all because Cohen's revenge must be gratified.

We don't believe that any such thiug will happen. The sober thought' of conservative men will in the end prevail. They will see that if property in railroads can be reached by unreasoning election clamor, that thereafter every other kind of property will be reached in tbe same way, and that soon the fight will come to be one in which the hand of every man who has nothing will be against every man who has something. In that logical outcome of his agitation consists the shamelessness and infamy of such suggestions on the part of a man like A. A. Cohen, who, to do him justice, knows with a keen intelligence the effect of what he advocates. He knows that his talk simply means a division of property—an idea revolting to every thoug tful mind. But revenge is a green eyed monster that perverts the vision of even an educated man. It is an ignoble passion, and never have we witnessed a more debased exhibition of it than that presented to the people of California by A. A. Cohen.

That Mr. Cohen is not, by experience nr acquired knowledge, an authority upon railroad management, is certain. That he is not even a constitutional authority, in the sense of understanding the instrument of which his party are the self-constituted guardians, is equally clear. He betrays his ignorance in his speech. He first insists that the Railroad Commissioners shall be pledged to a reduction of 33⅓ per cent. The voters must see that the pledge is exacted, and "that it is fulfilled." If it is, that is an end of the matter for four years, the term for which the Commissioners are elected. But a gleam nf the possible result is for a moment permitted to enter even Mr. Cohen's prejudiced mind. He admits that the demand be insists upon is but "an experiment that may be found to be too onerous, that it may be too harsh," and that if it is found to be too great, theu it will be right to "concede something." How, and by whom, and when does Mr. Cohen propose that the concession shall be made? Four years of "an experiment that is too harsh" may work ruin. Manifestly the Commissioners cannot make the concession, for they are to be rendered helpless by a cast-iron pledge. Mr. Cohen suggests the way, and that suggestion proves our point that he is ignorant of the instrument he so much lauds, and is consequeutly an unsafe adviser in enforcing that instrument. He tells us that there will he only eight months' interval hetwcen the meeting of the next and the following Legislature, and that any too great harshness or severity can be remedied within tbat time by the second Legislature. Now, the great fact of which Mr. Cohen appears to be ignorant is that the Legislature, under the New Constitution, has no power whatever to change tbe rates that may be determined hy the Commissioner. They are the sole and only power in that matter. It is declared that "in all controversies, civil or criminal, the rates of fares and freights established hy the said Commission shall be deemed conclusively just and reasonable." Any railroad not conforming to such rates may be fiued twenty thousand dollars, and any officer who shall exact a different rate may be fined $5,000 and be imprisoned for twelve months. The action of tbe Commissioners is constitutionally conclusive, and it is a suggestion, born of ignorance, that the Legislature may be appealed to. According to Cohen's cast-iron pledge the Commissioners are to he bound for four years, and for a gross wrong, which even he admits is possible, there is no available remedy. To this absurd and monstrous position is an intelligent man driven who yields his reason to his passion. Cohen brooding over his loss of employment, valued at ten thousand a year, and pickings, acts the demagogue in order to get even. That is all there is to it.

JUSTICE WRONG SIDE OUT.

Mrs. Danielwitz, who has taught with a good record in the public schools for eight years past, was summarily dismissed on Tuesday hy the Board of Education. Her crime was a refusal to submit to a special examination, in order to clear herself of charges made against her in anonymous letters. The precedent established hy the Board is a deplorable one. Any Director has hut to write several unsigned letters to himself, or to others, to get rid of any teacher in the department. The thing has just been done in the face of the public, which is too husy with the uproar of politics to heed one of the most monstrous abuses of authority ever perpetrated; and the thing will he done again, for conscientious teachers are certain to offend tbese petty tyrants. There is, therefore, no hope for Mrs. Danielwitz. She is dismissed, because she respects herself; and Mr. Taylor, who no douht knows where the anonymous letters came from, remains in the Board, because he has no self-respect. Yet it will he a lasting disgrace to the public if he be not made to see that other people despise him, even more than he can possihly look down upon himself. In the short space of seven or eight months he has attracted the public gaze:

1st. By fighting, tooth and nail, to keep the Chairmanship of the Committee on Furniture and Supplies. He kept it.

2d. By running away to the East to avoid answering awkward questions in the investigation.

3d. By the general helief that he assisted John A. Moore in his hasty retreat from this coast.

4th. By nominating and securing the election of a lady teacher, known to have offered another Director $250 for a place just before.

To these should he added, in justice to Mr. Taylor, the history of the school telephones. The contract for supplying these was given out at $100 a month, for all the schools. The Bell Telephone Company, by letter, offered to furnish them at $60. The chairman of the committee, before this letter was acted upon, received a visit from a man who offered to give each member of the committee $100 if tbe letter were put in the waste-basket. The man was dismissed, and within less than two hours after, the chairman had a note from John W. Taylor, asking for the communication of the Bell Telephone Company. It was not sent, as requested, and Mr. Taylor knows whether he was disappointed—and how much.

A man who uses anonymous letters is capahle of writing them; and when, hy a strange fatality, nearly every transaction of an official's carreer calls for explanation, and calls in vain, the public should push him hack into the obscurity for which nature designed him.

WE TWO.

[BY J. H. ELLIOTT.]

What is life? I ask—and you?
We who have known its joys and sorrows,
Its sullen and its fair to-morrows:
We who have thought it perfect day,
And fallen fainting hy the way,
What use is life to us—we two?

What use is love? I ask—and you?
We who have reveled in its hlisses,
Drunk ourselves drunken with its kisses,
And seen its dawn melt into night,
Leaving behind but haleful hlight;
What use is love to us—we two?

What use are friends? I ask—and you?
We who have tested them together
In sunshine and in rainy weather,
And find few left when storms portend,
And none to stand fast to the end;
What use are friends to us—we two?

What use is hope? I ask—and you?
We who thro' many stern denials,
And sickening pain and piteous trials,
Have kissed the threshold of the word
To find it still hut long deferred—
What use is hope to us—we two?

What use is faith? I ask—and you?
We who have toiled and wrought and striven,
And failed, and prayed to be forgiven,
And watched and waited everywhere,
But heard no answer to our prayer;
What use is faith to us—we two?

Shall we then give up life—we two?
If we fall fainting hy the way,
There cometh yet a perfect day;
We need both sad and hright to-morrows,
Joys would not he joys without sorrows,
I will not give up life—will you?

Shall we then give up love—we two?
If it goes out in haleful blight,
The morning followeth the night;
There are yet left for us sweet kisses,
If we but cherish well its hlisses;
I will not give up love—will you?

Shall we then give up friends—we two:
We have not waited to the end
For those who stand when storms portend;
Mayhap in fair and cloudy weather
They'll rise and fall with us together;
I will not give up friends—will you?

Shall we then give up hope—we two?
We yet may pass, tho' long deferred,
The threshold of that gracious word,
And find thro' many pains and trials
Made glorious all our stern denials;
I will not give up hope—will you?

Shall we then give up faith—we two?
If we wait patiently our prayer
Will soon he answered everywhere;
For failure we may he forgiven,
Since humhly we have toiled and striven;
I will not give up faith—will you?

BRITISH TRADE WITH THE UNITED STATES.

In the midst of depression of trade and hard times everywhere, we copy from the London Economist the following table, which is of considerahle importance:

From the above figures it will he seen that while the decrease in 1878 was universal as compared with 1874, in the first half of 1879 there has heen an increase in a good number of articles as compared with the first half of 1878. The total value of exports in 1874 amounted to £28,240,000, and in 1878 to £14,552,000, showing a falling off of 48 per cent. The figures, however, for the first half of 1879 are decidedly encouraging to British exporters, and we trust that the revival may continue.

"What have yer got there?" said Jim Burns, a sporting saloon-keeper who dotes on terrier "purps," to a tramp with a cracker box on his shoulder. "Rats," said the tramp. "How many?" "Five." "Give you a dollar and a drink for the lot." The tramp closed the bargain, took his dollar and his drink and departed. Jim called in several sporting friends, closed the har-room door and fetched the "purps." In eager expectation the men and terriers stood round that box as Jim carefully removed the lid with a hatchet. The whisk of a hushy tuil, an odor not that of attar of roses, and a general stampede followed the removal of the lid. Jim had a new suit too highly scented to ever he much used again, and swears that if ever he comes across that tramp again he will teach him the difference between rats and skunks.

We understand that the Empress Eugenie feels very keenly the charges that are heing brought against those who were entrusted with the care of the Prince Imperial, and expresses a strong desire that nobody may incur censure through the inquiry into the circumstances under which he came by his death. The Empress regards the stroke that has befallen her house as having occurred to the Prince in the working out of his destiny and in the discharge of his duty, and finds a solace in the fact that he died in the performauce of a useful service to the army which he had joined.

NOTICE.

To Bullion and Exchequer Stockholders.

The San Francisco Stock and Exchange Board having been informed that great dissatisfaction exists among the shareholders of the Bullion and Exchequer Mining Companies, respecting the management of those properties by the present Boards of Trustees, have empowered their Executive Committee to co-operate with those shareholders who wish an opportunity for the expression of their sentiments respecting the same. The Executive Committee intends, with such co-operation, to procure the action of the Courts in ordering a new election of Trustees of those companies. All shareholders in sympathy with this movement are requested to call at the office of Mr J. W. COLEMAN, President of the Committee, Room No. 1, Stock Exchange Building, and sign a petition to the County Court for its action in the premises.

MITCHELL'S MAGIC LOTION.

Quick and sure cure for bruises and sprains--relieves the pain instantly; perfectly harmless; will prevent the eye turning dark after a blow; good for aching feet; gives instant relief from soreness after horseback riding or any over-exertion; very serviceable as a gargle after speaking or singing. Mr. A. W. Hussey, Stock Broker, says: "After my runaway accident, my eye was much discolored and I could not bend my knee. The next day after using your Lotion, my knee was as well as ever and the bruise marks nearly gone from the eye. It is wonderful stuff and everybody ought to know about it." Sold by all Druggists and by GEORGE H. MITCHELL, 507 California street. Price, 25 cents. Aug. 2.

T. A. BARRY, Agent for Naglee's Brandy, is at No. 116 Montgomery Street.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Unerring Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s new circular. The combination method, which this firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y. Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1878, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent.; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent.; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 29th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. Stocks and bonds wanted. Government bonds supplied.

"BIZ."

The auction of new crop Teas at the public salesroom of S. L. Jones & Co., California street, August 6th, called out a very general attendance of the grocery trade, and was the occasion of very spirited bidding upon the part of our own and Oregon merchants. The offering consisted of 3,500 packages of Japan and China Green and Black Teas of the importation of Messrs. Macondray & Co., and of the well-known M. & Co. brand of Comet Oolongs from China, and Japan paper Greens. The terms of sale were very liberal: all sums over $300, ninety days, or three per cent. discount for cash; and for all purchases under this sum, cash. The choice paper Teas, in pound and half-pound papers, sold, say 1,500 packages at 33½@34c; the Comet Oolongs sold at 52½c, etc. Had the offering consisted of double the quautity of Japan paper Teas, all could readily have been sold at the very handsome advance over any like previous sale in a twelvemonth. This sale is the first of the season's new crop Teas, and will fix and establish prices of this and other standard brands of Japan Greens at 35@37½c for the season. Our stock of Teas, as a whole, is unusually light.

Bags.—The next most interesting subject upon 'Change has been that of the Bag Combination, and of which Wm. T. Coleman & Co. are the managing agents. This Bag Ring seeks to control a stock of some 15,000,000 of Burlap Grain sacks. They started in to buy up and control all the Bags here and to arrive at 9@9½c, then down to 8⅞@8½c, and, since the knot was tied, fixing combination prices at 11@11½c, they have recently been forced, for self-protection, to enter the open market and buy perhaps 500,000 bags at 10¼, 10½@10⅝c. These invoices are those of recent arrival per Gaelic from Calcutta via. Hongkong. This steamer brought upwards of 1,000,000 Bags. Of these one-half were bought prior to arrivals and 250,000 since, leaving some 200,000 more Bags outside competing with the Ring. Should this Combination prove successful it will be entirely the result of good management, for the reason that Grain Sacks have long been selling here in the open market at 9½c to arrive, and at public auction as low as 8⅞@8½c; and at this low range of prices our own and Oregon well-to-do farmers and others bought largely, and are now believed to be well stocked with Grain Sacks, thus restricting the probable demand to a much greater extent than is generally believed.

Salmon in Cases.—This season's catch of fish in the Columbia, Sacramento and Fraser rivers, will without doubt greatly exceed that of any previous season. The present price of Columbia River Salmon, at Astoria, is now $1 05 ₱ dozen for 1-lb cans, and late sales here of approved brands at $1 10, but at present there seems to be very little demand at any price. The Eastern demand from New York, Chicago, St. Louis, etc., has thus far during the season been much greater than ever, and should this continue, all will be well yet. After this, much will depend upon present holders. The stock here and North is, for the most part, well concentrated, and, if they will hold and wait for the English market to recuperate, all will be well; otherwise disaster must be the inevitable result. In regard to the success of last year's shipment of Salmon, little can now be said, but of late no little attention has here been given to hills of reclamation sent out here from England. It appears that a gentleman here sold several thousand cases of a standard brand of Salmon to two different houses in this city, for export to England, guaranteeing the same "free from swell heads" upon arrival out. One English firm sent out here a demand for 3½ per cent. damage, and the other one of 33½ per cent. The fish were all of the same brand and quality, and the great difference in the demand for damages was so surprising that the seller here transferred the accounts to a well known business firm in this city, having a branch house in London, for investigation. The English house, on receipt of the papers, had no trouble in finding intact the entire parcel of Salmon complained of as being damaged, and, upon examination thereof, it was proved that there was a fraudulent demand made upon the California selling agent of 30 per cent. Now, without calling names, it is here pertinent to remark that some proper Government expert should be appointed in London and Liverpool to examine all such goods, as to their soundness upon arrival, and give a proper certificate therefor, with proper vouchers attached, as to the correctness of the award; otherwise, it would seem as if the Columbia River canners and others are subject, at any and all times, to claims for damage that do not in any manner exist. In justice to all, names should be given of the parties to this barefaced fraud, but for the present we forbear.

Coffee.—Our stocks of all kinds are far less than last year at this time—say 13,000 bags against 58,000 same time last year. At date the market flags, by reason of free offerings of Greens pressing for sale, but the statistical position for the Fall trade is good with better prices in view. At this writing we quote No. 1 Green C. A. at 16@16½; Rio, 14½@15c. There is very little doing in other kinds.

Sugar.—Imports during the week have been light, although large supplies are now due here from the Sandwich Islands. The fight still continues between Eastern and California Refined; price, 9⅞@10c for White and 7⅛@8½c for Yellow and Coffees.

Rice.—The market is bare of Hawaiian, pending fresh arrivals of new crop, price 5½c.; Mixed China, 4¾c.; No. 1 China, 5¼c. The stock of the latter is very large and the demand only moderate for the season.

Coal.—Owing to mining strikes in Seattle and British Columbia mines supplies of late have diminished materially, so that at this time of writing there is not a cargo of foreign Steam Coal to be bought. During the week, however, a cargo of Sydney to arrive per Sonoma sold at $6.50, an advance. On the spot the Hospodar's cargo of Sydney Steam sold at $6.75, and the Gilroy's cargo of Scotch Splint sold at $7.87½.

Case Goods.—Our canners are having a lively season of it, being enabled to buy the very choicest Berries, Pears, Cherries, Apricots, Plums, Peaches, Tomatoes, etc., at very low prices, with an abundance of stock to work with. This has been taken advantage of by all leading canning establishments, not only in this city but in San Jose and at all other packing points, and the result is their ability to supply the market with Jams, Jellies, Fruits and Vegetables of a superior quality and at a less price than ever before known, and these are now being exported in quantities to all parts of the world.

Olive Oils.—Col. Hollister and a few other parties are now sending to market pure California Olive Oil, price $5 per gall., or at the rate of $1 per bottle. The quality is said to be infinitely superior to any French imported.

Almonds, Nuts and Raisins.—California is doing much in these several articles toward supplying the markets of the United States.

Freights and Charters.—There has been a very manifest improvement in Grain freights during the week, several ships having been chartered to load Wheat for Havre and Liverpool at 44@45s. to a direct port, with the customary additions if to ports of call to U. K. for the Continent, etc. We have at this writing a fleet of 30,000 disengaged tonnage in port, and a very large crop to market.

Wheat.—The receipts are on the increase and prices have declined, enabling shippers to purchase at $1 65@1 70 ₱ ctl. Millers pay $1 70@$1 75 for choice No. 1.

Flour.—Exports are liberal at steady prices. The City of Peking, for Hongkong, carried 12,000 hbls, all in cloth. The Colima, to Central America, 2,275 hbls; besides other shipments. We quote Superfine $5@$5 25; Extra Superfine, $5 50@5 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $9@5 50 ₱ 196 lbs, all in cloth.

Barley.—Low prices continue to rule; this grain is, in fact, the cheapest article in the market. Good new Feed can be bought at 75c; old Coast, 72½c; new bright Brewing, 85c; old do, $1 05; Chevalier, $1 65@$1 75 ₱ ctl. The ship Baring Brothers, for Liverpool, carried 11,024 ctls; the City of Sydney, for Australasia, 10,000 ctls.

Oats, Corn, Rye, etc., continue without any special movement. Stocks quite liberal.

Wool.—The stock of Oregon and Humboldt fleece is large for the season and the demand light. The range of the market for these descriptions, 19@26c.

Hides.—The demand is active at 16@16½c for Dry.

Tallow.—The market is dull and languid at 5@6c.

Butter, Cheese and Eggs.—Supplies are very liberal. Best Butter, 20c; Cheese, 10@12½c; Eggs, 25@28c.

Borax.—There is no change in price to record; stock light.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 80 as compared with 62 last, and 77 for the corresponding week last year. Fifty-six were males, 24 females; 6 Chinese; 3 accidental, 1 homicide, 2 suicides. The zymotics were: Typhoid fever 5, diptheria 4, diarrhea 1, scarlatina 2. The other principal causes of death were: Phthisis 7, pneumonia 4, infantile convulsions 6, cholera infantum 4; alcoholism and brain disease, 3 each; cancer, hydrocephalus, old age and paralysis, 2 of each; and 1 each of apoplexy, aneurism, gastrites, hemoptysis, heart disease, kidney disease and blood-poisoning. There were no deaths in the Fifth Ward, and but one each in the Third and Eighth. There were eleven in the Twelfth Ward, and fifteen in the Eleventh. Eleven persons died in public institutions.

CUMBERLAND MINE.
(Arizona.)

Startling Discoveries.

Wonderful Arizona, with startling discoveries in silver, copper, lead and gold mines, that promise in the next few years to dwarf almost to insignificance the mineral agitations of the past, is now holding up to the world's admiration and astonishment the developing wealth of the Cumberland Gold Mine of Yavapai County.

Much has been said in these columns during the last three months of a laudatory nature regarding this remarkable property, yet each day and week seems to present new items that eclipse each other in the ratio of a geometrical progression.

As seen by reference to another column, the assays for July have increased from $65 to $831, and even $2,334 to the ton. This is mostly gold, and, in the language of the report of the President, Geo. M. Ciprico, "shows a deposit of extraordinary and unexpected richness."

If these conditions may be regarded as a forerunner of what is to come, then the Cumberland Mine, with its great size and wonderful situation as regards the easy access to wood and water, is bound to produce the most intense mining excitement ever known on this coast, and by no means dwarfed by any developments yet brought to light in Nevada or California in the last twenty-nine years.

The newly elected Superintendent, Robert Collins, whose integrity and ability is thoroughly and fully attested to our satisfaction, said in his first report, dated July 2d: "I am convinced that the Cumberland Mine will be worked successfully for generations to come." And further he says of the Directors: "It will be worked when they and their children's children have passed away."

Superintendent Collins' report No. 2, received this week at the office, 417 California street, and which we print to-day, concludes in these lines: "Should the mine continue to produce ore like that already obtained, the value of the Cumberland would be beyond calculation!"

Surely, we exclaim, wonderful Arizona!

HOW TO DANCE.

If a thing is worth doing it is worth doing well, and dancing is an art which cannot be picked up off hand by the first comer. Much of the enjoyment of social life depends upon this art, and it is the duty of every one who seeks to share the advantages of cultivated society, to make himself so far proficient that he may contribute to the general pleasure. It is, unfortunately, a common experience to find a company put out and a pleasant evening marred by the ignorant clumsiness of two or three; and this seems the more inexcusable to-day that a few lessons from a competent instructor would make every one able to do his part properly. Mr. J. William Frazer's System of Society Dancing has met with distinguished success since his arrival in this city not quite one year ago. This system is Mr. Frazer's own, and has a marked originality. The diagrams of the dances are mapped out on the floor, and the pupils are practiced upon these lines until they become perfectly familiar with the positions and movements necessary; a result generally attained, under Mr. Frazer's attentive and artistic eye, in from three to five lessons. The student is then prepared for actual practice without the aid of diagrams. This, which seems so simple, is so indeed with the help of Mr. Frazer's long skill and experienced guidance; but even with these to direct, but little can be accomplished, as this thorough teacher well points out, without regular attendance and steady devotion on the part of the learner. Punctuality is especially and most properly insisted on. Mr. Frazer makes a specialty of the class for young persons from seven to fourteen years of age, these requiring uncommon patience and intelligence on the part of the instructor, even with such a system as that introduced by this gentleman. The rooms for Public Instruction are at the B'nai B'rith Hall, 121 Eddy street, between Mason and Taylor; an entirely new building, with every modern improvement. Ladies and Gentlemen's Regular Class every Friday, 8 to 10 P.M.; Children's, Saturday, 2 to 4 P.M. Private lessons are given by Mr. Frazer at his rooms in the Olympic Building, 119 Post street, where applications for admission and all business must be transacted. Office hours, 10 to 12 A.M. and 7 to 8 P.M. In the six months ending June 1st, of this year, Mr. Frazer graduated three hundred pupils in Round Dances; and every one of these, now an acquisition and an ornament to the social circle, is a living witness to the superiority of his instructor's method. Among these are some of our best citizens; and all would do well to call on Mr. Frazer at his rooms or send for his Catalogue for 1879–80, in which will be found some most interesting facts and information relative to his mode of teaching, besides a long list of excellent references.

J. C. DUNCAN'S TRIAL.

The next trial of J. C. Duncan takes place in a few days. Although there are a number of indictments, they have evidently been passed over by the prosecution, and all centered in one charge; and on that, as we have before stated, there has been one mis-trial and two disagreements of the jury. Bail has been given to a large amount, with the names of prominent citizens as sureties, but the excessive sum demanded is almost a denial of the right. The friends of the defendant are at work to obtain the balance. They emphatically deny all the sensational stories with which the papers have been filled—rides to the Cliff House, expensive dinners, immense treasure on the schooner McKinnon, ruin of a young girl under his charge, borrowing money from the Hibernia Bank to erect the Safe Deposit building, etc., etc. When Kearney was describing those imaginary rides to the Cliff, Mr. Duncan had not even had an opportunity to see his younger children for nearly a half year. It was well known that his restaurant bills were not one dollar a week. The $400,000 story of the schooner exploded of its own silliness. The mortgage on the Safe Deposit Block is simply a balance due Howard and Teschmacher on the lot, and for payment of which one-fifth of the capital stock was left by Duncan in the hands of Eugene Casserly. The fact that six hundred thousand dollars of the funds of the Pioneer Bank was lost in the Safe Deposit building is unquestioned. During the last trial of the defendant it was shown, without contradiction, that Willie Duncan, the son, lost $140,000 of his own funds in sustaining the bank, and that J. C. Duncan lost $70,000 in real estate owned at its formation. There is a singular feature attending all these charges referred to. They appear regularly at the time that a trial is progressing, and when the accused cannot defend himself. Even pretended scenes in court are given, to the prejudice of the defendant, for the purpose of alienating his friends and prejudicing the jury.

CUMBERLAND MINE.--REPORT NO. 2.

Superintendent Collins Reports another Marvelous Discovery of Rich Ore.

To Geo. M. Ciprico, President, and Directors of the Cumberland Mining Co., No. 417 California street, S. F.:

GENTLEMEN—In my second report I have the pleasure to inform you of the discovery of very rich ore in Shaft No. 1, showing large quantities of fine gold with coarse pieces distributed throughout the rock. Ten feet from the top of the shaft discovered some of the richest ore I have yet seen. This is a body of ore nine feet thick in this place. Specimens of ore from both places have been forwarded to your office in San Francisco. I have no doubt I can ship a considerable quantity of this ore should you think it advisable. The work of development is steadily going on. Enough has been done to prove beyond a doubt that the mine contains ore of a very high grade. I would draw the attention of the Directors to the quality of quartz among some of the specimens forwarded, especially those in which the very fine gold runs through the dark spots. The opinion of mining men here of long standing is that these ores are as fine specimens of gold-bearing quartz as they have ever seen.

I intend to explore the ledge at the point where the rich ore was discovered. I am confident I shall be able to give a good account of the mine in a few days, and hope to prove the Cumberland one of the richest mines in Arizona, if not in the world.

In concluding this necessarily short report, I beg to congratulate the Directors and Shareholders of the Cumberland upon possessing so valuable a mining property. Should this mine continue to produce ore like the specimens already obtained (and there is no reason that I know of why it should not), the value of the Cumberland would be beyond calculation.

Respectfully yours,
ROBT. COLLINS,
Supt. Cumberland Mine.

Cumberland Mine, Yavapai County, Arizona, Aug. 2d, 1879.

ANSWER TO THE SLANDEROUS ATTACKS OF THE "BULLETIN" AND "CALL."

The fallacy of the article in the Evening Bulletin of Thursday consists in the false standpoint it occupies in its tirade against "Syndicates" and "Combinations." It claims for those who deal in stocks the same security that a Shylock demands who invests his capital on bond or mortgage, or the poor depositor who confides his money to the care of a savings bank. In either case security is demanded beyond that of "personal integrity," and the profits on the investment are correspondingly small, but even then there is not absolute security against loss, as the experience of hundreds abundantly testifies.

The stock dealer, however, has always to rely upon the "personal integrity" of those who operate for him, whether he confides his money to a broker who acts under specific instructions, or to a firm who aggregate small amounts, and operate the whole for mutual benefit at their own discretion. Ask those who have dealt in stocks according to the former method, whether they have have had any other security than personal integrity. Do they not oftener lose than win by their operations? Who does not know that one hundred lose where one gains in that way? And how often do they win on their own judgment, and lose, at last, by imperfect knowledge of their brokers, in whose "personal integrity" they confided? Those who have confided in the "personal integrity" of Martin Taylor & Co., during the past six months, have not been betrayed. Midst the general disaster, that has stranded so many richly-freighted barks upon the shoals and hidden rocks of the Stock Market during that period, those who trusted their treasures to the skillful pilot of this firm have reached a safe harbor and realized profits on their ventures, on fourteen COMBINATIONS that have matured—the last one on Saturday, August 2d. They have paid an average of 80 per cent. profit! Most of these were returned in 15 days from the date of the formation, and five of them were operated on a falling market.

It is true that the funds were invested in an extra hazardous business, and entrusted to the management of a firm without any guarantee except "personal integrity"—the same security that underlies all business enterprise—but who will not say that they have faithfully administered the trust? The skill and ability of the administration are equally apparent. Have those who operate with individual brokers, on orders, backed by "points," been more successful? And, above all, have they rested on better security than that they obtained from Martin Taylor & Co? The CO-OPERATIVE SYSTEM applied to stocks has met with unprecedented success in New York and London, but has been opposed by brokers there as well as here, because it encroaches upon their preserves. In New York, however, the press and public generally indorse the plan for its successful results; and here also, we believe, that even the Bulletin will, sooner or later, become a convert to it. They will see, on further and more careful investigation, that the great desideratum has always been to discover how a party operating on limited capital can stand an equal chance with men like Gould, Vanderbilt, or Keene. Does not the Combination plan solve the problem?

We refer to over 5,000 customers in this city, whose names and addresses we can furnish. Martin Taylor & Co.

The official assay of five samples of ore from the famous Cumberland Mine, Arizona, as reported to G. M. Ciprico, Esq., President of the Company, by Mr. Wm. Irelan, Jr., of the Merchants' Exchange, shows the following surprising results:

SAMPLE MARKED—	PER TON, 2,000 LBS. Gold.	Silver	PER TON, 2,000 LBS. Total.
Spur 1	$2.64	$829.02	$831.66
Spur 2	7.51	2,327.30	2,334.84
Spur 3	2.27	774.74	777.03
No. 2 (Shaft No. 2)	6.96	201.98	205.94
No. 3 (Shaft No. 3)	7.92	642.12	650.04

The quantities of the precious metals contained in the above samples were, per ton of 2,000 lbs., for Spur 1: 2·041 oz. fine silver, 40·104 oz. gold; for Spur 2: 5·833 oz. silver, 112·583 gold; for Spur 3: 1·75 oz. silver, 37·48 oz. gold; for Shaft No. 2: 3·063 oz. silver, 9·771 oz. gold; for Shaft No. 3, 6·125 oz. silver, 31·063 gold.

Nothing finer than this has been heard of in mining on this Coast for many years past, and the Cumberland Company is most heartily to be congratulated on the possession of such a superb property.

The Leader is the most convenient and economical lamp ever put upon the market. It combines the merits of the ordinary student-lamp with the latest scientific improvements for regulating and supplying oil; and is absolutely free from any danger of explosion. With this lamp, one is practically liberated from the subjection to gas, which has ruined so many powerful eyes; and for mellowness there can be nothing comparable to the soft light of the Leader, under its shade. O. Lawton & Co., 609 Market street, under the Grand Hotel, offer this improved invention, nickel-plated and of 15-candle power, for $3.

M. Taylor & Co., at 429 California street, are very successful with their system of stock combinations, now proved by experience to be the only safe method of operating in mining shares. The deplorable habit of buying on a margin has ruined thousands of men in this State, year by year. It needs a full purse to stand the pressure in the market, and by M. Taylor & Co.'s plan every investor, how small soever his own means, has all the advantages of a capitalist through the combination scheme. The last division of profits made by Taylor & Co., on the 7th inst., was 37 per cent.

Samuel Kellett, manufacturer of plaster decorations, has been long known as the first artist in his line in the city, and the increase of his business has compelled him to open a branch establishment at 470 Eleventh street, Oakland, in addition to his San Francisco store, at 763 Market street. Mr. Kellett's taste and skill have been called into requisition by J. C. Flood, and he is now engaged upon the center pieces for that gentleman's stately residence at Menlo Park.

Mr. J. M. Litchfield, the well-known merchant tailor of Montgomery street, is before the Republicans as a candidate for the Board of Supervisors from the Third Ward. Responsible business men, engaged in industries which add to the wealth of the community, are the best representatives of the people, and those to whom their interests can be safely intrusted. We hope Mr. Litchfield will receive the nomination.

The "Olympian" is a handsome quarto paper of sixteen pages, devoted to sports, literature and the arts, and to be issued monthly for the price of $2 a year. If the succeeding numbers keep up the promise of the first, the Olympian game is made. Its tone is manly and impartial, and it has a clear field, in which much good may be done. Fearless criticism, not spiteful detraction, will always win at last.

FOURTEENTH ANNUAL MECHANICS' EXHIBITION.

During thirteen years the Trustees of the Mechanics' Institute have held annual exhibitions, lasting one month (six of these in their vast pavilion on Mission street), to the advantage of all kinds of trades, industries and products of the States, as well as the entertainment and instruction of visitors. On each of those occasions nothing was left undone by the management to render "The Fair," as it is called, a practical success; and, with tender consideration for both exhibitors and visitors, a pecuniary success, also. Last year, moderate as charges were, and heavy as must have been the cost of the musical performances, nevertheless the management netted for the benefit of their institution over $20,000. This year an effort is being made to render this show and its surroundings even more interesting than heretofore. The musical department is not to be surpassed.

The opening exercises took place in the Grand Opera House, and were attended by a vast concourse of ladies and gentlemen. At 2 P. M. the first note of the overture sounded.

When this was over, a spirited work, composed by the conductor of the orchestra, dedicated to the Trustees of the Institute, was given.

An address to the Almighty, explanatory of the objects which had brought the assemblage together, and invoking a blessing on the undertaking, was delivered by the Rev. Dr. Bettelheim. One regrets it was not spoken in the old sonorous Hebrew, also, to delight his co-religionists.

Then the President, Mr. Scott, the well known maker of agricultural implements, delivered the introductory address, and, in the course of twenty minutes, descanted with brevity and clearness on nearly every great branch of practical mechanics, and, here and there, on the underlying principles also, as they have been gradually unfolded, from the days of Tubal Cain to his own, and wound up with a few eloquent sentences on the dignity of labor and the proud individual assertion: I am a Mechanic! More music, and then the oration by the Rev. Dr. Guard.

A feeling of regret comes over us at the thought that this eloquent oration has not been, like that of the President, printed in extenso. It was a great effort of oratory, made with scarcely one reference to a note, showing a mind stored with varied information, wit, happy illustration, poetic imagery, close reasoning and sound, wholesome knowledge, which was turned to good account.

We can but just touch a few of his leading points, such as: While the Creator is the center of all existence, and the sun the center of the terrestrial system, Man is the center of this sublunary planet, with a mission to subdue whatever there is upon it to his own control; himself first, and then according to his gifts and opportunities all nature animate and inanimate. Even while starting in comparative darkness, at best only in dim twilight, it is his to illuminate all nature, raising himself first and slowly step by step—and unveiling the secrets of nature, and elevating himself in the scale of social existence in proportion as he achieves the objects of his mission. Hence the progress and perfection of all science, art, refinement, and whatever of man's industry lifts the mind above the paltry cares of daily life.

It is needless to say that at the conclusion the cheers were long and hearty.

Inside the Pavilion the appearance is more than usually striking, though until last night there was evidence of incompleteness in several of the larger departments. The show of cereals and grasses, woods, salmon, etc., from Oregon, destined to illustrate the leading products of the State at the exhibitions of Sydney and Melbourne, is very comprehensive and effectively spread out. Mr. Murray, of the Journal of Commerce, has this year again a striking display of fruit, growing plants, and a host of vegetable products. We allude to these because they strike the visitor on entering. We shall return to the subject in our next issue and attempt a general review of the exhibition.

THE POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

It appears plain, from the terms of the New Constitution, that the Police Commissioners go out of office on the 1st of January, and that thereafter no special Commissions whatever may be appointed by the Legislature to perform municipal functions. The Constitution is very emphatic on the subject. It declares that the "Legislature shall not delegate to any special Commission, private corporation, company, association or individual, any power to make, control, appropriate, supervise, or in any way interfere with any county, city, town or municipal improvement, money, property or effects, whether held in trust or otherwise, or to levy taxes or assessments, or perform any municipal function whatever. There is no mistaking that language. It is clear and unmistakable. Under it all special Commissions to build City Halls, regulate the Police, or widen streets, are legislated out of office and made an impossibility in the future. The office of Supervisor is therefore more important than it was. Verily, the impending election is one of grave moment. It looks as if Kearney may own the police. His followers may steal everything, and command the officers of the law to keep their hands off the thief.

Mr. William Pearce, of the celebrated Clyde ship-building firm, Messrs. John Elder & Co., is a remarkable example of the true energy of British commercial enterprise. Since his connection with the firm, in 1870, vessels of all kinds, but principally steamships, have been turned out to the value of upward of £5,000,000; and in the extra-busy seasons of 1871-72 and '73 there were never fewer than 5,000 hands employed. Some of the finest and fastest steamships on the Atlantic are of this firm's make; and the well-known Australia and Zealandia, plying between San Francisco and Sydney, are owned by Mr. Pierce. Withal, this gentleman is now sole proprietor of the firm, and, being in the prime of life, his career is as yet only in its beginning.—Glasgow Bailie.

At the Newport Baths, Alameda, everything has been done that could possibly add to the comfort of visitors. A hotel and restaurant on the grounds offer inducements and conveniences for passing the whole day on the spot, so that one can choose his own hour for bathing. The water is changed with every tide, and is fresh from the ocean all the time. The bath-rooms, being covered in with glass, are always dry and warm, and the views from the grounds and the hotel are enchanting—the eye ranging over the wide bay to where the city lies under the western haze, and Tamalpais stands up against the sunset sky.

ARIZONA.

The intelligence of the assassination of two American mine prospectors, on the road near the old Patagonia mines, by a band of roving Apaches, since our last issue, recall to mind the Arizona of long ago, before the days of extensive mining operations, and flourishing towns and villages. We had hoped that the Apache curse had been effectually tamed, and that the civilizing influences of the white man had forever done away with any dangers from the murderous followers of old Cochise. These last bloody murders, however, prove that the contrary is the case, and in the interests of humanity we demand that thorough and swift retribution be visited upon the savages and their allies. Such tragedies can have only a bad effect upon the territory, and the Eastern capitalist can be easily terrified away by a few such outrages. The blood of the murdered men calls for vengeance, and it should be meted out to the murderers, even though Mexican soil should be invaded in tracking them to their cover. The militia men of Arizona should be up and doing, if the military stationed there are too conservative to act.

The mill of the Vulture mine is now running satisfactorily. It began work on the 26th ult., and twenty additional stamps are soon to be added. The fourth shipment of bullion has been shipped to Philadelphia from the Tombstone Mining Company, valued at $25,000. Nearly $100,000 has gone forward from this property since the mill began work, the latter part of May, and the average run per day is about $2,000. The future prospects of this property are most promising. The news from the Silver King is encouraging. Three shifts of men are working day and night, and their operations are materially assisted by the new hoisting works. The ore in the new shaft continues to improve in width and value.

The Golden Era Mining Company, located thirty miles northeast of Prescott, has just received, direct from Chicago, a complete gold quartz mill, saw-mill, etc., and its erection is now being perfected. Mr. A. M. Smith, of Chicago, has taken charge of the property as general superintendent, and its prospects are bright.

Attention is attracted to the old Accidental mine, now known as the Lynx Creek property. The mine has been extensively worked in the past and is valuable, but to carry it on to a success an expenditure of at least $50,000 is necessary.

The reports from the Cumberland mine continue to give this valuable property a first-class reputation, and assays of newly-developed ore bodies show astonishing returns. Mr. Collins, the Superintendent, has ordered a full supply of tools preparatory to working the property on a larger scale.

During the month of July the Tiger Company shipped to this city some $36,000. The Peck and Tip-Top each shipped about an equal amount, making the yield of Yavapai county upwards of $100,000.

A number of rich gold ledges near Prescott are attracting considerable attention. The quartz contains free gold in large quantity, and, if erected, a twenty-stamp mill could find plenty of milling ore in the mines already opened.

The forty-stamp mill of the Central Arizona Company is now running full force, and at least $60,000 in bullion may be expected by the end of August, from the Seymour Giant.

"Since the organization of the Territory, in 1863, to the present time," the Miner says, "the prospects of Arizona never looked half so bright as now. The Territory is fast being spanned by the iron rail, the telegraphic communication is complete East and West, immigration of the right kind is filling her rich agricultural valleys, and taking possession of her mountains, filled with rich minerals. The mines are yielding gold and silver beyond the most sanguine expectation of the 'old-timer.' Farm produce is raised in quantities to supply the demand from all sources, and steadily we are becoming greater and stronger and prepared at no distant day to enter the Union as a respectable State." We congratulate our neighbors upon their brilliant and brightening prospects. God speed the day, say we, when Arizona will be numbered as one of the States of the American Union!

Langley's Directory for 1879-'80 is a marvel of energy and industry. The amount of information concerning the city and county of San Francisco which it contains makes it a complete history of all that has been done by our busy people. That our growth in population continues may be seen from the following figures: Arrivals by land and sea in 1878, 50,648; departures, 40,330; a gain of 10,318, but considerably below the average of the last ten years, which is 28,000. The total arrivals and departures from China and Japan, since 1867, Mr. Langley gives: Arrivals, 142,600; departures, 69,200. The number of new buildings erected in 1878 was 725, of which 41 were brick. The most important of all these is the new St. Ignacius Church and College, on Van Ness Avenue and Hayes street. The number of children between 6 and 17 is 52,182, an increase over 1877 of 2,778; and the number enrolled in the public schools is 35,073. The evening schools, mostly attended by adults, number 3,599 pupils. The scholars in the 100 private schools are 6,551, a decrease of 443 from the year 1877.

The Stock Market is inactive, with a better feeling in local securities. Insurance stocks are hard to obtain, and Gas is in demand. A sale of $114,000 Santa Cruz County 7 per cents is noted on private terms, and the receipt of $60,000 from Paris for investment in our securities. Bullion has been in good supply. Gold bars, 890@910; silver bars, 6@18 per cent. discount; refined silver bars, 13@13½ per cent. discount; refined silver in London, 51½d. per oz.; exchange on Atlantic cities, ½ per cent. premium; telegraphic transfers, 15-100@¼ per cent. premium; sterling exchange, 49⅜@49½d.; commercial exchange, 50@50¼d.; Mexican dollars, 92, nominal.

THE NAVAL STRENGTH OF CHINA.

Telegrams from London inform us of the arrival in China waters of four new gunboats from England, and that four more are on the way; that each of these have a displacement of 400 tons, speed nine knots an hour, draught eight feet, with guns 27½ and 38 tons, worked by hydraulic power. The Times says the power and ranges of these guns are enormous. They have a superiority of penetrative power of twenty-five per cent. over the guns of the Dreadnaught, the most formidable of English war ships. These steamers have been specially constructed upon the Clyde with the object in view of operating upon the coast of China, and, without doubt, will prove themselves fully able to cope with any naval adversary. It is not generally known in this country that China is gradually becoming prominent as a naval power. At Shanghai a large fleet of gunboats have been constructed during the past few years, in addition to several first-class men-of-war, three of the latter being upwards of 5,000 tons burthen, and fully armed and equipped with the most improved guns and other implements of war. The five arsenals of China, located respectively at Shanghai, Soochow, Foochow and Nanking, have been in operation for years, and have manufactured immense numbers of the most approved styles of rifled cannon, guns and small arms, obtaining their models from the workshops of Europe and America. These material facts are pregnant with meaning, and worthy of the careful consideration of our ablest diplomatists.

DEATH OF MR. COOK OF THE LONDON "GRAPHIC."

It is with the deepest regret that, after a delightful acquaintance extending over forty years, we have to record the death, on the 17th of July last, of Mr. Cook, the managing director and one of the principal proprietors of the London Graphic. The deceased gentleman was formerly a partner of Mr. Ingram, who was associated with the proprietor of this paper in founding the Illustrated London News. Both of these celebrated pioneers in the art of illustrating daily thoughts and events have, in passing away, left footprints on the sands of time which can never be obliterated. The value of the Graphic can be best estimated by stating that a short time ago a small fractional interest was disposed of for the sum of thirty thousand pounds sterling ($150,000), and that the owner declares he never made a more fortunate and profitable investment.

The Stock Market.—The rampse on Union Consolidated, which started early in the week, has fairly electrified the street, and rumors are prevalent to the effect that the drillings are rich and extensive. A large short interest was made to cover, and this, in a great measure, accounts for the rapid advance. The whole general market responds to the rise in Union, though at the close a slight falling off in prices was observable. Of the outside stocks, Bodie continues weak upon unfavorable news from the mine. There can be no doubt now that the dividend for the present month will be omitted. Mono shows quite an improvement in the cross cut east, though trouble with water is momentarily expected.

Financial Notes.—There is nothing of interest to note in financial circles. The banks are overloaded with unemployed capital, but there is no disposition to yield to any enterprise, and at the same time they appear to withhold the usual support to a very deserving but comparatively weak class of traders who have been accustomed to it for years, and who now are suffering for assistance, which at the moment, above all others, need it; for with such traders, shrinkage and expenses at this time is too grave a test of strength, and, consequently, if some of them succumb, will be a matter which need not cause surprise, or in any way reflect on the credit of the community at large.

Mr. D. L. Smoott has received the nomination for District Attorney from the Workingmen, Democrats and New Constitution Party. He is a sound lawyer and an estimable gentleman. Under the New Constitution, the office of District Attorney has an increased importance. It is satisfactory to know that whether Mr. Murphy or Mr. Smoott be elected, the position will be honestly and ably filled.

Registration.—Monday night, at 10 o'clock, registration at the Ward precincts closes. After that hour it will be impossible to get on the Register, and all who fail to get on will lose their votes. Looking to the importance of the next election, no qualified voter ought to permit himself to be disfranchised.

It will give pain to his many friends to learn that C. W. Bonynge, Esq., of this city, is hovering between life and death at Manitou, Colorado Territory, with typhoid fever, contracted in the Rocky Mountains.

COHEN'S FALSIFICATIONS EXPOSED.

The advantages derivable from a discussion of public issues depend very much upon the fairness with which it is conducted. Disputants should he held strictly to the obligations of truth. Making statements that are not in accordance with fact, and quoting figures that are "cooked" for the express purpose of producing an erroneous impression, is to practice a most reprehensible imposition upon public credulity. The speaker who indulges in it is a fraud. He cheats his hearers, deceives their intellects, and creates a false public opinion. He who is caught in the act should he deemed a public enemy, should forfeit reputation, and forever thereafter he denied a public audience. Men are too busy and life is too short to permit every hearer to verify for himself each fact and figure that is submitted to him as a basis on which to form his opinions. He must necessarily take much for granted. He has a right to suppose that the speaker has duly informed himself of that whereof he speaks. There must he some trust in these things; hut he who abuses confidence once should never have the opportunity of abusing it again. He should he ostracized from the public rostrum by the stern refusal of the people to give him further time and attention. He is a false light, of whom the mariner on a voyage in search of truth should beware. He is a wrecker who would shipwreck the unwary on the shoals of error. He would create fools in order to use them.

Now, this is the precise indictment which we prefer against A. A. Cohen. We allege, and mean to prove, that in discussing the railroad question at Platt's Hall he wilfully misrepresented the truth, that he deceived his hearers. hoodwinked the people, and did his level best to manufacture an erroneous public opiuion. His speech was carefully written out, and the manuscript was given to his organ for publication. There can, therefore, he no mistake in quoting it from that source. He was introduced as a high authority; we were told that it was a "great speech," and that his "strong array of facts and figures" could not he gainsayed hecause they were "derived from the sworn statements of the railroad officials." These are unequivocal pretensions. Let us see what they amount to: The great hurthen of the speech was an endeavor to prove that the earnings per mile of the Central Pacific are far larger than those of Eastern roads. To estahlish that position a most extraordinary falsification is indulged in. He takes the gross earnings of the Central Pacific and divides them hy 1,213, heing his calculation of the numher of miles of road operated hy that company. In that way he figures out the gross annual earnings per mile to he $14,003, which he claims is extortionate when compared with the $10,752 earned hy the New York Central. But the fatal error in his calculation is that his divisor is wrong. The numher of miles of road operated hy the Central Pacific Railroad, and from which its gross earnings are derived, is not 1,213, hut 1,783. That makes all the difference. Take the corrected figures as a divisor and then we have the true result of $9,800 as the annual income per mile, heing $952 less, instead of $3,251 more, than the earnings of the New York Central. In order to form a basis for his argument that fares and freights can he reduced one-third, he resorts to this most amazing falsification. The foundation heing knocked away the superstructure falls to the ground. Of the argument there is simply nothing left. How did this great error come ahout? If it was the result of pure carelessness then Mr. Cohen forfeits whatever little claim he may have to he esteemed painstaking and cautious in his statements, and must, in the opinion of his fellows, he classed with the unthinking and irresponsible orators who harangue the sand-lots. But had as the excuse of "unconscious error" would he, we fear it would he unduly flattering to Mr. Cohen. "Conscious falsification" would seem to he a better name for the act of which he has heen guilty. We are told that he "derived his information from the sworn statements of the railroad officials." If he did, then he must necessarily plead guilty to the charge of conscious falsification, for those sworn statements are totally at variance with his. They fix the numher of miles of operated road at 1,783, and not at 1,213, as indicated hy him. If he went to that source, then manifestly he falsified them. Of the guiltiness of the intent there is this evidence: that he handles the figures in such a way as to endeavor to hide the error in the calculation. Instead of telling us how many miles of road he figures upon, he leaves us to find that out hy taking his results and working them out for ourselves. In the case of the Eastern roads he tells us how many miles of road his calculation is hased upon; hut in regard to the Central Pacific he simply says the gross earnings are so much, and therefore the amount per mile is so much. When we take his earnings per mile and divide them into the total receipts, we learn for the first time that he credits the company with but 1,213 miles instead of 1,783. We therefore think we are entitled to claim that the suspicious manner in which the figures are handled is evidence of the guilty intention with which they are employed. But whether consciously false or only carelessly in error, the hroad fact remains that Mr. Cohen's "great speech" is hut an erroneous deduction from false premises; as such it amounts to no more than the baseless fabric of a dream.

Nor is the error referred to the only glaring one Mr. Cohen has fallen into. He tells us that the company received from its own and the Government's honds the sum of fifty-four millions of dollars. He then asserts, of his own knowledge, that the huilding of the road cost hut thirty-five millions, and, from those figures, calculates that nineteen millions of coin went into the pockets of the directors. Then follow some wonderful imaginings. The art galleries of Europe have actually heen, to some small extent, benefitted hy this great wealth. Now, for the ahsurdity of the calculation. It is true that honds were sold to the face value of fifty-four millions, hut they hrought a very much less sum in coin. It has heen given in evidence that they yielded to the company a net average of hut fifty-five cents, in gold, to the dollar. The total derived from the honds was, therefore, slightly less than thirty millions of dollars, heing five millions less than what even Mr. Cohen says the road cost; which is very different from heing nineteen millions more. The difference is twenty-four millions, hut that is nothing to Mr. Cohen, when picturing the railroad to a Platt's Hall audience. He parcels out millions in imagination, which never had any existence in fact, and having accomplished that to his satisfaction, preaches that rich men should run railroads, not upon husiness principles, hut out of pure henevolence and charity. Thus this great authority, in a "great speech," goes on giving facts and quoting figures. Yes! facts that lie, and figures that deceive. We have fairly illustrated the thing. We say the falsification is intentional. We say so hecause Mr. Cohen knows hetter; he knows the truth, and when he distorts it, he does so with malice aforethought that is in keeping with his known character, and with the vengeful feelings he has nursed, ever since the railroad people were not willing to allow him, as their agent, to make contracts with himself, to his great profit, but to their great loss.

PUBLIC SCHOOL MUSIC.

As a display of unmitigated ignorance and evidence of assumed sufficiency, it would he no easy matter to parallel the musical catechism used in our public schools, and which has for many years past heen the elementary hasis of musical education in those sadly mismanaged and unsatisfactory estahlishments. With a title-page authority of "Washington Elliot," the catechism is not a hetrayal of harmless incompetency; it is, in all essentials, a vitiation of common musical truths. It is not elemeutary in its inception, for the very first page, which is strictly characteristic of the whole, is filled up with palpahly incongruous ahsurdities and false assumptions. Can it he possihle to conceive a grosser perversion of commonly accepted notions than to have it thrust upon us that "elementary instruction in music is divided into rhythmics, melodies and dynamics," while, catechistically, it appears that "rhythmics treat of the length of tones," which is in no sense whatever the case. Nor does such a definition approach correctness, that "melody treats of the pitch of tones," which is not the case, and is no definition of melody; that "dynamics treat of the power or force of tones," which is not so, nor in the least nearer the truth than the statement that either or all of the three are essentials in introductory or elementary musical science. Scientifically, these definitions have neither reason nor truth in them; yet, this ground-work treatise or catechism, compiled and compounded as an educational standard, has, in its elimination, heen no inconsiderahle hurden to taxpayers. Than a supposition that a familiarity with its contents implies a musical knowledge, nothing can he more erroneous. In a theoretically correct sense it is a barharous imposition, for, with the exception of very few straggling and secondary truths, the whole thing is hut a concentration of preposterous nonsense, the dissemination of which, hy a pettifogging conclave of untutored no-hodies, has been for years past, and to the tune of thousands upon thousands of dollars, to no good purpose whatever; on the contrary, with very had and injurious effect upon such as have a talent for and desire to cultivate a musical proficiency in any direction.

The Hiester-Du Bois husiness-tinkering with musical examination papers is a legitimate outcome of the trickery attending all such things in this city. Mrs. Du Bois, if she acquired her musical capabilities from studying the "Elliot" Catechism, is in no way fitted to aspire to supreme adjudication any more than the man whose mind is hemuddled to such an extent as to warrant the promulgation of such arrant nonsense. In this city there are scores of educated men, as well as heing educated musicians, who would willingly accept office for the current remuneration, and do the work creditably, which is now, and ever has heen, done by the merest pretenders, who could not, in the profession itself, earn their salt.

THE MORMON PROBLEM.

It begins to look as if the serpent of Mormonism is at last getting under the heel of the law. Hitherto, when it has begun to feel such pressure, it has escaped hy wriggling, hut the hoot of the United States Government seems to be pretty firmly planted this time, and the filthy reptile will have to fight or perish. The Mormons show signs of favoring the former alternative, and perhaps it is better that they should. Fighting may postpone their fate a little, but it cannot avert it, and the more of them that are wiped off the face of the earth in such a struggle, the hetter it will he for the morals and the peace of the country.

Although almost any measure which will ahate this monstrous evil is to he approved, still it would seem as if Secretary Evarts might have adopted a more reasonahle plan than that of remonstrating with the European Powers against their allowing their respective subjects to emigrate to America as Mormon converts. Foreign governments are not the guardians of our morals or the conservators of our laws, and it is rather cool to ask them to hecome such. It is a fact that hy far the greater part of the Mormon population is composed of foreigners, hut if we don't want them, it is our husiness to keep them out, not that of England or Germany to prevent them from getting in if they can. If our constitution stands in the way of our keeping iutending or actual polygamists out of the country, then the constitution is at fault, and should he set right without delay. The evil of Mormonism is not one that can he dealt with gently, or with any great regard for legal quihhles; it needs a strong hand and a sharp remedy, and the day is approaching when the Government will discover this with a vengeance. People who have systematically hroken the laws of the country for a great numher of years should he pronounced outlaws, and treated as such. When we have troublesome Indians we do not make much fuss if the settlers get up some fine day and destroy them; and, in our opinion, a little of this system might he advantageously introduced into Utah.

The Western Lancet.—The August numher of this journal, so far as a layman may judge, is of the usual standard of excellence. There is an article on Medical Consultations and their Ethics, to which the public may reasonahly take exception. When Doctors differ, we know of no one who has a hetter right to decide than the patient himself, and the medical man has hut a poor opinion of himself who feels hurt if the judgment goes against him. He may at least console himself with the hope that in the next case his judgment will go the other way. Why should Doctors quarrel when they lose a case. Lawyers have much more sense. No Doctor need want to attend a patient whose confidence in him has passed away, and if he cannot retain the patient himself, who can have a hetter claim than his friend, the consulttee. Even friends must differ now and then, and it is hetter that they should agree to do so than that the patient should fall a victim to the Quacks.

THE PROSPECTIVE TAYLOR.

School-Director Taylor is a man of many cares. Some of them are old and some are new; and the care of the Theresa Mining Company is at once old and new. As nearly as may be, this is the story: Mr. Taylor persuaded Mr. Mark Sheldon to pay $500 for 1,000 shares of the Theresa, in which company, he said, Louis Sloss, A. Chabot, of Oakland; Hecht, Patridge, the lumber dealer, and others, were largely interested. There were 10,000 shares to be disposed of for working capital, and about three thousand of these remain to be sold; and there were to be no assessments. Sixty days after Mr. Sheldon bought, an assessment was made, and when he went to Weaver, Taylor & Co., to see about his money, the firm had failed, and he could hear nothing of Taylor, but his money was never paid to the company. Mr. Sheldon was called off to the East, and had an attack of illness which lasted many months. When, at length, he consulted a lawyer about redress, it was found that the Statute of Limitations just barred the claim, and Mr. Taylor whistles cheerfully when he sees his victim. No doubt, it was the knowledge of this ingenious operation which secured Mr. Taylor the unanimous vote of the Convention this week. Here is a Republican Convention which had just been washing its face in the Chairman's tears, over the sorrows of an afflicted family that lives by doing the public—a Convention severely virtuous and hopelessly moral, beyond the suspicion of a wink—and it has nominated for the superintendency of public schools this man, strongly suspected of collusion with dealers known to have got money on false pretenses, mixed up with some of the most doubtful incidents in the most shameful investigation ever known in the Department, and, by his own confession, capable of sacrificing the reputation of any one in his power, on the evidence of anonymous letters. Mr. Jno. W. Taylor is an old teacher, a graduate of Harvard, and has served the people without reward for two years. So Dr. Simpson says. Good man! But who says anything about Dr. Simpson? And who asked Mr. Taylor to make a virtue of going without pay, when he undertook the duty deliberately, knowing that there was no money in it for an honest man? It may be Mr. Taylor's knowledge of his own character which makes him call attention, vicariously, to the honesty which took no pay when there was none to take; but an ounce of plain confession about his motive for insisting on the Chairmanship of the Committee on Furniture and Supplies, and a refunding of those $500, would be worth several tons of Simpsonity about his character. There must be magnetism in Mr. Taylor, or, perhaps, like Prince Harry, he makes folks drink medicines, for here is W. A. Phillips, who has persistently denounced the Director for a year, now working like a beaver for the possible Superintendent. "Taylor," says Phillips, "gave his time night and day to the schools, to the detriment of his private interests. He prosecuted the inquiry till he found a wolf in sheep's clothing, who was watching a flock of lambs." A sweet picture of confiding innocence, of crafty hypocrisy, of dauntless courage and sagacious fidelity; but why, oh! why did Phillips forget to mention that, when the watch-dog Taylor found the wolf in sheep's clothing, he bought a ticket for New York and went off on the overland train? These be your gods, to work justice and judgment in the School Department, and, like Pecksniff, set a moral example to youth.

Taylor himself made a pointed speech to the Convention. He would see the streets unpaved, the City Hall without a brick, the Park a waste of sand, rather than see the children go uneducated. The children fall upon his neck and kiss him, for they feel too good all over when they hear about him; but he left out one or two points in his speech. He said nothing of the lady who offered to pay $250 to director Laven for the place she afterward got through the pointed Taylor. He did not once allude to the Bell Telephone Company; he did not name Ewald, who registers his voters for him, or quote from the last letter of the repentant Jno. A. Moore, now flashing light across the Texan prairies. How should an old teacher and Harvard graduate, a friend of Dr. Simpson's and a magnanimous forgiver of Phillips, be so forgetful of points? He would rather see this and that undone; who doubts it? But he is a man who serves his country without pay; why does he seek an office which carries with it the disagreeable compensation of four thousand dollars a year? If he is elected, we lose the Taylor of the past, the Taylor who gives up time and thought and life for nothing; the Taylor of virtue, the Taylor who illumines the city of the Golden Gate, like a western Bartholdi's statue of Liberty, with the heacon-light of intelligent patriotism flashing from his magnificent head, lifted high above the mists and fogs of the lower level into the glorious sunshine of everlasting investigation and eternal Chairmanship of Supplies.

SCARCELY WORTH COMMENT.

With characteristic malignity, the Bulletin quotes a fragment from a "Paris Letter" (the Bulletin is always as thievishly anonymous as it can be, you know), presumably contributed to some Eastern paper, concerning the family affairs of the Mackays and Hungerfords at the French capital. The "letter," we will wager our best boots to the Bulletin's sense of honor, was written by a woman, and by an old and ugly woman at that, it is so frightfully sour and full of envy. But the poor she-devil who wrote it had to live, and as her face certainly isn't her fortune, we can forgive her if the vinegar of her soul and visage exudes into her pen. Deacon Fitch, however, ought to be more worldly-wise than to betray the little soul of him by snapping up such trash for his paper, no matter how much he might like to gloat over it in private. After a string of spiteful slanders, provoked, it seems by the fact that the families in question are in high favor in Paris, the spit-fire correspondent good-naturedly says: "I suppose Mrs. Hungerford never alludes in fashionable society—le grand monde—to the fact that only a few years ago she sold a certain corn salve—a very good salve it was, too—in a well known German city. I have by me a label cut by a friend from one of the boxes of Mrs. Hungerford's salve. It states that this celebrated salve could be purchased of "Mrs. E. Hungerford, at No. 16 Schillerstrasse, for 5, 10 and 15 gulden per box." It is so becoming, you know, in American papers to sneer at the idea of selling "corn-salve." We never—or hardly ever—stoop to such utter degradation here as inventing or patenting anything by which money might be made. Our traditions teach us to regard as dishonorable the making of our own fortunes. We never plume ourselves upon the fact that—but, bah! what is the use of wasting type and space to show that the writer of such a letter is an underbred, envious fool, and that, therefore, Deacon Fitch, of the Bulletin, finds her utterances congenial?

BIDDING FOR THE OFFICES.

The offices of the city and State seem to be put up just now at a kind of auction. Bids are being made for everything in sight. The railroad commissionerships are to go to men, not because of their experience, capacity or judicial fairness, but because of high bids in favor of low fares and freights. It was intended that these officials should take testimony, and make up a judicial judgment, after inquiry, as to a just and fair railroad tariff. That is their sworn duty, under the vaunted Constitution which calls them into being. But it appears that there is to be no inquiry, and no judicial determination on the subject. The whole thing is to be settled by a popular bid for place and pay. One party promises that there shall be a reduction of twenty-five per cent., the next "sees" that bid, and goes it eight and a half per cent. better. If there had been any more party Conventions to meet, there would probably have been further bids. Only give the party nominees control of the railroads, and they will promise to run them for anything, or even for nothing, for the matter of that. They stop not to inquire what the operating expenses are, what the cost of maintenance, and what the interest upon the capital employed. Oh, dear, no! That method would not buy the Granger vote, nor permit one candidate to outbid another. Nor is this evil confined to the railroad commissionerships. The city officers are to reduce water and gas rates, and each party is outbidding the others in promises. The Republicans promise large reductions, the Democrats and Bilks swear that they will take off at least twenty per cent., and the Workingmen outbid them both by promising that the total income of the company shall, if they are entrusted with the offices, be reduced from $1,200,000 to $500,000 per annum. If that is not confiscation of property, what is it? The last Legislature dealt with this subject, and provided that the company should pay no more than eight per cent. dividends. That, surely, ought to have ended the difficulty. But no, there must now be further reductions, not based upon any principle, but depending solely upon the capacity of office-seekers to make promises. The same thing is going on in regard to gas rates. Existing contracts are to be set aside, and one promise after another is being made, until we are not quite sure what the latest figure is. Then again, one set of candidates offer to fill the offices at forty per cent. less salary than that expected by other candidates. Only let Kalloch & Co. get their hands into the Treasury and they will be satisfied with a little over one-half of the legal rate of pay. Will they? They say so, and swear to it; but who believes them? This putting up of public favor at auction, and bidding for it, with other people's property and money is a most monstrous and dangerous practice. Once commenced, where is it to stop? Already we find the Bulletin, that ought to know better, making a sort of tabulated comparison of the bids, and recommending the acceptance of the highest. Kalloch's crowd are ahead in the bidding, and for no better reason than that they are, we are recommended to vote for them. It is nothing that they are known to be unprincipled and conscienless bidders, who will promise anything to secure their own election. It does not matter that they are unsubstantial and irresponsible men, whose chief desire is to finger other people's money and handle other people's property. The sole qualification for office at this time appears to be a capacity to make dishonest promises. They are had, wicked promises, which mean robbery, confiscation, Communism, wholesale bribery of the public vote, and general corruption of the body politic. It is a scandal that men should be found reckless enough to make them, and it is simply infamous that their acceptance should for one moment be seriously entertained. No wonder that times are hard and that capital withdraws itself from the reach of the spoiler. Whilst there is a possibility of the government being placed in the hands of men who make the largest promises to confiscate the property of others there can be no confidence, and without confidence there cannot, by any possibility, be a return of prosperity. The truth is, that the sooner these Communistic tendencies are stamped out the better, and the sooner we get back to good, honest, normal methods of government, the sooner will capital flow into industries and trade revive.

FAIRLY CAUGHT IN HIS OWN TRAP.

Cohen is nothing if not wily. Yet it is possible to entrap the slyest of animals. The fox is cunningly cute, but withal he is trapped occasionally. Cohen has been lured to the total destruction of the castle in the air which he has been at so much pains to build up. In another column we pay our respects to his false figures, and show conclusively that he is fairly caught in a steel trap of his own constructing. We ask a careful perusal of the exposure of his falsification. It will be seen that in his labored endeavor to prove railroad freights and fares excessive he has fallen into a gross blunder, which, when eliminated from his calculations, leaves fares and freights at the exact figure which he himself says would be just. He had over-estimated the average earnings of the road per mile at one-third more than they really were, and, upon that false calculation, proceeded to show that a reduction of thirty-three and one-third per cent. would be the exact thing. When we correct his calculation and put the earnings per mile at what they are, we reach an income which is almost identical with that which he says it ought to be. In other words, as he erred in setting down the income per mile at one-third greater than it is, it follows as a mathematical certainty that when you, on that basis, reduce the tariff one-third you bring it to what it now is. He says that a reduction of one-third, upon the figures he gives, would be all that the most exacting should require. As those figures are one-third in excess of the truth, it results that fares and freights are at present yielding the precise income which Mr. Cohen says is reasonable. That is the position he finds himself in. He is firmly held in his own trap. It is amusing to see so wily a fox thus fairly caught. Quoting figures is evidently not his forte.

The "Chronicle" reporter who applied to an attaché of another paper for some points in political matters, and got them, is heartily welcome to the items, though he must be satisfied by this time that he got more than he looked for. But when a paper prints a column of lies, and has to retract them next day, it might be better to call the apology anything but a "typographical error."

Minister White has been looking over the situation, and he says that Germany needs more pigs.

CHINA AS A FIELD FOR FUTURE RAILWAY ENTERPRISE.

By G. James Morrison, M.I.C.E.

In the following notes will be found some information which may prove interesting to those who look upon China as a great field for future engineering enterprise. My position of engineer and general manager of the Woosung Railway gave me many opportunities of judging of the feelings of all classes of Chinese, while my subsequent travels in the interior have given me a fair knowledge of the country.

The real obstacle to the introduction of railways into China is that the Imperial Government does not want them. This might seem a fatal objection, and would indeed be such, were it not that on this point the Government does not by any means represent the feeling of the people nor even of all the individuals of its own body. It is well known that among the highest class there is a party of progress, a party which is getting stronger every day, and which is fully alive to the fact that China can no longer remain in her present isolated condition, and that great and radical changes must take place, and many western improvements, including railways, be introduced if the Chinese are to hold even a respectable place among other nations.

The party of progress openly expresses the view that the mineral resources of the country ought to be developed, and that the means of intercommunication should be improved by the construction of roads and railways. So far, no doubt, their views are sound, but they consider that as they have iron, coal, and other minerals in abundance, the proper plan is first to develop their mines, and then with their own materials to construct their own railways. To say that this method was followed by England is to my mind the strongest argument against it. China is centuries behind England now, and if this plan be adhered to, she will constantly remain so. Where would the iron trade of the United States have been if that people had not at first made a free use of English iron for their railroads to open up the country? There cannot be the slightest doubt that if China wishes within the lifetime of the present generation to develop her mineral resources, she ought to begin by making railways, not merely local lines for the use of particular mines, but main lines to open up the country.

When I talk of railways as necessary for the development of mines, I do not mean that they would always be employed for the carriage of minerals for long distances. Water carriage would in many places compete successfully on account of cheapness, but railways increase the power of doing business, and enable as much to be done in a day as could without them be done in a month.

This brings us naturally to the question of money, for financial arrangements suitable for opening up a few mines are utterly inadequate for providing the necessary capital for the construction of main lines of railway.

It is unquestionable that the Chinese can easily borrow money at a rate that would enable them to construct railways profitably, and moreover that so long as they continue to expend this money honestly in such works their borrowing powers would increase instead of diminish, but it is clear that any loan must be secured by direct decree of the Imperial Government, the interest must be payable in sterling or its equivalent, and the capital instead of being returned in two or three years must be repaid gradually by drawings spread over a lengthened period, so as not to oblige people to be constantly looking out for new investments.

Unfortunately the views of the Chinese Government on this subject are diametrically opposed to those of western nations. Though most regular and trustworthy in all money matters, they are recklessly ruining their credit by the issue of paltry little loans, to be repaid in a few years, and fenced about with such absurd restrictions as to necessitate the payment of a high rate of interest to induce any one to take them up.

When the Chinese come to see that these temporary loans are the first steps toward national bankruptcy, while imperial loans for expenditure on reproductive works are the bases of future prosperity, then there will be some hope of railway schemes being undertaken on a grand scale, and I am, therefore, of opinion that every opportunity should be taken of instructing the authorities in a sound system of finance.

The light and cheaply-constructed line so useful in a newly settled colony would be quite out of place in China. She is densely populated, and there has for centuries existed an enormous trade carried on by sheer force of numbers in the face of the most appalling difficulties. It has indeed been urged that the very existence of such trade proves that the canals and rivers are sufficient for the requirements of the case.

That these views should be held by Chinese who have never seen the railways of Europe, and by Europeans who have seen little of the inland waters of China, is perhaps natural; but when I tell them that I have traveled up stream on main routes of commerce at the rate of 70 miles per week, that I have seen rivers where cargo boats cannot go singly, but are forced to go in fleets of fifteen or twenty, all the men in the fleet combining to pull each boat in succession up the several rapids; when I tell them that I have seen boats lying in the Grand Canal, which had come in with cargo, and had been detained for years for want of water to go out, most of them will admit that the present system is not perfect. In the case of the Grand Canal, much might be done to improve the present means of intercommunication, but I consider it to be no argument against a railway from Hankow to Canton that it would run parallel to an existing and much-used line of inland navigation (broken only by a short land journey of thirty miles at the watershed) by means of which the journey can now be accomplished in six weeks. The rivers will always carry a certain amount of traffic, chiefly of the least remunerative description; but in China, as elsewhere, there is an immense amount of passenger and valuable goods traffic which will fly to railways at once, and lines to carry this satisfactorily must be substantially constructed, and very fully equipped with rolling stock of all sorts. Special capital on a considerable scale must be raised for this purpose, and this can be done most cheaply by borrowing on the foreign market.

In order to collect information, I have made three journeys into the interior, in which I have traveled over 2,000 miles, on foot or in native boats or conveyances, from Canton to Pekin, and overland nearly the whole length of Formosa. In addition to this I have made several short excursions in the neighborhood of Pekin, Tientsin, and other treaty ports, and I have availed myself of every opportunity of conversing with officials, both native and foreign.

Of all the places I have visited, the line of country which appears to me most suitable for a main trunk railway, is between Canton and Wuchang (fu) (the city on the south side of the Yangtse, immediately opposite Hankow), a length of about 700 miles. What may be called the main route from Canton to the north, passes over the Mei ling into the province of Kiangsi, and leads by the Poyang lake to Kiukiang. Considered only as a route from Canton to Pekin, this might be best, but when local traffic has to be considered, I am decidedly in favor of the route by Wuchang. The route I suggest is north from Canton to Shao Chow (fu), which is situated in an extensive coal field. The coal is bituminous, and though most that has yet been worked is of poor quality, some is good. Thence the line would keep a little to the west, crossing through the range of mountains in the north of Kwang Tung province by a gorge immediately to the south of Icheng (hien). This gorge would present considerable engineering difficulties, but when the expense of this short piece is counted in with the cost of the whole line the average will not be high. Between Icheng (hien) and Chen (chow) the pass is called the Che ling, and is not more than 1,200 ft. above the sea. After this there is a rather rough route as far as Lui Yang (hien), and thence an easy route along the valley of the Siang past Chang Sha (fu) to Wuchang (fu). The line would traverse the immence coal-field of South Hanan, where fully half a million of tons per annum must be produced at present. This field produces excellent anthracite near Lui Yang, and magnificent bituminous coal near Yung Hing (hien). There are also extensive deposits of iron ore in this district. Stone, lime, clay, coal, and almost every requisite for railway building, are found all along the route, and the trade at Chang Sha in timber is already very large. Great quantities of tea, of Canton goods, and of produce and manufactures of every sort, would be carried by this line immediately. To give some idea of the places which would be served by such a line, I may mention Siang Tan (hien), a large and populous city, with a river frontage of over 2½ miles, crowded with river craft, and Tsing Shui Pu, a village inhabited wholly by coal merchants, each in a small way of business, but whose wharves stretch along the river nearly three miles.

Of equal importance is a line to connect Pekin with some port open during the winter. Pekin is the capital of the empire, and may fairly be called the Chinese terminus of the great routes to Mongolia and Russia.

Tientsin, the present port of Pekin, is closed by ice for more than two months every year, and no sea-port open during winter can be reached without crossing the Yellow River. I have examined this river from Kaifong (fu) to Tsinan (fu), a distance of 225 miles, and there are many points where it could be crossed with ease. A scheme for a railway from Pekin to Chefoo has been suggested by Mr. Fergusson. I shall only say that while I believe a line from Pekin to a good seaport to be one of the most important in the empire, I refrain from giving a decided opinion in favor of any particular route.

Local lines should be in the neighborhood of Tientsin, Canton, or Shanghai. Without doubt the best local line would be from Tientsin to Pekin, 80 miles. The journey is at present accomplished in two days very hard traveling by land, or three days by boat to Tung Chow, and thence 14 miles by land to Peking. There would be the Grand Canal to be crossed by an opening bridge, and three streams by short viaducts. The country is low, but a bank of a very few feet would make the line safe against inundations. As regards revenue, there might be so much goods traffic as to be remunerative without passengers, and so many passengers as to be remunerative without goods. At Pekin the Tartar city is 12 square miles in area, the Chinese city is nearly as large, and the total population at least three-quarters of a million. Within less than twenty miles west of Pekin there is a most extensive coal-field. In this field I have seen excellent coal sold at the pit's mouth for a dollar a ton, while at Pekin it cost eight or nine dollars, and there is coal here which has been declared by engineers, who have tried it in steamers, and by Dr. Percy, who has tested it chemically, to be equal to any.

The other line in this district is from Tientsin to Taku, 30 miles. As a continuation of the Pekin and Tientsin line, it has all the elements of success, but as an independent line it would have many difficulties to contend with.

Near Canton there would be a splendid opportunity for a line of thirteen miles, between Fatshan and Hwa Ti or Fa Di, close to Canton. The creeks between these places swarm with cargo and passenger boats. The country is quite flat, the line would be cheap, and the traffic immense.

In the neighborhood of Shanghai two lines have been proposed, one from Pootung, opposite Shanghai, to Hangchow (fu), 143 miles along an existing sea bank. The objections I see are that on one side there is no land, and on the other side not a very rich country to supply local traffic. The other railway which I think would give splendid results is from Shangbai to Soochow.

There are two routes for a railway from Shanghai to Soochow. One is direct about 55 miles through a busy town called Naziang, the other is more circuitous, about 68 miles, passing by Woosung, and the cities of Kading, Taitsan and Quinsan.

I will confine my remarks to the one I most approve of, viz., that by Woosung. The whole country is about the level of extreme high water, and part of it is subject to inundations, rarely more than a foot in depth. The line would cross 160 creeks and watercourses. The Woosung Creek would be crossed nearly two miles nearer the mouth than any existing bridge, so an opening span might be required. Next to that the most important creek is at Taitsin, but it is already crossed by a bridge 33 ft. span and 20 ft. above water level. Most of the other creeks can be crossed by very small bridges.

The numerous paths present much greater difficulty. There are no real roads in China, and consequently the traffic, which in any other country would be concentrated at a single crossing, is here met with at every few yards, and the difficulty is increased by the country being divided into an immense number of small holdings. It will probably be necessary to construct roads parallel to the railway and give crossings at a few places only.

As regards receipts I can give no statistics, such things are not to be obtained in China, but a single trip along the main canal from Shanghai to Soochow, with a walk through the latter city, is enough to convince the most skeptical that the traffic must be very great. The only example we have to refer to is that of the Woosung Railway. This toy line with two engines and twelve carriages, earned 4s. per train mile, and its gross receipts from passengers only for the first and only year of its existence were more than 11 per cent. on the price at which it was sold to the Chinese, a price which covered all the cost of construction and all the preliminary expenses connected with the establishment of the first railway in a new country.

It may be remarked that I have not mentioned famines, nor the effect of railways in alleviating such calamities. In addition to my own observations I have the report by Li Hung Chang and Shen Pao Chen, published in the Peking Gazette of July 31, 1878, which states: "As regards Shansi in particular, the cause of the distress lies not in a scarcity of supplies, but in the length and difficulty of the routes to be traversed, the scarcity of beasts of burden, and the excessive rates charged for porterage." I do not intend to say a word against railways in Shansi. It is a rich mineral province, and if a large proportion of the inhabitants were connected with mining trades, and the railways which took iron to the coast could take corn up to the people, a failure of crops would cease to be an overwhelming calamity.

Of the eighteen provinces of China there are nine which I have not yet visited. When I have somewhat extended the area of my knowledge, I may be in a position to write an exhaustive treatise on a general system of railways for the Chinese Empire.—Condensed from Engineering.

WHAT IS THE MONROE DOCTRINE?

This much-hackneyed phrase is being mischievously quoted just now by people who little know its meaning. Mr. Monroe, in 1823, asserted "as a principle, in which the rights and interests of the United States are involved, that the American continent, by the free and independent condition which they have assumed and maintained, are henceforth not to be considered as subjects for future colonization by an European power." Instead of the word "colonization," Senator Burnside has substituted the word "occupation," and so has missed the true sense and historical gist of the declaration made by Mr. Monroe. By that declaration it was simply affirmed that the waste and unsettled parts of the New World were then, and thereafter, un longer opeu to colonization by right of discovery, proclamation and partial settlement in the name of any European Power. It was in this way that the North and South American continents had originally been parceled out by the leading nations of Europe. This work of colonization had gone on without let or hindrance, from the first discovery of America by Columbus dowu almost to the beginning of the present century. But by that time the work of such colonization had practically come to an eud; for, although large parts of the New World were still unsettled by civilized man, it was claimed by one power or another that its jurisdiction extended over the unoccupied as well as the already occupied portions of North and South America. The undefined nature and extent of these conflicting territorial claims led to frequent disputes between the nations interested in their assertion, and the history of diplomacy is filled with discussions on this topic down to a period as late as the administration of President Polk, when the "Oregon Boundary controversy," so long pending between the United States and Great Britain was finally settled in a way so little satisfactory to ardent patriots, who asserted the rightfulness of the claim advanced by our Government to the surrendered property, lying between 49° and 54° 40′ of north latitude. It was judged by John Quincy Adams, Secretary of State under Mr. Monroe, that the time had come for promulgating, as a principle of fact and right, the doctrine that no part of the American continent would thereafter he subject to colonization as waste and unoccupied territory. The whole domain was then covered by the flag of some recognized country, and would, argued Mr. Adams, he henceforth "accessible to Europeaus, and to each other, on this footing alone." This doctrine was first formulated hy Mr. Adams in the course of some negotiations between our Government and Russia, with regard to the conflicting territorial pretensions of the United States, of Great Britain, and Russia, in the northwestern parts of America, and Mr. Monroe did hut reiterate and generalize the declaration of his Secretary of State when he incorporated in his message of 1823 the statement we have quoted, which has subsequently come to be called "the Monroe Doctrine." It was simply and solely a denial that there was any more unclaimed territory on this continent. The meaning and application of the Monroe docrine heing thus limited by the history of its origin, it follows that to cite it as being antagonistic to schemes of internal improvement like the Darien Ship Canal, is entirely to mistake its real significance. It is to conjure with words that have no meaning, and to impose a delusion on the popular credulity. The Monroe doctrine had a definite purpose at the time, which it served, for from the date of its utterance no further European power has ventured to assume to exercise squatter sovereignty on the soil of the American continent.

We had supposed that all disputed questions with regard to the proposed canal had been sufficiently settled hy the Clayton-Bulwer Convention of 1850, between the United Stated and Great Britain. By the terms of that Convention it was agreed "that the Governments of the United States and of Great Britain hereby bind themselves to extend their treaty stipulations to any other practicable communications, whether by canal or railway across the isthmus which connects North and South America, and especially to the inter-oceanic communications, should the same prove to he practicable, whether by canal or railway, which are now proposed to he established by way of Tehuantepec or Panama." The Clayton-Bulwer Convention proceeds on the assumption that our interests will he best subserved by the neutralization of the canal—hy inviting all the world to co-operate with us, and England, in holding it "open on like terms to the citizens and subjects of every other State." This seemed the true American doctrine in 1850, and it is no less true now than then. If we have any interests which can he promoted by our monopoly of rights, of duties and of responsibilities, with respect to the proposed canal, we would like to hear them formulated. It is very certain that we cannot decently claim the sole right to construct the canal, and to afterward control it. Beyond all, we cannot assert those rights for the purpose of obstruction, having no bona fide intention of entering upon the great work of constructing the canal. We cannot act the dog in the manger in regard to this business.

A new method of excavating for the erection of telegraph poles bas been devised and put to the test at Titusville, Pennsylvania. A man drives a crowbar into the ground to the depth of four or five feet, and into the hole so made drops a four ounce cartridge of so-called "electric powder." The fuse having heen lighted, the man proceeds to the sight of the next pole. In the mean time a dull sound is heard, and a hole about the diameter of a flour-barrel, and four or five feet deep, has heen made hy the exploding cartridge.

"PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Baldwin's Theater.—Lotta is playing to full houses, who leave well pleased and diverted. There is a certain charm about Lotta that is hard to define. She can hardly he called an actress—she is simply herself. She is full of little quirks and tricks that are ludicrous and cute. In "Musette" she has a character just suited to those peculiarities and characteristics on which rest her fame, and it is therefore natural to expect her pleasing the public. The play itself has little or no particular merit, save that it serves as a frame for Lotta's boydenish pranks. The mercurial activity of the little lady is wonderful—she chirps, kicks and skips along, launching out her childlike impudence in a manner too refreshing for anything. In La Cigale, which will he produced on Monday evening, a greater call is made upon her capabilities as an actress, and a more elaborate review of her talents will then he in order. Mr. Ed. Marble, who travels with Lotta as her chief support, develops some good comedian qualities. Lotta never could sing, nor can this gentleman, and, unless they can give us something more novel than "Sweet By-and-Bye" and Pinafore, they should allow their vocal ambition a rest. Jennings plays an eccentric character, "Timothy Tiltus," and plays it admirably. This gentleman is a sterling actor, and since his advent here, has done everything intrusted to him with remarkable skill. This little bit of character acting is a gem. It is clear-cut, consistent and eccentric, without exaggeration. La Cigale, the next play to be produced, had a long run in Paris, due principally to the admirable acting of M'lle Celine Chaumont. This lady is what we would call a refined soubrette. The character of "La Cigale" is one which can be made a good deal of, at the hands of a clever actress, and Lotta has been very successful in New York, in this respect. The rest of the cast in Musette was, as usual in this theater, excellent. Harry Widmer, who shows remarkable good taste in his orchestral selections, played this week a delicious little piece, entitled "Turkish Review by Michaelis," which received a nightly encore.

Standard Theater.—The entertainment at this place of amusement has been of a rather mixed character during the week. Trial by Jury is not an operetta that can he successfully rendered by children, he they ever so proficient or precocious. It is a satire upon breach of promise cases, and requires, for proper performance, matured intelligence and experience on the part of the performers. The music, being mostly of a declamatory character, is a little too much for the youngsters. They struggle through it in a manner that can hardly be called pleasing. Cunning little Flora Walsh is the redeeming feature of the cast. She is arch, coquette and vivacious, and sings true—something the others are not particular about. Commodore Nutt fizzles through the character of the Judge, hut redeems himself in his Toodles act. In this he is irresistibly funny. Zamloch is a prestigiator of rather mediocre ability. There is a lack of cleverness and a superabundance of ill-luck about him that detracts somewhat from the successful outcome of his tricks. But how immaterial and irrelevant all this, when taken into consideration with the question at issue: the possibility of returning home with a silver pitcher, a gold watch, or, perhaps, a black silk dress under your arm. That is what draws the people and fills the house. We are a community of gamblers—there is no use denying that fact. It is worth the price of admission to go in and see the drawing of prizes. The look of pleasant expectation that each holder of a red ticket wears when he or she is called up to receive the donation, and the subsequent crestfallen and embarrassed manner noticeable when the prize turns out to he a frame, a paper fan, or a bell, all this is very laughable and amusing. When the silk dress is finally won, the amount of envy showered upon the lucky individual would puff out all the gohblers in christendom. Pinafore was revived last evening for a couple of performances. It will be produced this afternoon and evening for positively the last time, and, as performed at the Standard, is well worth a visit.

Bush Street Theater.—What is called Canal-Boat Pinafore can hardly he called a burlesque. It is a parody of a burlesque. A performance more amusing or laughable can hardly he imagined. It is a sharp and short condensation of the salient points of the original, humorously adapted. The performance is given with remarkable vim, and in presto tempo. The choruses are forcibly sung, and the different characters remarkably well carried out. Miss Kane indicates how well she would have done in a legitimate Pinafore. Thatcher, as the "Admiral," is very funny, and keeps the audience in one hubhle of laughter. Morris, as "Strong Butter Cup," and Kelly, as "Dick Dead-heat," also do very creditably. The celebrated chorus, "He is an Englishman," undergoes a change of nationality, and it is good for the blues to see the whole chorus indulge in the celebrated Pat Rooney walk, whilst singing "He is an Irishman." This production has been prefaced with a short programme of specialties, in which the pretty French Sisters appear at their best. Tomorrow closes this engagement, which has been a very successful one. The patronage warrants a prolongation, hut Manager Locke has other novelties in store. On Tuesday, Captain Jack will appear in the drama, California, Through the Valley of Death. (Ha! ha!) Once more will the Indian war-whoop and the deadly crack of the Buntling frontiersman's rifle awake the echoes of Bush street, and cause Young America's heart to heat and his soul to pant. This production is a dramatization by John Woodard of Sam W. Smith's story, "The Plains." The cast will he a strong one, including Jennie Arnott, Mary Gray, Emma Grant, Harry Brown, Bassett, etc. John Woodard himself will assume the character of "Old Bill Williams, the Trapper." Captain Jack Crawford will play the young scout, and taken all in all the piece will he handsomely mounted. A novel effect will he introduced—"The Mirage on the Desert."

California Theater.—Whatever induced Imogene to adopt the stage as a profession, particularly to star, is one of those unfathomable mysteries that abound in this world. She does not possess one single trait or redeeming feature; something that will, as it were, excuse her appearance on the boards. She does not speak distinctly, is ungraceful in manner and gesture, and is barren of the very elementary principles of acting. A more thorough fiasco than was witnessed last Monday evening is something unheard of. The audience, hut very small at first, became gradually more and more so, as auditor after auditor, disgusted with Miss—I beg pardon, with Imogene's—total unfitness for public amusement, silently stole away. Through a peculiar intonation of voice the lady's remarks are inaudible a few feet away from the stage, and, as her gestures and hy-play are things which to her seem perfectly independent of the dialogue, the result can better he "Imogened" than expressed. The play itself is a barbarous adaptation of La Cigale, a very amusing play, written by Meilhac & Halevy, two clever French writers. It is replete with stupid dialogue, idiotic puns and childish business. For the coming season the very best of engagements have been made. Miss Adelaide Stanbope, the new leading lady, is an actress of whom report speaks in very high terms. The new soubrette, Lizzie Harold, is a great favorite wherever she has appeared. In all the large cities East her name is familiar as one of the very best of American soubrettes. Crane & Robson will soon he here, and supported hy the talented company that Messrs. Barton & Lawlor will have gathered, they will undoubtedly repeat their former success. They are said to have so elaborated and finished their "Two Dromios" as to make it a most remarkable performance. This was indicated at the time of their first attempt in those characters last season.

German Theater.—Magda Irschick, one of the best tragediennes on the German stage, made her American debut last Sunday eve. Her advent had been heralded hy fulsome advertisements and puffs, and expectation ran in consequence very high. Although the claim of her friends and admirers to equal talent and genius with Clara Ziegler or Charlotte Wolter is undoubtedly too ambitious, still she is undeniably an actress of high rank. She is gifted with admirable elocutionary powers, mobile features, intelligently guided and graceful, and appropriate manners and gestures. The emphasis and stress, which give meaning and force to language, is properly and truthfully laid, and to intelligence it is a pleasant task to hear the beautiful language of the great authors done full justice to. Irschick is at her best in monologue; her enunciation and modulations are equally perfect. In dialogue she maintains too tragic a tone, and she pitches her voice too high throughout—these are the noticeable defects. She is an actress of talent, not one of genius, for she possesses the artificiality of talent and lacks the spontaniety of genius. It is a rather difficult undertaking to produce acceptably such a masterpiece of language as Schiller's Maid of Orleans, and the company deserve all praise for their effort. Irschick makes her second appearance to-morrow (Sunday) evening as "Brunhild."

Chiarini's Circus still continues to draw immense houses, many being turned away several nights during the week. Mr. Chiarini's grand menage act with his blooded horse "Captain," showed magnificent horsemanship. He seemed to have his steed in as thorough sympathy with him and as obedient to the lightest touch of the bit, as the indicator of a telegraphic dial to the electric fluid. Mr. G. Bartholomew introduces ten bronchos, whose obedience to orders and splendidly executed evolutions entirely disprove the common idea that the broncho is stupid and intractable. They form in line, march and countermarch, form platoons, and, in fact, perform all the manuel of cavalry drill with no other guide than a motion from Mr. Bartholomew's whip. Miss Lotta, known as the lady with the teeth of steel, performs some wonderful feats of strength and skill with her teeth. She holds a large barrel of water by the chine till it empties. The lady picks up heavy chains and tables with her teeth, and throws them around with much greater ease than a stout man could with his hands. Miss Nellie Reed appears with a trained horse, called "Othello," that, under her tuition, can do everything hut talk. Mr. Sylvester's trained dogs perform a number of very clever tricks and display an immense amount of intelligence. The clowns are good, and we consider that, in every respect, Mr. Chiarini has the best circus ever shown in San Francisco.

At the Baldwin, this evening, will he brought out Charles Reade's great play, Dora, and a varied entertainment, including Pinafore, for the benefit of Mr. Fred. Lyster, so long and favorably known on the San Francisco stage, and manager of Baldwin's for years. Miss Lilly Post will also make her debut. This young lady is a native of our city, a very beautiful girl, and highly accomplished, and her voice is of remarkable sweetness and purity. Widely known and admired in society, she will, no doubt, he greeted hy hosts of friends on this occasion. Rarely is such an attractive programme offered to the public, and we predict an extraordinary success for both these artists.

Metropolitan Temple.—Master Shannon, the wonderful boy orator, is not receiving the attention he deserves. Stripped of all the exaggeration and nonsense of advertisement, he stands before the public a remarkable child. In elocution, he is perfect; the accentuation correct and the enunciation distinct and clear. The modulations of voice are musically appropriate, and his whole manner of speech such that fault-finding is impossible. In gesture he is very faulty, but this is something that is admitted hy his sponsor, who excuses the fact hy saying that all efforts to instruct the boy in that respect have proved futile. It is a treat to listen to the master works of English oratory so ably rendered.

The friends of the families of the eminently popular and well-known gentlemen, Messrs. Rodgers and Slicer, who were accidentally drowned in Lake San Andreas while fishing, on the 3d inst., are actively engaged in perfecting arrangements to give a joint benefit to the families of the deceased, at the Grand Opera House, on Thursday evening, the 21st inst. A large number of tickets have already been purchased—the sale reaching upwards of 700 on the first day—and it is safe to predict its complete success. Mr. C. J. Willey, of 427 Montgomery street, is prepared to furnish tickets.

The charming young Californian actress, Miss Henrie L. Bascom, who hut recently left us for a tour of study and practice in the East, has made, we are glad to know, a most favorable impression in Illinois. The papers of Bloomington and Atlanta are full of praise of her gifts. The Argus says: "Miss Bascom's elocution and grace upon the stage will win distinction for her;" and we feel sure that this will he the voice of the press wherever she plays.

Miscellaneous.—The performances at the Tivoli and St. Ann's Rest are witnessed nightly by crowds who seem to take kindly to this combination of theatricals and beer. Trial by Jury and Pinafore constitute the bill at the former place, and The Doctor of Alcantara prescribes nightly at the latter. This style of entertainment is new in this city. It is common all over the East, hut there draws its patronage from what we would call the bourgeoise. Here they seem to he patronized hy every one indiscriminately. The result is fatal to the theaters, and their empty benches can he directly ascribed to that competition. What the remedy is, is hard to tell; it will end probably in several of our theaters succumbing. The above-mentioned places produce their respective entertainments in very fair style, and seem to spare no expense to score a success.

Chit-Chat. The front of Wallack's Theater, which has been shabby for so many years, has been modernized in outline, and painted a brick-red, greatly improving its appearance.——The Philadelphia Mirror, of this week, contains a villainous likeness of Thatcher. He ought to sue for libel.——Harry Palmer leaves an estate roughly valued at $120,000.——The spectacle with which Niblo's is to be opened will be a most gorgeous affair. Voegtlin writes that it will be the finest scenic display ever seen in this country.——Salvini will play in America in '81.——W. H. Crane has returned from Europe.——The announced decease of Dave Wambold was a practical joke! He says he will not die.——John McCullough is at Saratoga, and sick.——Mrs. Bowers and Charlotte Thompson are going to star together.——Edward Spencer, author of Kit, is editor of the Baltimore Sun.——Haverly will have twelve companies on the road, and three theaters.——Annie Firman and John Jack send word that they have been very successful in Madras.——The Majiltons have in preparation an entire change of performance.——The children are that way, too. A little one who had been the "Josephine" with Ford's Pinafore Company, gave a party, and two of her young friends refused to come because she was on the stage.——The Sara Bernhardt engagement is finally settled. She will come in September, 1880. She is to receive $600 a performance, and $20 a day for personal exposes. Jarrett is to defray all other charges of every kind, including steamer passages and railroad fares.——He was a disgusted boy; he had exercised great caution, and had finally succeeded in crawling, unobserved, under the canvas into the tent, and he found it was not a circus, but a revival meeting in progress.

ART JOTTINGS.

For years it has been maintained in this column that an art exposition at the Mechanics' Fair was quite out of place. We have in this city an Art Association struggling for existence—it was lately the recipient of alms from an unknown friend to extricate it from debt; all the artists are members of it; they ought, if they do not, to send all their pictures there for exhibition and sale. The association occupy elegant, well lighted and commodious galleries, for which a yearly rental is paid of about five thousand dollars; the membership numbers nearly six hundred, the dues are from each twelve dollars per annum. And every year comes this Mechanics' Fair, and insists upon making an art display. Some years ago they farmed it out to an itinerant hawker of replicas and copies, named Gale, from Philadelphia. The character of his stuff was fully exposed at the time, and the experiment was not repeated.

Since then desperate efforts have been made to make a creditable showing by placing the affair in the hands of the Art Association. A committee, consisting of William Bradford, M. Straus, Virgil Williams, Thomas Hill and R. J. Bush, has the exhibit in charge this year, with J. Ross Martin, the factotum of the Art Association, as superintendent, and it is safe to say that a more disgraceful display of pictorial rubbish has never been made in San Francisco. Any stranger visiting the Fair would naturally wonder where the boasted art culture of San Francisco appeared, since nearly one-half the works on exhibition would disgrace the art exhibit of a backwoods town. It is true there are a few good pictures on the walls—about twenty—but the bulk of the exhibit is so execrably bad that the whole affair becomes a farce. This view becomes more apparent when it is known that two members of the Art Committee, Bradford and Straus, have not a single picture in the exhibition, although their studios are full to overflowing; the other three members of it are represented by one picture each—all exhibited before.

In the entire lot of one hundred and thirty, not one fresh work of any merit can be discovered. In view of these facts, it must be concluded that we have too much "art exhibition" and too few pictures. The artists, if they are not able to keep a display in their own gallery, should not attempt or pretend to contribute to another.

The collection is absolutely beneath notice, and is a disgrace to the committee, who have lent their names and then given it the go-by. Occupying a prominent position, we find a huge canvas called "Chepultepec," residence of the late Emperor Maximilian, by August Schoefft—of "Flagellation" notoriety. Nothing could be imagined more ridiculous than this picture. Another work by the same "old master" (manufacturer) is Cardinal McClosky; it is simply villainous. And then we have a half dozen huge canvases by that figure hotch, Kaltschmidt. Why are such daubs permitted to disfigure the walls of any gallery where intelligent people are expected to see them?

There are several, too, by Mrs. A. E. Wilson—one a bald and miserable copy of one of Tony Rosenthal's earliest works, which the painter labels "My Boy."

The managers of the huge canvas, "Lincoln at Gettysburg," are here, too, soliciting subscriptions for the engraving of the picture. It will doubtless attract more attention in its new position than when on view at the Art Rooms, but whether the subscription list will fill up more rapidly is a question. People are generally sick of any and all pictorial reminders of the late civil strife; the brush and graver can be put to far better use than that of reminding those who come after us of the fratricidal strife in which we were lately engaged.

We cannot conclude without calling attention to a most fitting contribution to this "art display" by one of the Board of Managers of the Mechanics' Institute, under whose auspices and direction the Fair is being conducted. We refer to Nos. 59 and 59½, catalogued as "Islands in Italy," by Agizen, and "Constantinople," by Bennekenstein. They are simply German chromos. The contributor seems to be the only member of the Board who has drawn upon his private collection for the benefit of the Institute. This show of "Art at the Fair" must be seen to be appreciated.

Tavernier has completed the second of his large panels for the Hopkins' mansion. It is understood they occupied more time than was expected, so that the price obtained is but small remuneration. Now, such works could not have been obtained from Europe for less than three times the amount paid Tavernier. There is, indeed, but poor encouragement for artists resident here to paint good pictures, and it is not much wonder that so little work has been exhibited during the past year.

There is but little new at the private galleries. Miss Williams has at Morris & Kennedy's a new flower piece. It is executed in her best manner. However, there would seem to be too great a number of full-blown flowers to make the most desirable composition, and too many of a kind. Perhaps the best picture of this character ever exhibited in San Francisco is that now in the window of H. Searing & Co., by Miss Clara Kruger, a German artist of note in the production of flower pieces. It is done in that free and masterly manner, both in composition and execution, so charming in flower subjects.

Time was when the finical efforts of such painters as Miss Deidrick were all the rage; but now, happily, such work is passing away, and that which approaches the crispness of nature is taking its place.

KNITTING.

Knitting gaily in the sunshine,
While the fragrant roses blow,
And the light winds stir the petals
Till they fall like flakes of snow;
Laughing gladly, glancing shyly,
At the lover by her side—
Saucy dimples, coy confessions,
All a maiden's love and pride;
Weaving in with skillful fingers
Girlish fancies, pure desires,
While the brightness of the future
Flashes through the twinkling wires;
And a young heart's fond ambitions
Tender hopes and golden dreams,
Deepen as the sunlight deepens;
With its thousand darts and gleams.
Knitting silent in the shadows,
With a drooping, weary head,
Gazing out into the twilight,
Whence the life and light had fled;
Moving nerveless, languid fingers,
Striving to be bright in vain,
And to still the heart's wild flutter,
Throbbing in its mighty pain;
Working through the silky texture
All a woman's anguished fears,
Looking out on past and future
Through a mist of burning tears.

Knitting patient in the twilight,
Quiet hearing all her woe,
While the roses shed their petals
In a fragrant summer snow.
Knitting fiercely, in the anguish
Of a burning, fiery strife;
Or quietly in the sunlight
Of a calm heart's happy life.
Knitting heavily and slowly,
In life's last fitful hours;
Or skillfully and gaily,
Among the summer flowers.
Weaving in a glorious future,
Or a soul's dull aching pain,
With the memory of pleasures
That will never come again.
Thus a woman's life is hounded
By the humble, daily task,
Meekly taking up her burden,
Pausing not to strive or ask.
Ah! how many hearts beside us,
Were we not so worldly wise,
Might we see in gentle moments,
Looking out from wistful eyes;
And how often, did we listen,
'Neath a gay and laughing tone,
Could we hear the bitter yearning
Of a strong heart's restless moan.

LORD BEACONSFIELD AT THE MANSION HOUSE.

It can well be believed that, as the telegraph states, Lord Beaconsfield's speech at the Lord Mayor's banquet, last Wednesday night, was received with "frantic cheers." In the abbreviated shape in which his words have just reached us, his speech is, of course, shorn of its original force and eloquence, but enough of it remains to show that the truths uttered by the Premier must have been extremely gratifying to the English people—for it is not to any political party, but to the people of England, and, indeed of the whole world, that the head of Her Majesty's Government is understood to address himself on such occasions.

From the beginning of his public career, Lord Beaconsfield has seldom neglected an opportunity to retaliate upon his political enemies, and he has never done so more effectually than when upon this occasion he referred to the state of affairs when he last spoke at the Mansion House and compared them with the present. As he says, the Government was then accused of having negotiated an impracticable treaty, and of having launched the country into a war in Afghanistan, which it was predicted would be full of disasters. How different the result has been the whole world knows. Well might the Premier triumphantly point to the fact that the "impracticable" Treaty of Berlin has been executed to the letter, in spite of all the ridicule and rage that it excited, and that the Afghan war, instead of being a disastrous failure, has proved a complete success. In referring to the Zulu war, Lord Beaconsfield expressed his belief that it would soon be brought to a satisfactory close. This war furnishes the only peg upon which the opponents of the Government's policy can still hang an argument, and even then they have to be unfair in order to make anything out of it. The war has been attended by some ill luck, possibly also by some mismanagement; but the ill luck is insignificant except when compared with the great good fortune which has marked all other British enterprises under the existing administration, and the Government cannot be fairly held responsible for the mismanagement—if any such there has really been.

It is not from any such mishaps as have yet occurred in Africa that England can suffer loss of prestige. They may be, and undoubtedly will be, speedily retrieved. But, from another source, there seems to be some danger of her good name being injured. Should Lord Chelmsford or Lieutenant Carey be made scapegoats by the government or by public opinion, as at one time seemed not improbable, no future successes can efface the stain which will forever rest upon the Zulu war. The former is accused of incompetence and negligence, and the British press has been very free with the accusation. Yet, so far, no definite instance has been pointed out which, upon investigation, justifies the charge in the slightest degree. None know the difficulties with which Lord Chelmsford had to contend so well as the officers under his command, and these unanimously speak of his efficiency and zeal in terms of the highest praise. It may have been prudent and even necessary to supersede him; the temper of the people and the custom of war demanded such a step; but to condemn him on general principles, because he was unsuccessful, and, what is more, to condemn him unheard, is cowardly and un-English. Sir Garnet Wolseley may be more fortunate, but it by no means follows that he is therefore more skillful or energetic. He has been able to profit by the bitter lessons which his predecessor's experience has taught, and he will encounter an enemy greatly weakened by that predecessor's efforts.

Lieutenant Carey's case involves similar features and principles. It is his bad luck and not his fault, so far as is known, which threatens to be his ruin. All the evidence goes to show that he was no more to be blamed for the death of the Prince Imperial than the man in the moon—nor, for the matter of that, was any one else except the Prince himself.

We have referred to these matters in connection with Lord Beaconsfield's speech at the Mansion House because, in addition to the injustice committed by all parties in dragging the names of Chelmsford and Carey in the dirt, the Premier's political adversaries have not hesitated to hold him personally responsible for the calamities of the Zulu war. They say that but for favoritism Chelmsford would never have been appointed, and that but for his appointment there would have been no disaster of Isandula. The first of these assertions is a lie, the second is a meaningless conjecture. Again, they say that but for Beaconsfield there would have been no Zulu war, and, consequently, no bereavement of Eugenie. Could any argument be more feeble, childish, and redolent of malice?

JAPANESE POETRY.

[Translated for the Sprin[illegible] Republican.]

FAREWELL TO THE GOLDESS PELE OF KILAUEA.

Farewell, dear Pelé, I can ne'er forget,
My head was lain upon thy bosom fair,
Thy warm breath on my cheek. I feel it yet,
My hands have wantoned with thy floating hair.

Thy glorious arms again I ne'er shall see
Attempting vainly a too close embrace,
As I with heated pulse essay to flee
From the quick passion of thy burning face.

The bosom heaving with unchecked desires
And throbbing wildly with tumultuous throes,
Reveals too surely all thy hidden fires
Of slumb'rous passions, cause of countless woes.

Again, farewell; my heart is far too cold,
For the hot love of thy too ardent race,
My lips still tingle with thy kisses bold,
My cheeks are crimson from thy last embrace.

ANOTHER SEA SERPENT.

The accompanying engravings are fac similes of a sketch sent to us by Captain Davison of the steamship Kiushiu-maru, and is inserted as a specimen of the curious drawings which are frequently forwarded to us for insertion. Captain Davidson's statement, which is countersigned by his chief officer, Mr. McKechnie, is as follows: Saturday, April 5th, at 11.15 A.M., Cape Satano distant about nine miles, the chief officer and myself observed a whale jump clear out of the sea, about a quarter of a mile away. Shortly after it leaped out again, when I saw there was something attached to it. Got glasses, and on the next leap distinctly saw something holding on to the belly of the whale. The latter gave one more spring clear of the water, and myself and chief then observed what appeared to be a large creature of the snake species rear itself about thirty feet out of the water. It appeared to be about the thickness of a junk's mast, and after standing about ten seconds in an erect position, it descended into the water, the upper end going first. With my glasses I made out the color of the beast to resemble that of a pilot-fish."

A short time ago some very remarkable results were obtained during a series of experiments made with a 24-centimetre gun manufactured by Herr Krupp at Essen. The piece itself weighed 13,000 kilogrammes, or rather less than 13 tons, and with charges of between 60 and 78 kilogrammes (132 to 171 lbs.) of powder imparted to projectiles weighing from 136 to 160 kilogrammes (300 to 352 lbs.) a muzzle velocity of 624 metres or 2,046 feet per second. The energy of the projectils was therefore 2,689 metre-tons; while the gun itself, although weighing only 13 tons, proved itself to be a more powerful weapon than the English service 35-ton gun, or the French 27-centimetre 23-ton gun. Altogether, the performances of the gun were so satisfactory that it was determined to continue the experiments; and, accordingly, last month several more rounds were fired from the same piece. A shell, specially designed for employment against iron armor, and weighing no less than 215 kilogrammes, or 473 lbs., was fired with a charge of 75 kilogrammes (165 lbs.) of powder—or with a charge some 50 lbs. larger than the service battering charge of the English 38-ton gun—when a muzzle velocity of 515 metres, or 1,619 feet, per second was obtained; the energy of the shot being consequently 2,900 metre-tons, or 161 metre-kilogrammes for every kilogramme of metal in the gun itself. It is, perhaps, not too much to say that any artillerist who might a few years ago have predicted the attainment of such a result would have been hailed as a visionary enthusiast.

FARMERS, AVOID SPECULATION!

An eminent French authority recently estimated the deficiency in the European wheat crop as follows: England, 120,000,000 bushels; France 114,000,000; Spain, 24,000,000; Italy, 18,000,000; Holland and Belgium, 12,000,000; Switzerland, 6,000,000. Total, 294,000,000 bushels. The surplus for export, to meet the above deficiency, is estimated as follows: United States, 157,000,000 bushels; Russia, 30,000,000; Australia, 21,000,000; India, 12,000,000; Hungary, 7,500,000; Danube Provinces, 6,000,000; Egypt, 3,000,000. Total, 236,500,000 bushels. Figures are lacking for the surplus of the Argentine Confederation, and other places of less note, as well as in regard to the stocks carried over from last year's crops; besides which American corn is beginning to compete with wheat in European markets, and our immense crop, estimated at 1,100,000,000 bushels for the current year, may possibly be called upon for larger quantities than heretofore. The people of the Continent, owing to trade depression and other causes, are unable to pay high prices for grain, and even at present rates will doubtless stint themselves in accordance with their diminished incomes. To supply the European difficiency above mentioned will require, after the grain has been brought to the different seaboards for marine transportation (to move 8,800,000 tons) 8,800 ships of 1,000 tons each, and California's quota will be upward of 500 of these ships, or about one-seventeenth of the whole number. The question of freights is the key to the present and future condition of the wheat market. It is worthy of note that Mr. James R. Keene, whose judgment is always remarkably sound, has recently wound up his Chicago wheat speculations, and has invested the proceeds in the so-called Granger railroads, which tap the great grain producing districts of the West and Northwest. The natural inference is that Mr. Keene prefers the small but sure profits of transportation of the grain to the Atlantic seaboard, to the very shadowy prospect of any substantial advance in Liverpool quotations. Farmers can judge from the foregoing facts and figures whether it will be profitable for them again to indulge in speculating upon the merest chances, or whether it is not advisable to realize, as soon as possible, upon their crops and liquidate old debts. The saving in interest will more than counterbalance any possible advance in prices, and it is very probable that after the crops in Europe have been gathered in, they will, as usual, be found more plentiful than present expectations indicate. Then prices will recede, and our farmers will execrate those who advised them to hold on. We say, realize without delay; pay your debts, and get in trim for next year's operations.

RAILROAD INTERESTS IN THE STATE.

The rapidity with which California has been covered by railroads is something marvelous, and in no department of industry bas the indomitable perseverance of our citizens been shcvn to greater advantage than in their construction. In this State individual energy has been from the beginning at high pressure, and bold projects have been thick as leaves in Vallamhrosa. The consequence is, that the State has shot ahead at a rate that has surprised the world, and whenever comparisons are made as to relative enterprise and rapidity of national development, California is the type of the most advanced and most advancing. It may be that in Kansas or Minnesota population flows in faster, and more lands are cultivated in these purely agricultural States; hut this is only to say that these States are increasing their acreage of corn and wheat, just as one might aay the same of Russia. California is not calculated to compete with these States in mere acreage of crops, or in having so many farms and so many acres; but in large undertakings, demanding bold, decisive, fearless minds and men of great capacity for organization and administration, this State stands unrivaled. Here there has always been large scope for individual effort, great prospects for ambitious men, and to-day, all things considered, California has more men of world-wide reputation, more men who have achieved a distinctive position by their own individual efforts than any other State in the Union. California has arrested more of the attention of the world for its vast undertakings and its brilliant achievements than any other State, and yet the whole mighty fabric has arisen as if by magic in the last thirty years.

The Railroad achievements have heen a marvel for such a young State, and these have been the more readily accomplished that hitherto California has borne the reputation of a wealthy, enterprising and strictly honorable State. It is a State that has, until lately, invited all men to participate in its great opportunities and great speculations. It has invited all capital to its coasts, and has hecn the most free and most cosmopolitan country in the world. The State had therefore made rapid strides until the Sand-lot demagogues, urged on hy the villainous support of two rival morning papers, began to formulate schemes of confiscation and robhery, and to lay plans for the capture of the State and city governments. The great unwashed, by means of universal suffrage and the ballot-box, proposed to obtain possession of the entire political power, and to control the State according to their own ignorant will. Then came to their aid the disappointcd and dissatisfied aspirants of all parties, and all the prominent men in the State became objects of denunciation to these place-hunters and political adventurers, who have nothing of which the deluge, which may come after, can possibly deprive them. Private animosities have also found this to be their golden opportunity, and the Central Pacific people have found their former minions and offal hunters, like Gorham and Cohen, men to whom jobbery has been as the breath of their life, suddenly turned into public spirited patriots, and decked out in the insignia of the "Honorable Bilks," a name that well describes them, pompously strutting on the platform, and vainly trying to make honest people helieve that they are the George Washingtons that are going to save the State. These, and such unscrupulous adventurers, are the enemies of the State, they foment dissension, spread distrust, throw suspicion on the honor and credit of the State, and, we may fairly ask, what have they ever done for this country except to injure it? No one will ever hold them in grateful remembrance, and they will be fortunate if the memory of their past deeds is permitted to pass into oblivion. When the Railroad magnates contribute perhaps the most remarkable chapter in the history of the State that California has to show, when they occupy an honored place among the men who have built up the country, and leave behind them enduring works of gigantic magnitude to perpetuate their memory, what will be knowu or remembered of two such venomous wasps as Messrs. Cohen and Gorham, who have nothing but their envious and malicious stings by which to recognize them? Time will do justice to them and their ill-deeds, if, in fact, time has not already placed upon them the brand of their iniquities. But if the State is to continue on its career of development, the Sand Lot and the class of political parasites and adventurers of the Gorham and Cohen type must be effectually stamped out. There are enough honest men in the State to demand and compel justice from the Railroads, but that these men should have to call in the services of such unscrupulous schemers as Gorham and Cohen would be a confession of weakness and a belief in dishonesty that Californians are not likely to be guilty of. Honorable Bilks they are, and will continue to be, but it is only among that clique of all the political jugglers and mountebanks that these two men are welcome. No other party has any faith in them, and never will have; and in this State they never can get such a political whitewashing as will make them anything but political adventurers and outcasts.

Out of this contest we have no doubt that the best interests of the State will emerge triumphant, and that justice will prevail in the end. But, for the time being, uncertainty and distrust are working immense injury in the paralysis of industry and suspension of undertakings throughout the State, and this condition of uncertainty cannot be too soon brought to an end. We can only call on all the honest and sensible people in the State to rally to the standard of justice, and to vote for men who can be trusted to act prudently and justly toward all interests, both in legislation and administration. But let them heware of the adventurers and fire eaters, who, having nothing to lose and everything to gain by anarchy, will certainly use their power—if they have any—to promote their own selfish interests.

MINES FOR THE EASTERN MARKET.

We have attentively watched the signs of the times, and, judging from the tone of the united press of the East, we are safe in making the statement that the comiug fall will be one of unexampled activity in mining enterprises in the great money centers of the country. Not only has the excitement taken a firm hold of the speculative communities of the great cities, but we hear of sales of properties in a number of cases in the smaller towns at the East. It is therefore advisable that parties owning valuable mines should take advantage of this new departure, at the same time keeping well in mind the fact that to effect a sale, or a satisfactory arrangement for developing their properties, that they must not he misrepresented. Capital to an immense amount is now idle in the Eastern markets, and, as an act of self protection, it is the duty of the people of this coast to carefully see that these new friends are not misled in making investments. The columns of this paper are always open to give accurate information regarding anv mines seeking purchasers at the East, and we cordially invite descriptions and correspondence in the premises.

TO AMERICAN VOTERS.

They say the mob will win
When voting-day comes round,
That ignorance and hate and sin
With triumph will be crowned;
That alien demagogues
Will get the upper hand;
That lawless swine from foreign bogs
Must rule this goodly land.
Of course they must and will
If we sit idly down,
And let the vagrants vote their fill
In country and in town.

Shall we with downcast eyes
Bewail our coming fate?
Arise! Americans, arise,
Before it grows too late!
Arise, and rule the land—
'Tis your inheritance.
Lock shields, and in a solid band
To victory advance!
Now is the hour for fight;
Gird on, then, while you may!
If every man who has the right
Votes on that fateful day,

The alien hosts shall melt
Like snow beneath the sun,
And ne'er again the blight be felt
Of foreign Goth and Hun.

THE CITY TICKETS.

We suppose there is now no possibility of remedying the unfortunate fact that there are to be two tickets run in opposition to the mangy crowd of Sand-lotters. That is to be most sincerely regretted. This is not the time for conservative men to be divided into two opposing factions. In times past they have worked together in harmony for the city's best interest, regardless of mere partisan considerations. It they could do that in safe times, why, in the name of all that is good, should they refuse to do it in this, the darkest hour in the city's history, when a common enemy is menacing every interest? It ought not, and will not, help the party that is responsible for it. The obvious duty, which the politicians have failed to perform, may very well he executed by the people themselves. The mass of voters should unite in favor of one of the two conservative tickets that will be in the field. When both are nominated, it ought not be difficult to determine which is the best. If anything like a common opinion can be arrived at on that point, then the solution of a grave difficulty is within easy reach. If the strongest of the two tickets is voted for hy all good citizens, without regard to previous party affiliations, then the defeat of the communists is certain. But how is the question of the strongest ticket to he determined? That is, no doubt, considerable of a difficulty. But it is in the power of the fusionists to overcome it. If they will put a ticket together, so exceptionably strong that all men may see its superiority over its rivals, then the difficulty is solved, and a common purpose to vote that ticket will be the result. The Republican Convention has completed its work, and we are in a position to judge of the whole. The ticket might easily be improved upon. It did not grow in strength as it grew in length. Several weak nominees are on it. Three or four of the judicial candidates are absolutely objectionable, and the uninitiated will find it difficult to tell how they got there. Yet, the ticket, as a whole, is a safe one, and unless the fusionists put up a better one, it will he the part of wisdom for all good citizens to vote it. In a few days the fusionists will have completed their nominations, and then it will be possible to determine how conservative citizens can best cast their votes. There is a fine opportunity for the new ticket to win favor by strong judicial nominations. If sound discretion is exercised on this point it will accomplish much. Judicial nominations that are conspicuously fit to be made, will give character to the whole ticket, and will do much to ensure its success before the people. The fusionists bave a grand opportunity. They may give us a ticket that will surely win; but to do that, it must be one of such recognized merit that all good citizens can rally to its support. Failing that, conservative Democrats may well vote the Republican city ticket.

A LYING CAMPAIGN.

The lying assertions of this election csmpaign are really beyond enumeration. If we were to believe one tithe of what is said, we should be forced to the conclusion that Republicans and Democrats have vied with each other in a rivalry to see which could scare up the most pronounced scallawag to run as a candidate for the gubernatorial office. Believe the Bulletin and Call, and then Hugh J. Glenn is a cold, unsympathizing, bad man, whose whole career in the State entitles him to be classed as a public enemy. Accept the statements of the Chronicle, and then George C. Perkins is the sum of all villainies; his whole thoughts must run on swindling; everything he is associated with is a fraud upon somebody; he buys land that hreeds only ague and rattlesnakes, and he seeks to sell it to deceived settlers; he wrongs the pilots, defrauds ship owners, and practices extortion upon all who deal with him. All this, and much more of the same kind. We presume no educated man needs to be informed that these allegations are all false. Yet it is to be supposed that somebody believes them, or else we know not why there should be such a display of energetic repetition. There are doubtless many ignorant people who, because they read these things, believe them. The papers cater to such readers, and, in doiug that, exhibit one of the very worst features of the newspaper press. They write down to the low level and debased instincts of the densely ignorant. A better ambition would be to inform and elevate the least educated portions of the body politic. No wonder that government is not respected. Such iteration and reiteration must have its effect, and that effect cannot fail to be highly mischievous in destroying all respect for the men whom we clothe with the authority to govern. The two gubernatorial candidates are men high over the average of their fellows; they are both men of mark, who have accomplished something in the world. A man who has the thrift and energy to acquire, and the executive ability to manage an enormous farm of 50,000 acres, is certainly a man entitled to respect. Then again, the youth, who, without friends, lands on a strange shore, and, by his own industry and skill, reaches the highest pinacle of mercantile success, is a worthy exemplar to his fellow-men. Instead of decrying such men as George C. Perkins and Hugh J. Glenn, they should be held up aa worthy of respect and honor. Their thrift, their honeaty, their industry and their consequent access, should be made to teach the best of all lessoua to the average aand-lotter

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier"' "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail.
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

Moses O Connor, who died the other day, left $6,000 to his three brothers, $2,000 to his wife and children, and $20,000 to the Church for perpetual daily masses for the repose of his soul. There is some popular indignation at this division of goods, but Moses, himself, best knew what a devil of a job it would be to scour up his soul; and we pity the Church. To help her good work, we beg leave to offer the following, which may be said (or sung) before the mass is performed:

Oh, Lord! wo pray Thee, for Thine honor
Give peace to Moses, called O'Connor!
An Irish Jew, a saint, a sinner,
Dead-beat in life, in death a winner.
Time failing fast and breath, his eyes
Beheld Thine awful dawn arise.
To save his wretched soul, he lent
His cash. Don't damn him till it's spent.

The "Alta," noticing the backwardness of citizens in getting registered for the coming election, frantically asks: "Is it possible there are 10,000 people among us who disregard the rights and privileges of American citizenship?" Disregard, good Granny, doesn't at all express it. The highly respectable and intelligent faction enumerated not only disregard, but abhor, contemn, disdain, scorn and despise those "rights and privileges," because they have become so excessively cheap as to be considered amongst their valueless assets. And that highly respectable minority will retain its opinion until the Sand-lotters have taught them a much needed lesson of the duty of "intelligence and respectability" to attend to the ballot if ever they hope for good government. Your Sand-lotter has a much more material view of voting values. It ranges all the way up from 25 cents to whatever it will bring in a lively market, and the market price promises to advance at a lively rate forninst the 3d September.

We always have been taught to consider a live dog superior to a dead lion, and are now fully convinced, since Judge Hilton asserts that he declines to pay a single dollar for the delivery of the late A. T. Stewart's body, which sundry enterprising body-snatchers appropriated with a view to compelling an exchange therefor of $250,000 from the executor of the estate. To be sure, Stewart only weighed 100 pounds at his decease, and $2,500 per pound is rather steep, but we doubt whether the spirit of the defunct will feel gratified by Hilton's display of Stewart's principal life virtue—avarice. Meanwhile the Stewart Cathedral, wherein his bones were to be interred, as patron saint, is deprived of that inestimable privilege, and the body-snatchers' industry remains unrewarded by the cynical Hilton, who says, "Keep your miserable old corpse, and I'll freeze onto my ducats!" Hilton shan't be our executor; we'll be cremated first.

The uproar of political discussion is temporarily hushed in the overshadowing presence of such all-absorbing questions as, did Sprague actually exhort Conkling to "git," with the moral reinforcement of a double-barreled shot-gun? Was it really, now, the German teacher? Is Sprague a lunatic, or has Mrs. Sprague been indiscreet? Is it true that Mrs. Conkling understands and believes in the innocence of platonic attachments, or does she regard Mrs. Sprague as "an improper person," and has she commenced an action for divorce? Did Mrs. Sprague write notes to Conkling in the gallery of the Senate? And, if so, where are they? Did he answer? And what did he say? And why did he say it, or why didn't he? And who cares a toothpick about the whole dirty business, or the people concerned in it?

To avoid misapprehension, we desire to say that the wittiest things in the News Letter are not the work of President Hiester, of the Board of Education, that gentleman's genius being unable to work in single harness. It is only when he is matched with Secretary Clinton, of the Board of Examiners, that the funny things drip from them like rain from a gutter. Either one, alone, would be taken for a mutton-head; brought together, they shine like blazes. It is not safe to go into the Board of Education when both are present. We have attended lately the fun rals of three unhappy men who incautiously ventured into the rooms of the Board, and we think it right to mention, for the public good, that an English grammar, worn on the person, is the only safeguard against this deadly pair of jokers.

She was a strong-minded woman and inclined to be suspicious. She took an interest in politics, and was firm in the faith that in the election of Glenn lay the only hope of rescuing the State from "the folds of the railroad anaconda." As she opened her Chronicle the hideous lithograph of the great anti-monopoly candidate fluttered downward to her feet. With strong gaze she inspected the half stolid, half truculent features in that gratuitous work of art, and shrieked, "Betrayed!" "What is it, my love?" inquired her startled lord in meek surprise. "What is it, you idiot!" retorted the agitated fair; "don't you see that the Chronicle has been bought up by the railroad and gone over to Perkins? Would they circulate such a likenese of our candidate as that if they really wanted to elect him?"

Brother Pickering seems to have recently experienced a regular "mash" for the intellectual Kearney, whom he is writing up as a distinguished representative of American culture. He reports the great sand-lotter's stump speeches—which he constantly calls "oratione"—with friendly care, judiciously weeding out as much of the low blackguardism as he can. On looking over one of these pruned reports, the noble agitator must be ready to swear he was changed at nurse.

Glenn ie war, pestilence and famine; Perkins, a soullese tool of the rich; White, an extremely black man. There is only one way out of it all. Let the News Letter name the Governor. In fact, we would undertake to save all the worry and expense, and give you a better government in three weeks than these squabbles of parties, with and without heads, will ever allow to be chosen. Terms moderate, cash down. No cure, no pay.

Talking about corpses reminds us of one Patsey McGee, a great man at wakes and funerals, and altogether belonging to the genus corpse sharp. Going along a road one night he met his friend Jimmy Gallagher. "Jimmy," said he, "ould Mulvaney's dead. God rest his sowl!" "Is that so?" said Jimmy. "Aye, is it," said Patsey, "and you're to be one o' the b'ys that sits up wid the corpse." "Me sit up wid a corpse I don't know!" replied Jimmy; "well, that hates Banagher, and Banagher hates the divil!" "Oh, but," replied Patsey, no wise taken aback, "I've offered yer sarvices, and"—in the most insinuating accents—"ye wudn't insult the corpse by refusin'?" It is needless to remark that Mr. Gallagher was not proof against such a thoroughly Celtic reason, and the corpse was not insulted.

There are as many promising young blackguards at our State University as any college can turn out, and we are proud of them. They hit straight from the shoulder, they knock down and drag out, they "bust each other's snoots" and put "heads" on each other with commendable energy; and there are no such ruffians on the Sand-lots. The free fight on Wednesday last lacked only one thing to make it perfect; a few funerals. "Whom the gods love die young." Achilles nobly preferred the glory of a brief and bright career; and loving hands would hang garlands on the early tombs of these heroes, and pilgrims come to tread with reverent feet the hallowed ground and read the Spartan epitaph: "Died with his boots on." A little killing next time, young gentlemen.

The "Two-headed Nightingale" is, according to the Hartford Times, "a double-headed lady, who converses and sings in five languages." Now, in the name of all the gods at once, what are the White State Central Committee about? That is precisely the kind of hair-pin that is wanted here in the present canvass. Why have these talents a curtain before them, and why should such gifts be hidden away in an obscure town like Albany, when the people require to be enlightened in regard to the "live issues?" With such a talent for languages, this two-headed parrot could jabber Low Dutch and equally low Irish at one and the same moment on the Sand-lot, so as to make Kearney look almost clean with envy.

When a blasphemer is struck by lightning, or a daring liar wishes he may fall down dead if he is lying, and gets his wish, all the pious papers in the country—and this means every paper but the News Letter, which is strictly religious—improves the occasion as an awful warning to blasphemers and liars. We have secretly agreed with them, because we knew what was coming; and now it has come. A temperance lecturer has just been struck by lightning on Pike's Peak, and converted. He swears he will do so no more, and Mrs. Pitts-Stevens will please take notice and tremble the next time she thinks of hauling out that pledge. A bottle is your only sure go.

It is not an easy thing to take a walk for constitutional purposes unless a man has a pair of shoes that he can wear; and the fact is, that now, after so many thousand years, not one shoemaker in a thousand can make a boot or shoe that is at once handsome and comfortable. When such a man is found, he is worth more than rubies; and Mr. H. Frese, 327 Dupont street, is the man. He uses only the best leather, and makes a perfect fit; and only the sufferer from tight boots knows the angelic comfort implied in these two facts. It may be made into a maxim: a man with boots from Frese's, walks without effort in the straight path of virtue.

Five violently virtuous young women in Vermont, the other day, tarred and "ragged" a girl supposed to be immoral, and promised her feathers if she didn't stop it. Behold, how awful goodness is! At the same time, one can't help thinking that these young persons are wasted in Vermont, and ought to seek a broader field in Rhode Island, or Washington, or Montgomery street, though the chances are all in favor of their having photographs of Sara Bernhardt in their rooms, and the Police Gazette for their favorite reading.

Commerce is the great civilizing and humanizing agent of the world, and this is the reason why all good Californians are rubbing their hands and smiling aloud over the news of failing wheat crops in Europe generally. We suffer when other men suffer, and the miseries of the poor in England, France, Germany and Austria wring our hearts; but there is glorious intelligence from the vine districts of France. Thank God! there will not be half a crop in most of them. In God we trust.

Signs of returning reason in the telegrams. Friday's papers brought the gratifying intelligence that one patriot has been found at St. Louis willing to devote himself for the good of the race by killing his mother-in-law. In the full flush of our pride in the American name over this heroic deed, later advices take us down with the statement that the man is a German; and we have put the Stars-and-Stripes at half-mast.

The church is rapidly rising towards an equality with the stage. The various church socials now advertise a "splendid programme," "first appearance of the amiable Miss Blank," "intermission," "refreshments in adjoining parlor," and so on. When we have Messrs. Hemphill and Stone brought out to sing "Le Sabre de Mon Pere" and "All My Eye," it will be near high tide.

When the French Admiral recently visited the New York naval station, instead of greeting him with the regulation salute of big guns, they exploded eleven torpedoes in his honor. The local paper, recording the exploit, does not fail to lay claim to the patent by declaring that this "was not only a novel, but an exclusively American idea!" Working back to first principles we shall soon get the fire-crackers and pop-guns.

Henry Thompson says, pathetically, that the art of frying is very ill understood. To be sure, they know more about it down below; but there is a pretty high level of attainment, on the surface of this planet, in the art of lying, and the two are not without a certain relation.

The daily papers report the arrest of a "dark-colored gamin," who was sent to the Industrial School; but nothing is said of the gaming, not in the dark, which never is arrested at all, at all, but goes on under the eyes of the police and the noses of the Press.

Springfield, Mass., has four Irish Keeners, women who do the howling at funerals. We must send for them at once; the home supply will give out after September 3d.

Reasons why you ought not to vote for John W. Taylor, as Superintendent of Schools.—These reasons are one: He is not going to be elected.

A DEFAULTER'S PARADISE.

Szered, a small town in Upper Hungary, must, remarks a contemporary, he a charming place of residence for persons who are addicted to the fascinating but immoral practice of "outrunning the constable." One part of this hurgh belongs to the county of Pressburg; the other is included within the territorial limits of Neutra county. When a householder of the Presshurg moiety finds that the Pandours, or Hungarian bum-bailiffs, of his own county are after him for arrears of taxes or dishonored bills of exchange, be alertly crosses from one side to the other of the High-street, and, like the famous Amri-Omri of the comic traveling menagerie, "loudly guffaws at his haffled pursuers.' All the legal documents in virtue of which his person can he forcibly segregated from his fellow-citizens must then be with solemn and time-devouring formalities made over to the executive authorities of the Neutra Comitat, which in due time sends its Pandours down to the Neutra moiety of Szered with peremptory orders to effect the capture of the wily defaulter. He, however, warned of their approach, recrosses the High-street with more than lightning promptitude, and from its Presshurg sidewalk smiles blandly at the disappointed Neutra officers of justice. As Hungarian counties are immensely tenacious of their local rights and privileges, and are seldom on the best of terms with one another, any Pandourian infringement of frontier is sure to he furiously resented by the authorities on either side of Szered High-street. Thus the conterminous Comitats are kept in a state of chronic litigation by reason of the professional zeal which from time to time prompts their sheriff's officers to execute a warrant on the wrong side of that thoroughfare.

It is rumored in circles where canards do not usually circulate, that Captain Carey has been sentenced to be shot by the court-marshal which tried him on charges arising out of the circumstances connected with the death of Prince Louis Napoleon. It is further said that Lord Chelmsford, not caring to be responsible for the carrying out of this sentence, has sent Captain Carey home, under arrest, so that the case may he dealt with by the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoips and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me,come; come buy,come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

O. Lawton & Co., 609 to 611 Market street, have brought out a perfect wonder of beauty and cheapness in their Royal Semi-Porcelain sets, complete fac-similes of French China, with the exquisite smoothness and sharp outline peculiar to that ware, and at the same time as strong and uniform in quality as can he desired. It is a marvel how this house can offer beautiful Dinner Sets of the Royal Semi-Porcelain at $7.50, and other goods at proportionate rates. If any one feature of housekeeping reveals the taste and love of harmony, it is surely the finish of the dinner-table; and this resides above all in the form and style of the china service. Lawton & Co. have made it possible for every one to gratify an elegant taste, and cultivate the sense of beauty without wastefulness.

The difficulty between Senators Conkling and Sprague excites the greatest interest, and bets are even as to the result, while considerable disappointment is expressed at the plentiful lack of strong talk in both men. It is feared that Conkling's supply of blackguard epithets was fired away at Lamar, and regret is felt that the limited area of Rhode Island affords no room for the spread of Sprague's profanity. However this may be, it is certain that a little generous stimulant is needed; and admirers of the Senate are about to forward California's finest whisky from F. & P. J. Cassiu's stock of O. K. Golden Plantation.

Heyl, the grave-robber of Ohio, has been pardoned. He may be used for looking up voters at the coming election.

The Long Branch Baths are daily growing in favor with the public. Here is the largest sheet of water, as blue and clear as the sea of the tropics, and with a fine, sandy bottom. The pumps force in additional water after every high tide, so that the depth is always exceptionally great and regular. The accommodations for comfort and convenience are superior to those of any establishment in the State, and the pleasant temperature of the water makes bathing in them a delight as well as a tonic. Seclusion, cleanliness, fresh air and beautiful scenery make this the most charming resort in the neighborhood of the city.

Every London newspaper is filled with gossip, with guesses, with reports about Sara Bernhardt. She is the original of the famous story about the person who was so thin that four looking-glasses were needed to get one reflection. It is a fact that Sara B. never materializes for less than one hundred persons at a time; a smaller battery of eyes being unable to seize her outline; but Bradley & Rulofson, 429 Montgomery street, have brought their art to such a pitch of perfection that they can photograph her as she really is, genius, thinness, fascination and all. They are the only house that can do this.

At the grand reception, on Tuesday last, the matchless style and finish of the hats worn by the three belles of our fair city were the theme of endless comment and admiration. Such exquisite taste and such perfect fits have not been general, even in this fastidious community; and the ladies agreed at once that no one but Mrs. Skidmore, 1114 Market street, could have furnished such triumphs of skill and art. The Clearance Sale of her stock is going on with the most extraordinary activity; for she must make room for the large importations on the way.

The weather is against afternoon picnics.

De Lesseps says that the United States will not oppose the Panama Canal, because such a course would bring upon them the censure of the whole southern population of the New World; a Solid South worth taking into account. There is yet another reason for our not opposing this great work. It will bring us more directly into communication with the whole world, old and new, and all nations will see for themselves that Swain's, 213 Sutter street, is the best, most home-like, most comfortable restaurant on the continent. Service and cooking unequaled.

Napa Soda is the most searching and thorough corrective known, and the complaints incident to our changeable climate are most readily met and scattered by this most wholesome beverage. It should form the daily refreshment of all.

When the flow of inspiration ceases for a few moments, as it occasionally will, even in the brain of an editor, what can be so satisfactory as to feel that one is not obliged to sit with pen in the air, distilling wasted ink, till the divine rage returns? And this satisfaction is his who carries a MacKinnon Pen, always ready for use, always ready to be withdrawn from use, without wasting the ghost of a drop of ink. Filled in the morning, the pen is in order for twenty-four hours hard writing. A. S. Spence & Co., 24 Geary street, are the agents.

That story about the pearl which Cleopatra drank has always been doubted by scientific and truly skeptical minds; and the plausible explanation of the story, offered by Von Geschunack, is now generally accepted. This is to the effect that Cleopatra's favorite table wine was so exquisitely light and pure that it was called the "Pearl;" and the name naturally made the story. The Gerke Wine is the modern representation of this delicious beverage, and Landsberger knows that it is probably superior to its prototype.

The system is often so rapidly reduced by a severe attack of Diarrhea, or other Affection of the Bowels, as to get almost beyond the reach of medicine, before the patient can realize the necessity of looking about him for a remedy. Better keep by you Dr. Jayne's Carminative Balsam, a safe curative for Asiatic Cholera, Cramps, Dysentery, etc., and thus be prudently prepared to treat these complaints on their first appearance. Sold by Crane & Brigham, San Francisco.

Darwin is at work on a biography of his grandfather, Dr. Erasmus Darwin, who was a connecting family link.

The colored exodus continues, and even seems to grow, and there is real danger that the people left in the Southern States will starve for want of some one to do the cooking. Under these conditions, it is the duty of philanthropists to introduce at once a full supply of Montanya's Union Ranges, which almost do their own cooking, so perfectly simple, so easily managed are they. With one of these in the house, a lady can smile superior to the want of Bridget or the departure of Phillis.

The Mormon problem has exercised the wits of our statesmen for many years, to the serious damage of the wits, while the problem remains as healthy as ever; and yet the solution of it is as simple as two and two. Messrs. Chas. Langley & Co. have only to supply the Mormon ladies with Mme. Rachel's Enamel Bloom, and the Gentiles would rush in like the old Romans and carry off the beauties. In twenty-four hours there would not be a second wife in Utah.

The ex-Khedive is not to be allowed to return to the flesh-pots of Egypt, and will have to console himself with the pleasures of Naples, in the bosom of his family, or perhaps we should say, in the bosom of the regiment. Turk as he is, Ismail has some notions of civilized life. He is fond of the opera, and of balls; and he will order his hats of White, 614 Commercial street.

American managers look upon Sara Bernhardt as a future bone-anza.

McNally & Hawkins, Market street, under Grand Hotel, have just received a large importation of the newest and most striking styles in chandeliers, gas fittings, brackets, faucets, standard lamps and other articles in their line. Their store is a gallery well worth a visit; and they maintain their position as the Pioneer house, at the head of all in the plumbing business.

INFLUENCE.

They tell us that each pebble dropped
On ocean's glassy breast
Must make a pulse in boundless deep
Whose ripples never rest,
But ever sweep through coral caves;
Or break on distant sands;
Or kiss cold faces which the deep
Holds far from loving hands;
Or eddy round the treasure lost
Which her calm bosom hides,
Yet still forever ebbs and flows
Upon the changing tides.
They tell us that each word we speak,
Though ne'er so softly said,
Shall still be throbbing thro' the air
Long after we are dead;
And that, although we hear them not,
Around us ever ring
The laugh and sigh of long ago
The shifting breezes bring.

It may be that with mighty word,
Like whirlwinds on the deep,
We stir the hearts of other men.
And rouse them from their sleep.
It may be that each word we speak,
Like an echo on the air,
Though scarcely heeded when 'tis said,
Yet leaves its impress there.
Howe'er this be, 'tis God's decree
We cannot live alone;
No one can fold his arms and say,
"My life is all my own."
The life of each is bound to all
By cords we cannot sever—
A ripple that shall never cease
Upon Time's mighty river.
But, like the pulses of the tide,
Or the air which echoes still,
Must the words and deeds of each of us
The lives of others fill.

——The Rev. de Witt Talmage is at present starring about the country under the patronage of various pious lords and ladies, who publicly refer to him as "the distinguished American divine," "the celebrated transatlantic orator," and the like. As American divines go, he may be a distinguished representative of the species; but that he can be called a "celebrated orator" in any true sense of the word is out of the question. The only merit of his style is a certain florid, Daily Telegraphic sort of ornamentation which as soon palls upon the ear as stucco arabesques do upon the eye; his voice is coarse and unmusical, and his pronunciation disfigured by a full-flavored American twang. He drops his final g's in words ending in "ing," talks of when he was "on the haddle-field," remarks that to pious lords and ladies it will some day be said: "Yer did it ter me," and declares children to be his "larms." Altogether, the Rev. de Witt Talmage struck us, when we heard him, as being a sort of Yankee Chadhand, who has got a little into society.—London Truth.——The graves of the Bonapartes are strangely distributed. The great Bonaparte's remains rested for years in the isle of St. Helena, while his son the young King of Rome found a tomb in Vienna. The late Emperor's father was buried at St. Leu, near Paris, and his mother in Rome. Napoleon III. sleeps his last sleep at Chiselhurst. At St. Leu also were interred Louis, who died in 1846, and Napoleon Charles, his son, who died in 1831. At Viterbo lie the ashes of Lucien, who departed life in 1841, and at Florence those of Joseph, 1844; Pauline, 1825; Caroline, 1839; Charlotte, 1839; Jerome Napoleon, Catherine of Wurtemburg, Jerome's second wife, and Julie, the wife of Joseph. Cardinal Fesch and Charles Jerome died in Austria. Josephine slumbers in the little church of Ruel, at Malmaison. Achille Murat left his bones in Florida, and the grave of the Murat was dug by a gang of Calabrian assassins. Marie Louise lies at Parma; and Christine, the first wife of Louis, at Du Plessis, while the last direct scion of the house of Bonaparte has found a temporary resting-place in South Africa.—Melbourne Leader.——It is well known that large numbers of Trichina spiralis have been detected in cured meats imported into Alsace from America. In Switzerland, too, the discovery has been made that American hams are full of the trichina, and a government commission has been appointed to decide upon the precautionary measures to be taken. The cantonal authorities are recommended to warn the people against the use of American hams, especially in the half raw state, and to arm the police with discretionary powers over the sale of the article.——The New York Popular Science Monthly says: Mr. A. R. Wallace calls attention to an interesting observation made by Charles Waterton, which throws some light on the origin of one of the superstitions of natural history. Ever since the time of Aristotle, at least, the belief has prevailed that the bird known as the "goat-sucker" (Caprimulgus) actually sucks goats or cows. According to Pliny, the goat-sucker "enters the fold and flies to the udders of the goats in order to suck the milk." The fact that the birds "fly to the udders" of the animals is confirmed by Waterton, but at the same time he shows how erroneous is the inference that they suck the milk. "I am fully persuaded," writes that ingenious observer, "that these innocent little birds never suck the herds, for when they approach them, and jump up at their udders, it is to catch the flies and insects there. When the moon shone bright I would frequently go and stand within three yards of a cow, and distinctly see the caprimulgus catch the flies on its udder." In another place he writes: "When the moon shines bright you may have a fair opportunity of examining the goat-sucker. You will see it close by the cows, goats and sheep, jumping up every now and then under their bellies. Approach a little nearer—see how the nocturnal flies are tormenting the herd, and with what dexterity he springs up and catches them, as fast as they alight on the belly, legs, and udders of the animals. Observe how quiet they stand, and how sensible they seem of his good offices, for they neither strike him nor hit him with their tails, nor tread on him, nor try to drive him away as an uncivil intruder."

J. M. Litchfield, the well-known clothier, is a candidate before the Republican Nominating Convention for Supervisor of the Third Ward. Mr. Litchfield is honest and capable. His energetic characteristics and his business experience ought to render him an exceedingly available candidate.

TOXOPHOLOGY.

If archery can be called a sport, and there seems no reason why it should not be, it is most certainly the coming sport of a certain class of Americans. In England it has ever held its own, and when gunpowder took the place of the good old English long-bow, it ceased to be a weapon of warfare and became an entertaining companion. Nearly every English town of any note has its Archery Club, and no gentleman's park is without its lawn set aside for the especial purpose of archery. At the East, thanks chiefly to a few enthusiasts, such as Manrice Thompson and others, it has rapidly grown in favor among the better class of Americans. The Pacific Coast, never far behind in any matter of sport, is fast taking up the noble game, and already numbers among her toxopholites are shots who would hold their own in any company. So good, in fact, was the average shooting at the late tournament held in Oakland, that the Forest and Stream quoted them in full, and compared them most favorably with those made at the East.

Oakland boasts of two clubs—the Merry Foresters, at the head of which is Mr. D. O'Connell, and the Bow Club, composed chiefly of the Havens family. In San Francisco, the Pacific Club numbers some forty odd members, and embraces some fine long-distance shots, besides being able to boast of having produced the finest lady shot on the coast—Miss Craig. This lady won the gold arrow at the tournament, and is said to be improving in her shooting every day. The champion shot of the united clubs is Frank Havens, of Oakland. At short ranges he scores frequently 240 out of a possible 270, and at the sixty-yard range has made as high as 140.

The Sacramento State Fair Association has set aside $300 for archery prizes, and no doubt such a sum will call together all the crack long-bow shots in the State.

Santa Cruz has a club, and sent two worthy representatives to the tournament, Messrs. Button—father and son. These gentlemen shot with bows and arrows of their own make, and carried off a prize each.

San José and Sacramento have archery clubs, and numerous memberships. As a lawn game for both ladies and gentlemen, archery is far ahead of either croquet or lawn tennis, and the time is not far distant when every society lady will be anxious to reckon among her accomplishments the uses of the long-bow.

The following are the regulations adopted by the National Archery Association of America: Targets, 48 inches in diameter, with center of gold, four feet from the ground. Colors—Gold center, counting 9, and 9 6-10 inches in diameter; red, 7, and 4 8-10; blue, 5, same size; black, 3, do.; white, 1, do. Distances—Either "York Rounds," of 72 arrows each, at 100 yards, 48 at 80 yards, and 24 at 60 yards; or "American Rounds," 30 arrows each, at 40, 50 and 60 yards; "Columbia Rounds," for ladies, 24 arrows each, at 40, 50 and 60 yards.

MECHANICS' FOURTEENTH INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

On all hands it is agreed that on no former occasion have the various products of the State, or the mechanical appliances and new inventions, been so extensively displayed as now. There is much more of the active industries of San Francisco to be seen than in the last exposition. As one enters, the first objects to arrest attention are a huge display of ornamental wire-work, representing nearly all the finer use to which that material is ordinarily devoted. And here, in limine, let it be remarked, once for all—and the observation applies with equal force to nearly every object in the Fair,—why are not tickets stating the retail price of the objects affixed to them, and the addresses where their equals are to be found given? The absence of this information robs the show of more than one-half of its interest. The principal aspect of the show is Utilitarian. Naturally visitors expect to find rare specimens of the highest attainments in the useful and ornamental arts; but at all times, and especially at this, they seek to know the cost of what is there exposed for their admiration. Returning to the gorgeous display of wire-works, there are sofas which combine lightness with strength and durability, arbors ready for covering with climbing plants, and a great variety of bird-cages, etc., etc. Near by, on the right hand, is a large and interesting display of growing plants, fruits of all kinds in season, apples, pears, peaches, olives, oranges and shaddocks, and even tamarinds! On the higher shelves are wines and liquors, and the now well-known brandy made by General Naglee of San José. In the same front line is the grand display of the leading produce of Oregon. The collection has been brought together by the Land Department of the Oregon and California Railroad Company, and is located on the right of the center aisle at the Mission-street entrance. It comprises a vast and varied display of the different varieties of cereals and of grasses, both introduced into the State and indigenous to it, as well as whole canned salmon, woods available for useful and ornamental purposes; some minerals, such as cinnabar, iron ores, pig iron; a valuable oil for lubricating purposes, obtained from the heads of salmon. This exhibit will, in a few days, be rendered more interesting to those skilled in cereals, when the exhibit, now rapidly progressing under the auspices of the Chamber of Produce, shall be placed alongside it for comparison. And, when this has been made, we propose to return to the subject again. The display of new and improved machinery has never been equaled on any former occasion, and must be seen in motion as it is every afternoon, to be appreciated. Touching on the musical department, all we wish to say at present is, that the generally expressed opinion is, that it is satisfactory—and that says a good deal for the selections and execution.

SOUTH UTAH.

This corporation was formed in 1876, and became the owner of the mine known as the Brooklyn Tunnel, situated between the Sierra Nevada and the Utah mines on the Comstock, and contains one thousand feet of ground. The tunnel is in about 330 feet, and must be pushed in about 100 feet to strike the ledge. The shaft is started, and down about 100 feet from the tunnel level. The mine may be worked through the Phil. Sheridan shaft if it becomes necessary to prospect the lower levels immediately. The company is out of debt, and any future expense will be to develop the mine alone. The mine is so favorably situated with Sierra Nevada and Utah, that a discovery of a bonanza in either of those mines will make the South Utah very valuable, and the possibilities of the stock are very great. We understand that active operations will soon be commenced, and considering the favorable condition of the North End mines, we expect to hear of the South Utah coming into prominence.

AFFLICTED MEMPHIS.

Editor "News Letter": In a paragraph in one of your contemporaries I read this morning some remarks on the cause of yellow fever, which, to some extent, I can confirm, by reliable information received, and by personal observation. The writer assumes what is called the "germ theory" to account for the phenomena; and to that view most modern investigators are favorable. While the specific germs themselves have probably never yet been revealed by our best microscopes, under the most delicate manipulation, what seems strongly to fortify the assumption is the constant presence of a minute, very low form of life, called bacteria, in waters where cholera and malignant fevers are common. The suggestion of the writer is, that whatever the germs may be that convey the miasma from person to person and place to place, there was no yellow fever during the civil war where discharges of cannon and musketry were prevalent, and he attributes the absence of it to concussion of the air by the discharges. Now, when the cholera, which swept over Europe in 1832-3, was raging in that notoriously dirty city, Lisbon, in a quarter lying below Fort St. George, from which are fired nearly every day one or more salutes by cannon, hardly a case—I have heard it denied that there was a case of cholera in any house above which the salutes were fired. In 1837-8-9, each year there was an outbreak of malignant typhus fever, yet, to my knowledge, the above quarter was quite exempt. Whatever may be the effect of concussion in destroying miasma, it is certain that the loudest peals of thunder have been unavailable to arrest its influence. There would, then, seem to remain only the action of the gases generated in the decomposition of gunpowder. The nature of these in a nascent state is known to be exceedingly energetic. It certainly would be worth the trouble and expense to try the effect of discharges of gunpowder in the infected quarters of the city.

SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, 1879.

The following communication has been received, under date of 13th inst., and shows, not for the first time, how highly the Royal Commissioners appreciate the efforts being made to form a collection of objects representative of the industries of the Pacific Coast, and how desirous they are to see for themselves the progress hitherto made by a State having many points, both of soil and climate, similar to their own. In response to an appeal made by Mr. Jennings to the Produce Exchange, that body has undertaken to form a representative exhibit of all the cereals of the State as soon as the new crop comes fairly to market. It is believed that every thing of this nature will be in a position to be placed in the Mechanics' Fair about next Tuesday, previous to being packed along with the splendid exhibit from Oregon for transmission:

INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION, 1879,
SYDNEY, July 17, 1879.

JOHN JENNINGS, ESQ.,—Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 9th June, enclosing extracts from California papers, from which I see that the California Committee are still unremitting in their endeavors to secure a complete and thorough representation from that State at the Sydney Exhibition. I beg to call your attention to the Sydney Morning Herald summary, transmitted by the present opportunity, from which you will learn that so far most satisfactory progress is being made in all matters connected with the Exhibition, and there is every probability of its proving an immense success. I beg that you will express on my behalf to your coadjutors on the California Committee the thanks of this Commission for their public-spirited labors, and the personal obligation I feel myself under. I have the honor to be, etc.,

P. A. JENNINGS, Executive Commissioner.

CUMBERLAND MINE.

At the office of the Cumberland Mining Company, 417 California street, San Francisco, a box of ore has been received direct from the mine in Arizona. It consists of 53 specimens taken from the face of a nine-foot cross cut from shaft 1. The assays on this rock, which is the dark quartz, will run very high, into the hundreds, perhaps thousands of dollars to the ton. If this body of ore should run all the distance from shaft 1 to shaft 3 (700 feet), the value of this plum alone will be many millions of dollars. The ore body in this shaft widens, as depth is attained, at the rate of 3 inches to every foot of depth. Surely, Superintendent Collins, in his Report No. 2, is right when he said: "Should this mine continue to produce ore like that already obtained, the value of the Cumberland Mine will be beyond calculation!" President Ciprico is exultant.

Breeze & Loughran, Washington and Davis streets, have the finest hams ever seen in this market—small, not more than 10 or 12 pounds each, high-flavored, juicy and firm—exactly the hams that a grocer works off without difficulty, since they suit the times both in quality and price. All who appreciate what is good should ask for Whittaker's New Cure. There has been nothing like them, and the demand, among the knowing ones, is constantly on the increase. Messrs. Breeze & Loughran will make every effort to keep up their stock in the face of the demand.

ADVANCE OF ELECTRICITY.

Electricity, theoretical and applied, is to the intellect and advantage of mankind in this century what the discovery and practical application of steam power was to the last. Through Volta, Torricelli, Franklin, Farraday, Edison, and, last but not least, Professor Bell, the capabilities of this wonderful power of nature have been developed so far; but what its new revelations may be who can tell? By the subjoined extract it will be seen that it has been so applied in America as to double the working hours at the placer mines at Smartsville, Nevada:

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT IN MINING.—The first electric light employed in the Western mines of America was placed on the Deer Creek placer claim of the Excelsior Water Company at Smartsville, Nevada, on the 10th of last April. A 12,000 candle power Brush machine was put in operation, and three lights of 3,000 candle power each were placed in prominent positions upon the claim. Although the night was very dark, the lights shed a brilliant light around, and enabled the miners to work as readily as during the day. Until this experiment, the mines had to shut down during the night, but now the company expects to work both night and day. Nevada and Yuba counties have many hydraulic mining companies, and several of them have announced their desire to use the new light if the Excelsior Company is thoroughly satisfied with their machine. The cost of lighting the claim by electricity is said to be 16 cents an hour.

It will interest our readers to know a few facts concerning the history of the deep sea lines, and the gratifying pecuniary success which has attended one of the companies at least. Reports by the other companies, except those of the line across Australia, and its deep sea cable to Banjowangie, are not to hand. It has, however, been eminently successful, though it was at first doubted whether it would not soon be sawu in pieces on the rough bottom of the shallow coral sea, and so require frequent repairs. The longest cable ever laid, and which is still in good working order, was laid from Brest, in France, to St. Pierre Island, 2,584 knots in length, or 732 knots longer than the 1866 Atlantic line. In 1873 a cable was laid from Ireland to Newfoundland, 1,877 knots in length; and in 1874 two cables were laid, the one by the Telegraphic Construction and Maintenance Company, for the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, 1,837 knots in length, from their station at Valentia, Ireland, to that at Newfoundland; and the other by Siemens Brothers, for the Direct United States Cable Company, from Balliuskellings Bay, Ireland, to Torbay, Nova Scotia, 2,422 knots in length. Altogether seven lines, representing about 18,000 knots of cable, have been laid across the North Atlantic Ocean, of which at present four are in working order, namely: the 1869, 1873 and two 1874. All attempts have failed hitherto to repair any of the other three.

Their pecuniary success is shown in the instance of the Anglo-American Company, whose brief report we extract from the columns of the Electrician, July 10th, ult.:

ANGLO-AMERICAN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Anglo-American Telegraph Company, Limited, held on the 11th inst., it was resolved (after reserving £37,500 for the renewal fund) to declare an interim dividend, for the quarter ending the 30th June, of 1¼ per cent. on the consolidated stock, and 2½ per cent. on the preferred stock, both free of income tax, and payable on the 1st of August to the shareholders registered on the 1st of July. This leaves an estimated balance of £10,000 to he carried forward to next quarter's account.

Frank Davidson was hanged recently in Missouri for murdering a man at a picoic. Before the execution, a local paper records: "Elder Isham Tanner, of Johnson county, the man Davidson was working for when he killed his victim, went to Sedalia and baptized him in the Baptist Church before a small but appreciative audience."

OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

A correspondent enjoys singular privileges in the plural number. Nohody knows who he is, why he left his country, what moves him to write, or who may have kicked him in the foreign, far land where he rhetorically flaunts the stars and stripes in the face of all creation. Nohody knows any of these things, but any one can gness at the prohable social standing of the person who does the Bulletin's special correspondenee from Japan. In the long letter, published in that paper on the 5th inst., is an accouut of Gen. Grant's reception at Tokio, in the midst of rejoicings and salutes and universal turn-out of the population, delighting to honor the Lord's annointed. Natives and foreigners were full of smiles and happiness, all but the sulky John Bulls, if we are to helieve this veracious letter-writer. He says:

"Most of the European men-of-war in the harhor, excepting the English, fired salutes also. * * * The British Government has noted with jealous watchfulness the growth of public sentiment, of late, in Japan and the other Asiatic nations. That sentiment is friendly to the United States, and hostile to England."

So far as the omission of the salute is concerned, it seems likely to he true. The English fired away so much powder at home and in India, in saluting General Grant, that the War Office has been forced to economize in tbis direction. It was, therefore, poverty which compelled the unfortunate Britisb to he silent; and the man who can sneer at honest poverty is a base wretch, etc.

As for the growth of public sentiment in Japan and the other Asiatic nations, in the direction of hostility to England and friendliness to the United States, who can douht it? The Japanese have no wits of their own to observe the cordial American feeling toward the Chinese, greeted, as they land among us, with discursive brickhats; and the public opinion of Japan must he strongly prejudiced in our favor hy the reports of native gentlemen, who have been slapped on the shoulder hy our polished shopkeepers, and saluted as "John." No doubt tbere is in all Asia a wholesome respect for our naval strength, by contrast with the feeble display of the arrogant English; and putting these together, how can the Japanese refrain from loving a nation which combines the perfection of delicate courtesy with omnipresent and over-mastering power?

MITCHELL'S MAGIC LOTION.

Quick and sure cure for bruises and sprains--relieves the pain instantly; perfectly harmless; will prevent the eye turning dark after a hlow; good for aching feet; gives instant relief from soreness after horseback riding or any over-exertion; very serviceable as a gargle after speaking or singing. Mr. A. W. Hussey, Stock Broker, says: "After my runaway accident, my eye was much discolored and I could not bend my knee. The next day after using your Lotion, my knee was as well as ever and the bruise marks nearly gone from the eye. It is wonderful stuff and everybody ought to know about it." Sold by all Druggists and by GEORGE H. MITCHELL, 507 California street. Price, 25 cents. Aug. 2.

"BIZ."

We are pleased to remark a decided improvement in trade circles. The volume of business with the interior of our own State, Oregon, Washington and territories adjoining upon the Pacific Slope, is steadily growing in its extent and value. Money is very plentiful in all our reservoirs, but the trouble is to obtain satisfactory and available secureties to draw it out. Interest rates are lower than ever before upon this coast, but the difficulty is to procure gilt-edge Notes, Bonds, etc., etc., upon which bankers and others will loan their surplus funds. As for Mining Stocks, the rate established for loans is far below former averages, and thus holds out small inducements to operators of limited capital. Real Estate loans are always in order at the Savings Banks, but they seek for productive property in the city with large margins. We think, however, that there is a better and more cheering outlook before us for Real Estate in desirable building localities—notably those on California-Street Hill and the lines of Cable Railroads.

The Hawaiian traffic with this coast appears to be steadily aggressive. The arrivals from the Sandwich Islands since our last include those of the ship Republic, 24 days from Honolulu, with 3,000 bags of Sugar, etc.; bark D. C. Murray, 32 days from same, with 4,716 bags and 557 kegs Sugar, 964 bags Rice, etc.; bark Ella, from same, with 4,646 goat skins, 8,072 pkgs Sugar, 270 bags Rice, etc.; also Pacific Mail Steamship Australia, from Honolulu, with 7,465 bags and 1,568 kegs Sugar, 100 bags Rice and 493 bags Bananas. In return for this, which comes in free of duty under the Hawaiian Reciprocity Treaty, we send to the Islands Flour, Provisions, Machinery, etc. In fact, they draw largely upon us for all kinds of goods, wares and merchandise, and really to an extent that we fear the Islanders are over-trading—going too fast.

As regards merchandise marts, we remark a good consumptive demand for Coffee, at fair prices. At auction, 175 bags Rio sold at 15c down to 14½c, according to quality. The Panama steamer, Granada, brought up 1,043 bags Rio from New York; also 700 bags of Central American. Our market exhibits a good degree of firmness, by reason of light imports, the past six months, as compared with same period in past years. The statistical position of the market is good for the balance of the year. Present range of price for Central American, 14@16½c, according to quality.

Sugar.—The Refineries make no change in schedule rate, evidently intending to punish those of our grocers who, to keep up assortments, continue to draw supplies from New York. As before stated, several thousand bbls. Refined were bought in New York, to come here via the Isthmus and Cape Horn, although other parcels, but to a limited extent, continue to come by rail. We quote Whites, 9⅞@10c; Yellow and Golden, 8½@7½c. Hawaiian rules from 6 to 8c, according to grade.

Rice.—Imports from Hongkong continue to be large, causing a depressed market. The ship Edith, from Hongkong, was the last arrival, with 41,000 bags. Price, 4⅝ for mixed, 5¼@5½c. for China. Hawaiian imports of late have been less than was expected—say 3,000 bags—the week past. Price, 5¼c for new crop.

Teas.—Stocks are very light for the season. The public sale last week, and duly noted by us, gives much strength and confidence to holders. We quote standard Japan paper at 35@37½c.

Tobacco.—There is a good trade demand for all manufactured stock. Competition seems to be greater than ever. Several new Eastern competitions, coupled with an army of runners scouring the country, drumming up customers at low prices.

Coal.—The miners strike at Seattle, Washington Territory, cuts off a very large and important source of supplies, and this in turn causes quite a scarcity of Steam Coals and some temporary advance in price. During the week we have had several arrivals from the Colonies. Brier Holme, from Newcastle, N. S. W., with 1,260 tons; Eva H. Fisk, from same, with 694 tons. This latter cargo sold at $7 25, which is an advance of $1 per ton over previous sales to arrive of Sydney Steam. The bark Rebecca, from Sydney, is also to hand with 752 tons Shale. Supplies from British Columbia are continued to a fair extent. The general market for Coal is strong.

Quicksilver.—The market is firm at 35c, with considerable sales for the next outgoing steamer to Hongkong, on the 23d inst. Our stocks are light—the output less than for years past, owing chiefly to the low prices ruling. The world's consumption has, no doubt, been largely increased by the low rates ruling for the past year or two; still, many of our mines cannot afford to run their works to a profit at much less than 45@50c. To this end efforts are making to advance rates by a co-operation of interests.

Borax.—There are large orders here from England and for New York, but the out-put is, by agreement, limited to 100 tons per month. Of refined, the August and September out-put has been sold for New York. Probably there are at date unexecuted orders here for at least 1,000 tons for forward delivery, at prices a shade under fixed rates of 6c to 8c for lots of 10 tons and upwards, but the resident agents refuse to sell, looking for better prices ere long.

Salmon.—Oregon advices of August 1st estimate the season's catch at 448,000 cases. Our estimate puts it at 440,000 cases.

Shipped direct from River to Liverpool	136,685
Cases	303,315
Received in this city	131,812
Now in store 40,000 cases	171,503

The steamship Oregon, on her last trip, brought us 11,000 cases Salmon. These are held generally at $1 05@1 07½ per dozen 1-lb-cans, but buyers generally offer but $1, with no sales. The future of the Salmon Market now depends upon holders. The stock remaining is thought to be in strong hands, and it is hoped that the Eastern demand will be quite sufficient to take off our surplus.

Bags.—A week since, an auction sale was held of 27,500 imported Standard Burlap Grain Sacks, and these sold to one party at 10½c, cash. Since then, other sales from private hands have been concluded, at 10⅝@10¾c, which is below combination prices. Yesterday another lot of Standard Bags was offered at auction, of 100 bales, thus showing a feeling of restless uneasiness upon the part of holders. The present nominal price of imported Bags is 11@11¼c, but thus far during the month of August comparatively little business has been done, showing that the country is for the moment well stocked with containers.

Freights and Charters.—Tonnage has increased some during the week by reason of numerous arrivals of deep water vessels. Very few Grain charters have been thrown upon the market, yet ship owners are firm in asking 45s. for wood, and 47s. 6d. for iron vessels to a direct port, Havre or Liverpool, with the usual additions for ports of call, etc. At this writing, our disengaged fleet numbers 31 vessels of 40,000 tons tonnage; on the herth 26 vessels of 33,000 tons register. The fleet in sight to arrive is 160,000 tons; same time 1878, 159,000 tons; same time 1877, 180,000 tons.

Breadstuffs.—About 1,000 tons of shipping extras have been secured for the Gaelic, to sail for Hongkong on the 23d inst.; price, $4 75@$5. We quote Common Superfine, $4@4 25; Extra Superfine, $4 50@$4 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $5@5 50. The market is by no means active.

Wheat.—The arrivals are quite liberal. Exports in July, 402,000 centals, against 350,000 ctls. same time last year. Prices during the week have shaded off from $1 75, the highest, to $1 60@$1 65 ₱ ctl., with sales yesterday of 1,000 tons for export at $1 65. Millers pay $1 70@$1 75 for the pick of the market.

Barley.—The market is without special movement. Chevalier commands $1 50@$1 75 for dark and bright respectively. Brewing, $90@$1 05 for new and old respectively. Feed, 70@75c per ctl.

Oats.—There is no life to the market. Sales, to a limited extent, at $1 25@$1 50 ₱ ctl.

Corn.—Market sluggish, at 75@85c ₱ ctl.

Hops.—There are buyers of new crop in market at 20c., and this price has been paid in Washington Territory for lots to arrive here.

Potatoes.—There has been quite a decided rise in prices during the week. Sales at 40@50c ₱ ctl. for good to choice. The distillers buy at 15 to 30c for common stock new crop.

Butter, Cheese and Eggs.—There has been a notable rise in Butter during the week, good to choice Dairy in rolls now held at 22½c@27½c. Cheese, 10c@12½c. Eggs, 25c@30c.

Wool.—A few large purchases of choice Northern Fleece have been made during the week, say 1,500,000 lbs, one half of this taken by the Mission-Pioneer Mills Consolidated. We quote best Oregon Valley at 24c@26c; Eastern Oregon, 19c@20c; Humboldt, 25c@26c.

Hides—Good demand; Dry, 16c@16½c.

Tallow—Market dull at 5c@5½c; Choice Refined, 8c@8½c.

Fruits.—The market continues to be copiously supplied with Grapes in variety, Apples, Blackberries, Peaches, Plums, Nectarines, etc. From Sydney, by steamer, we received 700 boxes Lemons and 75 boxes Oranges, and from the Sandwich Islands 500 bunches Bananas, etc. Prices rule low for all kinds, giving our local canneries a fine show for a big canning.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 70, as compared with 80 last, and 89 for the corresponding week last year. Males, 44; females, 26; Chinese, 6. There were 4 suicides. The zymotics were: Dyptheria 4, typhoid fever 5. The other principal causes were: Phthisis 10, pneumonia 6, infantile convulsions 6, heart disease 3, alcoholism 2, paralysis 2, and 1 each of apoplexy, brain disease, bronchitis, enteritis, hydrocephalus, jaundice, kidney disease, congestion of the lungs and scrofula. There was no death in the Third Ward, and but 1 in the Fifth; there were 9 in the Tenth and 10 in the Eleventh Wards. Infantile mortality was very low. The only prevailing disorder is typhoid fever.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Unerring Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s new circular. The combination method, which this firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1873, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent.; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent.; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 29th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. Stocks and bonds wanted. Government bonds supplied.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Shooting.—Our reports from all over the State say that quail promise to be uncommonly plentiful. Broods are large, but backward. There will be lots of small quail, on the opening of the season, unfit for the gun. We hope the sportsmen will spare them. Messrs. Paine & Backwith, duck-shooters, have leased the Suisun marshes, comprising 5,000 acres, extending from Bridgeport on the north, to Cordelia Slough at its outlet on the south, and from Suisun Creek proper on the east, to the String Ponds on the west. They have placed notices all over the property, warning all trespassers, both amateur and regular hunters, against shooting, and intend inforcing their rights.—Ducks promise to be unusually plentiful this season, a good many of the migratory ducks, widgeon, sprigs and green-winged teal, having arrived on our marshes already in quantities.—Several pigeon matches came off at Baxter's last Sunday. The first, between Lambert and C. Robinson, was won by the former. Messrs. C. Robinson, W. Hammond and Lambert then shot a freeze-out, which was won by Robinson, who was also victorious in an eight-bird match against the same gentlemen. M. Williams and Frank Maskey shot at twelve glass balls for $50 a side. Williams won; score, 12 to 8. There will be a match to-morrow at Baxter's, for $100 aside, between J. Stack, of the Cosmopolitan Club, and C. Conrad, of the California Club, twelve birds each.—There are already a number of good shots entered for the coming pigeon tournament, to be held at Sacramento during the Fair.—Why do not the State Fair Committee arrange an inter-State rifle shooting tournament?

Pedestrianism.—California has the fever very bad. All over the State matches are constantly coming off, both for medals, glory and gate money—especially the latter.—The members of Company F, Second Regiment, have arranged a twenty-mile go-as-you-please match, to come off at the Oakland Race Track next week, for a purse of $25, to be divided amongst the first three.—The Yuma Indians that we mentioned last week as having been entered for the Astley Belt contest, will give an exhibition here before leaving for the East.—There will be an amateur ten-hour go-as-you-please match, for an advertised purse of $100, at San Jose to-day.—A man named Frank Reynolds claims to have walked a mile in 6 minutes 41 seconds last week at Redwood City. If Frank will come to San Francisco and walk a mile under 7 minutes he can break the city.—There are already eight entries paid for the coming six-day tournament under the management of Messrs. Lawton and McNeil. It is an assured success. Over twenty are expected to start.—Madame Tourtilott, who walked against Von Berg at Virginia City, claims that besides being drugged with a poisoned orange, she was cheated in the scoring—as much as sixteen miles being credited to Von Berg for one hour's walking. It is not likely that a female pedestrian contest will ever again create any enthusiasm on this coast.—Entries for the Astley Belt contest close on the 21st inst. All entrance fees must be paid to the London Sporting Life by that date.—Callahan, winner of the fourth prize in the late six-day walk, is matched to walk twenty miles against two amateurs, the race to come off at Badger's Park, Sunday.—The match between Johnny Igo and the mare, "Nell Briordy," is off. Johnny had a trial, running behind a three-minute horse, and found he had no chance to win.—Fredermeyer, the wheelbarrow fiend, has been let loose at the American Institute for a six-day hippodrome. He finishes to-night.

Yachting.—Last Saturday's regatta was one of the most successful ever held here. The steam tug Neptune carried the committee (consisting of Commodore Harrison, J. Gutte, E. O. Wiener, H. B. Underhill, J. M. Shotwell and J. C. Uhler,) over the course. The Anheuser, Mr. J. Gutte's new yacht, won the prize flag; time, 3 hrs. 34 min. ½ sec.; Consuelo second, in 3 hrs. 41 min. 9½ sec.; Swan third, 3 hrs. 50 min. 52 sec.; Zarepa, 3 hrs. 58 min. 21½ sec.; Magic, 3 hrs. 58 min. 21 sec.; Pearl, 4 hrs. 8 sec.; Frolic, 4 hrs. 13 min. 17 sec.; Fawn, 4 hrs. 15 min. 17 sec.; Clara, 4 hrs. 2 min. 23 sec.; Lively, 4 hrs. 4 min. 54½ sec.: Twilight, 4 hrs. 5 min. 20 sec., Virgin, 4 hrs. 5 min. 4 sec.; Mist, 4 hrs. 20 min. 49 sec.; Mollie, 4 hrs. 8 min. 35 sec.—The owners of the Consuelo are desirous of making a match with the O'Connor for $1.000 a side. They claim that tbeir boat was not in good trim in the last race.—There is a prospect of a race between the Anheuser and the O'Connor.—There will be a race for models at Richardson's Bay, Saucelito, to-day, the start to he made from the San Francisco Yacht Clnb house at 1:30 P. M. There will be two prizes given for large models measuring over 44 inches. First prize, $100; second prize, a silver cnp. Also prize for a special class of large models and for boats under 22 incbes. Entries can be made np to the bour of starting.

Swimming.—Captain Webb is in New York. He is willing to swim auy man in Ameriea for a distance of twenty miles. He will most likely come to this coast before Christmas, in which case Daily says he will give him a race.—The Neptune Club's gold medal was won last Sunday by Mr. Dean. It will be competed for again Sunday, September 11th.—W. Beckwith, of London, has just won the 500-yards' championship of England. He challenges any man in the world to swim, for $500 a side, any reasonable distance. If his challenge is not accepted in England before Novemher, he eontemplates coming to tbe United States.—Last Wednesday Captain Webb swam from Sandy Hook to Manhattan Beach, Coney Island.—W. H. Daily will he in San Francisco Monday next, and will at once go on East to arrange a swim witb Captain Webb.

Baseball.—The play between the Knickerhockers and Omahas attracted an immense crowd to the Recreation Grounds last Sunday. The game was very exciting, tbe Knickerbockers winning simply through an over-throw. Score, 3 to 0.—The Omaha Clnb have disbanded, and several members have entered clubs here.—Other games last Suuday: Star vs. Eagle, score 7 to 3; California vs. Oakland, score 6 to 1. Athletic vs. Oakland, last Saturday, score 23 to 5.—Games to-morrow: At tbe Recreation Grounds, Knickerhoker vs. Reno; at Oakland, Mutual vs. Athletic and Omahas vs. Oaklands.—Arrangements are in progress for a match between the Knickerhockers and Californias.

Fishing.—Anglers complain that the fish in Lake Tahoe are so glutted with the grasshoppers that jnmp into the lake that they will not hite.—August is the hest month in the year for salt water fishing.—Rock cod are plentiful round Black Point.—Campbell's Creek, Saratoga, Santa Clara county, is full of fine game trout that hite freely.

Bicycling.—John Keen, of London, rode a race of 25 miles with W. Phillips, of Wolverhampton, July 16th. Keen won in 1h. 23m. 13s.—the hest time on record by 30 seconds.—The S. F. Bicycle Clnb confine themselves to road work. Tbey have some riders who wonld make a good showing if a race could be arranged.

Rowing.—There is little doing in rowing circles, except practice for the St. George's Regatta.—The Ariels have a good crew, and are doing splendid work.—The Neptune Club practice every day at North Beach.—Tho St. George's crew are in constant practice, rowing every day on Oakland Creek.—Rowing regatta at Sacramento during the Fair.

Archery.—At Gilroy two clnbs are being formed.—Tho Eureka Clnb, of Sacramento, elected officers last week: Mr. Thomas Fish, captain; Mr. N. B. Berry, secretary.—Mr. Leftwich was appointed by the Sacramento Clubs to confer with the San Francisco and other clubs respecting the coming tournament at the State Fair.

Boxing.—At last the glove contest between Mike Donovan and William McClellan is definitely settled to come off at Platt's Hall, next Monday evening. W. Edwards and A. Chambers have been induced to remain here to second McClellan, but will leave immediately after the fight.

THE COMMITTEE ON HARD TIMES.

The Congressional inquirers, who are at present in our city, have been aptly termed a committee on hard times. They are men with a mission. Tbey think workingmen are not nearly as prosperous as they ought to be, and they want to find out just the reason of it. Well, if they apply themselves to tbat task without prepossessions or prejudices, but with a simple desire to arrive at the truth, they will he engaging themselves in a good work. Not unnaturally they have extended their inquiries to the Pacific Coast. This is the home par excellence of the dissatisfied workingman. It is here that he is in open rebellion against capital. With us he is organized for mischief. He has hegotten a communistic constitution, and is now struggling hard for power to tax other people's property, and for control of the City and State Treasuries. He affects to believe that debasing capital will exalt labor, and be seeks to accomplish tbis hy controlling the offices. Ouly let him run things generally, and he will increase employment and enbance wages. He stops not to inquire into the connection between cause and effect; into the relations which capital and labor naturally bear to each other. He listens only to the agitators of the Sand-lots, who tell him that the punishment of capital means the reward of labor. If the Congressional Committee of Inquiry will ventilate these heresies, and put tbe workingman's leaders to the necessity of declaring wbat they want, in exact language, good cannot fail to come of it. Evidence ought first of all to he demanded of the workingman that be is really as hadly off as he makes out. If he establishes that position, which we are well assured he cannot, then the duty is upon him to show that intimidating capital by an organized rebellion against the existing order of things, is a movement that will inure to his benefit. Of conrse he can show nothing of the kind. But to see him struggling and failing in his efforts to show it, would be an advantage. To explode a heresy, it is often only necessary to compel the holder of it to formulate it. By all means let the workingman tell us his disease, and bis notions of the remedy for it, and as a result he will he very likely to end with a clearer view of the nnsubstantial character of bis fancied ills.

SKELETON SKETCHES.

The "Masher's" Story.

"Well, yes; I have had my time with the women," he said—for he had won my money, and was inclined to be communicative—"and I tell you that some of them are regular trumps." The firelight, shining upon his handsome, steel-gray eyes and showy beauty of feature, had suggested to me the question to which this was the answer. I knew he was a gambler and black-leg, and that I ought not to be in his company, but as long as it was too late to think of bed, and too early to think of breakfast, I was glad of even his company for half an hour.

"Now, I once knew a girl," he continued, gazing into the fire, stretching out his legs and softly chinking my lost shekels, "who came near making me wish I never had made a mash. It don't matter who she was —'tain't square to give the business away, you know—but she came of first-class stock, and was what you would call a lady, every inch of her. I piped her off as she came along one morning when I was taking the sun on Kearney street. She was put up to the Queen's taste—bright-eyed, clean-cut and fresh as a daisy. That's my game, I said to myself, and—but you know how we do these things; or, if you don't, I ain't going to tell you. We became acquainted, of course, and she soon got over her shyness—with me. It doesn't take long to make the most squeamish of them tumble to the racket when a fellow knows how to do it. We met when they least expected it—her people, I mean. I wasn't fool enough to come the sneak dodge and make assignations in out-of-the-way places, or at times that were inconvenient for her. A man's sure to be dropped on if he tries that game. Not at all. We met in the most public thoroughfares, and walked where everybody could see us. Take my word for it, that's the true business if you want to be safe. I had some trouble to make her believe this, and she was scared at first; but after a time it was all right; for, do you know, the poor little fool got awfully sweet on me —on me. She was about the greenest little mortal I ever struck. I told her all sorts of whoppers—that I was on a visit from Boston, (but the Police will tell you that's true); that my father was a parson, (and so he may have been for all I know about him); that I had been a little wild, but that she was reforming me—and all the rest of it; and she took it all in as natural as could be. But you must remember I was on my best behavior with her, and maybe I acted pretty much like what I said I was. There was something about her which kept a fellow in check. I never looked into her eyes without feeling as mean as dirt. She seemed to fear no harm, and to suspect none; and I give you my word of— well, my word for what it is worth—that I did her no greater wrong than defile her with my company—I dared not. She said she knew it was very wicked to speak to a gentleman she 'didn't know,' but this was all the evil she saw. It troubled her though, and she used to ask me to get introduced to her family, but I knew better than that, and excused myself.

This grew tiresome after a time, of course. She got awfully spoony, and I had other affairs of the sort on hand, and—well, I didn't want to get the child into a row, anyhow. I wanted to give her the shake, but how to do it was what puzzled me. I played the cold and indifferent game, but she was too patient and loving for that. Then I got cross and scolded her, but she cried and I weakened. Then I made an appointment to meet her, and intended not to be on hand—nothing makes most women so mad as that, you know. But I couldn't help going to a place where I could see how she took it; and she looked so sad and waited so long that I had to walk up and lie about being detained. She forgave me so readily that I felt like a brute, and determined that come what would the thing had got to stop right there. I thought it over that night, and made up my mind that next time I saw her I would tell her who and what I was—if that didn't sicken her of me, what would? It wasn't a pleasant thing to do, but I knew it was best for her, and somehow I felt as if I oughtn't to spare myself.

Well, I told her as we walked along the street together—told her that I was a gambler and a blackguard, that I had associated all my life with prostitutes and thieves, that I had been imprisoned for forgery, that I had deliberately plotted her ruin, that—but perhaps I needn't tell you all I told her. When I began the confession she laughed, thinking I was joking, but when she looked in my face and knew I was in earnest, her hand trembled on my arm and she got white as a sheet. We were close to G.'s drug store, and I led her in. G. is a little fond of bucking the tiger, and owes me several favors. When I told him the lady was ill, he looked very wise and showed us into the little room at the back of the store. I gave her a chair and a glass of water, and waited for her to speak. She looked at me steadily, and presently said, in a strange sort of voice: "Is this true, John?" (I had told her to call me that). "It is," I answered, wishing the earth would swallow me. Then she buried her face in her hands and sobbed out: "O, John, John, why didn't you tell me this before?" "Because I am a contemptible cur," I replied; "the only approach to anything good that I have ever done in my life is to make you hate me and leave me before it is too late." I shall never forget the look that leaped into those wonderful eyes of her's as she rose and, placing a little hand on each of my shoulders, looked up into my face. "Hate you? leave you!" she said, slowly and softly in her hell-like voice. "Hate you! leave you! You do not mean that, you do not think that, John. Not if your sins were blacker than night! not if all the world despised you! While you love me there is no power on earth can part us."

I hadn't reckoned on this. I thought she would shake me in a flash when she knew what I had told her. But it made me all the more determined that she should not suffer through me. She had acted on the square and I swore to myself that I would. So I explained how impossible it was that she should link her fate to mine; that she should leave home, family, friends, position, everything, to mate with a broken-down gambler—a branded felon; and I asked her if she thought me coward enough to permit it. But she only smiled and held my hands in hers, and declared that she could make me good, and that she would sooner have my love than all the world besides.

What could I do? I saw that she would never give me up so long as she believed that I had sacrificed my love for her sake. Yet I swear that it was so. Half an hour earlier it would have been different, but in that half hour I had grown to love her as deeply as she loved me. It was my turn now to suffer for my dastardly conduct, for the very intensity of my love made me the more firmly resolved that she should leave me. There was no time to lose and I saw but one way to do it. The wound must be made deeper that she might be healed—her pride must be cruelly struck.

You know how I can command my features. Well, I put her from me and said, with a cold sneer: "Since you refuse to listen to less simple arguments, I must give you the best reason of all why you should leave me. In pretending to love you I have deceived you, as in everything else—and—I am married." You know that I lied, but the lie did its work. I caught her in my arms as she fell, and the first kiss I ever printed on her lips was the last. I laid her on the sofa and left her alone, but I watched for her coming out, and I followed her weary footsteps to her home. Soon after that she was sent East for her health; then to England, for the care of eminent doctors; but she baffled them all, and died."

ARIZONA.

The news from the railroad front is that extensive preparations are being made toward pushing forward the track-laying at an early date; vast numbers of ties have already gone to the eastern terminus of the road, and the shipments continue at the rate of 8,500 per day, and in a comparatively short time the locomotive will salute the city of Tucson with its loud but welcome greeting. The country around the old Patagonia mines is now attracting considerable attention, and a number of new and rich ledges have been recently located. The natural advantages of this particular section of Arizona, it being amply supplied with wood and water, and consisting of rolling hills and fertile valleys, made it in early times a very favorite locality, and a large amount of money was expended in 1859, '60 and '61 upon the Patagonia or Mowry mines, and others, by California and Eastern capitalists, among whom we may mention S. L. M. Barlow, of New York, Col. Sam Colt, of Hartford, Conn., S. F. Butterworth, John A. Peck, Sylvester Mowry, John Sime, and others, of San Francisco. Nearly all of these well-known and enterprising men have passed away, yet the increasing developments of the mining country in which they were so largely interested conclusively proves at this late day that they were fully justified in their estimates of its great mineral value. Their enterprises were discontinued, because of the insecurity to life and limb at that time from hostile Apaches and renegade Mexicans. It now falls to the lot of men of this generation to again take up these chains of progress, abandoned nearly twenty years ago. We note that the mines in Richmond Basin are developing very rich ore. The McMorris has ore running from $2,000 to $6,000 per ton, and the Silver Nugget has found some $15,000 ore. The Tip Top mine is now yielding better ore than at any time since its discovery. The mill is running on very rich ore, and the Superintendent is shipping to this city about $30,000 per month. The Stonewall Jackson mine produced during June and July upward of $28,000. The total yield of the property is $186,000, all silver. About 250 men are at work in the Santa Rita placer diggings, all making good wages. The amount of work done is very considerable, and it is estimated that not less than $250,000 gold has been the product during the past two years and a-half, one operator, Mr. Hefty, having taken out upward of $40,000. Arrangements have been completed with parties having the necessary capital for the development of the Ruby mines, located in Globe District, sixteen miles from Silver King, and the work will be commenced at once. Mr. J. W. Kinsman goes to Arizona next week in the interests of this valuable property. The Silver Moon Mining Company have organized at Grand Rapids, under the presidency of Thos. D. Gilbert, President of the First National Bank of that city, to operate the group of seven mines owned by Seamen, Buck & Company, and located twelve miles southwest of Tucson. These properties have a very good record, and we may expect large returns from them as soon as the new company gets regularly at work. A New York and Boston company have just organized with $200,000 paid up capital, for the purpose of working the gold placers of Weaver District, Yavapai county, and bringing water on the ground. The company have located the ground from Antelope Creek to the Hassayampa. It is also stated that Gov. Fremont has disposed of one-half of the Leviathan mine, in the same district, for $500,000, to New York parties. We learn further from New York that Gov. John C. Fremont, who arrived in this city last evening en route for Arizona, has made arrangements, during his visit at the East, for the introduction of considerable capital into Arizona mining enterprises, provided the mining experts recently dispatched to the Territory shall report favorably. To this enterprising gentleman his constituents are largely indebted for his constant and persistent efforts to bring the vast resources of Arizona prominently before the capitalists of the country; and the leading journals of New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and St. Louis have devoted considerable attention to the opportunities for profitable investment there to be found. Gov. Fremont has fully proven himself "the right man in the right place" during his brief sojourn in the Territory, and we take great pleasure in awarding to him all praise for his untiring efforts in its behalf.

SENATOR CONKLING AS A "MASHER."

Senator Conkling does not appear to be any more fortunate in his affaires de cœur than in the management of his occasional verbal contests with his Senatorial confreres at Washington. It is not long since Mr. Lamar, irritated by his overbearing conduct and unparliamentary language, administered to the New York Senator such a stinging rebuke as would have penetrated the hide of any one with less intolerable vanity. But when Mr. Conkling had quietly submitted to the even more galling castigation by Senator Schurz, it was, of course, to be expected that the additional piece of humble-pie would be devoured in silence—and it was. Now, a decent regard for the fair fame of the lady whose name has been drawn into this last unfortunate business, and, as we believe, unrighteously drawn, ought to have suggested to the Senator the wisdom of discontinuing an acquaintance which the lady's husband had previously intimated was undesirable. The blame, which may justly be laid on Mr. Sprague for the publicly offensive manner in which he has acted, must be merged in the general censure, nay, reprobation, with which Senator Conkling's conduct in giving rise to the offense is regarded. It is not by such actions that American statesmen can regain the sorely-tried confidence of the people, which is fast disappearing before the proofs of the grossness now prevalent in official life. If this sort of thing is to go on, public opinion will demand the revival of the "code," as the less demoralizing of the two. In that event, however, the Senator's occupation would be gone, as he has never been credited with a superabundance of courage, either mental or physical, but there is one thing yet left to him: let him come West and join the noble army of Kearny street sidewalk "mashers." Barring an occasional boost by the parental toe or a cerulean eye from the fraternal fist, New York's muscular Senator will not be much endangered. Nice fix for the Empire State—from Alexander Hamilton to Roscoe Conkling!—from Hyperion to a Satyr!

FREMONT AND HIS ENTERPRISES.

On the 15th instant Governor John C. Fremont arrived in this city en route to Arizona, from which territory he has been absent several months. After a sojourn of four days, he proceeded to Prescott, accompanied by several gentlemen largely interested in the mining syndicate formed in New York for the purpose of developing Arizona enterprises. So much interest was manifested in these matters in New York, that Governor Fremont deemed it desirable to prolong his sojourn there a month beyond the time he originally intended, and he therefore obtained a special extension of his leave of absence from President Hayes, and was thus enabled to complete bis operations. We had the pleasure of passing an evening with Governor Fremont, and of recalling old and most agreeable reminiscences of the past. Our acquaintance dates back to 1852, when in Paris we viewed together the beauties of that most delightful city, and from then until now we have ever felt and expressed a very warm interest in the movements of our friend. To be sure, his hair has silvered during all these years, yet time has dealt with him most kindly, and we still find in him the firm, elastic step, and the eagle eye undimmed, that fired the enthusiasm of the nation when he was known far and wide as its standard bearer and its "Pathfinder." Governor Fremont does not hesitate to say that he expects grand results for Arizona from his efforts in the East. The syndicate formed in New York is composed of wealthy representative men, who are very willing to invest several millions of dollars in Arizona should the reports of the experts that go out to examine the properties prove satisfactory. The final decision in the matter rests in their investigations. Should the expert reports prove favorable, the capital, to a large amount, will be at once forthcoming. General Fremont states that he found the New Yorkers very ready for such operations, that the interest in mining matters was on the increase, and that he looked confidently forward to seeing a very great activity in mining enterprises on this coast, through Eastern investment of capital, within the coming year. The Bodie mines are favorites for investment in New York, and some Arizona properties are already placed in Philadelphia, New York and Chicago. The rate of interest all over the East rules low, and in all the money centers of the country there is plenty of idle capital ready for any safe investment. There are some fifty-six mines embraced in the list which the New York syndicate have in view, and they are prepared to develop all of them if the merit is sufficiently apparent to tempt the outlay. Governor Fremont has kindly agreed to send to Messrs. Bleasdale and Jennings, Commissioners of the Australian Exposition, a selection of rich ores from Arizona, to he forwarded to Australia. These will be all carefully assayed in this city, and will doubtless prove a very novel and interesting feature in the Exhibition. They will probably reach here in time to go forward by the next steamer. We shall shortly issue, by authority, section maps of the surveyed portions of the territory. These maps will be accurate, every care being taken to avoid in them error or misrepresentation. We shall carefully keep in view these Arizona enterprises as they progress. That a wonderful future is in store for the Territory we do not for a moment douht, and it only requires the cool-headed men of enterprise, and the open sesame of capital, to hring to the front the hidden treasures. That Fremont has successfully inaugurated a grand beginning is self-evident, and we congratulate the citizens of Arizona upon the honor of having a gentleman at the head of her government so fully competent to administer its affairs satisfactorily.

Tons of Silver for China.—We noticed on California street, Thursday, in line, six two-horse drays heavily laden with bar silver, perhaps 20 tons' weight, but said to be of the value of $800,000, to be shipped by the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank Agency, per Gaelic, hence for Hongkong this day. Other like shipments, hy Chinese merchants, go forward by same steamer.

There is hardly any alteratiou in the quotation of local securities this week. Very little business has been done, and, beyond an advance of $1 ⅜ share in the price of Spring Valley Water stock, there is nothing else worth noticing. Money has been loaned at 3 per cent. per annum on call, with five days' notice, and more can be had at the same price. There is no confidence, and now we can see no bope of any until after the election, which takes place on the 3d prox. Even then we fear business will not improve, as there is now but one opinion that the result of the election will be a sort of hodge-podge—a mixture of all classes without a particle of talent in any—and that the State will, for the next few years, bc subject to a conflict between legislators and lawyers.

Dundee Bags.—An invoice of 25,000 standard 22x36 grain sacks were offered at auction yesterday for cash. The sample lot sold at 8.55c, and for the balance 8c, was the best offer made, and the lot was reluctantly withdrawn. We are told that 1,000,000 Calcutta bags were offered yesterday, in one lot, at 8⅜c, and another lot of same dimensions at 9c, four months, spot delivery. This reveals the true state of the market. The combination looks on and weeps with dismay.

Mercury is steadily rising. It is said at the close that 40c is very readily paid for spot quicksilver, a rise of 7c per pound since the middle of July.

R. B. WOODWARD.

A telegram from Napa, yesterday, announced the death of this gentleman, to the general regret. Mr. Woodward was among the first settlers in San Francisco, a man of enterprise and business sagacity, and a most estimable citizen. The What Cheer House, which he opened on Sacramento street, where it still flourishes, was established to furnish miners and others with clean food and lodging at a low rate; and it was a complete success from the beginning. No woman was ever allowed within its doors. Even more than by this hotel Mr. Woodward's name was made familiar to all the dwellers on the coast by his Gardens—a combination of park and pleasure ground, menagerie and tea-garden—which are always open to the public and always thronged with visitors. The City Railroad, established by him on Mission street, was among the best managed and most useful lines in developing and assisting the growth of the suburbs. Mr. Woodward was a man of public spirit, and into all his enterprises the element of public utility entered as an indispensable factor. His death, which was not wholly unexpected, since he had long suffered with asthma and other disorders, must yet be considered untimely for himself and unfortunate for the city, with whose interests he was identified, and to whose growth and prosperity he had so greatly contributed.

KALLOCH AS A FAILURE.

Paradoxical as it may seem, Kalloch's only success in life has been as a failure. He has repeatedly failed as a teacher of morals, from an inherent and uncontrollable disposition toward sensualities. As a temperance reformer, he always forgot to begin with himself; his doctrine in that respect was: "Don't do as I do, but as I say." As a lawyer, politician and business man, he speedily went to the dogs, but, in common justice to this many-sided parson, it must be admitted that he is a talented humbug of the Beecher type. In finances, his system of bookkeeping is peculiar—it consists only of receipts; payments are all imaginary, or postponed until after the Day of Judgment. Demagogue in all things, and at all times, he has no settled opinions, excepting on one subject—to look out for number one, no matter who pays the piper. That such a shallow humbug should aspire to the mayoralty of a great city is not surprising. That he should be supported by any but frauds, dead-beats, libertines, and scoundrels generally, is proof that there is something "rotten in the State."

THE EXPELLED WEST POINTERS.

The cadets recently expelled from West Point for ungentlemanly conduct have humbly, and like so many whipped schoolboys, petitioned the President to reinstate them. This is something new in military annals. Officers have been expelled from the army and restored before now, but the restoration was either voluntary on the part of the authorities or was obtained through the intercession of third parties. We must remember that the culprits who in this case sue for pardon do not ask to be delivered from jail and given another chance to behave themselves in the world, but asked to be admitted into the United States Army, which it is our pride to say is officered by gentlemen. The disgraced cadets showed themselves to be blackguards by the practices for which they were expelled; they show themselves to lack spirit as well as decent breeding by their meek and lowly appeal for mercy. In our opinion the only thing to recommend them is their cheek.

GRUMBLING BY PROXY.

A guttersnipe telegram says: "The Canadian Government journals express much indignation against the British Government on account of the adjournment of Parliament without lending aid to the Pacific Railroad, and talk of seeking an alliance with the United States." That this is one of the stereotyped Press lies is evident, because Canadian "Government journals" certainly would not preach disloyalty, whatever a few Fenian sheets might do. As a people, the Canadians are loyal to the backbone, and if Uncle Sam wants their country, he will have to use some more manly plan than that of continually putting into the Kanucks' mouths seditions which they never uttered. If the Canadians were as fretful, and peevish, and fond of threatening to secede as the papers of the United States make them out to be, the best thing England could do would be to turn her back on them in disgust, and thank her stars for a good riddance.

Among the Bodie stocks the "Boston Consolidated" is a great favorite. Excellent progress has been made on the joint shaft of this mine and the Last Chance, in straightening and timbering. The superintendent's letter of August 18th says: "The connection ought to be made inside of another week." Foundation for the winze is under way, and the work on sinking will soon be begun. The large quantities of ore in this claim, much of it extraordinarily rich, while there is none that is not fair milling ore, give reasonable ground for expecting great developments, as soon as the connections are properly made and the shaft straightened.

New Music.—From Jas. S. Smith, "Salomon Levy" Schottische; from M. Gray, "Homeless," for the piano.

The Arcade, always among the finest of our house-furnishing and dry-goods stores, has undergone extensive alterations and improvements. The Dress Department space has been doubled, a measure forced upon the proprietors by the increase in custom. The space formerly occupied by the cashier and bookkeeper's offices has been given up to the silk department, which is now the largest and best arranged to be found in the city. The floor, from the center of the store to the entrance on Ellis street, has been lowered two feet and a half, so that there is now one superb stretch from end to end of the vast establishment, affording a most striking picture of order and life and animated business, with the moving figures of the purchasers and the numerous clerks, and the varied hues of the rich and costly goods. The newly added half of the grand floor is most elegantly carpeted. The cashier's and bookkeper's offices are now at the Ellis-street entrance, a great convenience to those having business with the house. The Domestic counter is twice as large as any other in the city, and affords ample room for showing blankets and the larger house-furnishing goods to every advantage; and one of the greatest improvements is the opening of a special department for cloaks and Dolmans, all of the newest and most striking styles. The outlay for these great changes has been very heavy, and yet the business of the house is carried on as if its capital were boundless. Countless cases of the newest and most valuable goods are being daily received and opened; and that no pains may be spared, Mr. J. J. O'Brien is now on his way to the East and Europe, to purchase on a scale befitting the magnitude of the house. The store is the best lighted in the trade—a great consideration in the purchase of colored goods. All the new designs, the elegant additions, and the vast stock of every kind, will be displayed to the public on Monday next.

The "Philadelphia Record" has a reporter too bright and beautiful to last. This youth has found the original of the typical American female face on the Bland dollar, in Miss Anna W. Williams, whose "modesty has never allowed her to divulge the fact that the design is a prototype of her features." And this does her the greater credit that she must have been in a pitiful condition, wandering about the Quaker City without a face till less than two years ago. It may be, however, that this spirited reporter lent her his own countenance while she was waiting for the invention of her prototype. He surely has an extra supply of face, of a texture harder, if not more lasting, than brass; and he is fairly entitled to any number of smiles, bland, if not childlike, from what he aptly calls the "contour of Miss Williams." Her profile, it seems, is "the most perfect the designer had ever seen;" but we are in despair not to know anything about her mise-en-scene. Perhaps, however, this will be described with her deutorotype, her tetartotype, her carpe diem and her ex post facto. Morgan, the engraver, ought to have taken a squeeze of this reporter's contour, for his prototypes in two hundred years will look upon him as their noblest descendant.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 77, as compared with 70 last and 73 for the corresponding week last year. There were 51 males and 26 females. Only 4 Chinese. There were 4 casualties and 2 suicides. The zymotics were 3 diphtheria, 3 typhoid fever, 2 whooping cough. There were 13 deaths from phthisis and 6 from pneumonia. The other principal causes were: Brain disease, 3; paralysis, 3; liver disease, 4; cancer, 2; and one each of anæmia, bronchitis, convulsions, diabetes, heart disease, lung congestion, old age, pyemia. The infantile mortality was unusually light, only 19 deaths under 5 years of age. Four persons died above the age of 80. There was but one death each in the Third, Fifth and Seventh wards. The Eighth Ward heads the list with 10. Twenty-one deaths occurred in the public institutions.

Increased Importance of the Office of Supervisor.—The City Father has always been a power. He has had the spending of a vast revenue. Fat contracts were within his gift. Under the new Constitution his powers are to be vastly increased. No special commissioners are to be entrusted with any municipal function whatever. Water supply, new City Hall, street widening, and even Police Commission business, must all be performed by the Board of Supervisors. Theoretically the change is proper enough. The representatives duly chosen by the people to govern the city ought to govern it, and not put the principal duties upon irresponsible commissions. If the result is evil, the fault is with the people, for not selecting honest and capable men. Very special care ought to be taken to choose the next Board. Candidates have been named that are not fitted for the office. Between this and the day of election there ought to be some very searching inquiries as to these men.

The ne plus ultra of padlocks is the one just brought out by the Permutation Lock Company, 318 California street. This has no key, no opening when locked, and cannot be picked. It is unlocked by a combination of numbers, and, as these can be changed 50,000 times, it is practically beyond being tampered with. For express companies, for custom and warehouses, for railroad through-freight cars, this invention is really beyond price, and every one can appreciate the advantages of a lock without a key. The finish is in nickel-plating of the most beautiful kind.

KALLOCH.

It is really astounding that this bad man should have the effrontery to brazen his unblushing face before the virtuous sons and daughters of San Francisco. The mere mention of his name, a synonym, as it is, for all that is false, hypocritical, filthy and vile, is a defilement to a respectable family paper. It is impossible to print it without giving birth to prurient thoughts. Yet the duty cannot be avoided, or shirked, of discussing this most unsavory embodiment of all that is degrading in man. His occupancy of a Christian pulpit, though a burning shame and a loathsome scandal, might be passed over in silence by the secular press. But that is the utmost limit to which reticence is possible. We don't say that silence, even in that matter, is desirable. We merely say that, so far as our own stomachs are concerned, we had rather, in that case, avoid the unpleasantness of stirring the filty mess associated with his name. It is an altogether different matter, however, when he poses before the whole people as a candidate for the high office of Chief Magistrate of the city, with most excellent chances, we regret to say, of being elected. In that condition of affairs, it becomes the urgent duty of the press to call upon all that is honest and virtuous in our midst to save us from the deep, unutterable disgrace of exalting this impostor, this bold braggart, this sum of all the villainies, to rule over us. It is impossible, it would seem, to make that call effective without descending to the particulars which render it urgent. Enough was known, in a general way, to have sufficed to prevent his nomination. But it was not prevented, and to-day he looms up as the probable Mayor of the city. His capacity to tickle the ears of the crowd is telling in the canvass, and the crowd appear nothing loath to aid him to accomplish his evil designs. Surely in that crowd there is some sense of decency left! It may be a thoughtless crowd, that may, for a moment, be taken by the very audacity of the fellow's impudence. But surely there will come a sober second thought, that will stand ahashed at the depraved manhood of a Kalloch. The fathers and mothers of the forty thousand yet uncorrupted youths and maidens, that are in our public schools, owe it to their offspring that this monster of impurity shall be relegated to an obscurity more befitting his gross violations of the proprieties of life. They dare not discuss Kalloch's widely known record in their families. How dare they, then, exalt him to a position in which his bad record must be an ever-present suggestion of impurity, and of the success which attends infamy that is bold, unblushing and pretentious? Hitherto there has been virtuous force enough in society to drive open vice into the lanes, alleys and back streets, where it can be avoided as a plague by decent people. It is something new to place it on a pedestal, and that pedestal the chief magistracy of a great city. Even in cheap novels vice is made ugly and punished sooner or later, whilst virtue is adorned and made to triumph in the end. Public sentiment will not tolerate the beautifying of vice and the deifying of Venus. The writer who would attempt it would be esteemed a public enemy, and would be prosecuted for obscenity. Yet, here comes a fellow who, over an entire continent, is esteemed the very personificatiou of lust, of falsehood, of hypocrisy and of depraved manhood, and it is now seriously proposed to make vice in his case successful, to raise it to the highest possible position of distinction conferable by a free city, to flout it in the face of the young, upon whom this lesson in real life would naturally have more effect than thousands of pretty stories in hooks of pure morality. A rascal who has stolen the livery of Heaven to serve the devil in, who has, by common consent, been convicted again and again of nameless and shameless iniquity, who has made his nest in many cities and dirtied it in all of them, who has mixed in the politics of Kansas only to corrupt them, who has preached temperance and practiced drunkenness, who has taken the shekels of the church only to drag religion in the mire, who has taught Know Nothing exclusiveness when it paid, and bids for Irish and German votes when they are necessary to make him Mayor of San Francisco, who is impecunious to a degree that enables him to avoid the payment of honest debts by swearing that he is not worth a dollar—this bold, bad man is to be exalted above his fellows, to be chosen to high station in preference to good, honest citizens identified with the moral welfare and material progress of our city! Never, in the annals of free elections, was so deep a disgrace proposed to be put upon a free people. It can be avoided, it must be avoided, or San Francisco will be a byword and a reproach to people everywhere.

THE SUFFRAGE QUESTION.

It is proposed to deny to all persons naturalized less than six months prior to the next election the right to vote at that election; and this raises the question whether or not the new Constitution is in force as to the qualification of voters, for, if it is, the interval between the time of naturalization and that of the election is fixed at ninety days. The new Constitution prescribes the qualifications of voters "at all elections which are now, or may hereafter be, authorized by law," and the instrument went into operation, "so far as the same relates to the election of all officers, the commencement of their terms of office and the meeting of the Legislature," on the Fourth of July last. It is not doubted that the Constitution is in force as to the commencement of terms of office and the meeting of the Legislature, and it will hardly be denied that the qualification of voters "relates" to an election; but it is assumed that, in the clause requiring that the first elections to be made "at the time and in the manner now provided by law," the word "manner" applies to voters as well as to the method of voting. But if it applies to the voters, why not to the persons voted for? Why look to one Constitution for the qualification of officers and to another for the qualification of electors, in the absence of any necessity for so doing? The details of election, such as the form and manner of polling the votes, the superintendence of voting, etc., are left to the Legislature, and the present law is necessarily retained, otherwise there would be no law on the subject until the next Legislature should have had time to frame and pass one; but the suffrage clause, so far as it prescribes the qualification of voters, is complete, without the aid of legislation; and there is no apparent reason why it should not operate at this as well as at any future election—any law to the contrary notwithstanding—unless it is restrained by the section referred to, retaining the present "manner" of election; and it seems scarcely possible that the Convention intended to employ a very common word in such an unusual cause. It is to be hoped that the Election Commissioners have carefully considered this subject, and acted under good advice; otherwise there is reason to fear the late registration may prove to have been little better than an expensive farce.

DAVID S. TERRY.

The number of prominent Bilks running for office is somewhat astounding, and to a looker-on it appears as if that party were all head and no tail all leaders and no following. The substitution of Judge Terry in place of Mr. Cross, as Bilk candidate for State Attorney-General, exhibits, more than anything else, the paucity of good material in that party. He is notoriously obnoxious to a majority of the people of this State for his career in early days, and will find, to his cost, that, while the Broderick episode may have been forgiven, it is not, and never will be, forgotten. The lamented Senator's memory is a standing obstacle to the success of the man who so eagerly sought and accomplished his taking-off. Moreover, Judge Terry is not, and will not be, a citizen of the State of California until January 1, 1879, at 12 M. His duel disfranchised him under the old Constitution, and rendered him ineligible to office. That prohibition remains intact until the day named, and he is no more entitled to run for office than a foreigner whose naturalization cannot be perfected until a given date. A merited humiliation awaits him on September 3d.

Where is the Coroner?—And again, where is the Coroner? Noise enough is made about the appointment to the office when there is an election on foot. A man named Mason was allowed to die from the effects of strychnine, in Third street, on the 19th instant, with Dr. Phelan, of 503 Third street, in the room. This life was thrown away through the culpable ignorance of this medical attendant, and we fail to hear of any inquest into the circumstances by the Coroner. Why, in any civilized country, except San Francisco, the facts concerning his death would have been elicited, the malpractice of the so-called physician exposed, and himself in the city prison before sundown that same day. What does the Coroner exist for, and why is the office not abolished as a mockery and a fraud?

LOVE AT SEA.

BY A. C. SWINBURNE.

We are in Love's Land to-day;
Where shall we go?
Love, shall we start or stay,
Or sail, or row?
There's many a wind and way,
And never a May but May;
We are in Love's Land to-day—
Where shall we go?

Our land-wind is the breath
Of sorrows kissed to death
And joys that were;
Our hallast is a rose,
Our way lies where God knows
And love knows where—
We are in Love's Land to-day.

Our seamen are fledged loves,
Our masts are hills of doves,
Our decks fine gold;
Our ropes are dead maid's hair,
Our stores are love-shafts fair
And manifold—
We are in Love's Land to-day.

Where shall we land you, sweet?
On fields of strange men's feet,
Or fields near home?
Or where the fire-flowers blow,
Or where the flowers of snow
Or flowers of foam?—
We are in Love's Land to-day.

Land me, she says, where love
Shows but one shaft, one dove,
One heart, one hand.
—A shore like that, my dear,
Lies where no man will steer—
No maiden land.

A LONDON BEE STORY.

[From "Quiz."]

I had an improved back-yard. I went through a seed store, and bought a sample of everything that would grow in this climate. The result was a perfect tangle of flowers and things, from an over-grown sunflower to a forget-me-not. Mrs. Bricktop is very proud of our garden, and while gushing over it the other morning a happy thought worked its way under her hack hair. "What a delightful thing it would he to bave a hive of hees and raise our own honey, as well as everything else." I have always thought that woman inspired ever since she convinced me that I couldn't do hetter than to marry her. This was an original, hold idea; a happy thought. I promised her a hive of hees, and went to husiness with a lighter heart and firmer helief in the genuineness of home comforts and amusements. I hought a hive of houey-bees and hrought it home with me that very night. It was one of those patent hydrostatic, hack-action hives, in which the hees have peculiar accommodations and all the modern improvements. It was a nice little hive, none of your old-fashioned barn-size affairs. It even had windows in it so that the hees could look out and see what was going on and enjoy themselves. Both myself and Mrs. B. were delighted, and hefore dark I arranged a stand for the hive in the garden and opened the hay windows so that the hees could take an early start, and get to husiness hy sunrise the next morniug. Mrs. B. called me honey several times during the evening, and such sweet dreams as we had. We intended to he up early next morning to see how our little hirds took to our flowers, hut a good half hour hefore we probahly should have done so we were awakened hy the unearthly yells of a cat. Mrs. B. leaped from her downy couch, exclaiming: "What can he the matter with our yellow 'Billy?'" The yells of anguish convinced us that something more than ordinary was the matter with him, and so we hurried into our toilets. We rushed out into our hack-yard, and, oh! what a sight met our astouished gaze! The sight consisted of a yellow cat that appeared to he doing its best to make a pin-wheel of itself. He was rolling over and over in the grass, hounding up and down, anon darting through the hushes and foliage, standing on its head and then trying to drive its tail into the ground, and all the while keeping up the most confounded yowling that was ever heard. "The cat is mad," said Mrs. B., affrighted. "Why shouldn't he he? the hees are stinging him," said I, comprehending the trouble. Mrs. B. flew to the rescue of her cat and the cat flew at her. So did the hees. One of them drove his drill into her nose, another vaccinated her on the chin, while another hegan to lay out his work near her eye. Then she howled and hegan to act almost as had as the cat. It was quite an animated scene. She cried murder, and the neighhors looked out from their hack windows and cried out for the police, and asked where the fire was. This being a trifle too much, I threw a towel over my head and rushed to her rescue. In doing so, I ran over and knocked her down, trod upon the cat and made matters no hetter. Mrs. B. is no child on a wrestle, and she soon had me under her, and was tenderly stamping down the garden-walk with my head, using my ears for bandles. Then I yelled, and some of the hees came to her assistance, and stung me all over the face. In the meantime the neighhors were shouting, and getting awfully excited over the show, while our servant, supposiug us fighting, opened the basement door and admitted a policeman, who at once proceeded to go between man and wife. The hees hadn't got at Mrs. B.'s tongue yet, and she proceeded to show the policeman that I had ahused her in the most shameful manner, and that I had hought a hive of bees on purpose to torment her into the grave. I tried to explain, hut just then a hee stung the officer on the nose, and he understood it all in less than a minute. He got mad and actually lost his temper. He ruhhed his nose and did some official cussing. But as this didn't help matters any, he drew his club and proceeded to demolish that patent hee-hive. The hees failed to recognize his badge of office, and just swarmed on him. They stung him wherever he had no clothing, and some places where he did have it. Then he howled, and commenced acting after the manner of the cat and its mistress. He rolled on the ground for a moment, and then got up and made for the street, shouting "fire." Then the hees turned to the people who had climhed upon the fence to see the fun. Then they had some fun. Windows went down, and some of tbe neighhors acted as though they thought a twenty-inch shell was ahout to explode. By this time a fire-engine had arrived, and a line of hose was taken through the house into the back-pard. One of the hosemen asked where the fire was, hut just then one of the hees hit him hehind the ear, and he knew. They turned a stream upon that half-wrecked hee-hive, and hegan to "play away" with one hand and fight hees witb the other. But the water had the desired effect, and those hees were soon among the things that were. A terrible crowd had gathered in the meantime in front of the house, hut a large portion of it followed the flying policeman, who was ruhbing his affected parts and making tracks for the station-house and a surgeon.

This little adventure somehow dampened our enthusiasm regarding the felicity of making our own honey. During the next week we wore milk-and-water poultices pretty ardently, but not a word was said about honey, and now Mrs. B. has gone to stay a week with her mother, leaving me and the convalescent tom-cat and the tickled neigbhors to enjoy our own felicity.

SUICIDE BY STRYCHNINE.

"Alfred Mason, a plasterer, native of Maryland, fifty years of age, died yesterday morning at a quarter past ten o'clock, at his house, No 310 Third street, from the effects of strychnine, taken with suicidal intent. Mason several years ago received injuries in consequence of a fall from a scaffold, and suffered more or less by reason thereof. Yesterday morning he acted strangely, and at half-past eight o'clock his wife asked him what ailed him. He told her that he had taken strychnine. She at once sent for a physician, who came and did all in his power for Mason, but the poison had taken so much effect that he was beyond medical aid."

EDITOR NEWS LETTER:—The above paragraph is taken from the Call of the 12th instant. The circumstances attending the death of the patient are such as call for remark. It will be observed that his wife became aware of his having taken strychnine at 8:30 A.M., and that he expired at 10 A.M. It is further stated that she at once sent for a physician, Dr. Phelan, of 503 Third street. A messenger from this office waited on Dr. (?) Phelan at his office, and was informed that Mason died in about 30 minutes after his arrival. He informed our messenger that all he did for him was to order an emetic.

Now, first as to the medical man: He is not the usual attendant on the Mason family, but the nearest to the house, sent for, as a matter of course, by the terrified wife. He took charge of the case, and did not ask for a consultation with another Doctor, and, as he admits, after thirty minutes the patient died. The Doctor's name does not appear on the register kept at the City and County Clerk's office, so it is presumable he has no diploma, and is a quack. It remains for him to show he is not one. But whether a quack or not, he is equally guilty of malpractice, as we shall proceed to show. Ignorance of what has been publicly known for some fifteen years about the treatment of cases of poisoning by strychnine, is enough to constitute the crime of malpractice, and to bring the physician within reach of the severest penalties of the law. Had Mason but ten minutes to live when Phelan first saw him, his life might and should have been saved, whether he wished it or not, for in most civilized countries self-destruction is a great crime against society, and must be prevented and punished when possible. He ordered an emetic: well enough, but of itself of very secondary consideration. He ought to have known that the only remedial means was chloroform, and there was plenty a few yards off. He either knew its effects or not, and in either case his conduct is criminal. Of all the alkaloid poisons, there is not one whose effects can be counteracted so easily as those of strychnine. While the patient has life in him, the administration of chloroform vapor will, in the course of a minute or so, entirely remove them, and the spasms will quite leave him and he will rest. Then nothing more is needed but time and care to keep him under the influence of the vapor, and allow him to breathe free air for a few moments should he appear to labor heavily in breathing.

So easy of application is chloroform in such cases that it seems worth while to give it the fullest publicity for the general good. The requisites for its administration, in the case of poisoning by strychnine, are these: The patient will generally be found lying stiff on his back. The first thing to be done is to get a saucer, or like vessel, and place in it a bit of dry sponge, or a cambric handkerchief, or even some dry rags, if nothing better be at hand. On these pour a teaspoonful of chloroform, and then with a handkerchief cover both the saucer and the patient's head, and let him breathe the vapor till he begins to breathe heavily and loudly. Then admit a little free air for a short time, a minute or so, and procure the aid of a medical man as quickly as possible, because all remedial measures of this nature are safer in his hands. The first effects of the chloroform will show themselves in a minute or two at farthest. The body will lose all its rigidity, and the patient will remain like one in a quiet sleep. As often as snoring or stentorious breathing is heard, he should be allowed to breathe the free air, but upon any sign of twitching upon the face, or muscular movement of the body, the chloroform must be continued as before, and the supply of it to the sponge renewed by a teaspoonful at a time. Once the patient is brought under the influence of it, his life is assured. Should no chloroform be just at hand, then a tumbler of cold water, with as much "baking," or even washing soda, stirred in it, as it will readily dissolve, should be given to the patient if he can swallow:—because the strychnine, remaining unchanged in the stomach, is greatly retarded by alkaline substances, while it is much accelerated by acids.

Called, as Catholic clergymen continually are, to the death-beds of members of their flocks, I have on more than one occasion assisted the physician in saving lives when death was imminent from strychnine, and in no case was one lost when chloroform was at hand. I witnessed a case in which Dr. Wm. Gilbee, the eminent surgeon of Melbourne, held a patient for nine hours under its influence, and saved the woman's life. I have successfully treated my own pet dogs, and can speak from actual experience. What is very remarkable in all the cases, whether of dogs or human beings, is that there is no vomiting or evacuation of any kind. The chloroform simply wards off the action of the poison till it is digested, as quinine might be—only it takes a longer time. The shortest time required, in my experience, was 3 hours, and the longest 9 hours.

THE MECHANICS' FAIR—A WRINKLE FOR THE DIRECTORS.

It is admitted by all who have been there that the Fourteenth Mechanics' Exhibition is superior to any of its thirteen predecessors in variety of exhibits, in the quantity of those produced in this State and their intrinsic value, as well as adaptability to the requirements of industry and the economy of every-day life. But it is clear that the Directors who control the Fair are altogether out in their reckoning when they hope to make it a pecuniary success by charging fifty cents admission. Most of those who might be benefited by studying in it, especially the artisan and manufacturing classes, are postively prohibited by the heavy charge for admission. To most of them four "bits" is a serious matter, when their earnings hardly reach ten dollars per week. What has been found to result in a pecuniary success on several occasions like the present, and in different cities, where the population, as here, was limited, is to make the regular charge twenty-five cents admission; but on one day of each week, or two—say the afternoons of Monday and Thursday—the charge might be fifty cents, or even a dollar, and on those days some special music. On Saturdays, up to 2 P. M., it ought to be open to public schools and institutions of that kind, and notice given that the children and teachers attending a school would be admitted as a body from 10 A. M. to 2 P. M. at a rate of five cents, or at most ten cents per capita, and thus make the exhibition a source of instruction to the young. And even if the classes were admitted free, and the Department of Education were to pay for their attendance at per capita, it would show a very praiseworthy desire to assist in instructing the mind of the rising generation by inspection of the results of local industry and invention.

"Segnius irritant animos demissa per aures
Quam quæ sunt oculis subjecta fidelibus."

The Directors of the Mechanics' Exhibition have, no doubt, a natural desire to make it a pecuniary success (and we are quite serious and sincere when we say it) for the purposes of the Mechanics' Institute, purely and simply. But those gentlemen must be informed that a library is not a Mechanics' Institute, and that an annual exhibition which excludes the very class it pretends to benefit, by means of excessive charges for admission, defeats the ends for which it exists. And here, once for all, how does it happen that an excellent library with roomy premises should be rented, and left without so much as one single lecture-room or one bit of apparatus to illustrate any one of the many branches of mechanical art or science? Mechanics' institutes at present should be schools of technology, with their library, lecture-hall and museum of specimens of all kinds, but mostly of the natural products and results of industry already located or capable of being introduced into the country.

GRANGERS AND WORKINGMEN.

The daily newspapers are just waking up to the fact—oft asserted in these columns—that the real interests of the grangers and workingmen are diametrically opposed to each other. The granger desires an abundance of cheap labor—Chinese labor, in fact—while the workingman quite as naturally prefers a scarcity of labor supply, and high wages corresponding thereto. But the granger has, or imagines he has, a grievance against the Railroad, because it foolishly, in his opinion, demands proper compensation for the carriage of his produce to a market; and the workingman foolishly imagines that if the Chinese could be got rid of, he would be master of the labor market. The granger has a decided antipathy to paying his just proportion of the burdens of government, or, in fact, any part thereof, provided he can shift it to the shoulders of the bloated capitalist down at the Bay. The workingman looks upon the State as a fat goose, to be plucked for the benefit of his class, and in his mind's eye looks forward to the day when his class shall rule the State for its sole benefit, making all other classes subservient to that purpose. The State has nothing to fear from either granger or workingman while they remain separate, but united they are a power for evil. Hence they have "pooled their issues" as a step toward victory; but even in the improbable event of success we do not believe they will pull together, by reason of their diverse opinions. The workingman has no grudge against the Railroad, which employs five thousand of his fellows at good wages regularly paid, and Kearney expressed that idea in Sacramento when he said that profitable freights meant good wages, and lower freights lower wages. On the other hand, it is a fact, notorious and not to be concealed, that the grangers, and not the railroads and other corporations, are the greatest employers of cheap labor in California. There has never been a successful combination of farmers and workingmen anywhere, because they have nothing in common, and there never will be, especially in this State. We repeat to workingmen that their best friends are the capitalists, manufacturers and merchants, and that to discard them for a humbugging alliance with their granger enemies is most foolish, and must meet the usual reward of folly.

THE POSITION OF THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Money is so abundant in London that, when lent at all, it commands only ½ per cent. per annum, and bills are being discounted at less than 1 per cent, though the nominal rate of discount of the Bank of England is 2 per cent. The following figures, taken from the returns of the Bank of England, are very striking:

	Notes in Circulation.	Tot'l Bullion in both Dep'ts.	Reserve of Notes in B'nking Dept.	Other than Gov. Dep'sts.
July 17, 1878..	£28,068,310	£22,340,355	£ 8,250,965	£22,624,601
July 16, 1879..	29,328,140	35,466,067	19,813,065	33,511,228
Increase 1879..	£ 1,259,830	£13,125,712	£11,562,100	£10,886,627

The financial position of the Bank was never stronger than the figures for July 16 last show; but, at the same time, its strength is a decisive proof of depression and stagnation in business in England. The distrust that arises in bad times causes persons with money to be cautious of investing it, and they put it in the Bank so as to assure themselves of safety until times of greater stability come round. On the other band, the feeling of insecurity which pervades the community causes investors to sell their securities, and have money available in a safe place so that they can lay their hands upon it at any moment. It is perfectly evident, however, that such large quantities of money cannot lie unused for any very great length of time; so it is probable that ere long the surplus of this large accumulation of money will flow out of the Bank and help in the revival of trade.

"PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Baldwin's Theater.—La Cigale is something which, as a play, can scarcely he considered au serieux. Ths authors had, in writing it, probably no desire or expectation that it would ever he regarded in any other light than a farcical one. It was written for Celins Chaumont, a delicious little actress of certain peculiarities—something of the Lotta type, but with the proverbial French refinements. The translator has rather cleverly adapted this farce to our little lady's standard, and if its claims to attention as a work of art are nil, it has the merit of heing amusing and laughter-creating. And yet this merit lies in the fact that it gives Lotta all possible opportunities to show herself off. She is a ridiculous little tot at best, hut the charm she exercises over all is as undeniahle as it is inexplicahle. She is overflowing with a ludicrous vivacity that enforces the attention of the audience, and keeps it enslaved to her every whim and caper. It is futile to attempt an analysis of her talents, or to describe or define her charm understandingly. Lotta is a syphon of "cut-up," injecting now and then its cuteness and vivacity into the more staid and plausible ways of the support, and causing the whole action and everything else to fizz and huhhle in the most undignified manner. There is no one that can he compared to her, or that she may be likened to. There is no one alive that could skip and hop through La Cigale as she does. Bits of business that at the hands of others would, from their very idiocy, squelch possihle mirth, ahound with her and make us all roar with healthy laughter. She is a funny hody, and that is the best description that can he given of her. Actress is a word that can never be applied to her. She scorns art, and tbe rules and precedents of acting. All that is necessary is for her to go on the stage and be herself. If the character assumed fits her, all the hetter; if not, all the worse. Shs cannot adapt herself; the character must submit. Therefore, those phases of her different parts that are serious or pathetic, are to her insurmountable. She then hecomes awkward and mechanical. But, luckily, thess requirements are seldom met with in her repertoire. In La Cigale, as adapted at present, sentiment is non est, and Lotta has full latitude for her twists, her grimaces and her kicks. The day Lotta can persuade herself that singing is something she cannot do, she will do herself, and more particularly the puhlic, a great service. It is a pity that she does not possess the gift of song, hut she does not. As long as she contents herself with the motto songs, or popular ditties of the day, the audience will be patient; but when she hranches out in tender and sentimental ballads, reproof is necessary. The little French song which Lotta interpolates is sweet in its exquisite pathos, and is so far above her vocal ahilities that her rendition of it is barharous. In her own quaint, peculiar line, Lotta is unapproachahle, and that ought to be sufficient glory. When she does things that invite or necessitate comparison, she hecomes mediocre, and injures herself. The support in La Cigale was rather clever. The pair of artists, "Murignan" and "Mi:lm,' we e humorously and effectively acted by Messrs. Bishop and Barrows. Bradly was excellent as "Count de Hoffe; and Wilkes (a new face) made all possible out of the character of the "Son." The trio of acrobats, "Carcaronne," "Bi Bi" and "Filoche," as played respectively hy Messrs. Marhle, Thompson and Belasco, was a rather flat performance. It is a very funny idea, but requires excellent comedian qualities to receive full justice. Mr. Marble is rather clever, but the others are "sticks." On Monday Lotta appears in "Little Nell" and the "Marchioness." This is one of her earliest successes, and will prove a pleasing revival. The Marchioness is considered by most every one her hest effort. The orchestra is now strengthened by the addition of Schlott as first French hornist, and is undoubtedly ths hest in town.

Bush-Street Theater.—California Through Death Valley is the ambitious title of the play that has held the hoards during the week. It is flimsy in plot, stupid and tiresome in dialogue, and ridiculous and ahsurd in situations. It is by no means inferior to other plays of the same character, in some respects it may he superior, hut dramas of horder life are all nauseating to intellicent audiences from the exaggerated and impossihle manner in which they are constructed. A scene in which one scout, with two navy revolvers, will kill, by actual count, eleven Indians without injury to himself, caps the climax of dramatic absurdity. Capt. Jack intends, it is said, to star in this play. There is no reason why he should not do this successfully, judging by the theatrical career of Buffalo Bill. Crawford is not as graceful, handsome or picturesqus in dress as Cody, but he is more of au actor. He speaks his lines hetter, is more natural in gesture, and more manly in demeanor. The star part is evidently ths character of "Bill Williams,' and was excellently impersonated hy John Woodard. "Ruth," as played hy Emma Grant, a genuine actress of color, was a decided feature of the cast. One of the most promising of our local actresses is Miss Georgie Woodthorpe. This little lady is making remarkahle progress. She is modest and conscientious in all she undertakes, and is pursuing the true method of success on the stage, commencing at the bottom and working her way up. She is becoming, with approaching maturity, more and more finished in her acting, and deserves all possihle commendatory encouragement. The scenery is more noticeable hy a lavish display of impossihle colors than hy artistic truth to nature. On next Monday one of Haverly's numerous speculations will appear. The United Mastodon Minstrels (what a title!) are a company of forty performers, containing all the hest names in the minstrel profession. Haverly, hy his enterprise, has succeeded in securing the flagging interest manifested hy the puhlic in negro minstrelsy, and this troupe has been wouderfully successful everywhere. Ths old favorite, Billy Rice, is a prominent member of this agglomeration.

An esteemed citizen of Arizona is in San Francisco, viewing the many lions here to he found. A few evenings since he strolled into the art gallery at the Mechanics' Fair, and was soon ahsorhed in the study of the paintings on exhibition. Our friend is something of a connoisseur in such matters, and expressed his admiration of several pictures to an old gentleman who was also doing the gallery. The latter, however, was inclined to be antagonistic, and volunteered to show the Arizonian a perfect picture. This, in turn, was duly inspected, and sharply criticised by our friend, who found it execrahle, and expressed his surprise that anyone should he so vain-glorious as to put such a veritable dauh upon exhibition, and wondered who the bold artist might be. "It is my chef d'œuvre," replied his nswly-made friend. The Arizonian quistly subsided into the ladies' promenade, and the artist wandered off in another direction, each perplexed at the existing situation.

California Theater.—This theater has been closed during the week. It will he re-opened on Monday evening with an attraction that will undoubtedly prove a paying one. When Crane and Robson played The Comedy of Errors at the close of their last engagement, it was in the light of an experiment. Although wanting in finish, and full of blemishes, that performance gave promise of becomiug, in time, an admirahle one. Judging by eastern reports, it has become so. The burden of this play falls upon Mr. Crane's shoulders, for he is compelled to imitate and counterfeit Mr. Robson, whose mannerisms and peculiarities are so strongly marked as to render disguising impossible. The excellence which these comedians have reached in their delineations of the two "Dromios" could only he attained hy long and continued practice. They have had the henefit of this, and a delightful rendition of The Comedy of Errors may he expected. Webh, of Boston, has specially arranged the play for them in a manner that admits of a strong and effective production. As additional attractions, they have Champagne and Oysters, new to our hoards, and Forbidden Fruit, Our Bachelors, etc. Monday evening will also introduce to the puhlic some of the new company—Miss Adeline Stanhope, the new leading lady, Miss Lizzie Harold, the soubrette. The parts they will assume in The Comedy of Errors are hardly of a nature to allow these ladies to show off their respective ahilities, hut their reputation bespeaks for them a favorable reception. The new chef d' orchestra, Mr. Withers, will assume the haton on this occasion; and everything presages an auspicious opening of the new season.

German Theater.—The impression produced by Irschick's first appearance has heen considerahy modified hy the grand performance of last Sunday evening. Although, as the "Maid of Orleans," she gave proof of great talent and ability, there seemed to lack what can only be called the fire of genius. She recited the lines with great elocutionary skill, but in a manner which, to a certain extent, was perfunctory. But her "Brunheld" was cast in a higher mold. It stamped her as one of the hest of modern tragedieunes. She fairly electrified the audience in the more heroic scenes and touched the heart in the softer and more pathetic passages. In gesture and manner she is remarkably graceful. In speech and delivery she is perfect. This performance was a rare treat and was duly appreciated hy the immense audience present. Miss Walden, whose appearance in Dr. Klaus seemed to indicate hut mediocre abilities, played "Crimhilde" intelligently and effectively and gained a recall. Mrs. Witt and Messrs. Freeman, Kadelburg and Hish filled their respective parts ably, though the gentlemen were evidently overweighted. Mr. Diehl, the juvenile of the troupe was miscast, and criticism is, under the circumstances, somewhat unjust. The contrast between the measured, tragic tones of the star and his easy conversational style was rather ludicrous. Taming of the Shrew is the attraction for next Sunday, and this will givs Mme. Irschick an opportunity to show her versatility.

Chiarini's Circus.—The circus closes its four-weeks' run this evening. It has been very successful, and deservedly so. All possibls attention was paid to the comfort and pleasure of the audiences, and a more admirahly arranged tent has rarely heen seen. The feature of this circus is its trained animals. It is useless to deny the possibility, or rather the existence of intelligence in the hrute creation, in face of such arguments as the performance of the heautiful horse, Othello, and of the Bronchos. The Man Serpent is by far the most clever and supple contortionist ever seen on the coast. The horizontal-har performers are of more than ordinary ahility, and in fact each and every performer give evidencs of high rank iu their respective acts.

Laura Honey has composed an opera, entitled The Wreck of the Pinafore, and there is some talk of producing it at the Standard, with Emily Melvills in the cast.

Chit-Chat.—Miss Alhertine is hlind and in want. She will he remembered in the French Spy, and as "Lize" to Chanfrau's "Mose."——Walfert's Roost was the farm-house which Irving bought as a residence, and which he reconstructed into Sunnyside. It was formerly occupied by Walfert Acker, a Dutch farmer.——Matt Lingham and wife (Lizzie Mahan) are disconsolate at the loss of their child Blanche, who died of cholera infantum, in New York, on the 5th instant, aged fourteen months.——The opening spectacle at Nihlo's, for which Voegtlin is painting such heautiful scenery, is entitled Enchantment.——Charlotte Cushman's Newport establishment is taxed at $25,400.——Sara Bernhardt introduced one of her youngsters to a starchy old lady of the azure hlood of England with these words: "Permit me," said she, with an innocent smile, "to introduce you to mon petit accident." She might have said "one of my little accidents," for she has four children.——There is in Paris a phenomenon, who comes from America. It is a female named Miss Theresa Patchwork. This person has three pairs of arms and two pairs of legs, and she can play hoth the piano and violin.——Richard Wagner may visit us next year.——Signor Barili says that maccaroni is one of the hest articles of diet on which to train the singing voice.——Anna Berger and her husband, Leigh Lynch, will form part of a comhination which will include Potter, the elocutionist, and the Swedish Quartst.——Majeroni is to star in a new play, entitled Our Italian Cousins.——Fred Warde will support John McCullough the coming season.——George S. Knight and wife are doing a big husiness in England.——Frank Mayo is playing in London.——Imogene goes to Australia with the next steamer.——Crane and Robson are at the Palace, and have hrought Mesdames C. and R. with them this time.——Stanhope is said to be a pretty woman. Lizzie Harold is, that is already known.——Brown, the comedian, plays a part in California, Through Death Valley, in which the whole talk consists of endless repetitions of the following line: "And that's the opinion of John Henry." Great laughter was occasioned on the opening night by the audihle prompting of these few words.——Withers, the new leader for the California, is said to be a very amiahle and courteous gentleman.

The "O. T. H. E. R." Club will give another of their pleasing entertainments next Monday evening, August 25th, at "Western Addition Hall," the programme consisting of hrilliant olio, a comic reading by the favorite comedian, Mr. C. B. Bishop (of the Baldwin Theater Company), and in conclusion, the laughahle farce of My Turn Next.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Boxing.—The glove fight between Mike Donovan and W. McClellan, at Platt's Hall last Monday, resulted in a draw. The fight lasted over four hours, and ninety-four rounds were fought. Neither of the men were badly punished. In the fourth round McClellan gave Donovan a heavy fall, that injured his right shoulder. This seemed to make him shy, and up to the thirty fifth round McClellan forced the fighting, but receiving a knock down that made him groggy, he too adopted cautious tactics. Whenever the men got close enough for effective work they would clinch and struggle for the fall, so much hard work being done in that way that they were unable to give much punishment. Several times Donovan had good openings to go in and finish the fight, but was too much used up to take advantage of them. McClellan's left seemed to be little or no good to him, his blows all falling short, but he delivered several heavy right-handers that hurt Mike's arm in stopping. McClellan is a much better wrestler than Donovan, but does not deliver his blows so quickly, nor did he fight as well as he has on previous occasions, seeming to give his opponent too much warning when about to strike. This is, no doubt, the result of giving lessons in boxing. The fight, when compared with old-time encounters, looks a very second-class affair. It really was a better display of wrestling than fighting, and we think that there are no two other men living that could stand up after ninety-four wrestling bouts. But the spectators were disappointed, as something different was expected. Great disapprobation was shown at the referee's deciding the fight a draw, although it is true that it was the longest glove fight on record, and looked as if it could be continued indefinitely. There is little doubt that one of the men would have been beaten in less than ten rounds, in which case the public would have been satisfied and no discredit could attach to the loser. Mike Donovan was seconded by Joe Winrow and P. Coyle. McClellan's seconds were W. Edwards and Arthur Chambers, who deserve great credit for the way in which they sent their man up. Before the commencement of the fight, Messrs. Edwards and Chambers were each presented with a handsome gold-headed cane. They left for the East yesterday. Donovan and McClellan will leave for New York in a few days.

Rowing.—As there has been considerable anxiety felt in rowing circles to know the reason that the proposed match between Mr. Leahy, of San Francisco, and Mr. W. Cotsford, of British Columbia, could not be satisfactorily arranged, we give the particulars. Mr. Cotsford published the following challenge:

"I will row any man on the Pacific Coast three or five miles for Five Hundred or One Thousand dollars; the race to be rowed in Victoria Harbor in shells, now in the possession of Thos. Jones.—W. Cotsford, Champion of British Columbia."

On July 28th, as stated in the News Letter, Mr. Leahy telegraphed to Mr. Cotsford, accepting the challenge; but the race to be rowed here, Leahy to pay expenses. Mr. Cotsford replied that his challenge was to row in Victoria Harbor in twin shells, and that he would pay Mr. Leahy's expenses. Mr. Leahy telegraphed: "Cannot accept your terms. Would be proud to row you in best and best boats." Mr. Cotsford would not accept those terms, as he was at great disadvantage as to boats, his shell being rigged with stationary seat and weighing 55 pounds, while that of Leahy only weigbed 30 pounds and bad sliding seat; but he is still willing to make the race according to his challenge. We would suggest that Mr. Leahy offer Mr. Cotsford some consideration to get an improved boat, in which case, no doubt, a match could easily be arranged. Though such a proceeding is unusual, a concession from Leaby would be appreciated by all lovers of sport.——The proposed race between H. Hoyt and Dan Leahy appears to be off, as the time for preliminaries has expired, and no arrangements are yet made. Mr. Leahy issued a challenge to Hoyt, yesterday, and put up $50 deposit for a wager of $500 or $1,000.

Baseball.—The principal game last Sunday was at Oakland, between the Omahas and Oaklands. It was declared a draw for obvious gate money reasons. Good-bye to any enthusiasm in sport when profit and loss are made important factors in deciding a game.——The Mutuals and Athletics also played at Oakland; score, 9 to 6.——At the Recreation Grounds the Knickerbockers and Renos played a one-sided game, the score being 21 to 0.——Games to-morrow: At Recreation Grounds—Renos vs. Eagles, Gatling Battery vs. McMahon.——Yesterday a committee settled the question regarding the division of gate receipts, part of which the Military League has been receiving. The Knickerbocker Club has refused to play under the present regime, and rightly have they done so. The committee could make no satisfactory arrangement, and so we will have the pleasure (?) of seeing the Recreation Grounds divided, and thus rendered almost useless as a ball field.

Swimming.—There will be several races at Alameda to-morrow (Sunday). A prize of $50 is offered by Mr. R. B. Cunningham for a half-mile professional race to come off within two weeks. This gives Messrs. Flemming, Berg, Wolinski and Mohor a chance to try conclusions.——Daily, the Pacific Coast Champion, started for New York last Tuesday, his object being to make a match with Webb, or any one else. The reports that appeared in some of the daily papers, stating he was going to swim Webb for $2,500 were incorrect, as no match is yet arranged. There is no doubt that unless Webb can beat his best time by at least half an hour, Daily can vanquish him easily in a ten-mile race.

Shooting.—Quail-shooting opens the 15th of September. Advices from all parts of the State are to the effect that the birds are very plentiful, especially so around Anabeim.——Snipe are shot in great numbers around Reno.——Doves are plentiful and in splendid condition. Three gentlemen bagged 150, last Sunday, near Redwood City.——Large numbers of pigeons, in good condition, have been received at Sacramento for the coming shooting tournament at the Fair.——Deer are very plentiful all over Humboldt county.——The shooting at Baxter's, last Sunday, was very good; the match for $100 was won by Conrad, who killed 9 to Stack's 5. Mr. Conrad shot against Robinson, beating him by two birds.

Pedestrianism.—There will be a walking-match for juveniles at Saratoga Hall to-morrow.——La Chapelle has challenged Von Berg to a six-day walk, for $1,000 a side and the gate money. If the challenge is not accepted, she will leave for the East next week.——Messrs. Lawton and McNeil have already received the entrance money from twelve expectant winners of the coming six-day walk.——Entries for the Astley belt are closed, and include Weston, Blower Brown, O'Leary, Hazael, Pancbeot and Corkey.——Los Angeles has the fever, and is now suffering from the attack of a three-days' go-as-you-please.

Fishing.—Around Soledad there are several streams full of fine trout, that bite greedily.——Anglers say that the present is one of the best seasons for trout ever known, and, as it does not last much longer, they are all making the most of it.——Salt water fishing is now very good; the bay is full of splendid rock and tomcod, which are easily caught, especially around Alcatraz. Gentlemen fond of fishing, who cannot spare the time to leave the city, can readily indulge their favorite pursuit by taking a boat on the bay.

Yachting.—Owing to the heavy wind and lack of experience, the model yacht race at Saucelito, last Saturday, was anything but a success. Numbers of the boats collided, and only two went over the course, which was so unsatisfactory that it was decided to sail the race over again. It comes off at Lake Merritt to-day, that water being selected on account of its sheltered position.——Nothing has yet been settled respecting the talked-of races between the O'Connor, Consuelo and Anheuser.

Archery.—Ten clubs will compete at the Sacramento State Fair tournament. A splendid time is guaranteed to visiting clubs. It will be the most important archery meeting ever held in America, which is highly creditable to this State, considering the very short time archery has been fashionable.——A club has been started at Watsonville. Prizes are shot for once a week.

EDITOR AND POET.

'Twas a man wrapped up in an ample cloak,
Poetic in his mein,
That went into the office of
An English magazine.

He gave unto the editor
A paper closely writ:
'I would unto your judgment, sir,
A poem submit;
Pray read it carefully and say
What that you think of it.'

Slowly the editor read it through;
On his brow an angry flush
There came as he soliloquized
About 'hogwash,' 'rot' and 'slush.'

And he gave back the manuscript
Unto the bard and said:
'That balled is the very worst
That I have ever read.

'If I such trash as that should dare
Print in my magazine,
Then men would call me a three-ply ass—
And they would be right I ween.

'So, sirrah, take thee a stout sawhorse,
Thereto a bucksaw good;
Thy poesy it is n. g.;
Thy line is sawing wood.'

When that the poet heard these Words
He 'gan to fume and fidget,
And he said unto the editor,
'Thou art a howling idjet!

'Read o'er that ballad again, sirrah,
Read o'er that ballad again,
And then thy candid opinion give—
My name is Alfred Ten——'

'The heaven you say!" cried the editor,
Astonished; then said,
'That poem is the finest thing
That I have ever read.

'It shall appear this very month,'
And, kneeling on the ground,
He gave the Laureate a check
For £1,100.

"TO LET," OR "FOR SALE."

To an observer, wandering about the various streets of San Francisco, the multitudinous changes upon these most monotonous empty-house notices will at once enlighten him to the existence of the very self-evident fact that nearly half of the city is either for sale or to let. In very truth, this Queen City of the Pacific Coast contains about twice as many houses as she has people to occupy them; and whole blocks, not only on the outskirts and in the sand dunes, but even on Dupont and Kearny streets, stare the prevailing deadness of real estate values in the face, and mutely express the doleful fact. The last census gives the information that the population of our city is on the decrease, yet the loss of the three or four thousand therein noticed is not of enough importance to have caused the existing depression. The fundamental cause lies deeper. The people at large are economizing and retrenching in every way, their actual necessities causing such a course. The all-absorbing fact is apparent everywhere that "hard times" are upon us, and these of necessity have to be met hy a corresponding retrenchment in the modes of life of our people. Many of those who have lived in elegant mansions have to be content with others of more modest dimensions; the palaces in many cases are turned into boarding-houses, and the guests of these leave their comfortable homes empty upon the landlord's hands, because they can live more reasonably in apartments. The spacious hotels of the city are but partially filled, and altogether everybody feels the existing condition of things to a greater or a less degree, except, perchance, the very wealthy, and they are agitating the problem whether to emigrate to New York or Europe during these evil days of universal stagnatiou.

Why are times hard in this beautiful city by the sea? Such is the all-prevailing inquiry. The politicians of all parties charge the fault the one upon the other. The magnate of the Sand-Lot says the railroad and the inoffensive Chinaman have done the deed, and agitate the ignorant and the unthinking to acts of communism and plunder—thus bringing boldly to the front the old, old conflict between labor and capital, between the rich and the poor. Is it possible that Kearney and his followers are sincere in these suicidal efforts to drive capital to the wall, and cannot these leaders of the people study a lesson from all past history, and learn that all such efforts have ever been followed by hitter heart-burnings and disappointments? Capital is abundant in the hands of the few, yet when threatened by bold, bad men, whose "glittering generalities" may serve to hide from their blinded followers their own selfish and personal designs, will naturally be withdrawn to the security of other fields of enterprise, where such a condition of society does not exist. The passsage of the new organic act, and the muttered threatenings of the leaders of the W. P. C., we do not hesitate to say, are the fundamental causes of "hard times in California." Defeat the agitators in the coming campaign, and we shall soon see the empty houses filling up with happy faces, and the savings banks ouce more dishursing their golden streams to help along the energy and enterprise of the real workingmen of our State and city.

Now is the time to do this great good. Every honest voter in the State should see to it that he makes no mistake in exercising his noblest right, the right of franchise. God grant that enough good, true patriots may he found to put a quietus upon these "hard times."

INCREASING OUR RAILROADS AND OUR PROSPERITY.

There is an undoubted revival of the railroad interest of the country. Poor's Manual states that, during the year 1873, no less than 2,694 miles of new lines were opened, the total mileage in operation in the United States at that date being 81,841 miles. Since the panic in 1873 there have been constructed 11,563 miles of railroad. In the same time the increase of population has equaled fully 7,000,000. The greater part of this increase has been in the Western and North-western States and Territories. A corresponding demand has been created for the products of manufacturing and commercial industries of the Eastern States. With the general recovery witnessed on every hand, and with an enormous balance of trade with foreign countries in our favor, as we have elsewhere shown, there is every reason to believe that the country, and particularly its railroads, are entering upon a career of unwonted prosperity. The gross earnings of all the roads whose operations have been reported, have equaled $491,103,361, against $472,902,272 for 1877. The figures of internal as well as of external commerce all indicate rapidly increasing prosperity all over the country. The business pulse of California is bound to be quickened ere long. We cannot retrograde, or even stand still, while all the rest of the country is marching to the lively air of an active revival of trade. We who have hitherto led the van will not now be content to drop into the rear. We are persuaded that the dawn is upon us, that the day is breaking that will usher in a new era of prosperity.

LETTER FROM AN "OLD CONTRIBUTOR"

NEW YORK, Aug. 12, 1879.

Dear News Letter: The receipt of the News Letter containing those "old familiar faces" reminds me that I have postponed too long to show my hand, though not my face, in your ever welcome and refreshing pages. I scarcely needed the accompanying "Key" to tell me many of the names, and I was glad indeed to recognize in one and another phiz, so little changed, the "fortemque Gyan, fortemque Cloanthum" of the San Francisco of ten years ago. Your own jocund visage was the first my eye fell upon, and it rejoiced me to see that "Time writes no wrinkle on thine azure brow," but that such as the News Letter's dawn beheld we see thee now.

Amid the burst of admiration at the rare collection of "crowned heads"—heads of beauty, intelligence, wealth and enterprise—which you have brought together "At the Play," I could not but remark that you had here and there indulged your lively sense of humor in one or two cases of juxtaposition. For instance, you have, with malice prepense, placed side by side that par nobile fratrum of opposite theologies, the Right Rev. William Ingraham Kip, D.D., and the Rev. Horatio Stebbins, D.D., the Athanasius and Arius, so to speak, of Californian church history. But do you seriously believe that Athanasius could have sat patiently beside Arius "at the Play?" Would he not have felt it his Christian duty to say to the arch heretic, "Get thee behind me, Satan," and have used his orthodox motors and extensors in punching the misbeliever's head? Or, if you answer that, as they are sitting in "reserved seats," they are bound to be "reserved" in their treatment of each otber, don't you think it cruel and unchristian, to say the least, to put a Socinian acid and an Episcopal alkali in such dramntic contiguity. Have you forgotten that wheu Stebbins's bright and cheery predecessor, the late Thomas Starr King, addressed some words of Christian wisdom and kindliness about eighteen years ago to an Episcopal Sunday School, the poor Bishop took to his bed with inflammation of the tympanum when told of it, and had to put his head in gruel and take a sea voyags before he got over it? Have times so changed, and is the Horatian hexameter, "Tempora mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis," true after all? Are Christians more peaceable to-day than they were in the fourth century, when Athanasius (who, by the way, neither wrote nor ever heard of the Athanasian Creed which the Bishops of England are now trying to bolster up by an explanatory and apologetic note) cursed old Arius and his heresy? The least you can expect for putting Kip and Stebbins side by side is, that the former will excommunicate you from the altar of Trinity Church, and that the latter will insist on your partaking of "coffee and pistols for two." I think that, instead of gazing around you with a gratified air "At the Play," you ought to be sitting on the stool of repentance and undergoing a penitential diet of Kip's sermons with crackers and water gruel. You migbt at least bave put yourself as a "neutral salt" between these theological extremes, and if any personal collision should take place between Stebbins and the Bishop, you ought to be held accountable. Why not, at least, havs put the Congregational Stone as a medium between them, so that when both

> "Proved their doctrines orthodox
> By apostolic blows and knocks," his flinty ribs might have received the concussion?

Barring your theological mixings, the tableau is in every way admirable, and I may tell you that it has created a lively interest in literary circles in New York, as well as in that large but scattered public who have visited California and remember many of its worthies. Only tbs other day I was taking a casual dip in the surf at Coney Island, when I came in contact with a marine body of "too solid flesh," which at the first shock I took to be a porpoise. Who do you tbink it was but the venerable and stalwart Mrs. Harris, whom you and I so well remember for her "Wayside Gushings" in the News Letter a few years since? "Well, I declare! who'd a' thought it?" exclaimed the fleshy poetess, turning gracefully on the small of her hack and screeching "I'm afloat on the sad sea wave, which if I was to sink this minute, if there ain't that gal Sayrah a-waltzing "do Tom" [I perceived she meant deux temps] with the grocer's young man round the corner, and him 'alf dead with the rbeumatics." You will remember that Mrs. Harris's language, like her drinks, was always somewhat "mixed." I could do no less than give her a turn or two in the mazy dance, and then invited her and Sayrah to take a seat (their own, for there were no benches) upon the yellow sands, and join me in some clams, while we talked over our Californian reminiscences. "'Ow is the Old Boy?" inquired Mrs. Harris, and I knew sbe must refer to you. "Salubrious by last accounts," I answered. "I guessed as much," said Mrs. H., "for, 'appenin' along Broadway, which it was Toosday week, with Sayrah, I see on a news stand that there weritable Noos Letter, with "At the Play'—Inquire Within" on the outside as large as life. In course, I bought a copy, and you might have knocked me down with a feather when I saw that there pictur'. As for Sayrah, she 'ollers, 'Lawk, missus, p'raps he's got us among the 'igh-toned females in the dress circle.' 'Out o' sight out o' mind,' Sayrah,' says I, 'other poets have long since put me out of his 'owdaciou 'ead. But this I will never denige, that if ever a human bein' 'ad sn inventive genus, the Old Boy is that indiwiddle, which is no more than I said when he took me up with him in his Avitor and dropped me ont 'alf way between this globe and a planet 'overin' over the next block, under the wague pretext tbat it was necessary to throw out ballast."

I took a note at the time of Mrs. Harris's recollections, knowing that her favorable opinion would be grateful to you. Neither she nor Sayrah look a day older than when you saw them last.

We have had very changeable weather here for some time, excessively hot days, alternating with unpleasantly cold ones. Everybody has been sick, and even my clock has a tic doloureux.

Hoping to write again next week, I remain ever, Dear News Letter,
Yours chronically, AN OLD CONTRIBUTOR.

THE MAYORALTY.

The candidates for the Mayoralty are now before the citizens. Of the man Kalloch we have our say in another column. We have endeavored to do him justice, but are conscious of failure, arising from the impossibility of describing indecency in decent language. His candidacy for the highest city office is an insult to the honor of men and the virtue of women. To describe him adequately is impossible. His name has become so identified with evil, that it carries with it its own meaning. That it does is perhaps the best reason why it should he hidden away out of sight and out of hearing. It is not a thing to read every morning, and to hear pronounced every evening in the family circle, as representing the person of the city's chief magistrate. It has come to be an unsavory sound, indicating an incarnation of moral filth, for which there is no other name but that of —Kalloch. He can and must be defeated. Mr. Flint has been nominated by the Republicans. A reputable man of responsibility, of business experience, of cleanly habits and good repute, he would make a safe and respectable Mayor. Mr. David Farquharson, the well-known architect, has been nominated by the fushionists. He is a candidate of undoubted availability. Honest, firm, resolute, genial, widely known, generally respected, capable and experienced, it would be difficult to select a man more generally acceptable to taxpayers. As a leading architect, he has been a man of affairs, who has been brought into contact with business men and with mechanics. His business capacity and executive ability have inspired the confidence of those who have employed him, while his contact with workingmen has given him an intimate knowledge of, and close sympathy with those whom he has employed. Acceptable to men of property, he ought to he equally so to workingmen. An owner of houses in several portions of the city, all of which are the results of the earnings of work, he satisfies the conservative taxpayer as he ought to satisfy the mechanic and laborer. He has the advantage over Mr. Flint that he is better known and has had his good qualities more thoroughly tested. Both are life-long Republicans, and either should he acceptable to that party. Why they are both candidates is more than we can tell. Both are conservative men, sincerely anxious, it is to he presumed, to save the city from the disgrace of electing Kalloch. We suppose it is too much to expect either to retire in favor of the other. Failing that, the taxpayers will unite upon the one that is most likely to win. We believe Mr. Farquharson has the best chance. One hears his name favorably mentioned on the streets a dozen times for every single allusion to Mr. Flint. The one candidate is more widely understood and better known than the other. This is no disparagement of Mr. Flint, it simply means that Mr. Farquharson has been longer here, has had more experience, and has come into contact with more people. He is, therefore, the more popular candidate, and is, in consequence, the best calculated to defeat the candidate of the slums and the sand-lots. We are not concerned whether Mr. Flint or Mr. Farquharson wins. But we are concerned that one of them shall win. We are persuaded that neither of them will, unless there is a general understanding among conservative men to unite on the strongest candidate, irrespective of party affiliations or newspaper predilections. The dailies, one and all, vannt their pretended regard for the city's welfare; yet they are working their level best to bring upon San Francisco the greatest disgrace that ever befell it. They insist upon rival candidates, knowing full well that the probable effect will he the election of Kalloch. A plague upon such a press! What the papers refuse to do, that thoughtful citizens ought to accomplish. There should he a tacit understanding to unite upon the conservative candidate whose strength before the people is the greatest. That is the imperative duty of the hour.

THE SUPREME BENCH.

The outward and visible signs appear to us to indicate the success of the Republican State ticket, and there is danger that the entire Supreme Bench may he Republican. We have no objection to offer to the political portion of the ticket, but the judicial is a very different matter. It would be a misfortune to have all the judges of one political party; moreover, there are at least two men on the Republican judicial ticket who are unfit to he there, and certainly ought to he badly scratched even by their own party. All honest men, whatever their politics, are interested in the integrity and capability of our judges. Before the law men are not known for their politics, but for the righteousness of their cause. A Republican who goes into court with a good case, would sooner have it tried by an incorruptible and able Democrat than hy a doubtful Republican. Then why should not Republicans vote for the best men? Their nominee, Richards, has just had to submit to a most scathing rebuke. He has been repudiated hy his own party friends at his home. They have refused to print his name on the ticket, and have substituted a most able Democrat, in the person of Judge E. W. McKinstry. They are neighbors and party friends of Richards, and knowing him, they declare him to he unfit for the position to which he aspires, and act accordingly. Their example is worthy of all praise, and ought to be followed throughout the State. Their decision ought to he final as to Richards. It ought also to be conclusive as to the election of McKinstry. That is so much gained. Then Wheeler is on the ticket. He ought not to have been placed there, and we understand he would not have been but for an accident. There was much confusion in balloting, and it is by no means certain to this day that he really secured a sufficient vote. Had the matter been reconsidered, he would have been defeated. But, beyond all this, he is an unfit man to elevate to the Supreme Bench. A doubtful lawyer, his decisions have been frequently reversed; naturally an indolent man, his cases are in arrear; weak, he too frequently succumbs to prominent members of the bar. When these truths are stated, enough is said to show his unfitness. If we were to cut a little below what appears on the surface, we might exhibit sores that would he even more couclusive. There ought not to he any hesitation in scratching his name and substituting that of McKee, or Thornton, or Sharpstein. If Republicans generally will do this, (and why should they not?) then there will be two honest, capable Democratic Judges to five Republicans—a result that ought to satisfy the most straight-laced member of the party that is likely to win. We think it a pity that party nominations for the judiciary were made at all; but having been made, the concession we have suggested is one that ought to recommend itself to the fairness and good sense of Republican voters generally. Let us have a Supreme Bench that will inspire the confidence of men of all parties. Richards and Wheeler, being at best but weak nominees, should he scratched by Republicans everywhere.

KALLOCH'S CHEEK.

From the time that he was littered
At the top of "Bitter Creek"
(Where all the bad men come from),
'Twere impossible to speak
In terms too strong in praise of This Evangelist of Cheek!

From the germ of his existence
To his lusty middle age,
The record of his life presents
A foully blotted page,
Yet disgrace and scorn of honest men
His cheek cannot assuage.

When a parson he a ewe-lamb
Deliherately "mashed,"
And, with her kind assistance,
The seventh commandment smashed,
For which both matron and divine
Deserved to be well thrasbed.

While practicing adultery,
Morality he'd preach,
And, though a crooked rogue himself,
Straight godliness he'd teach;
O! where's the limit of the hight
That Kalloch's Cheek can reach?

And now he's going to run for Mayor—
This loathsome moral wreck
Would have the place that should he kept
Most free from flaw and fleck!
Why, if he stood upon his head
His gall would break his neck.

POLITICS IN THE CITY.

There has, perhaps, never been an election in this city of more importance than that which will take place on the 3d of September. We have witnessed many objectionable appointments to office, but the nominations of the Workingmen, now that they have formed themselves into a distinct party and come out in their true colors, are, in the main, altogether unacceptable. They have acquired a fictitious importance through the advocacy, now abandoned, of two papers running a race of injury to the State, hy their disgraceful rivalry, and the strength the Workingmen's Party have thus gained makes it not improbable that they may carry the city. Any such result would he a calamity and a disgrace, and the utmost efforts of responsible citizens ought to he brought to bear on indifferent voters, so as to bring as many as possible to the poll to defeat the Workingmen's candidates. A party that nominates such a list of, for the most part, totally unsuitable men, is unworthy of support or countenance; hut the fact of three tickets heing in the field makes the Workingmen strong in the contest. The nomination of such a man as Kalloch for Mayor—a man of undoubtedly disreputable character—speaks volumes for the unfitness of the Workingmen to act an honorable part where they presume to dictate. If disgraceful antecedents are to be a recommendation, rather than a har to promotion to high office, then it is about time that vigilance committees were heing formed to take some means to counteract the effect of the votes of ignorant and irresponsihle numhers. There never was yet a workingmen's party in the history of the world that worked out a long and praiseworthy career. Honest poverty may be a very admirable thing, though, on the whole, people prefer honest riches—and if honest riches cannot he obtained, then a very large class of people will prefer dishonest riches. But honest poverty always has heen, and is now, a very precarious condition of life, and one that those living in it are perpetually desirous of exchanging for a more comfortable existence. The consequence has heen that in all ages poor men have succumbed to the temptation of wealth, and workingmen's parties have been wrecked through the corruption of their leaders. The present Workingmen's Party in this State may possihly succeed in this city, if no where else; but one single success will he fatal to them. Jealousy and envy, acting on corruption, dishonesty and incompetence, will soon terminate their prospects, if they once get into office and come under the fierce glare of public criticism. How can Kalloch, the spotted parson—the very type of the unworthy citizen, who has no virtues and is deeply stained with vices—wash out his damning spots, or be anything hut an unworthy and disgraced representative of a great city like our own? He may htly represent San Quentin and its citizens, whose appropriate reward is to he in durance vile; hut that he should ever be able to climh into the highest civic office would hs an infamy of the deepest dye to a city which has not yet embraced the creed of ruffianism and villainy. Yet, there is undoubtedly very great danger that through the votes of irresponsihle and communistic numhers, Kalloch will be the next Mayor of the city, and thus it hecomes the duty of every honest, responsible citizen to do his utmost to avert a calamity that would stamp this city with disgrace over the whole civilized world.

THE HARD TIMES COMMITTEE.

This governmental junketing party, accompanied by their sisters, cousins and aunts, have come, and, thanks he to God, have gone again. They traveled over the continent in a palace car, at the expense of the Government; tbey dined and wined and lodged sumptuously at the Palace Hotel, and now they have gone to visit the big trees and the Yosemite Valley, all in the interests of labor! During their brief sojourn in this city they hob-nobbed with the kings of the Sand-Lot, and proclaimed in advance open hostilbty to Chinese cheap labor. They visited the sweet smelling alleys and avenues of Chinatown, and sought out all the antagonistic testimony they could find, and having thus faithfully completed their alloted task, now betake themselves home again, fully educated to a complete understanding of the important mission in which they are engaged. We shall look with interest for the report of this most potent labor committee. Without doubt, the transcript of their investigations will have a powerful effect upon the minds of the American people at large, especially the references to the hotel accommodations and the big trees! It is well, however, to state, for the information of our readers at the East, that the investigation, as conducted by the Committee, was a farce from its reception to its exit. It was notoriously unfair and one-sided, and such heing the case, all the volunteer testimony given was of the nature of special pleading. It is about time that the authorities at Washington should stop all such diaholical expeditions as the one under crucifixion. These Committee-men fully demonstrated by their action here that they have the "hard time" business in hand merely as a free pass for a continental tour; and this heing self-evident, their "impressions" should he noted only to be immediately forgotten. From all such committees hereafter, good Lord deliver us!

Col. James A. Laven is the nominee of the Democrats and Workingmen, for Supervisor from the Ninth Ward. As a School Director, he has shown special aptitude for public business, and an earnest desire to do his whole duty. He has made a record that is the best evidence that he will make an intelligent and honest Supervisor.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier"' "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

"My Country 'tis of Thee." Scene——Ward Workingmen's Club, regular weekly meeting. Full attendance, with fun in prospect. After the usual routine, Mr. Rafferty rises to address the chair and says: "Misther Prisidint, I roise to a pint of ordher." Mr. President—"Shtate your pint, sor." Mr. Rafferty—"Sor, I roise to shtate that there is now, sor, in this assimblage, sor, an immissary of the inimy—a shnake in the grass—a voiper that we've nnrchured in our huzzums, a sloinuy, top-knotted thraitor——" Mr. President—"Mr. Rafferty, shtate, if you plaze, the gintleman's cognomen and don't be wasting our valyable toime." Mr. Rafferty—"Sor, I saw him wid my own two oyes last noight and the noight before at the Dinicrat and Bilk club meetings, and he wor ilamagnzlin and conyuhiatin wid thim an' I heerd him wid my own two ears oferin' to sell the saycrets of this organization to the Bilk prisidint; and I now mov' and Jimmy Dwyer 'll sicond the motion, that one-eyed Dolan be expilled from this club, at wonst, for thraison." Mr. Dolan—"D'ye mane to shtate, Mr. Rafferty, that oim a thraitor, or that I war gallivantin' wid the inimy?" Mr. Rafferty—"Oi do, an' d'ye dar denoy it?" Mr. Dolan—"Who pounded the Widow Hoolahan's goat?" Mr. Rafferty—"An' who shtole Andy McGuhbin's tarrier?" Mr. Dolan—"D'ye mane to say oim a dog-shtaler as well as a liar? D'ye now?" Mr. Rafferty—"I do, ye durty, schaming, red-headed louse!" Mr. Dolan—"The curse o' Crum'll on ye! Take that, an' that, an' that!" Set-to, general uproar, free fight, everybody pummeling everybody else, heads in chancery, eyes in mourning, teeth lying around loose. Janitor turns off gas but confusion continues. President finally roars out: "I adjorn yees for a week to repair damages. It wor a foine hit of a scrimmage. Let's all g'out to Lanty McLaughlin's and take a dhrink." Exeunt omnes. "Sweet land of liberty, of thee I sing!"

A young lady correspondent, in that corporate cemetery known as Oakland, writes to ask us for directions for "selecting a good bow." Our interrogater doesn't spell as though she had graduated from Mill's Seminary, but, all the same, we can't bear to withhold the information she desires on so important a subject. In the first place, a beau to be one of promise (there is a joke to be dug out of this sentence by any one having plenty of endurance and leisure), should be about four feet and a half high, freckled, have red hair, no visible moustache, and the smallest amount of intellect possible for the purposes of human existence. In fact, in the latter respect, he need only possess that premature order of intelligence enabling one to hunt shelter when it rains, and it rains very seldom in this locality, as we all know. The material result of all this will inevitably be, that the young male being in question is the son of some one of the coin aristocracy of this favored locality, and his "guv" will "cut up fat" for a million or two. A beau of this eminently local discription will be very fatiguing to set up evenings with, and calculated to imbue his sweetheart with a week's settled gloom after a few laps round the gallery walking track of the Pavilion; but, then, the occasional jingle of the twenties in his vest pocket will cast the soft allurement of hope over the monotony of the thing. By all means, "Carrie," freeze to a beau of this sort. Tell him he wears the highest collar of any young man you know, and that he can probably make bigger runs at billiards than any other juvenile pumpkin in town, and your chances for prospective good clothes and unlimited Paris are first-rate. Go in, Carrie!

Bro. Pickering's morning paper suggests a new and infallible test of true greatness, by the application of which every American—and especially every Californian—citizen can promptly gauge the moral worth and intellectual caliber of illustrious foreigners who visit our side of the Atlantic on errands of business or pleasure. "When a truly great man," says the Call, "comes to this country from abroad, and receives those respectful attentions to which his merits entitle him, he is almost sure to return home well pleased. It was so with Dean Stanley; and the Duke of Argyll, who departed from our shores only a fortnight ago, was very free in expressing admiration of the way in which he had been entertained. He informed the friends who escorted him on board the ship that he had enjoyed his tour very much, and that he had learned a good deal that the Old World could not teach." Here is the true touch-stone by which to try the merits of our visitors from abroad. If they "crack us up they are truly great men. If, on the other hand, they criticise our climate, our institutions or our manners, they are dyspeptic critics and peripatetic hook-makers, swollen with aristocratic prejudices and anti-republican malice.

A person acquainted with Perkins from his youth up arrived in the city last week, and gives some curious particulars of the future Governor's life. Perkins was always something of a monopolist. He wore his own coats and trowsers, and kept them for his own use; and he was mean enough to do his own eating, instead of hiring a poorer boy to do it for him. These detestable practices he still keeps up. At no time in his life has he been known to give away a handful of molasses; and when he has grudgingly yielded to a prayer for a drink of water, he has always compelled the unfortunate sufferer with raging thirst to take the liquid into his own throat. His desire to get all he can has even led Perkins to swallow his pills, whether sugar-coated or not; so that the nauseous mixtures, which the soul shudders at, go into the mouth of this monopolist as if they were good. Such and so hateful is avarice! Is a man like this fit to govern a fair commonwealth like California? Had he a spark of generosity, he would hire a workingman at five dollars a day to take his medicine, but he meanly saves the money and does his own working.

It is the wonder of wonders that all the paragraphers in the country have not long ago been consigned to the Insane Asylums, not on account of any especial strain on their unfortunate minds, but simply from the fact that every fat-wit of their acquaintance makes it a point to daily button hole them in some corner and inflict them with a recital of a "devilish neat thing Brown said the other night, my boy. I'm sure you can work it up into a good thing." No wonder Mark Twain and that king of the craft, Max Adler, so earnestly advocate the abolition of capital punishment. They want to feel safer than they now do when compelled to lure off into a solitary spot some such individual as above described, and murder him in cold blood.

The testimony before the Hard-Times Committee is published in a garbled form by the daily papers. We have had access to the notes, and are able to give a few items which were suppressed: Q.—Is the presence of white men desirable on this coast? A.—It is not. White men are liable to dirty faces, in our prevailing dust storms, and their presence is obnoxious to the Indians. Q.—Do white men purchase land, as a general thing? A.—They do not. As a general thing they prefer to steal it, or squat on the Sand-Lot. Q.—Do white men readily adopt Christianity? A.—If they think they can make something by it, they do; if not, not. Q.—Are white men ready and willing to work? A.—Yes, at draw poker or pedro; but they always require two hits to get across the hay, and then they are not strong enough to get there. Q.—Are there any workingmen out of employment in the city? A.—Not one. They are all working hard for the coming election. Q.—Are there any individuals with large landed estates in their hands? A.—Any number of them, that have not seen soap and water since they got here. Q.—Do you think you've said enough? A.—Almost.

And now let all good citizens rejoice, and Te Deums be sung in all the churches. The fierce Democracy and the dignified aristocrats of the Plug Hat Brigade have joined hands. The sans culotte and the claw-hammer will be seen side by side in torchlight processions, marching on to victory, and San Francisco will have an honest municipal government. The cohesive power of public plunder has prevailed over the animosities of faction; the offices are fairly divided, the spoils equitably parceled out, and the Chronicle is happy. Charley De Young will name the Mayor, Auditor, Assessor, Recorder, County Clerk, City and County Attorney, Coroner, Superintendent of Public Schools, six Superior Judges, three Justices of the Peace, six School Directors and six Supervisors. He is content, and asks no more. The Democrats can have the leavings. Let Kearney tremble, and yell Hemp! with frantic energy. Let Kalloch fall upon his knees, and address his most fervent appeal to the Throne against the perils of this potent coalition, and let Cox shout Hallelujah! as he contemplates the prospective rout of his reverend enemy.

A young bank clerk, married just a week, is missing at Montreal. The night he disappeared he thoughtfully sent a note to his wife to say that he had an engagement, but would see her on Sunday. This entirely natural course of conduct in a bridegroom excites unpleasant and unbecoming comment in the Montreal papers, which cannot be too severely blamed. The least that can be done, when you find yourself unable to come to time, is to send a written apology, and the Montreal man acted with genuine courtesy, and deserves commendation. If his engagement is prolonged beyond the assigned limit, that may be no fault of his. It is possible he went fishing and got a bite, or he may have found that he had committed one mistake in marrying and thought that another could do no harm; or he may have left his family in order to marry and been recalled in haste; or, perhaps, he went to see a man, or to look for a balance of the bank's hooks. There are fifty reason's for a married man's staying away from home if he is respectable.

The Hard Times Committee are in ecstacies with our salubrious climate. They themselves have said it, and it's greatly to their credit, that before they came here they had no idea how much fog a man could swallow in a week and still live. All but one of the committee are under the doctor's care for neuralgia in face and ears, complicated in the latter organ with incipient chronic humming, which sounds like "Green peas and strawberries all the year." They have climbed Telegraph and Russian hills every day since their arrival to get a view of our glorious bay; and are going home under the impression that we shut it in with a white-washed fence for fear of its taking cold in our balmy summer air. Altogether, they are very glad they came, because they know too much to be caught a second time.

It is surprising how some usually notable men will occasionally let slip the most obviously profitable speculation. A well-known circus proprietor here, wishing to be the first in the field, last week telegraphed Conkling and Sprague, offering them their expenses and half the gate money to come here and fight it out at the Pavilion according to the amended rules of the prize ring. It will surprise the average reader to learn that not only was this handsome offer not accepted, but up to our going to press no answer had been received whatever. Is it possible for a couple of politicians to get so mad as to become blind to their own pecuniary interests?

A paper, generally friendly to the Irish, calls the Irish University Bill, just passed by Parliament, a sop to Cerberus; which rather stumped us. Consulting the dictionary, we found that Cerberus was a dog with three heads, that guarded the gate of Hell. The meaning of the allusion, therefore, appears to be that Irelaud is Hell, and the Home-Rule Party a three-headed dog; and we think this rather heavy on the Irish, especially from a friend.

An exhausted walker was found at Blue Cañon, two days ago. She had no money and refused food. We don't have to go so far to find these exhausted tramps in this region. All about the streets they refuse food, and want two bits. We can spare a few to Blue Cañon.

"Who," said a sarcastic H. B. speaker at Mendocino, the other day, on being interrupted by one of his audience, "Who brayed there?" "It was an echo," replied the disturber, and the disgusted orator sat down like a load of bricks.

Rough on Chicago.—The railroad combination has put up the price of passage for live hogs from Chicago to New York to forty-five cents, and most of the business men say they can't afford to travel at such rates.

The telegraph reports the Greeks under arms, but there's nothing new in it. They can be found in that condition at any hour of the day or night by the man who feels as if he had lost a few.

In dividing the assets of the late firm of Kearney & DeYoung the agitator secured the voters and virility, while his "pard" only got the Bilks and blackguardism. Hinc illae lachrymae.

Political Advice.—Republicans advise voters who are in doubt as to which candidate to choose for Mayor, to "pick their 'Flint.'"

Mush-rooms are springing up all over town. We mean the places where they give you oatmeal and milk for ten cents.

Ladies who have injured the skin by the constant use of cosmetics may do much to restore their faces to that beauty which nature alone can give by constantly using PHOSPHATE SOAP.

For chapped hands the constant use of PHOSPHATE SOAP will be recommended by all who give it one fair trial.

If you want a nice article of Toilet Soap and something that is beneficial to the skin, buy PHOSPHATE SOAP.

Ladies who wish to make the skin look beautiful and natural should use PHOSPHATE SOAP.

Manufactured by "Standard Soap Co.," 204 Sacramento St., San Francisco.

NOTABILIA.

THE PEDDLER'S SONG.

Lawn as white as driven snow;
Cypress black as e'er was crow;
Gloves as sweet as damask roses;
Masks for faces and for noses;
Bugle-bracelet, necklace, amber;
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Gold quoifs and stomachers,
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks of steel.
What maids lack from head to heel:
Come buy of me, come; come buy, come buy,
Buy, lads, or else your lasses cry.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

That dreadful affliction, Epilepsy, Convulsions or Fits, soon becomes firmly fixed hy habit, each attack increasing the liability to a return, and adding greatly to the difficulty of arresting the disorder. In the absence of proper treatment, a mere faintness, with slight muscular twitchings, occurring at long intervals, in time become violent convulsions of great frequency, and the patient gradually sinks into imbecility. If relief is obtainable at all after the disease is thus firmly seated, it must he from some treatment which is permanent in its effects, and which not only has a tendency to suppress the attacks, hut which will remove the morhid tendency to relapse. Dr. Jayne's Alterative has happily heen fouud to answer this purpose admirably: it gradually changes the morhid coudition of the system, removes the cause of the disease, and when its use is continued for a sufficient length of time, produces a permanent cure. Let the afflicted try it. Sold hy Crane & Brigham, San Francisco.

The secret causes of the Zulu War are heginning to leak out at last, and, as usual, there is not only one woman in the affair hut a whole hevy of women. One of Cetewayo's wives was presented hy Sir Bartle Frere with a packet of Madame Rachel's Enamel Bloom, and the use of this so enhanced the heauty of the dusky helle that the Zulu King transferred his affections to her, and left his former queen to hurst with envy. The wrath of South-African Dido turned against all concerned, most of all against Sir Bartle Frere and the Government he represented; and hy a series of intrigues a collision was hrought about, and the fatal gift destroyed. But Chas. Langley & Co. have supplied all druggists with a fresh lot.

Odd.—It is very strange that the "Flogging in the Army" discussion should have proved so serious an affair, for we quite thought a dehate upon "cats" would necessarily he amewsing.—Fun.

The neatest, prettiest and most fashionahly trimmed honnets, it is almost unnecessary to say, are at Mrs. Skidmore's, 1114 Market street. Her stock of fashionahle hats, just received from Paris and New York, is enough to make an old hachelor at once enthusiastic and generous; and we know one of these shellhacks who has heen pretty well plucked hy his two young nieces this past week. The girls, who had seen some perfect loves of honnets at Mrs. Skidmore's, just too sweet for anything, and so they laid hold of Uncle Ned and hauled him off in the way that the good uncles go. He growled, of course; hut he is immensely proud when he escorts his nieces down town.

In New York they have a Cool Burgess, who seems to he somewhat of a puhlic character, and is honored with a paragraph in the daily papers occasionally. This shows that New York is a long way hehind us, since we have a good many thousand cool hurgesses, who cross the hay every day or two to hathe in the soft, warm waters of the Long Branch Alameda Baths, where the hottom is a clear sand and the tides come in fresh from the Pacific. The level is constantly maintained a little above that of high tide hy force-pumps; and the exposure to the sun keeps the temperature delicious. The towels are as soft as velvet, each one going through their complete laundry as fast as used.

A Solitary Exception.—The one dog who hasn't had his day this year—the hlue skye.—Punch.

What is the depth of depravation? Some hold it to he a nomination to Congress, others an election to the Board of Education, others to be mistaken for Henry Ward Beecher, and a few to he without oyster sauce for the turkey; hut these are all wrong. The lowest deep to which human heings can fall is to be ignorant of the virtues of Landsberger's Private Cuvée, hecause this shows a brutal insensibility to the highest of human joys, the due and delicate absorption of genuine champagne. The orders for this supreme product of our generous California sun and soil are multiplying daily.

Every man who uses the pen—and this means 100 men out of every 90—knows what a nuisance it is to stop every few minutes to dip it into the ink. Why should not ink flow like a mountain spring, or a widower's tears, or the Widow Crusoe's oil jug? This thought has found expression in the McKinnon Pen, which is filled in the morning and serves for twenty-four hours' steady writing of the most rapid reporter or long-winded minister. The McKinnon is elegantly finished in various sizes, can be carried in the pocket, and is always serviceable. Agents, A. S. Spence & Co., 24 Geary street.

Ex-Senator and Ex-Gov. Sprague, it is confidently affirmed, never speaks of Mrs. Sprague without calling her his "infatuated" wife. A deplorable case if true; and Mrs. Sprague is forced to defend herself by alluding to her "fatuous" husband. It is bad when people who should be so dear to each other are brought to the use of such terms; and the public, naturally interested in the matter, is now in a position to decide which of the two hits the nail on the head, since Bradley & Rulofson have brought out perfect likenesses of both, in their unequaled photograph gallery.

Not more than 20,000 shares of the Panama Canal stock have heen disposed of, and there seems to be a kind of indifference to the undertaking in the public mind of both continents. This is much to he regretted, for we all need the canal to civilize us a good deal more. At the same time, the demand for those admirahle hats from White's, 614 Commercial street, would make De Lesseps turn green with jealousy, since there is positively no limit to the number to be disposed of, and the demand grows with every day. Canals we may have, hut hats we must; and White's are all we want.

At last all the voters are registered, or, if they are not, there is no chance for them this year, and they will have to wait. The proud privilege of American citizenship has its drawhacks when a freeman finds the door shut in his face for a mere technical detail; hut there is solid comfort in the reflection that at Swain's, 213 Sutter street, the registration office is always open, and every one who knows a good meal is entitled to rights of citizenship. No previous declaration needed. One has only to walk into this cosiest of all restaurants and enjoy the hest in quiet.

The Moors are providing themselves with Armstrong guns from England, and mounting their batteries at Tangier, nohody knows for what; hut the general impression is, that they are tired of heing alluded to in English hallads as "desolate moors," and mean to go into the husiness of making other people desolate. Which seems sensihle; hut how much hetter it would he if all Moors, Christians and white people provided themselves with Union Ranges, from J. De La Montanya, Jackson helow Battery, and eat their perfect dinners in peace.

When you find a good thing, freeze to it. In this energetic way does the slang of the day, that protoplasm of coming speech, lay down an excellent principle of conduct for the guidance of the householder. A man with a family to hring up needs to rememher this admirable maxim; and when he is looking for a man to make his hoots and shoes, let him go to 327 Dupont street, and set Frese to it. There he will find an artist, who uses only the very hest leather and makes a perfect fit.

The visitors to the Fair are many and their tastes infinitely varied, and this is a hlessing; hut all of them live in houses, and have need of water and light, and nowhere, in or out of Fairs, do they find any firm ahle to supply their needs in these matters as well as McNally & Hawkins, under the Grand Hotel. This old, pioneer house keeps itself at the head for style and heauty in fittings, chandeliers, lamps, etc., and for finish and thoroughness in plumhing.

We see by the daily papers that American citizens are playing the part of Turkish slaves, under the heel of a grinding Railroad monopoly; and we shudder at the awful picture of despair and degradation long drawn out. Who can think of these things and not weep? But how much worse it is to find free Americans, who ought to know good whisky from had, drinking anything hut F. & P. J. Cassin's O. K. Golden Plantation? This is, indeed, worse than Turkish slavery.

Any man who complains of feeling dry in the mouth and dull of head, with a general all-over-ishness, deserves his fate if he lets the thing go on, when Napa Soda is at hand, ready to sparkle and hubhle all the nonsense out of him aud make him bright and cheery in two days. There is no such wholesome heverage, at once a tonic and a corrective.

COHEN'S FALSIFICATION AND SEABOUGH'S CRAZE.

Historical, Personal and Interesting.

The astute, wiley Cohen, usually so shy and hard to trap, is just now presenting a sight most curious to behold. He is floundering in a sea of false figures. His errors heing detected and exposed, he cries, "help, help!" And he gets it. The ahle-hodied editor of the Chronicle comes to his relief—not one moment too soon. If relief were to come at all, that was ahout the only quarter from which it might be expected. The truth is—and it might as well now be fully told—that Seahough is the emhodiment of all there is in the anti-railroad craze in this State. He is at once the father and mother of the thing. To his fecund brain it owes its conception; he delivered it, and has nursed it these many years. It has always heen a lame, halting, crazy hantling; hut, with true parental instinct, he loves his poor cripple hetter than all ths rest of his offspring. It has cost him many weary days and many sad nights of watchful care. In sore travail of hody and deep anguish of spirit it was brought forth, and, from the hour of its hirth until now, it has demanded never-ceasing, never-ending solicitude, in order to keep its sickly life in its puny hody. Life has seemed, time and time again, to almost ehh out of it; hut, with a marvelous fertility of resources and with a soul-ahsorhing passion that has amounted to a frenzy, he has imparted to it renewed vigor—a sickly, spasmodic vigor, to he sure, hut, nevertheless, whatever of vigor it possesses.

Seahough was a Sacramentan. He loved his village of the plain, and prided himself that the idea of the great transcontinental railroad was a local production. In those days he was a railroad man. He threw himself into the advocacy of the project with the ahsorbing passion that is characteristic of the man. He urged the loaning of the credit of the State and nation to the great undertaking. He never tired in his self-appointed position of chief writer to the concern. The road was a military necessity; its construction was essential to the unity of the country; nothing less would suffice to keep California and the Pacific Coast in the Union; its completion would exalt the nation in the eyes of the world, and, ahove all, it would cover Sacramento with imperishable glory and cause the name of Seahough to live forever, for was not he the brains of the great project? It was certain that he himself thought so. He succseded in stirring the heart of Sacramento, and Sacramento was at that time to him all the world.

But while he was at work building the road in words, others were engaged in huilding it in fact. It might he well enough, in its way, to enlist the sympathies of the Sacramento villagers, hut it was the hard coin of the world that was needed. Credit had to be established at home and ahroad, financing, on a large scale, had to he conducted with skill and success, material had to he brought round the Horn, the Sierras had to he mounted and the alkali plains crossed. In short, the mighty work had to he done—not merely talked ahout. Editorial articles were well, in their way, hut they didn't build the road. It was Seahough's great mistaks that he early thought, and still vainly imagines, they did. That error has been the father of many suhsequent ones. The time came when doing, and not talking, was essential. The day of the constructor of words had passed, and that of the actual constructors of the road had hegun. The editorial writer was superseded in importance hy the engineer, the machinist, and the navvy, and suhsequently by the traffic superintendent, the freight manager and the ticket agent. The theories of the editor had to give place to the practical doings of the experts. Seahough found himself at sea. His occupation was gone. The stage having passed at which he was capahle of advising, his advice was no longer listened to. This was more than the imperious spirit of the Great Villager could stand. Had not Sacramento conceived the thing, and was not Seahough the hrains of Sacramento? But the nohlest Sacramentan of them all, though he might he, he yet reasoned most falsely. He seemed to say: "Is thy servant a dog, that his heard should he thus spit upon?" He would he revenged, that he would. He who had huilt (or rather, thought he had) could also destroy. He who, with his Sacramento Union, had constructed the railroad, and raised up its kings, could dethrone them and confiscate the road. Thus was the great anti-railroad craze horn. From that hour Seahough has nursed it and warmed it, and coddled it, until at last he is a monomaniac who can think of hut one suhject, write only on one topic, and live for hut one purpose—the destruction of the railroad.

It may seem extravagant to attribute the craze of the many to the mania of one; but it is true, nevertheless. Mania, if not infectious, is often exceedingly seductive. Its victims talk with so much earnestness and frequently with such seeming good sense that listeners are often fooled, and even experts are sometimes deceived. In the case hefore us, it is said that the mad doctor who was called in has been infected with the virus. Dr. Shurtleff is believed to have hecome as hadly railroad-crazed as is his patient, Seahough. Anyhow the thing spreads. Seahough hrought the proprietors of the Sacramento Union completely under its spsll. They allowed him to permeate the paper with his mania, and it died of the disease. That result terrihly irritated Seahough's trouhle, which grew fearfully and wonderfully worse in consequence. Upon the death of the Union, he went to the Bulletin and affected that almost unto death. Even Fitch was hrought completely under the influence of the mania, until cured by the skillful, compromising arts of his senior partner, who was not hrought so closely in contact with the influence of Seabough's spell. Newton Booth was hrought under the same influence at Sacramento, and it was only when he escaped to Washington that he got rid of Seabough and his mania at the same time. He now looks and acts as if he were entirely convalescent. Then Seahough went to the Chronicle. De Young, heing forewarned, thought himself forearmed. He wouldn't let Seabough write on railroad topics, and he didn't for quite awhile. But such is the suhtle character of the mania, so certainly does it work its way into the system, that even De Young has got it hadly. He is showing worse symptoms than the Union did when it died, or than the Bulletin did when it called in an experienced physician. Circumstances arose which predisposed De Young to the disease. His husiness opponents came to a sound and healthy conditiou of mind ou the railroad question. Now, it is one of the idiosyncrasies of De Young that whatever his rivals are, that he is not. When they were anti-railroad he was pro-railroad. When they suddenly came over to De Young's side, De Young went as suddenly over to theirs. This made Seshough's mania invaluable. It is now all there is to the political, and, therefore, financial, stock in trade of the Chronicle. Seahough is the brains and genius of the whole husiness—for it is a husiness. At least, it is so with De Young, though with Seahough it is a passion of the mind. Yea, verily, as ahsorhing a passion as can fill the soul and fire the intellect of a man of strong feelings and great talent. Others besides De Young are in the husiness part of the arrangement. The revengeful A. A. Cohen is in it. He is in it for hlood and vengeance. The railroad people grew tired of paying him a high salary, to make, as their agent, fat contracts with himself, to his own great profit, hut to their great loss. They dismissed him, and he has ever since heen trying to get even. His latest method of accomplishing that end is an endeavor to spread Seabough's anti-railroad mauia. All at once, he who never concerned himself about anyhody hut Cohen, is deeply, if not disinterestedly, anxious ahout the welfare of the "dear people." He is traveling up and down the State for the public good, of course.

What a terrihle hlunder he made in his figures has heen made perfectly apparent to all readers of the News Letter. He proclaimed that a reduction of the railroad's income of one-third was just the right thing. Hs had figured it out, and was prepared to demonstrate the correctness of his position. He invited criticism and defied it—that he did. Well, his invitation was accepted, and his defiance hurled back. The extraordinary fact was disclosed that he had attempted to foist upon the puhlic credulity figures that were false. It was an exposure that at once destroyed every atom of prestige he might have claimed as a railroad authority. It showed that he had listened to Seahough, hut had not sufficiently imhihed his teachings. When he departed from the original source of his information, he floundered into error. The most amazing error, too, it was that ever man made. Eliminated from his calculations, the result was to prove that, according to his own method of determining the fact, railroad fares and freights are now helow the figure which he says is equitable and just. He calculates what he supposes is the railroad's income per mile, and says that it ought to he one-third less than that. Well, it is. He made it more than one-third larger than it really is, so that when his error is suhtracted, the result is the present income. To that miserahly impotent conclusion is he driven hy the inexorahle logic of his own corrected figures. He took the gross earnings of the Central Pacific, and its connections, at $16,986,926, and divided them hy 1,213, the number of miles he credited to the Company. This showed earnings per mile of $14,003, which, he claimed, was extortionate when compared with the $10,752 per mile earned hy the New York Central. His fatal error consisted in adopting a false divisor. The length of the Central Pacific, and its connections, from which the gross earnings were derived, was 2,073 miles, and not 1,213, as erroneously assumed by him. Take the corrected divisor, and then the true income per mile is ascertained. It turns out to hc $8,854.80, and not $14,003. That makes all the difference. It sweeps away Mr. Cohen's entire argument, and if he cared to he consistant with his own position, he would admit that the income per mile, heing less rather than more than what he claimed it ought to he, justice is satisfied and Cohen answered. Whether he admits it or not, the truth remains ths same. The true income of the road per mile is helow that which Cohen says it ought to he. Moreover, it is lower than that of many Eastern roads that are supplied with cheaper fuel and pay lower wages. That is the hroad fact that cannot he either successfully denied or lied away.

But Seahough comes to the rescue. He sees his pupil getting badly heaten. He comes with a helping hand. But it is one thing to keep a man out of a mess altogether, and quite another to get him out of ons when he is in it. Seahough would have advised Cohen not to enter into details, not to show his calculations, hut merely to give conclusions. He would have advised that it was entirely safe to say the railroad ought to be cut down one-third, hut that it would he hazardous to go into figures intended to demonstrate the results. He would have avoided the difficulty himself. He knows another, if not a hetter way. If you must hurl figures at your opponent, let him have them in a loose and disjointed way, so that they may mean anything, or nothing, hut, of all things, bs mindful not to pin yourself to precise and exact deductions from them. That was Cohen's mistake. He pinned himself to a statement of what the road ought to earn per mile. It turns out that it earns rather less than that, hence his difficulty. Seabough comes to his aid with three columns of figures. But most of these are heside the question, and are intended to hefog it. We do not propose to permit a hack door escape in that way. It is plain that a gross error has been made, that goes to the very root of Cohen's figures and overthrows them completely. Seahough, in a confused kind of way, tries to correct Cohen, hy calculating the earnings of the Central Pacific's leased lines twice over, and hy this process hrings up the gross earnings from $16,471,144 (which is the true amount) to $19,689,673, which is an error of nearly three and a quarter millions. He admits Cohen's error, hut attempts to correct it by another. This shall not avail Mr. Seabough. He pretends to get his information from the official report. To that we take him, and point out that the "gross earnings of gold, silver and currency for the year ending Decemher 31, 1877, from the Central Pacific and its leased lines was $16,471,144." That the total mileage was 2,074, and that as a result the income per mile was $8,854 80, and not $14,003, as Cohen falsely made out, and as Mr. Seabough now most wickedly endeavors to maintain. These most monstrous errors, detected and exposed as they are, show the great wrong of pledging railroad commissioners heforehand to cast-iron pledges in favor of particular figures. When the commission is duly established it can call for papers and hooks and examine witnesses under oath. They ought to be free to make up their judgment from evidence derived in that way, and not he forced to decide now upon figures that can he proved to hs grossly fraudulent and false.

FOR GOVERNOR.

We change not from our opinion that the Honornble George C. Perkins will be the next Governor of the State of California. We still think that the signs all point that way. All over the State his meetings are largely attended and enthusiastic. His party is united, his friends are working like beavers, and he himself is doing what his hands find to do with all his might. He is not half-hearted in the business, like his principal opponent, but is making one of the most thorough canvasses that has ever been made of the State. He improves as he goes along, his speeches are models in their way, and what is perhaps better, is that they take. They hit the popular fancy exactly, and for the good reason that they are the hearty, whole-souled utterances of an honest man. The truthfulness of his replies to charges, his fairness in meeting everything, and his happy, good natured references to his rivals, all tend to win him friends wherever he goes. White has no chance of success, and we decline to discuss that which does not exist. He will, however, poll a larger vote than was at first generally supposed, but that fact only serves to strengthen Perkins, for White's converts come from the ranks of the Democrats and New Constitution party. Glenn is heard of, but not seen. He mingles not in the fray. He will have been a candidate for Governor without knowing anything of politics. He sought not his nomination, and is doing nothing to further his election. If his methods, or rather lack of methods, achieve success, then, indeed, have politics ceased to be politics. Orators may prate, newspapers may howl, and the political winds may blow never so adversely, but yet Glenn troubles not his soul with these things. Whether he is in or out of the State at this moment, no man seems to know, and few seem to care. If he does not deem his defeat a foregone conclusion he certainly acts as if he did. We are persuaded that he does so believe, and in that we do not disagree with him.

The Republican forces march together with a spirit that forebodes success. Their leader has their confidence and is strong in his own. He believes in them and in himself. That confidence invites success and begets it. Democrats from the country generally admit that he will be elected. So he will be. We think nobody will have cause to regret that result. Mr. Perkins has done himself honor throughout the campaign; he has stood fire like a man; he has faced the enemy with a courage horn of conscious integrity; he has proved his capacity for public station, and we are sure will attain to it and adorn it. He will be every man's Governor. Accessible and pleasant to all, he will, we are assured, render himself the most popular Governor the State has ever had. The sterner duties of the office he will perform without fear, favor or affection, for he is a man of principle and of convictions. Having piloted his own way to success in the world he will he equally self-reliant in office. His election may be viewed with satisfaction hy men of all parties.

For City Surveyor.—The office of City Surveyor is one in which it is not wise to change the incumbent unnecessarily. The Surveyor has need to he acquainted with the established grades, with previous surveys, and with a host of details in regard to properties, streets and sewers, that cannot easily he picked up hy a new man. When the right man is in the place he ought to he kept there. This has hitherto been the general feeling, and accordingly Mr. W. P. Humphreys, the present efficient City Surveyor, has outlived many vicissitudes of political parties. Whether Democrats, Repuhlicans or Taxpayers carried the city, he has invariahly heen re-elected. As a result, their has been no confusion in our city surveys, which is eaying not a little when we hear in mind the experiences of other cities. Mr. Humphreys has had exceptional training as a surveyor and engineer. His father was Chief Naval Constructor for the United States. His brother is now Chief Engineer of the U. S. Army. In company with these distinguished relatives, Mr. Humphreys learned his profession. Hie local knowledge is as superior to that of other candidates, as his opportunities of acquiring it has exceeded theirs. He has re now heen honored hy nominations from all parties, and his able and upright official course ought now to receive the indorsement of all good citizens, irrespective of party nominations.

For Public Administrator.—Colonel William Doolan has been renominated hy the Democrats and New Constitution Party for the office of Public Administrator—and we are glad of it. He is a genial gentleman and an honest and capable officer, as all who have been brought into contact with him will cheerfully testify. Colonel Doolan is an old resident of the State of California, having come here in pioneer times from Davenport, Iowa. By profession he is an attorney, and during his business career has heen specially interested in matters pertaining to real estate—as agent, counsel and otherwise. He is a prominent member of many of our henevolent, literary and social societies, including the Academy of Sciencee, the libraries, Art Association, and other institutions whose mission is to help our city and offer advantages to its citizens. He is well known as a man of culture and refinement, of rare business qualities, of unimpeachable integrity, and as having made a good record in an office that has not always heen acceptably filled. He is sntitled to the indorsement of a re-election. He ought to be re-elected hy a handsome majority.

The re-election of Alexander Badlam, as Assessor, seems to he a certainty. He has heen renominated by the Repuhlicans, Democrats, and New Constitution party. It is a high tribute to Mr. Badlam's capability and honesty to find his course so heartily approved hy men of all shades of politics. But, to do him justice, he has fully merited this rare and exceptional recognition of his faithful services. He took the office when it was an unpopular hranch of the city government. Its duties had been performed in a manner that had created a wide distrust. Properties were assessed high or low at the mere whim of the Assessor. All this has been changed. Values are now determined upon fixed principles. The appeals have been few, and early sustained. Mr. Badlam's knowledge of city values has done the city good service. His re-election is eminently wise and proper.

The nominees of the Republican party for the Board of Supervisors inspire confidence. In the Third Ward the residents have chosen Mr. J. M. Litchfield, a citizen well knowu and highly respected, a man long engaged in husiness among us, and with an honorable record. His past is a guarantee for hie future; and we congratulate the public in advance on the prospect of his election. That party cannot he in the wrong which nominates good men, and every voter should remember this.

William A. Stuart has been nominated for the position of County Clerk. He is well acquainted with the duties of the office, being a deputy under Mr. Reynolds, and filling the important position of Clerk to the Probate Court. Mr. Stunrt was formerly a member of the firm of Stunrt & Elder, commission merchnnts, Front street, nnd, as a business man, secured n wide circle of friends. He is esteemed highly capable, by those who have enjoyed the best opportunities of judging. Judges and lawyers, who have had business with him in his present position, warmly indorse his candidature. The office of County Clerk is a highly important one, demnnding exceptional skill and experience. It would be a misfortune to have it filled by a novice. Mr. Stuart ought to he elected, undoubtedly.

Mr. M. C. Conroy is, we are glnd to see, the nominee of the Republicans for the Senate from the Ninth District. An old Californian—he arrived here in 1848—he became prominent in political matters at an early day and joined the Republican Party, to which he adhered until 1874, having for a long time held position as Assistant Secretary of the Republican State Central Committee. In 1874 he took part with the Independents. He was a member of Assembly in the last Legislature, and has always been known as a steadfast friend of the people and an enemy to all oppression. His fight has always been made on principle, and the question to-day ie overwhelmingly one of principle.

W. W. Traylor, the regular Repuhlican nominee for State Senator from the Ninth Senatorial District, is a man far above the average. Long a resident in the State, he is acquainted with its every requirement. Possessed of rare tact, of wide experiences and of undoubted ability, he will not fail to make his mark in the Senate. Legislation will be entirely safe in his hands. Familiar with men and their methods, he will not be entrapped by lobbyists nor be beguiled by the putters up of jobs. Honest and square in all his dealings, he will make a record worthy of himself and creditable to the city.

Thos. H. Reynolds, our worthy County Clerk, firmly declines a renomination for office. If he had consented to run again, we are persuaded he would have been elected. It will be recollected that, at the last election, he secured a handsome majority, though running on a ticket that was, for the most part, unsuccessful. His popularity has been increased since then, by his singularly able discharge of most onerous duties. He will retire from office with an enviable record, with the warm esteem of his deputies and with the respect of the general puhlic, whom he has faithfully served.

We notice with pleasure that the Republicans of the Fifth Ward have nominated, to represent them in the Board of Supervisors, Dr. J. D. Whitney, one of the most accomplished and popular physicians of the city. Dr. Whitney inherits and worthily upholds a name of great professional distinction; and his friends, who appreciate his practical intelligence and energy, cannot but feel that the residents of the Fifth Ward have honored themselves in selecting one every way so worthy to watch over and advance the best interests of the community.

A good nomination—that of William Ford for Tax Collector. He should be elected, and every voter having the welfare of the city at heart should cast his hallot for this gentleman, whose real worth, integrity and honesty we all so well know. His business qualifications eminently fit him for the place; his knowledge of the routine of the position, which he has already filled to the satisfaction of our property owners, as well as his strict attention to the affairs of the office, point him out as the man for Tax Collector.

Dr. C. C. McGovern is the Workingmen's candidate for Coroner, and one of the hest men on their ticket. He was formerly a surgeon in the U. S. Army.

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.

A new and important factor among the grain producing countries of the world is about entering into competition with us for the great European trade, and it particularly behooves Californians to become well posted concerning what, in the future, must he, probably, our most dangerous rival in the British market. Long since we pointed out that the day was approaching when the great Argentine Republic of South America would he able to produce for export a surplus of wheat far in excess of our capacity, and that the reciprocity of trade which it was able to offer its European customers would effectually give it the preference with them, as also its greater proximity and the saving of time in the interminably long passage around the Horn. A prominent and reliable Eastern authority very recently asserts that the Argentine Republic will export in 1879 upwards of 6,000,000 hushels of wheat, which amount will he doubled in 1880, and quintupled in 1881. It will be remembered how California, not gradually but suddenly, acquired importance as a wheat exporter, owing to the stimulus of increased population and the consequent increased acreage of land opened to cultivation. Similar causes have been operating in the Argentine Republic, into which, for the past eighteen years, a large, continuous and increasing volume of immigration has flowed from Italy, Spain, France and Germany; the bulk of it, however, from the first-named country, aud carrying with it tbe industrious and frugal habits for which the Italians are everywhere noted. In the city of Buenos Ayres there are said to be not less than 20,000 Italians, and it is estimated that there are upwards of 200,000 foreigners in the entire Republic, located on the most fertile lands and adjoining the avenues of commerce. The total population is variously estimated at between two and three millions (including Indiaus), and the area in square miles of the Republic is 820,000, about one-half of which is cultivable. Running from latitude 22° to 41° south, and from longitude 54° to 71° west, it presents a climate greatly resembling that of California, hut is vastly superior to us in its great river system. British capital has of late years entered into railroad construction and steam navigation. When we consider that India, which a short time since produced no wheat beyond its own requirements, now exports 20,000,000 bushels annually to Europe with a capacity for indefinite increase, and tbat the Argentine Republic now promises even greater competition, it seems only a question of time when our agricultural interests must be varied to suit the new order of things. In this connection, it may not be out of place to remark the growing importance of our wine and brandy shipments to New York, where they are crowding out French importations. The wine interest will doubtless outrank all others in the future.

NICE YOUNG MEN.

Among the numerous pests of San Franciscan society none holds so prominent a position as the "nice young man." Of course he attends divine service, and that with a regularity and decorum which wins for him the confidence of mothers and the entrè to many a house which would be otherwise inaccessable. Very possibly he sings in the choir also; if so, he is considered a very "uice young man," and is even more sought after and trusted than his pious but unmusical brother. The nice young man is usually a sneak of the first water, and is ever ready with some disparaging tale concerning his seemingly more worldly rivals. Many a lover's quarrel, and many a broken off engagement is to be accounted for hy some malicious tittle-tattle of the "nice young man." If the said young man drinks (he seldom does, for he has no bon hommie in his composition), he drinks on the sly. For he, and such like impostors, the back entrances to saloons and pawn brokers' shops were especially constructed. The "niee young man has usually several affairs "de cœur" going on at the same time, and being an adept at dissimulation, generally manages to steer clear of trouhle. Occasionally, however, he gets caught at his little game, and receives the well-merited application of the big brother's boot and the sister's silent scorn. Many a young lady's reputation has been blasted for life by tbis domestic viper, for he is never at all modest about boasting of his conquests, and of claiming familiarities which his lady friends would blush to hear mentioned, much less permit. We do not say that all young men who attend church, sing in choirs, belong to the Young Men's Christian Society, or wear the blue insignia of the water babies, are of the class named, but we must add that the above belongings are enough to excite suspicion and challenge inquiry.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Unerring Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s new circular. The combination method, which tbis firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y. Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1878, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent.; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent.; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working hy Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 20th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101.25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co.'s combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. Stocks and bonds wanted. Government bonds supplied.

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, the beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, which for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of the tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in the Pescadero river.

"NO JEWS ADMITTED."

It is amazing that a discreditable prejudice of bygone times should be revived in a great cosmopolitan city, made up of nondescript people from all parts of the world. But so it is. New York bonifaces object to admitting Jews. Hilton so determined, and Corbin, undaunted by the storm with which Hilton's course was met, ostentatiously follows his example. This is passing strange. These caterers for the public must surely find some sympathy, or they would hardly venture to act upon an offensive prejudice to their own loss and injury. Yet it seems incredible, in these enlightened days, in this liberty-loving country, and among a people drawn from all quarters of the globe, that so outrageous a prejudice is fostered against a most estimable class of citizens. The Jews have no reason to be ashamed of their past or present. Certainly, in point of education, refinement, wealth and social distinction, they to-day occupy a high position in many lands, where solid worth and not mere showby come to the front. A famous leader of the best London society is just dead. The Queen of England sent a letter of warm sympathy to her husband, the Prince of Wales sent another, and the King of the Belgians, and various people of the highest social distinction in Europe telegraphed their sorrow. The favor of Lady Waldegrave was a passport to social recognition, and, socially speaking, her circle was one of the most desirable in England. Yet if Lady Waldegrave should have come to this country, it is odd that in a land where even the African is constitutionally guaranteed social rights, she, one of the first ladies of aristocratic Europe, would not have been allowed to stay at a beautiful watering-place hotel, because she was a Jewess! Every Irishman, Cockney, Bowery Boy, Bagman and Tramp would be admitted, nor is there any disagreeableness or vulgarity that would be excluded, if it could not be called Jewish. It is stated that these exclusive hotel proprietors observe the old fashion of putting a Bible in every room. It is odd that the Book of Books, the sacred book of christendom, which is thus selected as the one book for every guest, is the history of the Jewish people—the divinely chosen nation—and the record of the teachings of the Master whom the great part of christendom reveres as God, taking flesh as a Jew. It is odd what reflections these facts suggest. It is very odd, also, to consider what the Company at the hotel would be if all the influences which have molded its life and education and thought, and which are due to the Hebrew genius, were suddenly taken away. If civilization had written over its gates "No Jews Admitted," and could have kept them out, half of its characteristic charm, half of the refinement of modern thought and life would be wanting. Here in San Francisco the Jewish people are second to none other in point of morals, of refinement, culture and good citizenship. A large proportion of the best homes that cluster around the city are owned by them. Take away the social influences of the Jews, and half of the best life of the city would be gone. The same is true in regard to their influence in business. Their capital and their energy are entitled to no mean share of the credit for making San Francisco the monument of enterprise that it is.

THE NATIONAL BALANCE SHEET.

The balance of trade is now largely in favor of the United States. We export a very great deal more than we import. This is a great change within the last five years, that means a good deal. It indicates that we are, as a people, spending less and producing more. The total imports of goods into the United States during the fiscal year ending the 30th of June last, amounted to $445,792,141, against $437,051,532 for the year preceding, and the value of domestic produce and merchandise exported last year was $710,428,743, against $694,865,766 in 1878. The statistics show that during the nine years ending with June, 1873, our imports exceeded our exports by amounts annually fluctuating between $72,716,277 in 1865, and $182,417,491 in 1872, the year next preceding the panic; the average yearly excess being $98,800,000. During the six years succeeding the panic the exports have, on the other hand, exceeded the imports on an average by $125,000,000 per annum. In other words, during the nine years preceding the panic we imported $889,467,923 more of goods than we paid for with goods; while for the last six years we have exported goods valued at $772,121,109 more than the goods we have imported. Taking into account the specie movement, we find that for the nine years preceding the panic, our net export of specie amounted to $527,000,000. Deducting this from the excess of merchandise imported over merchandise exported, we find the commercial balance against the United States to have been $362,467,923. For the six years following the panic, when our net export of specie amounted to $174,000,000, and our merchandise exported exceeded in value the goods imported by $772,121,109, we find on the contrary that the commercial balance in favor of the United States was $946,121,109! That is truly a marvelous showing. It is the indubitable evidence of that returning prosperity in the Eastern States of which we hear so much. The country has undoubtedly entered upon a new era of prosperity, and although California is a little slow to feel the effects of the flowing tide, it will presently make itself felt on this side of the continent, and carry our people along with it. If we could, in our State, put politics and politicians to sleep for a while, and reassure capital and capitalists of their entire safety against communistic legislation, widespread and general prosperity would not be long in reaching the Pacific Coast.

Drilling Rocks by Electricity.—M. Gaston Planté suggests a novel use for electricity, namely, as a borer of rocks, taking the place of the black diamond. "We have seen," he writes in a volume recently published, "that one of the electrodes which conveys a current of a certain electromotive force, on being put in contact with glass in presence of a saline solution, acts as a graver or diamond in cutting furrows on the surface of the glass, plowing it even deeply. Rock-crystal can also be attacked, despite its hardness, by the same method, and, if it does not yield regularly, it at last bursts into pieces under the action of the electrode, and ends by breaking up. In America black diamonds are employed in rock-drilling for wells and mines. Could these expensive tools not be replaced by the action of the electric current in conditions analogous to those which have been described, and the perforation of rocks be performed by electricity? Electrodes of platinum would not be necessary, for it is not the metal of the electrode which alters, but the silicious matter in presence of the saline solution. Metallic points or studs conveniently distributed at the end of the drill and put in rotation, would direct the electric discharge to the rock, which it would pulverize, as in the case of the diamond drill. The recent advances in the production of electricity by mechanical means would facilitate this application."

"BIZ."

Money continues to be exceedingly plentiful within the iron vaults of our many Banks, Savings and Loan Societies; yet with all this plethoric supply of the precious metals—gold and silver, for no paper promises to pay circulate with us to any extent—horrowers find it very difficult to get control thereof without producing Government honds, gas or water stock, or other gilt-edged securities. Our Banks loan cautiously upon honanza and other mining securities, and, consequently, huyers of stock upon margin are less numerous than heretofore. Merchaudise in warehouses is a favorite article with some of our Banks and moneyed men, who are inclined to load freely upon staple goods at two-thirds its market value, at from 7 to 10 per cent. per annum.

Business seems to revive materially now that the Fall trade has set in. The demand for goods, wares and merchandise from the interior of our own and horder States and Territories upon the Pacific slope is now in very considerable volume. The Sugar requirement is notably large for the season, showing most conclusively a largely increased consumption upon this coast, and marts depending upon us for their supplies, which nowadays consist almost exclusively of the different grades of Refined. Our Coffee stock is many thousand hags less than it was a year ago, and the statistical position of the market, for the balance of the year, favors a rise in price ere long.

The Bag combination has been a subject of absorbing interest for weeks past. This ring is said to have under full control at least 10,000,000 of Burlap Grain Sacks; some place it at 15,000,000. At the time prices were fixed, some weeks since, at 11@11½c, it was thougbt hy the parties in interest that they had coralled the entire stock held upon this coast as well as that to arrive—2,000,000 hags upon the Naturalist, now 200 days out from Calcutta, are no doubt out of the ring, prohably lost. It is a fact that every week since the combination price was publicly announced that auction sales of standard Bags have heen of weekly occurrence and at prices far helow those fixed by the so-called ring. These auction sales have varied in extent as well as in price. Since our last issue several invoices have heen sold hy S. L. Jones & Co. Three days since 30,000 Calcutta Standard sold at 9 05 cash, and since then other large lots have been offered upon 'Change at ahout 9¼c, and at this price, no douht, purchases for cash could he made to some extent. Messrs. Wm. T. Coleman & Co. are the agents for the Bag ring, and they seem to he determined to hold to the fixed combination prices, while Mr. Wilson White, the broker, is hard at work outside to "fix up things" so that the machine may work witbout further luhricating. The fact is, however, that the discovery has been made within a few days past that two California street commission houses hold 500,000 Grain Sacks over and ahove what is controlled hy the Bag ring. and, more than this, it is now asserted upon 'Cbange that the next steamer from Hongkong will have not less than 500,000 Calcutta Bags that were not expected or looked for by the combination, aud some say there are even 600,000 Bags on the steamer. The Royal Sovereign, from London, just at haud, has also ahout 500,000 yards of Burlaps, which adds to the depression. Now all these things operate as a surprise to those most deeply interested in this Bag ring. Some considerahle difference of opinion exists as to the actual cost of these Calcutta imports of Standard 22x36 Grain Sacks, hut upon diligent inquiry we find that the range for the season has heen 8⅞@9¼c, c. f. & i., so that it is fair to say that the average cost of this year's importation is 9c. Of course we all know that some of the Bags held by the combination are two, three and four years old, if not more. Of course there is a hig interest and storage account to he charged up against them, hut, if we are correctly informed, the original holders and importers of these old Bags sold out all their right, title and interest to the combination at 8¾@9c, or thereabouts, so that last year's Bag ring does not, as a whole, constitute that now in vogue. There is also some difference of opinion as to the probable wants and demands for Grain Sacks during the balance of the year. Some contend that the low prices long ruling and the long threatened lock-up of the stock drove all parties in need, and who could muster cash or credit, to purchase all the hags they required, and hence the actual consumptive wauts of this State, Oregon and Washingtou Territory are now much less than is expected hy present holders.

Salmon.—The market for Case Salmon seems to he badly demoralized since the announcement made that the Columhia Rivsr catch this season would aggregate ahout 450,000 cases. It is now stated upon 'Change that Oregon 1-lb Salmon, in lots, by the car-load, are offered to Chicago merchants at $1 05 ₱ dozen, while this may be said to he the California price of the day. Of course, we are yet to learn the extent of the Salmon catch on Fraser River, or that of the Puget Sound fisheries uow in full hlast. Ahout three weeks since we puhlished in the News Letter an item respecting a false claim for "swell head" damage to Salmon, made by an English house on the Oregon packers. It appears that there was an error made in the figures as therein stated, hut as the names of the parties so offending were not given, no damage has occurred to any. We, however, give herewith a correct report of the same, furnished by the parties aggrieved. The memoranda sets forth that it is respecting a disputed claim for allowance on Salmon: "In the summer of 1878, the Cutting Packing Company, of this city, sold 9,000 cases of Devlin's Salmon to go to Liverpool, suhject to the customary guarantee against swelled cans. Seven thousand cases went to one prominent Liverpool house, and two thousand cases to another; all the Salmon being fresh packed, and presumably equal in quality and condition. Reports as to out-turn were received in usual course, showing a loss hy swellage of rather less than one-half of one per cent on the 7,000 cases, and of 3.85 per cent on the 2,000 cases. The latter claim was substantiated hy the certificate of the purchasers, countersigned hy two othsr parties—one of whom appears to have heen their own warehouseman, and the other the warehouseman of the firm to whom they resold the Salmon. Although on the face of it the claim was in due form, and the managing partner of the Liverpool house offered to swear to its correctness, yet the extraordinary discrepancy between it and the account rendered of the larger parcel of same Salmon, induced the Cutting Packing Company, in their capacity of agents for Messrs. Devlin & Co., to withhold settlement until they could get satisfactory corrohoration of the huyers' statement as to the amount of loss. To this end, they requested friends in Liverpool to investigate the matter, and arrive, if possihle, at the facts. After considerahle delay and difficulty, the parcel of Salmon was discovered intact in possession of tbe party to whom the importing house had sold it, and a careful examination showed the following result: Two cases short landed hy ship; 1,991 23-48 cases sound; 1 26-48 cases stained; 1 8-48 cases short; 3 39-48 cases swelled; 2,000 in all. At the time when the examination was made the Salmon had lain over six months in warehouse at Liverpool, and would naturally he in a worse rather than a hetter condition than when first landed. It will be seen hy the foregoing that a loss of actually less than a quarter per cent was magnified into 3.85 per cent hy the purchaser."

This exhibit speaks for itself, nor are we authorized to make mention of the house making this fraudulent claim, hut which, hy the way, has gone into hankruptcy, and is no longer in the field to practice like deceptions upon hrother merchants.

Coal.—The market is poorly supplied witb Steam, and prices exhihit much firmness—say $6 75@$7, for Sydney. The cargo of 900 tons Scotch, per "City of Shanghae," is said to have heen sold prior to arrival at $8. California Mt. Diablo Steam, $4 50@$5.

Coffee.—The market is firm for Central American prime No. 1 at 16c @16½c. Rio is dull of sale at 14½c@15c.

Sugar.—We have two arrivals from the Islands—the schooner "W. H. Meyer," with 6,583 hags, and the "Cyane," with 3,480 hags Hawaiian, chiefly refining grades. The market is steady at old prices—say 9⅞c@10c for White refined, and 7⅞c@8¼c for Yellow.

Rice.—We note sales during the week of 1,200 sacks Hawaiian Table at 5⅜c, now held at 6c; stock light. The ship "Edith," from Hongkong, brought 41,000 bags, and the hark "Vesuvius" 14,000 bags. We quote Mixed China, 4⅝c; No. 1 China, 5⅛c; No. 2 China, 5¼c. The stock of China is very large.

Furs and Skins.—The steamship St. Paul, from Ounalaska to the Alaska Commercial Company, has arrived with 85,000 Seal Skins and 157 packages Furs and Skins, Oils, Ivory, etc. The entire season's catch of Seals, 100,000, has been secured, and the halance will arrive here ere long. This large and valuable cargo will he at once packed in casks and sent to the London market for the Fall sales. These will, no douht, go overland, via Philadelphia, although last year the St. Paul carried the entire season's catch to Panama, and from thence sent across the Isthmus.

Quicksilver.—There has been quite an upheaving in the market recently, hy reason of a short supply and an active export demand from China at 36@37c, running up to 37½@38c, while some holders now ask 48c. The London market shows a rise of 5s. per hottle from the lowest price of the summer, now £5 2s. 6d. The Gaelic, sailing this day for China and Japan, will carry upwards of 3,000 flasks—possihly 4,000, if they can he had in season. The Quicksilver exports by sea from August 19th are as follows:

To Mexican ports per Granada, August 19th:

	Flasks.	Value.
Tbannhauser & Co.	400	$10,560
Totals	400	$ 10,560
Previously since January 1st	38,517	1,104.333
Totals since January 1st, 1879	38,917	$1,114,893
Totals same period 1878	21,406	713,340
Increase in 1879	17,511	$401,553

Receipts for the week, 1,291 flasks.

Freights and Charters.—Several ships have quite unexpectedly dropped in upon us, seeking, that have caused a slight temporary depression in the market, grain charters having been written this week at 43s@45s to a direct port, with the usual addition for ports of call—to Continent, 50s. The British bark "Cormorant," for Cork, obtained £2 10s; the British hark "Yarra Yarra," £2 5s to Liverpool and Cork; U. K., £2 7s 6d; to Continent, £2 12s 6d. The disengaged fleet, 35 vessels, of 38,000 registered tons.

The Flour Market is without animation. We quote shipping Extras for China, $4.75@$5, and of which the Gaelic, for Hongkong, will carry 1,000 tons; Common Superfine, $4@4.25; Extra Superfine, $4.50@$4.75; Bakers and Family Extras, $5@$5.50 per 196 lbs., all in cloth.

Wheat.—The market is only moderately active at $1.60@1.65 for Shipping, and $1.67½@170 ₱ ctl. for good to choice milling. The daily receipts ars liheral, and exports free. Since July 1st our Grain fleet to Europe aggregates 25 vessels, with 963,000 ctls., against same time last year of 40 vessels, with 1,327,750 ctls.

Barley.—The receipts are very heavy, and the market depressed for Feed to 65@70c; Brewing, 95@100c; Chevalier, $1 50 for coast, and $1 70@$1 72½ for bright shipping lots. The M. P. Grace, for Livsrpool, carried of this latter 26,592 centals.

Corn and Oats.—The market is sluggish, witb light transactions at low and nominal rates.

Wool.—The market is active, stock ligbt at 25@27c for best Northern Fleece. Fall, 12@14c.

Hops.—A few of the new crop have made their appearance, and may he quoted at 15c@20c, with no sales; some lots of very choice held much higher. Contracts for Walla Walla have heen made, to arrive, at 20c.

Fruits.—The market is ahundantly supplied with Pears, Peaches, Plums, Grapes, etc.,—prices low and within the reach of all consumers. Melons of all kinds are very cheap and ahundant.

ARIZONA.

In another column we give the particulars of the formation of a syndicate in New York, the workings of which are calculated to do a great amount of good to the vast mineral resources of the Territory.

The stock of the Central Arizona Mining Company was placed on the Stock Exchange at New York on the 31st ultimo.

The Tombstone Mill and Mining Company, whose headquarters are in Philadelphia, have declared a dividend of ten cents per share, payable August 11th. The company has a capital of $5,000,000, in shares of the par value of $10 each.

The reported sale of the Silver King Mine to New York capitalists is somewhat premature. We are advised that certain negotiations are pending, but as yet have not been completed. This valuable property continues to produce its regular quota of bullion, to the extent of $75,000 per month. The Keystone Mine, in Mohave county, has developed a large and well-defined vein, and all the indications are very encouraging.

W. H. Hardy, an old resident of Arizona, has just returned from New York, having made arrangements there for the introduction of considerable capital for mining purposes into the Mineral Park District. The Fairfield, Miner's Hope, Blue Bill, Cerbat and Tom Lawton claims are well spoken of.

The Iron Cap Mining Company, located in Silver District, Yuma county, are vigorously prosecuting the work on their various mines, and their prospects are most encouraging. The Head Center and Yellow Jacket mines, located in the Tombstone District, have been sold to Messrs. Moody and Farrish, of this city, for $30,000. These are valuable properties and will be immediately developed.

A very rich strike of chloride ore has been made near Summit Springs, Santa Catalina Mountains, and the camp there is lively and prosperous.

The Prescott Mining Company, owners of the Aztlan and Bradshaw mills, is well spoken of in Boston, and considerable of the stock of the company is held in that city.

Mining matters in the Meyer's District, on the borders of the State of Sonora, are looking well. Some fifty miners are at work prospecting the various leads with good results. Machinery is being introduced, and the steam whistle will soon be a familiar sound in this region, hitherto monopolized by the rattlesnake and the Apache.

At the Golden Chariot Mine, on Groom Creek, a lead of decomposed quartz has been discovered, which carries a large quantity of free gold. If the rock works to the extent of one-tenth of the assay returns, the owners of the property have an inexhaustible bonanza.

The Kit Carson, Silver Flake, Silver Belt, Agua Fria, Ida May, and other contiguous properties, are known in the territory as base metal mines, yet their values are assured, and we hope soon to hear of their development.

Captain Gains, Superintendent of the News Letter property, made an important shipment to this city last week. The assay value of the stones was very satisfactory. We anticipate grand results from his efforts in connection with his several properties, for he is a careful and practical operator, and learned his trade as a miner in the lowel levels of the Comstock.

As soon as the heated term in the territory is over, we are advised that a numher of capitalists of this city will proceed to the front. They hegin to realize that Eastern enterprise is getting a firm hold in that valuahle conntry, and are not willing to he distanced in the race. All such competition, however, is of material henefit to our neighhors, and we therefore welcome these sigus as harhingers of approaching good times and prosperity.

TYPHOID FEVER.

Editor News Letter—SIR: Typhoid fever has been unusually prevalent duriug the last few weeks. There have already heen 13 deaths this month, nearly all of young and promising persons. This represents, at a low estimate, more than 100 cases, and, as the deaths occurred in all parts of the city, it may he surely concluded that the poison germs are very generally diffused in the sewers, rendering the sewer gases unusually dangerous for many weeks to come. My first advice would he to have the sewers and drains at once and thoroughly inspected, and let no one rest satisfied with anything short of a perfect ventilation of the house drains, and the adoption of such precautions as shall secure the house, and particularly the bedrooms, from the entrance of these gases. Water-closets and haths in the neighhorhood of hedrooms should he regarded as most suspicious. The absence of smell is no criterion of safety. The doors into the house and bedrooms should he kept closed, and the windows open. Nine times out of ten the hath-room is a source of danger.

Let it also he widely known that the highest and lowest floors are most liahle to the invasion of sewer gases. Few hasements are free from rats, and where there are rats there are sewer gases. Sewer gases always rise to the top floors; if not through the waste pipes, hy the side of them. Nearly all persons take typhoid fever when asleep. It is, therefore, hopeless to attempt the treatment in the ordinary hed-room, where, spite of all precautions, the patient will prohahly continue to hreathe the poisoned air which produced his illness. When any memher of the family is even slightly indisposed, he should he removed instantly to the parlor floor, usually the safest in the house, if only from the ahsence of closets, haths and wash stands.

Lastly, let there he no attempt to "break up" the fever. Nature will do that far more safely than the "fever curer" if you will give her fair play. Typhoid fever is happily only contagious in a very low degree. Nurses and doctors rarely take it. It is only propagated in foul air. No one who enjoys reasonable health, pure air, wholesome food and sufficient rest need fear to take it. Nevertheless, in justice to the community, the evacuations should he carefully disinfected before their discharge into the sewers. At the present moment it may he said that no well water in this city is free from danger. None of the sewers are water tight, and there are thousands of situations where the wells may he contaminated hy escaping sewage.

Fever germs are not necessarily destroyed at the temperature of hoiling water. It will, therefore, he wiser to let water alone or to patronize Spring Valley.

Mitchell's Magic Lotion is just the thing for a quick cure of sprains and bruises; and people so given as we are to exercises and sports of all kind have continual need of such a remedy. It relieves the pain instantly, removes soreness from riding or rowing, or any over-exertion; and its value is very great as a gargle and tonic for the throat. Singers and professional speakers find it extremely useful.

[BY T. A. HARCOURT.]

The Man on the Wall.

When a student at Heidelberg, I occupied a very singularly situated suite of five rooms on the second floor of an ancient house, which stood—and had stood for centuries—close to the main gate of that most venerable and magnificent of European ruins, Heidelberg Castle. The street upon which the two front rooms looked out was narrow, tortuous, and steep beyond belief. Its grass-grown, shattered pavement and overhanging houses may have echoed merrily enough to the ringing hoofs and laughing voices of courtier-cavalcades long ago; but in my time it had few charms beyond its quaintness. These two rooms, therefore, I seldom entered, but kept one as a sort of state-chamber and the other as a spare bed-room for a belated friend. The three back rooms overlooked a very different prospect, for they opened on a fragrant and blooming wilderness, which had once been the castle garden. Of all the delightful retreats that the earth affords, I think a grand garden long since gone to waste is the most charming, and this one of mine was simply perfect. I say "mine," because the visitors to the ruins were not allowed to enter these once royal pleasure-grounds, but the husband of the old woman from whom I rented my rooms being nominally in charge of them, I was a privileged exception. I have not space to dwell upon the extreme beauty of the garden, with its marble terraces overgrown with moss, its winding paths, scarcely distinguishable any longer, its dense tangle of rare flowers and shrubs, untended for near two centuries save by the sun and rain, its statues of fauns and nymphs hidden in cool, dark corners, its choked and silent fountains, about whose damp basins the frogs croaked so musically on moonlight nights. I should have explained that though the rooms at the back were on the same floor as those in front, yet the former were practically on the first story, for the garden was many feet higher than the street, so that its grass grew only a few inches beneath the window-sills of my dining-room, bed-room and study.

It was on a sultry but beautiful night in August that I passed through the very extraordinary experience which I will now attempt to describe. That night I returned home late from attending a students' Fackelzug. Though very tired, the view from my study window was too magnificent to miss, for it was full-moon, and the old garden looked like fairy-land. Drawing an easy chair up to the window, therefore, I composed myself to enjoy the scene. I should have mentioned that a little to the right of the window, and about thirty paces distant, there lay an immense fragment of the wall of a round tower which had probably been the donjon-keep. What was left of the tower itself stood upon an eminence forty feet above the fragment. It had been blown up by the French in 1674, and this piece of the wall, at least fifteen feet thick and as many square, had been hurled to the spot where it now lay. I was gazing lazily at this huge detached mass of masonry, and reflecting how little the man who built the tower had thought that an agent would ever be discovered by which his work would be destroyed in a moment, when I fancied I heard something stirring in the bushes which clustered about its base. Then I faintly made out an object that seemed to be clambering up the side of the fragment nearest to me, which was in deep shadow, and immediately afterward there stood upon its summit a figure difficult to describe. It bore a general resemblance to a man, inasmuch as it stood erect, but the length of its mighty arms, its enormous breadth of chest, and short, bandy legs, showed it to be possessed of strength such as no human being ever had. Its face, being in the shadow, I could not see. For some minutes this indescribable monster stood motionless, as if drinking in the moonlight and fresh air; then gliding down from its perch it was lost in the gloom of the bushes. A moment later I heard a sharp click, as of a steel spring. Now, from time immemorial there had been traditions of secret subterranean passages which led from the garden into the recesses of the Castle. I had often sought for these in vain, but I now remembered that I had never looked at the foot of the fallen fragment of wall. It seemed madness to make a search now, just when that fearful brute had entered the passage, if there was one; but, in spite of myself, some hideous fascination enthralled me, and almost before I knew it I was out of the window and creeping through the lush grass toward the spot. Very carefully I put the bushes aside, and, after some examination, discovered that the ruin had fallen upon a large rock, which stood up out of the earth about four feet and had a flat face. "Here, then, must be the spring which I heard," thought I, and began feeling over the surface for some projection. Finding nothing of the sort, I was leaning against the rock considering where to look next, when suddenly my support gave way, and I fell backward down two or three steps into black darkness. As I fell I heard the same click as before, and knew that the door had closed behind me. Terribly alarmed, I regained my feet, and, feeling my way up the steps, sought eagerly but in vain for the spring. I had touched it by accident on the outside, but good-fortune would not favor me now that I was within. A cold sweat broke out all over me, and I bitterly lamented the folly which led me on such an adventure alone and unarmed. But the stifling air of the place told me that this was no time for idle lamentations. I reflected that if this was a secret passage it must have an outlet, and, although filled with terror at the thought of encountering the hideous shape which had entered before me, I saw no alternative but to follow the course which he must have taken. I could feel that the passage was about four feet wide and nearly six feet high, its floor, sides, and ceiling being all of damp and greasy masonry. Trailing one hand along the wall and feeling carefully in advance with the other, I proceeded slowly and noiselessly through the darkness. Presently I came to a sharp turn, and, peering cautiously round, saw at a distance of perhaps seventy feet a feeble glimmer of lamp-light. Shaking in every limb and filled with unutterable dread, I advanced toward it, and soon saw that it was shed into the passage from a room, or vault, on the right hand side. To go back was almost certain death, to go forward might be—what? Half crazed with fear I crept on. I had come out in my slippers, and stepped softly as a cat. Now, for the first time, I heard a low rumbling noise, such as might be made by some enormous brute breathing heavily in its sleep. Cold chills ran down my back, but still I crawled on. Keeping close to the left-hand wall, I was presently able to see the corner of the vault farthest from me, while I was still in the darkness. In a niche near the door stood a massive lamp of brass, which looked as if it might have been made centuries ago, and emitted a heavy yellow flame. An inch or two farther, and I saw an iron staple fixed into the wall, from which extended a rope, which occasionally moved a little. What was at the other end of the rope? Another step, and I knew. It was a woman, comparatively young, and of great original beauty of feature, but wan and emaciated in an incredible degree. The rope was attached to an iron chain round her waist. She was almost nude, and sat upon a rough stone block, gazing intently into the darkness where I crouched. Had she heard me with ears long accustomed to the silence of the tomb, or did she feel my presence? The heavy breathing which filled the vault came from the other end of the cell, which, of course, I could not see; but I was sure that there lay the creature I had seen in the moonlight. I knew that it was impossible for me to pass the sheet of light which fell in the passage without being seen by the woman; nor, to tell the truth, was I coward enough to wish to do so. It was evident that she was held captive by the sleeping horror. Perhaps without waking him we might both escape together. But would she not cry out if I showed myself? There lay the difficulty; but I resolved to risk it. Advancing my face into the light, I caught her eye in an instant, and enjoined silence with a gesture. She uttered a slight cry—whether of fear or joy I cannot say. For a moment the breathing stopped, and then went on as monotonously as before. This gave me a little heart, and, creeping close up to the door, I looked round the corner at the sleeper. His back was toward me; his huge bulk heaved beneath a bundle of rags. Now or never I had to act. Rising to my feet, I glided swiftly over to the woman. The rope was rotten—my strength was that of despair—I snapped the cord like thread. But that supreme moment was too much for her shattered nerves, and she sank fainting to the floor. The chain about her waist rattled, and, with the cry of a demon, the monster sprang from his filthy couch. His face—— but I can neither describe nor forget that awful visage. Wheeling rapidly about, I seized the great brazen lamp, and, as he rushed upon me with both arms raised, a thousand fiends glaring out of his eyes and his yellow fangs glistening frightfully, I dashed it full in his face. Then in the darkness I lifted the woman at my feet as if she had been a feather, and rushed out into the passage. On, on I fled, with superhuman strength and fleetness, miraculously and instinctively finding my way, as bats are known to do. At last, utterly exhausted, I stopped and listened. Then in the distance, but coming nearer and nearer, I heard a rapid flapping noise, as of great naked feet running on damp slabs. Too well I knew that the pursuer was on our track, and lifting my burden I sped on once more. But the halt had been fatal—the steps came nearer—he was close upon us—I felt his hot breath on my cheek—his great hand was upon my shoulder, and he shook me violently as he yelled: "Come, come! wake up, old fellow; you'll catch your death of cold by this open window. I've been shaking you for five minutes, and you were groaning as if your heart would break. How often have I warned you against lobsters for supper. I'm going to use your spare room to-night."

RUSSIA'S BAD MANNERS.

Russia has attempted to put a slight upon England by not including her in the invitation extended to all the other European Powers to send officers to witness the coming grand military maneuvers. This is eminently characteristic of Russia. In peace as in war she is an underbred barbarian. There is every reason to believe that England will survive the dreadful deprivation; still, it would have been a little more dignified, even in a Tartar, not to let international bad feeling interfere with the laws of international courtesy. Even in the heat of war opposing generals would never dream of showing any personal discourtesy to each other; much less would they in time of peace let past hostilities make them forget the conduct due from one gentleman to another. It is unnecessary to say that the rules which thus govern individuals are far more binding upon nations.

When England had her men-of-war before Constantinople, she very plainly invited Russia to advance and witness a grand naval display; and, when she had her armies in Afghanistan, the Czar could scarcely doubt that he was asked to take any part he chose in the little game of war going on there. But in neither case did his Imperial Majesty, or his Imperial Majesty's ghost of a government, or his Imperial Magesty's people, see the fun of attending these British "receptions." Perhaps, being accustomed to a cold climate, they thought the warmth of the said receptions might injure their constitutions. But, surely this is no reason why Russia should sulk when she has a little military tea-party of her own. The English were not offended by her refusal. On the contrary, should she again attempt to take Constantinople, or make sneaking overtures in Afghanistan, she would find England ready to receive, not only her officers, but also her men, with extended arms—of the latest pattern.

CAREY'S CASE.

Lieutenant Carey has reached England from the seat of the Zulu War, and declares that he was not on duty when the Prince Imperial was killed, but accompanied the fatal expedition merely "for his own information." If this is true, it is very singular that the world has not heard of it before now. Surely, the disastrous event has been talked and written about enough for such an important feature of the case to become known. It has even been the subject of official reports from the Cape, and we are much mistaken if these did not censure Carey for neglect of duty. One thing we are very glad to see, and that is, that the English people do not intend to let the unfortunate young officer be made a scapegoat of by the authorities without a vigorous protest. He had been in Plymouth but a few hours when he was presented with an address, bearing 3,000 signatures, declaring that he had been unwarrantably censured. How many such signatures may be expect from all England if one town promptly gives him this number? Since the above was written, the news reaches us by telegraph that the finding of the court-martial which sentenced Lieutenant Carey to be dismissed from the service has been declared unjustifiable and of no effect. Of course, we are not in possession of all the facts in the case, but it is our opinion that the members of the court-martial which passed such a sentence ought themselves to be expelled from the army as a lot of flunkies, who did not hesitate to sacrifice the honor and the future of a brother officer on the altar of toadyism. In this connection we may also mention that, as Lord Chelsmford has just received the Grand Cross of the Bath, he, too, must be beginning to have justice done to him.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The past week has been exceedingly dull in Stock circles, and the street generally have accepted the inevitable delay attending the drainage of the North End Mines, and feel resigned to the situation, believing that in time important developments will be shown up. Under the prospect of an early drainage of the water for the Savage and Norcross, these Stocks have been moderately active, and show evidences of a coming deal. Bullion shows signs of improvement, based upon favorable reports from the diamond drill. The reports are premature, however, as the drill has not yet been used, and will not be in place for a week yet. Of the outside Stocks, Paradise Valley continues to improve, and reports from the mine justify the advance. At the close a general strengthening was observable.

SIR ROWLAND HILL.

This eminant man, whose career was one of continual labor for the good of the race, died on the 27th inst. in London, at the age of 84 years. He will be remembered in all time to come as the father of the system of cheap postage, which has been of incalculable benefit to mankind; and it is less generally known than it should be that he was the inventor of the cylinder printing press. Some fifty years ago, the proprietor of the News Letter was invited by Rowland Hill to view in Chancery Lane, London, his machine for printing from stereo-plates laid on the cylinder of a press. This first effort was so successful and so much approved of, that the University of Cambridge applied the idea to the production of the Bible, and now it is in daily use throughout the civilized world.

SOMEHOW OR OTHER.

Life has a burden for every man's shoulder,
None may escape from its trouble and care;
Miss it in youth, and 'twill come when we're older,
And fit us as close as the garments we wear.

Sorrow comes into our lives uninvited,
Robbing our hearts of their treasures of song;
Lovers grow cold and friendships are slighted,
Yet somehow or other we worry along.

Everyday toil is everyday blessing,
Though poverty's cottage and crust we may share;
Weak is the hack on which burdens are pressing,
But stout is the heart that is strengthened by prayer.

Somehow or other the pathway grows brighter,
Just when we mourn there are none to befriend;
Hope in the heart makes the burden seem lighter,
And, somehow or other, we get to the end.

AN IMPERATIVE DUTY.

If ever thoughtful men had a stern, imperative and sacred duty staring them in the face, they have it now. The whole city is in danger of being put under the control of men who, having nothing to lose have everything to win, and whose every act indicates that they will take the most desperate means to accomplish their ends. Kearney and his mob hold every pernicious doctrine that has ever entered into the minds of low, vicious and ignorant men. Just now they are pretending to a moderation they do not feel. The original demon is temporarily hushed, not finally silenced. We all know the watchwords with which Kearney has conjured. He has told the people plainly enough what they are to expect. The Sand-lotters do expect those things to result if their nominees are elected, and, having the desire, they will prove to have the power to drive their representatives to accomplish every vain thing that has ever been promised in the heat of Sand-lot orations. The word has gone forth. It is: "Wait boys until after the election." When that event is over, their hour of triumph will have arrived. Kearney has told us, in days past, what will happen when he controls the city government. If those things don't happen, men are to wade knee deep in blood. We have been reminded that our city is "built of wood." Those who stand in his way are to be treated to "hemp." The Chinese must go, and must not stand on the order of their going, but go. So must capitalists, "lecherous" bondholders, and all who do not bow the knee to the oracle of the Sand Lots. For these purposes men have been put in possession of firearms, and trained to use them. The city authorities being representatives of the lawless classes, there will be no legal power outside of themselves to call upon the State government to suppress riot. We shall, in short, be bound hand and foot and delivered over to the tender mercies of a mob, more ignorant and more brutal than the one that inaugurated the "reign of terror." If any man doubts the possibility of these extremes, then we point him to the Sand-lot promises, and the means carefully and deliberately taken to render their enforcement a matter of certainty. We have briefly summarized those promises, we have called attention to the arming of men, and we have seen by what words they are held in check until "after the election is over." If these things mean nothing, then why such careful preparation? There is danger. It is always safer to extinguish a fire than to permit it to pass beyond control. Upon that conservative principle it is better to check the power of evil while it is yet a governable element, than to permit it to pass beyond restraining influences. It is better for thoughtful men to govern it, than permit it to govern them. Until Wednesday evening next it will be entirely within the competency of thoughtful citizens to keep the government in their own hands. They are in a majority. The one great misfortune is that they are divided into two opposing camps, instead of marching shoulder to shoulder in one solid phalanx against the common enemy. To unite divided forces, heal dissensions and close up the ranks of conservatism is the all-important duty of the hour. Any man, or party, who stands in the way of this strength in union is a traitor to his own and the city's best interests. There ought, at this moment, to be a gathering force of educated public opinion, that will serve to bring about this much-to-be desired unity. The time is fast spent, but it is not yet too late. Let anything and everything be done that is calculated to bring it about. Let merchants protest, let thoughtful men demand, let property owners insist, and let every conservative-minded man set up one loud, sustained cry for a UNITED TICKET. In safe and peaceful times we have joined together as "Taxpayer's," "Citizen's" and "People's" party. In the name of all that is dear to life and liberty, why cannot we now sink little differences, and unite to turn aside the most overwhelming disaster that ever threatened an American city? Nero fiddled while Rome was burning. The men who have made San Francisco the monument of enterprise that it is, are leering at one another with jealous eyes, whilst their homes are in danger of being sacked. This condition of things is unworthy of the city's past, and if not cured, will be destructive of its future. It cannot be too strongly enforced, that great as the disaster threatens to be, it can yet easily be averted. ONE COMMON BALLOT will accomplish all that is needed! It will keep the government in the hands of safe men, who will never permit mob law to rule. Let the word go forth that good citizens have united, without distinction of party, and there will be rejoicing in thousands of families, and a feeling, at home and abroad, that San Francisco has once again redeemed herself.

A Point Well Taken.—There were some persons in London who pretended to possess the power of foretelling future events, and were called the French Prophets. Holt, having upon occasion committed one of them to prison, a disciple of his came to the Justice's house and desired to see him. On being admitted, he said: "I come from the Lord, who bade me desire thee grant a nolle prosequi for John Atkins, his servant, whom thou hast thrown into prison." "Thou art a false prophet and a lying knave!" returned the Chief Justice; "if the Lord had sent thee it would have been to the Attorney-General, for the Lord knoweth that it is not in my power to grant a nolle prosequi."

Colonel J. H. Dickenson is the Republican nominee for Senator from the Tenth District. An able lawyer, a man of wide practical experience, and a gentleman, he is a candidate who does credit to his party, and, if elected, will do good service for the city.

GENERAL GRANT AND THE CHINESE.

By the steamer "Oceanic," which arrived here on the evening of the 26th instant in the unprecedented time of fourteen days and five hours from Yokohama, we have the latest news from this distinguished American. His intentions had been to leave Japan for this port on his homeward journey on the 15th inst., but if he should accept the position tendered him of arranging on the part of the United States for the arbitration of the matters in dispute between China and Japan, regarding the Loo Choo Islands, his departure may be considerably delayed. Prince Kung, the Prince Regent of China, and also the Emperor of Japan, have extended to General Grant especial and unusual honors. During his recent visit at Peking these two distinguished men, one representing the oldest of nations, with its 400,000,000 of population, and its traditions and deep-seated prejudices; the other a man of the American people, raised to his proud position through his own indomitable energy and firmness of character, and representing the progressive ideas of our advanced civilization, had prolonged and confidential conversations. We are advised that already important results are anticipated from these interviews. Li Hung Chang, the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs, was most especially pleased with the visit of General Grant, and the unexpected length of hospitality to which he and his household have gone are certainly cheering signs of improvement, which will be hailed with pleasure by all the foreign powers alike. The reports of all these hospitalities and expressions of great good will toward the representative soldier and citizen of the United States should be properly appreciated here. The Viceroy, Li Hung Chang, has thus given an unmistakable sign of his friendly and progressive spirit. It required no little moral courage to stand forth before his detractors, who are always ready to taunt him with pro-foreign tendencies, and make these bold manifestations of friendship; and even now, through these friendly courtesies, comes a proposal to General Grant which may very easily settle the "Chinese Must Go" question, without any recourse to blood-shed or abrogation of treaty rights. Li Hung Chang, in the diplomatic manner so well known to the scholars of his country, expressed his great personal regard for General Grant, and suggested to him a method, practical and easy, of checking the migration of Chinese to this country. He said: "If the Cabinet at Washington will make the advance, the Government at Peking will sign a convention promising to check imigration for three or five years, after the lapse of which time further steps might be taken. No Chinaman would be permitted to leave for the United States without a passport, which would be granted only in exceptional cases—such as to merchants, students, tourists, etc.,—but not to coolies or laborers." Congress could co-operate in such an arrangement very easily, by providing that no passengers shall come without showing a passport from the Chinese authorities. If General Grant can, by his personal magnetism, find so easy a solution of the vexed Chinese question, can he not equally well settle the Loo Choo troubles, and thus add to his already overflowing record of good deeds to all mankind? Glad, indeed, shall we be to welcome him home.

MINISTER SEWARD.

At the dinner tendered by the Viceroy of the Empire of China to General Grant, at Tientsin, the following sentiment was expressed by Mr. Detring in behalf of the Viceroy, showing the high regard in which Mr. Seward is held in the land where he has represented his country so ably for upwards of fifteen years: "I am happy to be again called upon by his Excellency the Viceroy, to say on his behalf that having only too soon to separate from his distinguished newly gained friend (Gen. Grant), he feels the more gratified to be able to greet, on this occasion, an old one, and express satisfaction at his return to China, where, during a career of more than fifteen years, he has been known to represent the interests of his country in a manner which has tended to promote the friendly relations of two great nations. The Viceroy invites you, ladies and gentlemen, to raise your glasses and drink with him in honor of the U. S. Minister to China, Hon. George F. Seward." Mr. Seward responded briefly and feelingly, expressing himself in his usual forcible manner.

Death of Joseph French.—Mr. Joseph French, an old Californian, one of the first comers and one of the successful mining speculators, died on Thursday last at his residence, in Oakland, at the age of sixty-nine years. A man of genial and kindly temper, Mr. French was one of the most familiar figures in our thoroughfares, and on good terms with nearly all San Francisco. His general health was good, though he had been troubled for years with a tendency to gout, and his death was the result of an apoplectic stroke. The funeral will take place on Sunday, 31st, at 2 P. M., from the Rev. T. K. Noble's Church, Taylor street.

We give Captain Jack Crawford a last warning to stop grinding out doggerel—to cut his hair, clean his nails, and try to act like a civilized being. He can stay on the blood and gunpowder stage if he wants to, but that is positively all the indulgence he can safely ask of an already long-suffering and forbearing public. If he is really a good scout, why should he put in his time trying to make people think him a cross between a sign for a dime novel store and a new-fangled kind of idiot.

The steamer City of Chester will sail for Victoria at noon.

LIABILITY OF BANKS IN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

In Great Britain there are various degrees of liability incurred by the shareholders of banks. In some English banks, and in nearly all the Scottish banks, the liability is unlimited; that is, the possessor of one share is liable for all the debts after the other shareholders have been levied upon and are unable to pay any more. Then there are chartered banks, in which the liability extends to as much again as the amount of the fully paid-up share. There are also banks under the Limited Liability Act for ordinary public companies, and it is customary not to call up more than one half of the amount of the share, so as to leave the second half as a reserve to be drawn upon in case of need. In addition to these there are private banks, in which the partners are all liable for the debts, as in the case of ordinary business firms. Among the chartered banks are the Bank of British North America, with 20,000 shares of £50 each, all paid, and a liability of £50 per share; and the Bank of British Columbia, with 12,500 shares of £20 each, all paid, and 9,600 shares of £20 each, with £10 paid and £10 that may be called up at any time, and a further liability of £2 per share on the 22,100 shares. In the class of Limited Liability are the London and San Francisco Bank, Limited, and the Anglo-Californian Bank, Limited. The former has 60,000 shares of £10 each, all paid, with no further liability whatever; while the latter has 22,970 shares of £20 each, with £10 paid, and a further liability of £10 per share. In the case of the chartered banks, the shareholders can only be compelled to pay the amount for which they are responsible, in addition to the capital, if the bank becomes insolvent, so that it is a continuous liability; whereas in the case of the London and San Francisco Bank all liability of the shareholders has ceased by the payment in full of £10 per share; and in the Anglo-Californian Bank all liability may cease by the Directors calling up £10 per share, and thus making the £20 per share all paid up. The banking bill, which was lately introduced into the House of Commons by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, is evidently intended to apply to banks like the Scottish banks, and some English banks, so that whatever the stipulations of their special charters may be, no shareholder shall be liable for more than an additional amount per share, equal to the amount subscribed per share. This will constitute a limitation of liability on all bank shares, but will still leave a considerable margin of liability for the benefit of the creditors of the banks.

In the national banks of the United States things are ordered differently. The Government holds United States bonds to more than the value of the notes issued to each bank, and each share in a national bank is liable, not as the Scottish banks, for the whole debts of the bank, but for its proportion of the whole of the debts of the bank. So that an American shareholder is liable for only his own share of debts, and it is of no importance to him whether his co-shareholders are solvent or insolvent. In the Scottish banks the solvent shareholders have to pay everything that the insolvent shareholders cannot pay. We may congratulate ourselves that the American system is more in keeping with justice and common sense than the Scottish or English, and more in keeping with justice than even the plan that the Chancellor of the British Exchequer now proposes. We trust, however, that the present bill will pass, so as to put the liability of the shareholders in British banks on a more rational footing, though we may remark that the same proposal limited to England only was talked out of the House of Commons, not long since, on the ground that it ought to apply to Scotland and Ireland also, which the present bill includes.

The following advertisement appeared in the columns of the London Evening Standard, the other day:

TWENTY POUNDS REWARD.—Left her home, in London, on the evening of the 22d, a young lady, 17 years of age, 5 feet 5 high, dark eyes, fair hair, curled in front, white skin, rather freckled, slight figure, name Linda, and a cross tattooed on her right leg; dressed at the time in a serge dress, braided on collar and sleeve with gold braid, black hat lined with gold braid, navy blue silk stockings, initials L. D., and coronet on linen; had a small black-and-tan toy terrier; diamond screw ear-rings, self-winding gold watch, with L. D. and coronet, gold chain, heavy gold bracelet, diamond and ruby ring, opal and diamond ring, turquoise ring, silver and gold wedding ring. Whoever will give such information as will lead to the recovery of the young lady will receive the above reward on application to Messrs. Farrer, Ouvry & Co., solicitors, 66, Lincoln's-inn-fields, W. C.

Seeing that the young lady was only 17 years of age, that she had dark eyes and fair hair, that she was covered with jewelry, and that her watch and linen were marked with a coronet, twenty pounds does not seem an exaggerated sum to offer as a reward for the recovery of this missing and erratic young person. Married she must be, as she had two wedding rings; her initials must be L. D., and she must have a title on account of the coronet. No such English lady exists, therefore "Linda" must be a foreigner, for the names of the solicitors inserting the advertisement exclude the idea of a hoax. I see a Linda and a reward of £20 in every young lady of 17 that I come across, but they vanish while I am thinking how I can delicately put the question about the tattoo-mark.—Atlas in the "World."

MICROPHONIC STUDY.

M. Boudet de Paris has experimented with a microphonic transmitter, in which the carbons, instead of being pressed by a spring, are simply kept in contact by a bit of paper folded like a V. It was so sensitive that, with a single Lechlanché cell, and at a distance of 500 metres (1,640.4 feet), the receiving telephone reproduced the message so that it could be heard in all parts of the hall. By increasing the amplitude of the vibrations he found that they were of two kinds: 1. Large vibrations, or rather undulations, which always occurred in the same order for any given word or vowel. 2. Small vibrations, very short, very numerous, looped upon the larger ones. He thinks that the undulations are due either to the force of the breath which necessarily accompanies the emission of the voice, or to the inertia of the instrument.—Comptes Rendus.

The "Electrician" notices the close of the International Telegraph Conference, and the results arrived at, as follows: A word rate is to be introduced, and next year there will be only one rate from London to every part of the world. Great reduction in all the rates. Eight languages to be employed: Latin, English, French, German, Italian, Dutch, Spanish, Portuguese. Extra payment for figure telegrams to be abolished, and the number of figures allowed to count as one word reduced to three.

SKELETON SKETCHES.—No. 4.

[BY T. A. HARCOURT.]

A Complete Revenge.

The few hours of life that are left to me I will devote to writing a confession—not of the deed, for that I have never denied, but of the motives which actuated me and the manner in which it was accomplished. But because I do this, let none believe that I repent; on the contrary, I glory in what I have done, and would gladly suffer a second death—a thousand times more terrible than that which awaits me at sunrise—for the opportunity of repeating the deed.

From the first moment that I saw the Lady Hilda, I loved her—not with the weak and sickly sentiment which the poets miscall love, but with the fierce and irresistible passion of the tiger for his mate. That I dared not show the flame that consumed me, made this passion the more intolerable. Had I, the humble librarian and amanuensis of my lord, her father, presumed to lift my eyes to the sole daughter of his House, I should have been spurned from the door like a dog. It was far better to be near her and suffer, to sleep under the same roof and to kiss the ground she walked on, than to be driven from her presence forever. Besides, the indignation of the proud old Earl would have been nothing to bear in comparison with her contemptuous scorn. As it was, she scarcely seemed to know that I existed. If she entered the library while I was there, she took no more notice of me than if I were a part of the furniture, and I verily believe that if one of the chairs had declared its love for her, she would have been less surprised—certainly less scornful—than if I had done so. It was this absolute indifference, this utter ignoring of my existence, that galled me more than anything else. Yet, by some accursed contradiction of nature, it added fire to my passion. I would gladly have been her dog, to receive her caresses; or her hook, that I might meet her eyes; but to be only an unregarded human chattel in her father's house, was more than I could bear. My birth was lowly, and I was poor; but I was a man, as goodly to look upon as any of the butterflies that hovered about her, and infinitely more learned than they. I knew—for, with all my quiet and retiring manner, I kept my eyes and ears open—I knew that many of the noblest of these had sought her love in vain, and in secret I gloated over their discomfiture. But there came a day when even her cold, proud heart was stormed and taken. It was evening when I first met Sir Cyril and her walking in the park together. They did not see me where I lurked in the shadows of the great beeches, but I saw—aye, and heard—more than enough to rob me of my only comfort—that if I had not her love, at least no other had. Had I been armed, I believe I should have slain them both on the spot; but he was tall and powerful—as near my own build as possible—and even if I sprang upon him unawares, I could not kill him with my hands.

It matters not to tell the agony that I endured, month after month, for nearly a year. By day and by night I plotted to kill him, and full a score of times his life was in my hands at moments when he least suspected danger. But each time I hesitated till the opportunity was lost; not because I was afraid, but because murder would not satisfy my hate. At last I resolved to lay a scheme which should drag his name into disgrace. This I knew would be to inflict a thousand deaths upon both him and her. But I had hardly begun to contrive a scheme to this end when it was announced that their marriage would take place sooner than had been arranged, as Sir Cyril had to go abroad on an important diplomatic mission. There was only a week to act in, so I gave up all hope of bringing him to shame, and resolved to have his blood.

During that week I scarcely closed my eyes, so incessantly did I watch for an opportunity to murder him. But there was none, for he did not come near the house again till the morning of the wedding-day. I did not accompany the procession to the church. Had I done so I must have stabbed him at the altar, and I was determined to escape discovery long enough to witness her agony. Without that my vengeance would be barren—with it, it would be complete, and death would have no terrors for me.

The bride and bridegroom were not to set out for the Continent until the following morning, and that night there was to be a grand masked ball in the Earl's great banqueting-room. My chance must be then or never, and I swore he should die that night.

The servants and dependents of the family were graciously allowed to view the festivities from an obscure corner of the balcony surrounding the hall. On all former occasions I had scorned to avail myself of this permission. It reminded me of my hated position, and to see her dance with another prostrated me with rage. But this night I stood there among the domestics, and when she entered, costumed as Mary, Queen of Scots, I knew her in a moment. What was her disguise to me? I should have felt her presence had I been stone-blind. So with him. Though many masks addressed her, I noted none till he bowed low before her in the dress of Chastelard.

I saw him kiss her hand and place her arm in his, and I waited to see no more. Rushing to my room, I donned a false beard and muffled myself up like a traveler, and then stealthily glided through the deserted corridors to the library, which was situated in a somewhat remote part of the mansion. Ringing the bell, I asked the servant—who, after some delay, answered it—why the gentleman I had sent for had not come. Naturally supposing that some one else had shown me into the library and carried a message for me, the man replied that he would go and inquire if I would instruct him. I told him to go to the guest dressed as Chastelard, and inform him that a messenger awaited him in the library with important papers from the Government.

In less than five minutes the door opened. In less than five seconds thereafter Sir Cyril lay dead with a dagger in his heart. I had not even time to tell him why I killed him, and I cursed my good aim for that. Then I turned to flee, and as I did so a blessed inspiration seized me. With hands that trembled with excitement—not fear—I stripped off his magnificent costume and dressed myself in it. A slight change in the position of the shoulder-belt which supported the rapier sufficed to cover a blot of blood on the breast. Then, having adjusted the silk half-mask and thrown my great traveling-coat over the corpse, I left the room and walked straight to the banqueting hall. I have said that in build we were counterparts of each other; he had imitated the courtly strut of the French Ambassador, so could I; words need be few, and the mask would muffle them.

The Queen was waiting for her Chastelard, and with a beating heart but unfaltering step I gave her my arm. She was tired, and would go to the conservatory to rest. I bowed assent and led her there. We were alone in the dim light which the moon shed through the roof of clouded glass. Surely the Gods of Vengeance and of Love were good to me, and as I held her in my arms I thanked them with each burning kiss that I showered upon her face, and which she returned—for was I not her husband?

Suddenly there arose a tumult; a rushing to and fro, and a sound of fear-stricken voices. I knew what it meant. They had discovered the body. Then, holding her in my grasp as in a vice, I whispered hoarsely in her ear the whole story of my love, of her scorn, and of my vengeance. How much she heard I know not, but before I ended she had become the raving maniac which she is while I write, and will be till her dying day.

I made no attempt to escape. I would not accept life if they offered it to me. They are making merry music outside in erecting the gallows, and I await the rising of the sun with impatience. Chastelard will die once more for his love of Mary Stuart.

ARIZONA.

The weather in the Territory continues to be excessively warm, and mining matters are consequently quiet. Gov. Fremont reached Prescott in good health on the 23d instant, and was cordially welcomed by his many friends, who appreciate his endeavors for the good of their country during his prolonged absence at the East. In the old workings of the Silver King mine a deposit of 300 tons of very rich ore has been uncovered, and the developments in the new shaft continue to be most satisfactory. The Masterson Mill, on Turkey Creek, has been started on ore from the Goodwin mine, and is now running successfully. John Holmes has a mine in the same vicinity, with ore assaying as high as $1,800 per ton, and the mill will work a lot of it next week. The force of men at the Eureka Copper mine is to be increased, and a road to the property is being opened. The copper developments in this section are immense, and will eventually be very valuable. Lynx Creek miners are piling up large quantities of pay dirt, so as to be ready to take advantage of the fall rains. The people in this locality are prosperous and contented. The Golden Chariot mine has produced some wonderfully rich gold rock, and in the tunnel and shafts of the Cumberland mine the rock, according to a number of recent assays made in this city, is very valuable. In the vicinity of Prescott the number of gold-bearing leads being uncovered is truly astonishing, and great results are anticipated.

Ten Chinamen are at work at placer diggings in the vicinity of Pichaco, which they have rented for a term of months. The fifth shipment of bullion from the Tombstone mill has just been made to Philadelphia, aggregating $23,717. This makes a total of $108,485 shipped already from the mill. The stock of the company is freely selling at $6 75 per share in Philadelphia. The Yuma mill made a very satisfactory clean-up on the 17th instant, and the new machinery worked smoothly and well. The results have not been made public. The Prescott Mining Company is attracting considerable attention. The property of the company consists of six mines in Yavapai county, and it is estimated they have in sight some 18,000 tons of ore, the average assay of which is $90 per ton. The office of the company is established at No. 55 Broadway, New York. In the Dos Cabezas Mountains several mineral ledges have been recently found, carrying from $25 to $40 per ton, in gold, with traces of silver. The shaft of the Tough Nut mine is down 100 feet, and the tunnel is now upwards of 100 feet in length; the ore assays $283@$429 per ton. A party of gentlemen are organizing in this city for an extended tour through the territory, to leave here as soon as the weather becomes cooler. They will take with them all the necessary apparatus for assaying and testing ores, and their enterprise will be, we doubt not, a very interesting and profitable one, as they will be prepared to make arrangements for the purchase of desirable properties. As we note, from week to week, the items of interest from the territory and in connection with it, we are confirmed in our opinion that the successful future of our neighbor is secured.

A REMARKABLE GARMENT.

A day or two ago a motherly-looking woman of forty-five entered a Woodward avenue clothing store, having a man's linen duster on her arm, and when approached by a salesman, she said: "Some one in here sold this duster to my son yesterday."

"Yes, ma'am; I sold it myself," replied the clerk, looking at the garment.

"Did you tell my son that this duster could be worn either to a picnic, funeral, bridal-party or quarterly-meeting?" "I did, madam; and so it can."

"Did you tell him it made a good fly-blanket, when not otherwise needed?" "I did."

"That it could be used as a boat-sail, a stretcher, a straw-bed and a bed-spread?" "Yes, ma'am; I did."

"And that many people used them as table-covers?" "I did."

"And that they would last for years, and then make excellent stuff for rag-carpets?" "I did."

"And you only charged a dollar?" "Only a dollar, ma'am."

"Well, when John came home last night and brought the duster, and told me all you said, I made up my mind that he must have been drunk, and I was a little afraid that he stole the garment. I am glad it's all right."

"It certainly is all right, ma'am; and since he left here yesterday, we have discovered that the duster is a great conductor of sound, a preventive of sun-stroke, and that no man with one on his back ever dropped dead of heart-disease."

"Land save us!" she gasped, as she waited for the bundle; "but who knows that they won't fix 'em so 'fore long that they'll raise a mortgage off the farm?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Boston Advertiser, of August 19th, publishes an account of an interview with Mr. Thos. B. Lewis, of this city, in which this gentleman expresses the fullest faith in the resources of Arizona. After a preliminary sketch of the obstacles in the way of the territory, Mr. Lewis refers to Gen. Crook's expedition as the beginning of better times, and declares that the Arizona of "to-day is a new birth, and will grow rapidly to the importance and wealth of a great State." This confidence is based on the positive returns already made by the mines of the territory, and the indications of vast undeveloped resources to be met with in every direction.

The steamer Oregon sailed for Portland to-day.

SPORTING ITEMS.

Rowing.—Hanlan declines to row in any water except Toronto Bay, where he says he is willing to meet any one for $5,000 to $10,000 a side. This looks like a bluff.——The crews of the Pioneer and St. George Clubs, for the McKinlay ship race, will be composed as follows: Pioneers—1, A. Tobin (bow); 2, M. Sullivan; 3, N. Sullivan; 4, P. Murphy (stroke). St. George—1, H. N. Wallace (bow); 2, C. R. Browne; 3, D. Brown; 4, R. D. Girvin (stroke); No. 2 of the St. George crew has recently met with an accident to his thumb, which, unfortunately for the crew, is bad enough to retard practice.——The Dolphin Club celebrated their second anniversary at North Beach last Monday. They were visited by the Pioneer and Neptune Clubs. During the afternoon a scratch race was rowed, the Pioneers winning in their large Colleen Bawn. The Dolphin Club will most likely enter a crew for the St. George's regatta.——Cotsford, of Victoria, is getting an improved shell from Philadelphia. If it suits him he says he will agree to Leahy's terms for a race. A San Francisco lady oarsman has been challenged to a single scull race by a Boston lady, the race to come off at Long Bridge within a month.——Hoyt has declined to row Leahy, except in Whitehall boats.——It is said the Alert will not send a crew to the St. George's regatta.

Pedestrianism.—Messrs. Lawton and McNeil are to be congratulated for the success, so far as entries are concerned, for the coming six-days' walk. Already twelve gentlemen have paid their entrance fee, two of whom were contestants in the last match. The balance of the entries come from different parts of the State, and show the interest in the interior is as great as in the city. The Pavilion will be handsomely decorated, and a fine track laid, as well as good seating accommodations for visitors. As the managers are in constant receipt of letters from the best Eastern men, asking for particulars, it looks as if the liberal inducements they offer to competitors will attract all the first-class pedestrians to this coast.——We are informed that Von Berg has accepted La Chappelle's challenge to walk a six-days' match for $1,000 a side, and that the race will come off in about eight days.——Hawes, of the Olympic Club, has been presented with the Club's 100-yards championship medal. He will go East in a few days to represent the Club at the New York Athletic Tournament.——There will be a 25-mile go-as-you-please race at the Recreation Grounds to-morrow, for an advertised purse of $50. Start at 1:30 P. M.——McIntyre has gone into the country to train for the six-days' walk, under the care of Fred. Gotobed.

Baseball.—The unfair demands of the Military League for a large share of the gate money at the Recreation Grounds, has caused the Pacific League to refuse to play. As the persons who have that part of the grounds owned by the city only pay for it the nominal rent of $1 per month, and have a three-years' lease, while McCluskey pays over $100 a month for the remainder, it looks as if the threat to build a fence across it was taking a very mean advantage.——The Knickerbockers refused to play at the Recreation Grounds last Sunday, preferring to forfeit to the Eagles.——The game at Oakland to-morrow will be Knickerbocker vs. Oakland. Nolan will pitch for the knicks.

Yachting.—The model yacht race was won by Mr. N. Nichols' Consuelo. She is schooner-rigged and measures 44 inches on water line. Sec Zale's America came in second.——The yachts of the San Francisco Club will not go to Sacramento as was projected.——The Pacific Yacht Club hold their regatta September 9th.——The San Francisco Club give an entertainment at their club-house to day.——The sloops Tommy and Lizzie Allen raced to Vallejo and back last Saturday. The Tommy won. There was not enough wind to make anything like a good race. The time from Vallejo here was over fourteen hours.

Swimming.—As there is a full moon next week, the various swimming baths keep open till 10 P.M.——A swimming tournament will take place at Alameda September 13th, under the auspices of the Neptune Club. Prizes will be given as follows: Gold medal for boys under sixteen, gold medal for amateurs who have never won a prize; purse of $50, open to professionals; gold and silver medals for fancy driving. Entries to be made before September 10th to R. B. Cunningham, 410 California, or Mr. Solon H. Williams, 414 Clay street.

Shooting.—The tournament at the State Fair is already an assured success. Matches will be shot in the Fair grounds. Entries close to-day.——Ruth, of Oakland, will shoot a match with an unknown at Sacramento, Ruth to use rifle against his opponent's shotgun.——The coming season promises well; there will be an abundance of quail.——Wild geese have already been seen at Fresno.——At Birds Point, last Sunday, Mr. Maskey beat Mr. Lambert, shooting at twelve glass balls; score, 9 to 8. They then shot at twelve birds, making a tie, which was shot off at double birds, Mr. Lambert winning; score, 4 to 2.

Fishing.—Sutter Lake, near Sacramento, is full of fine large catfish, bred from those placed there by the Commissioners in 1877; they take the hook ravenously; angle or common worms are the best bait. This delicious fish is at present little known here, but is considered by epicures to be the finest flavored fresh-water fish in America.——Eastern brook trout are caught in Donner Lake.——The salmon laws are violated by Sacramento fishermen every day. What is the Sportsmen's Club up there about?

Boxing.—Until some more good men come from the East there will be nothing doing in this sport. We would advise some of our resident fistic artists to stop talking about how easily they could beat Chambers, now that he has gone East, or they will gain an unpleasant reputation as long-distance figbters.——It is rumored that Fred. Mackley will give Harry Maynard a surprise party at the coming set-to.

Coursing.—Arrangements for the coming meeting are not completed nor has the ground been selected. Owners of dogs are busy getting them in condition. A large number of entries are expected.——We saw Bulldozer a few days ago. He was in splendid trim and will be very near the front this Fall barring accidents.——Hares are plentiful in Santa Clara, but do not appear to be as stout as those around Merced.

Bicycling.—At Wolverhampton J. Keen beat F. Cooper for the one-mile championship by two yards and a half. No time taken.——The 150 mile championship of England was won by Cann, who had an easy race with Phillips.

Archery.—The tournament at Sacramento will be held at the Capitol grounds.——There is nothing being done by clubs just now except practice.

An elegant assortment of Gold Watches and Chains at Randolph & Co.'s, corner Montgomery and Sutter streets.

CARD.

I take pleasure in announcing that I have completed arrangements with F. F. DE DERKY, M.D., whereby he will attend to my practice during my absence abroad. Dr. de Derky has been a successful practitioner of medicine in the Southern and Eastern States, and, though recently having become a resident of this city, I beg to commend him as worthy of your fullest confidence.

Yours respectfully, DR. D. ALBERT HILLER.

Relative to the above, I would say that my office is No. 17 Dupont street, Rooms Nos. 5 and 6. Office Hours: from 11 to 12 o'clock A.M. and 2 to 4 P.M.

Aug. 30. F. F. DE DERKY, M.D.

BALLADS OF BABYLON.

PHRYNE'S HUSBAND.

I stood at eve, as the sun went down, by a grave where a woman lies,
Who lured men's souls to the shores of sin with the light of her wanton eyes,
Who sang the song that the Siren sang on the treacherous Lurley hight,
Whose face was as fair as a summer day and whose heart was as black as night.

Yet a blossom I fain would pluck to-day from the garden above her dust;
Not the languorous lily of soulless sin nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life, where all was parched and hot.

* * * * * * *

In the summer, when the meadows were aglow with blue and red,
Joe, the Ostler of the Magpie, and fair Annie Smith were wed.
Plump was Annie, plump and pretty, with a cheek as fair as snow;
He was anything but handsome was the Magpie's Ostler, Joe.

But he won the winsome lassie. They'd a cottage and a cow,
And her matronhood sat lightly on the village beauty's brow.
Sped the months and came a baby—such a blue-eyed baby boy!
Joe was working in the stables when they told him of his joy.

He was rubbing down the horses, and he gave them then and there
All a special feed of clover, just in honor of the heir;
It had been his great ambition, and he told the horses so,
That the Fates would send a baby who might bear the name of Joe.

Little Joe the child was christened, and, like babies, grew apace;
He'd his mother's eyes of azure and his father's honest face.
Swift the happy years went over, years of blue and cloudless sky;
Love was lord of that small cottage, and the tempests passed them by.

Passed them by for years, then swiftly burst in fury o'er their home.
Down the lane by Annie's cottage chanced a gentleman to roam;
Thrice he came and saw her sitting by the window with her child,
And he nodded to the baby, and the baby laughed and smiled.

So at last it grew to know him—little Joe was nearly four;
He would call the "pretty gemplun" as he passed the open door;
And one day he ran and caught him and in child's play pulled him in,
And the baby Joe had prayed for brought about the mother's sin.

'Twas the same old wretched story that for ages hards have sung:
'Twas a woman weak and wanton and a villain's tempting tongue;
'Twas a picture deftly painted for a silly creature's eyes
Of the Babylonian wonders and the joy that in them lies.

Annie listened and was tempted; she was tempted and she fell,
As the angels fell from heaven to the blackest depths of hell;
She was promised wealth and splendor and a life of guilty sloth,
Yellow gold for child and husband—and the woman left them both.

Home one eve came Joe the Ostler with a cheery cry of "Wife!"
Finding that which blurred forever all the story of his life.
She had left a silly letter—through the cruel scrawl he spelt;
Then he sought the lonely bedroom, joined his horny hands and knelt.

"Now, O Lord, O God, forgive her, for she ain't to blame!" he cried;
"For I owt t'a seen her trouble, and 'a gone away and died.
Why, a wench like her—God bless her!—'twasn't likely as her'd rest
With that bonny head forever on a Ostler's ragged vest.

"It was kind o' her to bear me all this long and happy time,
So for my sake please to bless her, though You count her deed a crime;
If so be I don't pray proper, Lord, forgive me; for You see
I can talk all right to 'osses, but I'm nervous like with Thee."

Ne'er a line came to the cottage from the woman who had flown;
Joe the bahy died that winter, and the man was left alone.
Ne'er a bitter word he uttered, hut in silence kissed the rod,
Saving what he told his horses, saving what he told his God.

* * * * * * *

Far away in mighty London rose the wanton into fame,
For her beauty won men's homage, and she prospered in her shame.
Quick from lord to lord she flitted, higher still each prize she won,
And her rivals paled beside her as the stars beside the sun.

Next she trod the stage half-naked, and she dragged a temple down
To the level of a market for the women of the town.
And the kisses she had given to poor Ostler Joe for naught
With their gold and priceless jewels rich and titled roues bought.

Went the years with flying footsteps while her star was at its hight;
Then the darkness came on swiftly, and the gloaming turned to night.
Shattered strength and faded beauty tore the laurels from her brow;
Of the thousands who had worshiped never one came near her now.

Broken down in health and fortune, men forgot her very name,
Till the news that she was dying woke the echoes of her fame;
And the papers in their gossip mentioned how an "actress" lay
Sick to death in humble lodgings, growing weaker every day.

One there was who read the story in a far-off country place,
And that night the dying woman woke and looked upon his face.
Once again the strong arms clasped her that had clasped her long ago,
And the weary head lay pillowed on the head of Ostler Joe.

All the past had he forgiven, all the sorrow and the shame;
He had found her sick and lonely, and his wife he now could claim..
Since the grand folks who had known her one and all had slunk away,
He could clasp his long-lost darling, and no man would say him nay.

In his arms death found her lying, in his arms her spirit fled;
And his tears came down in torrents as he knelt beside her dead.
Never once his love had faltered through her base unhallowed life;
And the stone above her ashes bears the honored name of wife.

* * * * * * * *

That's the blossom I fain would pluck to-day from the garden above her dust;
Not the languorous lily of soulless sin nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life, where all was parched and hot.

THE PEASANT GIRL'S SONG.

My lady has wealth untold,
My lady is strangely fair,
Bright jewels en circle her lily-white throat
And shine in her golden hair.
And yet it seems to me,
When proudly she passes by,
That with all her gold and her lands untold
She is not as happy as I.
My world is a world of song,
From the woods where the birdlings meet,
To the realms afar where each silvery star
Is singing a melody sweet.
Down at my lady's feet
Unnumbered suitors fall,
She rules with a wave of her slender hand
Those lords and courtiers all.
But not for the oldest name
Or the haughtiest title there,
Would I give the heart of the peasant lad
Whose home I have promised to share.
My world is a world of love—
Proud lady pass coldly by!
Your hands so fair and your jewels rare
Cannot make you as happy as I.

PUBLIC SCHOOL RESULTS.

Hope often proves but a barren expectancy—a delusion; and though steeped in the quintescence of improbability, is still nourished as an inalienable refuge against all and every antagonism of reason. Long before the continent of America was known to exist at all, and consequently long before the United States had any consistency as a government, public education, as provided for and enforced by governmental decree, was an old and well established institution in some of the older European countries; hut, singular as it may seem, the object desired and the effective result to he attained was precisely the reverse of the unmistakable and every-day experience we have to confront in this presumptuously fast age and country. When, in the olden times, school taxes were imposed that honest poverty might become enlightened, it was for no other purpose and with no other object in view than to enable the ambitious and industrious, though conditionally unfortunate, to acquire knowledge in reading, writing and cyphering, just sufficient to place them above the necessity of dependence upon mere manual labor. Our progenitors of antiquity had sense enough to know that conceit, based upon scholarly acquirements, in no way contributed to efficiency in any kind of manual labor. We, to-day, know so too, hut then there are more of us to he kept in degraded idleness since the taxpayers have done their best to make us unfit for any useful purpose—in fact, good for nothing.

A country, to he prosperous, must have within its boundaries great productive capacity in one way or another, and if it can he made to yield to the outside world the absolute necessaries of life, its importance is considerably enhanced, hut always and only when the manipulative labor in production is hy hands of a kind "native and to the manor born." It is hardly to he expected, nor is there any reason why anything half so foolishly ridiculous should he supposed possible, that young fellows, after spending six or seven years of the best part of a young life at high-flown schools, should emerge, full of academic glamour, and with mighty high ideas of mental superiority, fall to and make a decent livelihood in the harvest field or vineyard, by hard work in a trench, following the plow, or loading manure in a farm-yard. So far, our public schools have turned out no such miracles!! nor are they ever likely to do so; hut, instead, we have a yearly hatch, running up into the thousands, of worthless and criminally inclined, loafing and degraded bummers that will, at no distant day, make their mark in a way that may he anything but satisfactory to contemplate. All are fit and waiting for the plunder of office, hut none for anything like hard work! It need partake of notbing like daring to assert that the whole public school system is fallacious, unsound and wrong; that nine-tenths of the beneficial work of any country is of the drudgery order, that can he just as well done without as with anything hut the merest elements of education, and the sooner our present profligate and atrocious foolery is abolished, root and branch, the sooner will we he relieved of an incubus that is already and ever will be, so long as our present system is continued, a curse to the country.

A Dog's Affection.—The following narrative is from "Chambers's Journal." Some time ago the late Mr. H. possessed a collie shepherd-dog, which was very clever at its duty until it had a litter, one of which was spared to it. After this all the poor animal's affections seemed to be centered in her puppy, for she refused, or did most unwillingly, the work she had to do, which so vexed her master that he cruelly drowned the puppy before the mother's eyes, covering the bucket in which he left the body with a sack. He then went round the fields, followed by the old dog, who from that moment resumed her former usefulness. On the master's return in the evening, be hetbought himself of the hucket and went to fetch it to empty the contents into a hole which he had made in the manure-heap; he found the bucket covered as he had left it, but on pouring out the contents there was nothing hut water. He questioned his wife and other inmates of his house, but they knew nothing about it. The next morning Mrs. H. was struck with the piteous expression of the poor animal's face, and said to her, "Scottie, tell me where you have taken your puppy." The dog immediately ran off a distance of one hundred yards to the kitchen garden, jumped the feuce, and went direct to the farther end of the inclosure to a spot situated between two rows of beans; there, where the earth had apparently heen recently moved, she sat, and as it were, wept. Mrs. H. went again into the house, and without mentioning what had occurred, said to her niece, "Ask Scottie what she has done with her puppy." The question was put, and again the poor creature went through the same performance. These circumstances were mentioned to Mr. H., who pooh-poohed the idea of there being anything out of the common; hut to satisfy his wife he went to the spot and dug down a distance of three feet, and there, sure enough, had the faithful, fond mother huried her little one!—Popular Science Monthly.

"PLEASURE'S WAND."

"We Obey no Wand but Pleasure's."—Tom Moore.

Baldwin's Theater.—Lotta has played her third week to goodhouses. Little Nell and the Marchioness is a play in which she has scored her earliest successes. The two characters impersonated by the little lady exemplify and substantiate the remarks in this column last week. As ths sweet little flower of girlish innocence and tenderness, full of devotion and attention for her grandpa, Lotta is very mediocre. Her pathos, her love, her simplicity, are all depicted in a crude and mechanical way. As the poor, half-starved "slavey," thin and wan of face and sickly in appearance, hut healthy in spirits and mischief, Lotta is herself. To me the "Marchioness" has always heen a most amusing performance. The peculiar exuberance of animal spirits, so ridiculously unrestrained, seem to be in place; and still it can hardly he said that Lotta's conception of ths character is true to tbe author's creation. It is a relief to have her hound in arrayed in those dilapidated shoes and in that wonderful cap, with her face all smut and dirt, after enduring her profunctory rendition of "Little Nell." To this contrast between the hetter and poorer sides of Lotta's acting is perhaps due the agreeahle impression produced. Be that as it may, her "Marchioness" is a performance that delights and amuses. The introduction of the banjo and clogs does always seem to be incongruous, but time sanctions everything, so that remarks on this subject would he hypercritical and ante-dated. "Dick Swiveller" is a character that, in the hands of a good comedian, can he made a good deal of. The recollections of Lotta's engagement at the old Metropolitan Theater some seven years ago will always couple with her name th at of Robert Craig. He was a capital actor in bis line, and his "Dick Swiveller" a most artistic piece of work. However intelligent Mr. Bishop's efforts may be, his physique spoils tlem, for it disturhs the popular notion of the character. Mr. Bishop interpolates innumerahle gags, most of which are anything hut "Dickens" in their tenor, and jar unpleasautly upon the educated ear. Mr. Bishop is entirely too much addicted to the reprehensihle practice. Mr. Jenuings has proven himself, in every part he has taken, such an admirahle, eccentric actor that a remarkable performance of "Quilp" was a fair thing to expect. This expectation has not heen fulfilled, and a natural disappointment follows. Although in make-up and speech ths impersonation was all that could hs desired, it was so overacted at times that a disappointment was the natural result. A littls moderation exercised in the nse of his legs would have drawn away from the character much of the exaggeration that marred and spoiled an otherwise clever piece of acting. There is sufficient exaggeration and improbahility inherent in "Quilp," and more can hardly he called an improvement. Messrs. Barrows and Bradly deserve great commendation for ably and artistically filling their respective parts of "Sampson Brass" and "Grandfather Trent." Miss Revel made a very fair "Sally Brass," but Miss Walters, as "Mrs. Jarley," was an interestingly inadequate to the requirements of this most celehrated creation of Dickens'. The minor parts at this theater are usually well played, but at times they are entrusted to very indifferent heginners. This is strongly evidenced in the part of "Foxey Joe." Ambition is a laudahle thing in neophytes, hut it sbould always be subject to intslligent restraint. The stage management of this theater is its weak point. It is lax in the extreme, a fault fatal to the realization of a thorough ensemble. The orchestra contains some of the most ahls local violinists. Saveniers, Schlott, Moore, Homeir and Walther, are all performers of exceptional abibty. The selections of Mr. Widmer are always in good and popular taste, and the entre acts at this theater are among the most enjoyahle moments of ths evening. On Monday next Zip will he produced, with Lotta in the title role.

California Theater.—The Comedy of Errors is a whimsical affair in itself. It is perplexity personified. A good psrformance of this puzzling comedy is something rarely seen. The requirements of such a production are very great. The two actors impersonating the Dromios must he comedians of like style and manner, possessed of similar traits or tricks of speech aud movement, or afflicted with like mannerisms of tone and gesture. Or else they must he artists of sufficient ahility to sink their respective individuality and identity in common impersonations alike in all respects. Messrs. Crane and Rohson do not carry out either of these theories; they are admirahls comedians, hut antipodal in all respects, and hoth possessing so marked individual characteristics, that disguise is nigh unto impossible. They have, therefore, to adopt another plan, which, as laugbahle and mirth-provoking as it is, does not carry out the idea of a Shakespearean representation. It is simply a clever imitation of Mr. Robson hy his partner, Mr. Crane. Rohson simply plays his part artistically, and in his wonderfully humorous way, and Crane performs the arduous task of reproducing the former's peculiar squeaky intonation, his beamingly vacant stare, and his peculiar head movements. The intense difficulty of a successful reproduction of those idiosyncrasies is easily appreciated. As a whole, it may he said that Mr. Crane does it admirahly, though the strain is so strong that at times he forgets himself and relapses into his own tricks of comedy. In the mind of a casual theatergoer, sitting a good distance hack in tbe auditorium, confusion may exist as to the respective identity of the comedians, but that is impossihle in an old stager, and his amusement consists in laughing at Rohson's ahsurdities, and applauding Crane's great imitative powers. Since their first attempt in these characters, last season, they have greatly elahorated the "business," and correspondingly increased the fun. The house is in one ripple of laughter from the time the curtain rises until the side-splitting recognition scene of the two clowns. The physical resemblance was a wonderful one. The same may he said of the "Antipholus." Make-up has become a regular science. Keene and Wilson did very well in their two parts, and so did Pope Cook as "Ægeon." Of Miss Stanhope, the uew leading lady, it is not fair to judge by tbis first effort. "Adriana" is at best an unthankful character to represent. Miss Stanhope is an actress of evident intelligence and good method, hut one whoss voice is hardly clear or pleasant. Miss Lizzie Harrold is decidedly a plump and pleasing person, and judging from the limited opportunity given her in the idiotic farce of Betsy Baker, a souhrette of first-class merit. Her appearance captures the audience on sight, and predisposes them to a favorahle consideration of her efforts. She seems to he a legitimate souhretts, preferring to make her points naturally, and without recourse to gag or gallery appeals. Both of these ladies will soon have more ample opportunity to please us or otherwise; further reviewis, therefore, postponed. Mr. Withers inaugurated his regime with a well selected programme of music, and performed himself a violin solo. This could not exactly be called artistic, hut was decidedly popular in its exhibition of violin pyrotechnics. On Monday ths roaring comedy of Champagne and Oysters will bs produced. This is said to be excrutiatingly funny.

Bush Street Theater.—The chief merits of Haverly's Mastodon Minstrels lis in the fact that interest is created and amusement provoked hy the novelty of the performance. As compared with the former troups that hore the same name, it is helow it in individual excellence, hut this is mors than compensated through the peculiar effect produced hy massing the performers in the different acts. The California Quartette, one of the very hest on the minstrel stage, has heen impaired in its excellency hy ths loss of Freeth, its second hass. Besides this, Dixon is not singing as sweetly as of yore. His rendition of "Sally in Our Alley" was particularly disagreeahle, with poor Joe Maguire ever green in my memory. The voice of this gentleman is a peculiar one—the lower notes being a decided haritone, while the upper ones are of the purest alto. Harley sings with remarkahle sweetness. Roe is a capital haritone. The different choruses, particularly when sung in the usual minstrel sotto voce manner, are remarkably well rendered, and show considerahle practice. These quartettes are all harmonized by Roe, and give evideuce of considerahle skill. The clog tournament is one of tbe very hest things on the programme. It is ingeniously arranged, and is carried ont with great skill. The Picnic song and dance is amusing and ludicrous in the extreme, and the finishing ahsurdity, the Burlesque Circus, sends every one home in the very hest of humor. The particular stars are evidently our old favorites, Billy Rice and Harry Kennedy. The former's appearance in one of his wonderful lectures is anxiously awaited. Kennedy is a ventriloquist of very high order. It is difficult to detect the movement of his lips, or that of the muscles of his neck. He is also very clever in the way of introducing his little figures. While they are supposed to he talking, he assumes a perfectly unconcerned manner, that is very deceiving and amusing. The houses have heen very large.

German Theater.—Irschick is too good an actress to play anything badly. An artist of talent will always he ahle to grasp the peculiarities of any one part intelligently. But the gifts of nature and study will run in one groove and fit a person for excellence in one particular hranch of art. Perfect versatility is a talent rarely possessed, unless it exists from a mediocre standard. With these premises, it is not detracting from Irschick's great talent to call her impersonation of "Katherine" an uusatisfactory one. She lacks the pliahility of manner necessary to depict the contrasting phases of shrewishness and ohedient tenderness. Ths lady's stately, measured tones do not fit tbe vixenish, snappish lines of "Katherine." In the last act she was at her hest, the suhmissive manner of speech and gesture heing eloquent aud graceful. The epilogus was an admirable elocutionary effort. The performance, as a whole, was not up to the high standard of this excellent company. The concluding farce, Monsieur Hercules, gave Mr. Urhan full scope to display his ludicrous ahilities. Next Sunday Deborah (Leah, the Forsaken,) will he produced, and Sunday week, The Two Orphans. This last will he an exact translation of the original French drama.

Boscovitz's Concerts Intimes.—Mr. Boscovitz comes to us with a reputation ready-made, as we are told, in Europe; which statement we receive as information, to he used if needed. Judging his performancs dispassionately, he is very nearly perfect in the mechanism of fingering; hut his style of execution, though it displays great skill, cannot he called grand. As a pianist, he seems to give all his efforts to illustrating the Chopin School—a school which never can hecome grand, or train performers in a grand style. In a word, Mr. Boscovitz imitates and renders a master wbo is not truly a master; and uo European reputation will enable a performer to bewilder a San Francisco audience with perpetual pounding, and command genuine applause. Our people are far from the rest of the world, hut they are not in outer darkness. Artists of European fame, who could stand trial, have heen among us and have heen appreciated; and when we remember Miss Mehlig, Miss Goddard and Madame Sauret, all artists of the highest order, we find ourselves at once with real European judgments.

Mr. Piercy's Marriage.—Mr. Samuel W. Piercy, the popular actor, was married on Wednesday last to Miss Julia Dunphy, a lovely yonng Californian. The ceremony was performed hy Archhishop Alemany, at the residence of the hride's father, 111 Mason street, and the happy pair left the city yesterday for New York, Mr. Piercy having accepted an eugagement in that city.

Chit-Chat.—Clara Morris will open Haverly's new Brooklyn theater in Octoher.——It is positively stated that Capoul sails for America this month.——Boucicault's new play is called Rescued; a Girl's Romance. In the cast will he a numher of old San Franciscans—Rose Coghlan, Ada Gilman and Marie Prescott, among the ladies; and Harry Edwards and Billings among the men.——Joe Jefferson still rusticates among the hills of New Jersey. He appeared in a quadrille, for the first time in his life off the stage, at one of those parties given a few uights ago hy ons of his daughters, Miss Josie Jefferson, at Hoboken, N. J.——They say Nicolini thrashes Adelina. The Boston Sunday Times aptly says: "What is folly in society is sin in theatrical circles—what is a misdemeanor in the ante-room is crime in the green room."——"They are trying a lot of Pinafore singers in there," said Smith to Jones, as they passed a huilding whence floated strains of "A maiden fair to see," etc. "Glad of it," returned the misanthropical Jones, "hope tbey'll give 'em sixty days and costs."——Rose Eytinge has rented a pretty villa, called Drayton Lodge, in Regent Park, London.——Dog-show Pond is Talmage's agent in London.——May Howard, our old favorite, has heen living in a charming suhurban cottage in Bexton, England, hut has gone, or is soon to go, to Melhourne, Sydney and New Zealand, professioually.——An Italian translation of L'Assommoir has proved a dead failure in Rome.——J. M. Cremony, was, in former years, a great admirer of the stage.——The Dramatic News continues its course of weekly ahuse of every one and everyhody. The actual authorship of its disgusting diatrihe against the local critics is as yet a mystery.——Lotta gets 60 per cent. of the gross receipts.——Wm. Withers, Jr., the new leader at the California. was leading the orchestra the night Lincoln was shot at Ford's Theater, Washington.

A FAIR CONTRIBUTOR'S LETTER FROM EUROPE.

BERLIN, July 26th, 1879.

Your very kind letter, with the newspaper scraps, were received this morning, and I cannot thank you enough for them. We have had no letters since we left Sweden, two weeks ago, nor any papers since London, so we were completely in the dark as regards your beloved San Francisco. Beloved as it is, however, I thank my lucky stars that I am away from California, "spinning around the block" here instead of doing the "truly rural" in Napa Valley. I intended writing you from Stockholm, but was in bed there two days with fever and ulcerated sore throat—caught cold at the races in Copenhagen; added to it by prancing around until midnight at the Tivoli Gardens, and further increased it by going to Elsinore next morning and climbing the 145 steps to the battlement where the ghost used to prowl. When we got to Stockholm, next day, I went to bed quite sick. However, as Father says, I meliciously recovered in time to do the sights, which were numerous and interesting. We happened to be there "Midsummer Day," so we saw the grand fete, and the Dalecarlian peasants in costume dance around the Maypole—Junepole, rather—in the mud! There was a splendid band, and they played the "Gainsborough Polka," which rather knocked the originality of the thing. However, there were 5,000 or 6,000 people enjoying themselves despite of a thunder shower now and then.

The lakes, islands covered with summer residences, and promenades about Stockholm, are lovely; but the country is so poor, the people so ugly and the eating so bad, that I was glad to depart and take up the lins of march for Russia. So we didn't see the midnight sun, after all; but such a dose of daylight I never had before. It never gets dark, and my eyes fairly ached. St. Petersburg is just as bad, and there I read the Loudon Times at 11:30 at night, on the steamer's deck, coming back from Peterhoff. We had a splendid time there, and it is a fine city. But Moscow! Of all the dirty, horrid, filthy towns, it takes the lead! I have seen nothing so vile since leaving Egypt. Of course, the churches and palaces are magnificent and rich beyond description. Such diamonds, sapphires, rubies, pearls and emeralds as they have, and in such quantities, too, make your mouth water for some of the gorgeous spoil—tons of silver and hundred weights of gold—while as to malachits and lapis lazuli and jasper, there is so much you cease to treat it with decent respect. I thought of you when I saw the lovely collections of porcelain, but saw nothing as original nor as pretty as your collection of tea-pots. I snubbed and "sat upon" all our guides with your things, and trotted them out on all occasions. Your Japanese collection of porcelain is unique and finer than any I have seen here. You would enjoy Russia. The rich are so very rich and like to spend their money. The country seats near St. Petersburg are the prettiest things imaginable, and they do seem to enjoy so much the little Summer they have. But I feel as if I had been writing a regular chronicle from "our-owu-correspondent" standpoint. Please excuse the burst. I must tell you, though, about eating "Sterlet," which is the fish of fish, and is only caught in the Volga, and must be eaten as soon as killed. It is delicious; no bones and very rich in flavor. You remember "Monte Christo" had one brought from the Volga, and had relays of horses from Nijni Novgorod to Paris, so as to have it fresh. Well, it is almost worth it. In fact, it is quite worth it if you have a good digestion and—plenty of spare horses. Then we had caviar and Russian pickles, Hungarian and Crimean wines, Russian cigarettes and Caravan tea with lemon in it—all of them delicious in their way. From Moscow we went 48 hours by rail to Warsaw, which is a lovely town, and then we came here to Berlin. I should never have known this city again, the five milliards of the French have so beautified and improved it. I have done the museums to-day. Father hates them, and absolutely refuses to go into another palace or look at another picture. When he gets particularly eloquent in his disgust, I have a private laugh, and remember your words, when you said, starting in this trip with me was equal (to him) to an enlistment in the noble army of martyrs. It is pretty much that way, you may he sure. I have thus far coaxed, hullied and bamhoozled him into seeing everything, hut now his patience has gone in a flash, and he has taken a resolute stand, so I shall have to take my maid and go alone. I am only surprised he has held out so long. Tomorrow we go to Dresden, from which place I will write again.

ROWING.

On the 20th of September next, the St. George and Columbia Rowing Clubs, of Oakland, will hold a regatta on the Oakland Creek, commencing at 1:30 P. M. There are eight events fixed for it, the one exciting the most interest heing the usual annual contest for the McKinlay Cup—a valuable challenge prize presented by A. McKinlay, Esq., of the Bank of British North America, and which has to be won three years in succession hy one Club before it can he finally owned. The race next month will he the third time this cup has been competed for; the first year it was carried off hy the St. George Club, and the second by the Pioneer Club, of this city, who now hold it. An exciting and interesting contest is looked for hetween these two clubs for its next year's possession. We cannot hut heartily indorse the action of the St. George and Columbia Rowing Clubs in undertaking the responsibility of a regatta, and also consider that they deserve the commendation of the community generally, not only for offering it an afternoon's healthy enjoyment, hut as well for the encouragement their regatta will give to a manly sport, a sport which, wherever practiced, is acknowledged to he superior to all others for developing energy, control over the appetites, and other qualities necessary to cope successfully in the battle of life. By all means, we say, for the sake of our State, let us develop rowing among our youth.

The following articles, made of paper, were exhibited at Berlin recently: Wash hasins, water cans, carpeting, bonnets, a ship full rigged, hats, lanterns, masks, skirts, clothes, full suits, straps, handkerchiefs, napkins, bath-tubs, huckets, urns, bronzes, flowers, window-hlinds, asphalt roofing, materials for garden walks, jewelry, coral, window curtains, shirts, lace, belting, and a house made of pine, but with not only roof, ceiling, cornice and interior walls of paper, hut all the furniture, blinds, curtains, carpeting, chandeliers, ornamented door, numerous mantel and table ornaments, and finally a stove of ashestos paper, hurning away cheerfully, aud not consuming itself as it evidently ought to do. All those things indicate some of the possihilities of the adaption of paper. Who shall say where these possihilities may end?

A PROMISING SUPERINTENDENT.

The public is like the man who went to the menagerie without knowing the butt-end of a Bengal tiger from a Polar bear; it pays its money and it takes its choice of Superintendents of Public Schools, and sometimes it takes an extremely poor choice. Always, however, with its eyes open; and if it is crazy enough and indifferent enough to the cause of public morals to think of choosing Mr. Jno. W. Taylor for the next Superintendent, it shall do so, at least, with a full knowledge of what it is doing. Mr. Taylor's claim to the salary and emoluments of the position he is working for has to recommend it the following facts:

The beginning and the keeping up of the longest, most unsavory and most demoralizing investigation over known in the history of the School Departmsnt;

The discovery and, it is almost certain, the authorship of the anonymous letters on which alone the persecution he kspt up agaiust certain teachers was founded;

The dislocation and interruption of the business of the Department for nearly a month, to enable him to secure, by a fight in the Board, the Chairmanship of the Committee on Furniture and Supplies, a position associated in the minds of the people with the sudden acquisition of wealth by those who have held it;

The hasty abandonment of the investigation when it threatened to compel speech from witnesses acquainted with the inwardness of Mr. Taylor's career, and an immediate departure for the East;

The mysterious and disreputable relation provsd to have sxisted between himself as Director investigating and Jno. A. Moore, absconding teacher;

The undenisbls fact that he nominated for a position as teacher and secured the election of a lady, now in the Dspartment, who had just before tried to buy a place of Director Laven for $250;

The attempt to get hold of the Bell Telephone Company's letter, offering to supply for $60 a month the service which Mr. Taylor's Committee is still paying, or causing to be paid, $100 for.

The little job he has for supplying the city with carholized hose, at $1 25 a foot, couplings complete. This same hose Mr. Taylor sells to other parties, for $1 per foot, couplings complete, and guarantees that it is of the same quality as that supplied to the San Francisco Fire Department. The same hose he furnishes to Oakland for not more thau $1 10 per foot, couplings complete, as hefore; and this very quality of hose has heen offered to the city for 95 cents by other firms in this city.

The disgraceful husiness of the Theresa mine. Mr. Mark Sheldon declares that, in 1875, Mr. Taylor represented to him that 10,000 shares of this mine were set aside for working capital, that all but 2,000 had heen disposed of to well known citizens, and, as a memher of Weaver & Taylor, received from him $500 in gold coin for 1,000 shares. A few weeks later an assessment was levied. Inquiry brought out the fact that the thousand shares did not belong to ths company, but to Weaver & Taylor and a Mr. Tripp.

Mr. Sheldon demanded the return of the $500, but could not get it, and turned the matter over to an attorney, who had several interviews with Mr. Taylor. None of Mr. Sheldon's charges were denied by Taylor, hut he was unable to pay. Meanwhile, Weaver & Taylor suspended payment, Mr. Sheldon was taken sick, and for nearly a year was confined to his honse. He went later to the Springs, and, when he returned, gave instructions to hegin criminal proceedings against Mr. Taylor; hut his attorney informed him ths cass was harred by ths statuts of limitations. Mr. Weaver made no representations at any time with regard to the property, Mr. Taylor generously taking all the plausibility on himself.

If these few facts do not recommend Mr. Taylor as the most unsuitable candidate for any position whatever, there is nothing to he hoped for. It is not known whether Fagin ever granted degrees for his scholars, but if there were such a thing as a diploma for meanness, for cowardice, for duplicity, for obtaining money in douhtful ways, for running away, for trying to suppress letters, for supplying anonymous letters according to pattern, Mr. Jno. W. Taylor would gather them all in without an effort. What he does with the extra price on the hose contract he knows and we do not, hut he puts it where it will do the most good; of this we are sure. That such a man will set us all a good example as Superintendent of Public Schools, who can doubt? All these beautiful things he has done, serving the people without money and without price; what will he not do for himself and for us if he is heading for his pay of $4,000 a year, and his pickings and stealings of God kuows how much? John W. Taylor is the worst candidate that has ever been nominated for the position he is seeking; and he must he defeated if the people care for honest administration.

"He Had a Frugal Mind"—Mourner (on hlack gloves heing handed to him): "Look here. I shan't wear 'em at the ground. Couldn't you stand a pair of slate-color instead?" Undertaker: "Very sorry, sir, hut we never do anything in 'mitigated!"—Punch.

THE YOUNG WIDOW.

She is modest, but not bashful,
Free and easy, but not bold;
Like an apple, ripe and mellow;
Not too young and not too old;
Half inviting, half repulsing,
Now advancing and now sby—
There is mischief in her dimple,
There is danger in her eye.

She has studied human nature;
She is schooled in all her arts;
She has taken her diploma
As the mistress of all hearts.
She can tell the very moment
When to sigh and when to smile;
Oh, a maid is sometimes charming,
But a widow all the while.

Are you sad? How very serious
Will her handsome face become!
Are you angry? She is wretched,
Lonely, friendless, tearful, dumb;
Are you mirthful? How her laughter,
Silver sounding, will ring out!
She can lure and catch and play you
As the angler does the trout.

Ye old widowers of sixty
Who have grown so bold and wise,
Young Americans of twenty,
With the love looks in their eyes,
You may practice all the lessons
Taught by Cupid since the fall,
But I know a little widow
Who could win and fool you all.

UNITED STATES—STATISTICS OF SILVER AND GOLD.

The following is a portion of a letter which appeared in the money article of the London Times of August 1st, from a correspondent in San Francisco: "In view of the continual references by public men and the press, both in England and on the continent of Europe, to the supply of silver from the United States, and particularly from the Comstock mines, I have prepared the following table from the detailed annual statements of the Bureau of Statistics at Washington, the annual statistical abstract of that office not separating the gold and the silver, but treating them together simply as coin and bullion. The figures are turned into pounds sterling, at the rate of five dollars to a sovereign:

Year Ending June 30th.	Net exports of Silver in excess of imports	Net imports of Silver in excess of exports	Silver coinage, excluding Trade Dollars	Price of Silver in London, per standard ounce, year ending Dec. 31st. Net exports of Silver for four years—July 1, 1868, to June 30, 1872 ..... £13,657,762
Average net exports of Silver per annum—July 1, 1868, to June 30, 1872 3,414,440
Net exports of Silver for six years and a half—July 1, 1872, to December 31, 1878 21,750,289
Average net exports of Silver per annum—July 1, 1872, to December 31, 1878 3,346,198

"During the first four years the gold price of silver bad not fallen. These figures show that the United States have not sent into the world any more silver during the depreciation in its gold value than they did before that depreciation began; so that in reality the supply from the United States cannot be regarded as a material factor in the fall of the gold price of silver, although exaggerated reports of enormous expectations of production undoubtedly had some temporary influence in depressing the silver market, more particularly in 1876."

SMALL CHANGE.

Panem et circenses, or, as it may be better expressed in our laconic idiom, "grub and fun," are always marks of civilization, and the greater the abundance of both, the better and happier the people who enjoy them. We are led into these remarks from noticing the great changes at this period from the open-banded but rude customs of early days. In the '50's no one ever thought of giving or requiring exact change for fractional amounts. A "bit," in the singular number, meant fifteen cents; a check terminating in twelve cents was paid with ten, and if for thirteen cents, the holder received fifteen, and so on. It was not until about '65 that the banks commenced making exact payments by means of nickels, although the spirit of economy had been abroad some time before that. Cheap restaurants also came into fashion about the same time, and so rapid has been their increase and so keen the competition, that we doubt whether there is another city on the continent where food is cheaper or more abundant. The latest idea comparatively was the establishment of ten cent coffee houses and five cent beer saloons. The beer "schooner" will doubtless follow in due course. As for amusements, outside the regular theaters, there are some half-dozen amateur dramatic societies, which give weekly performances, charging two bits for admission; and, cutting under the amateurs, are some half-dozen beer halls and beer gardens, where performances are given every evening, and a glass of beer thrown in, for the usual two bits. Similar changes might be noticed in a score of directions, most of them familiar to our own people, but very like a revelation to our foreign readers. The rest of the world have become so accustomed to consider the name of "Californian" as equivalent to "spendthrift," "ne'er-do-weel," and all that sort of thing, that it is about time for us to ring these "small changes" as a counter argument. It may be safely said that, while extravagance can run to the end of its tether here, there is no city in America where economy is better rewarded, or where "food and fun" of the best quality can be so easily secured as in San Francisco. Broken-down financiers across the mountains and across the water can "paste this in their hats."

MECHANICS' FAIR.

The Fair is now in full force, and a splendid show it certainly is, and far better worth being visited for pleasure and amusement, or studied in its several mechanical departments, than its predecessor of last year. Turning to the left, as the visitor enters by the Mission-street doors, his eye is taken at once by the numerous and beautiful, as well as useful, works in wire. From end to end the western aisle deserves special attention, as it is filled with objects of domestic economy and daily use. Kitchen utensils of all imaginary kinds; culinary appliances and kitchen ranges are there, calculated to suit all grades, from a palace to a cottage. Further on is the carriage department, and here also the variety is extensive, and in most instances the design and finish excellent. But how does it happen that in this dry, sunny climate each and every vehicle should be alike—black? It looks as if the city was in mourning, and suggests that every one who can afford a carriage or a buggy is holding himself ready at a moment's notice to swell the mournful array of a funeral cortége. It is difficult to criticise so many vehicles, suited specially to such different conditions of work, in town or country; still, exceptional attention might be directed to one of B. Grave & Co.'s exhibits, called the "Oppenheim Double Buggy and Carriage." There is also a good display of agricultural implements—plows, reapers, harvesters, etc.—and prominent in that part of the building is a cask of monstrous dimensions.

On the same left-hand side are Landsberger's champagne and Henly's Bitters, Dr. Renz's blackberry brandy, Bourbon whisky, and a display of silver-plated ware. The large tank, with its border of growing plants, presents quite a feature in the center of the Pavilion. Not far from the entrance are placed, in a tank, two leaves of the gigantic water-lily—the Victoria Regia—which never fails to attract attention and excite admiration. My attention was called to a life-size portrait of Cardinal McClosky, near the head of the stairs, which is said to be an excellent likeness, and admirably executed. There is some talk, among Catholics, of buying it for a present to his Grace, Archbishop Alemany.

The late trial of Col. Buford for the murder of Judge Elliott is interesting in many respects, especially as it develops what, in Kentucky, is considered evidence of insanity. One witness thought a man insane because he quit horse-racing and got religion; another, that for a man to be an abolitionist is proof positive that he is insane. One witness considered Buford insane because he thought he could train a horse better than the witness could. Another, because he once gave a boy a quarter of a dollar. While yet another testified that Buford read history, which no sane man would do. But, after all, the strongest proof of insanity is the simple fact of Buford being a Kentuckian.

"Atticus" writes in the Melbourne Leader: "The other evening, at a dinner party near Toorak, one of the guests, the scion of an English county family engaged in globe-trotting, was asked what he thought of the colony. 'I don't dislike the climate, but I cannot say I like the people. For one thing, you have no gentry here.' 'What do you mean by gentry?" said another of the company. 'Well, you know,' replied the new colonial, 'well, oh, gentry are those who never did any work themselves, and whose fathers before them never did any.' 'Oh!' replied his interlocutor, 'then we have plenty of them in Victoria, only we don't call them gentry. We call them swagmen in the bush, and in town loafers.'"

The Direct United States Cable Company (Limited).—At the meeting of the Board, held on July 18th, it was resolved to recommend a final dividend of 5s. per share, such dividend to be payable on and after the 16th of August, making with the interim dividends already paid, 5 per cent. for the year ending 30th June last, carrying forward £2,345 1s. 5d., after having carried to the reserve fund £34,756 4s. 3d., making it up to £100,000.

A GOOD PLAN.

Anybody can learn to make money rapidly operating in Stocks, by the "Two Prizing Rules for Success," in Messrs. Lawrence & Co's new circular. The combination method, which this firm has made so successful, enables people with large or small means to reap all the benefits of largest capital and best skill. Thousands of orders, in various sums, are pooled into one vast amount and co-operated as a mighty whole, thus securing to each shareholder all the advantages of the largest operator. Immense profits are divided monthly. Any amount, from $5 to $5,000, or more, can be used successfully. N. Y. Baptist Weekly, September 26th, 1878, says: "By the combination system $15 would make $75, or 5 per cent; $50 pays $350, or 7 per cent; $100 makes $1,000, or 10 per cent. on the stock, during the month, according to the market." Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper, June 29th: "The combination method of operating stocks is the most successful ever adopted." New York Independent, Sept. 12th: "The combination system is founded upon correct business principles, and no person need be without an income while it is kept working by Messrs. Lawrence & Co. Brooklyn Journal, April 29th: "Our editor made a net profit of $101 25 from $20 in one of Messrs. Lawrence & Co's combinations." New circular (mailed free) explains everything. Stocks and bonds wanted. Government bonds supplied.

SWANTON HOUSE, PESCADERO.

This Popular Hotel, together with the detached Cottages, which are not the least of its attractive features, have been newly furnished throughout, and are now open for the reception of guests. Those desiring to visit the most enjoyable of all our sea-side resorts, can make no mistake in deciding upon Pescadero.

IT IS EASILY REACHED,

and is unsurpassed in the excellence of its climate, the beauty of its scenery, and in the attractiveness of its truly remarkable sea beach. Those extraordinary pebbles, among which are to be found agates, opals, sapphires, etc., were never so numerous as now, the past Winter having thrown up immense numbers of curiously-shaped stones, which for ages have been subjected to the everlasting motions of the tireless Pacific. GOOD TROUT FISHING is obtainable in the Pescadero river.

THE RAILROAD COMMISSIONERS.

It is a great evil in the new Constitution that the elections of all officers are made to take place on the same day. If the judges, railroad commissioners and Superintendent of Public Instruction, were chosen at a separate election, the result would he better. There would be more time for careful investigation, and a less heated condition of mind in which to make it. The Railrogd Commissioners are judicial officers of the highest kind; they are intrusted with large powers over property of very great value. Every railroad and every transportation company in the State is placed under their control, to a very large extent; they have tbe fixing of the fares and freights; they may name any figures tbey please, and from their decision there is no appeal; their Sovereign Will is the supreme law. Parties in interest may appeal from any Superior Judge to the Supreme Court of the State, and finally to the Supreme Court of the United States, but no owner of a railroad or a steamship may appeal from the fiat of two out of the three Railroad Commissioners now to be elected. This is a most extraordinary power to place in the hands of any two men. Their powers almost amount to the ability to confiscate what is not theirs. If the clamor of the hour is to prevail, it seems as if they will be forced to exercise that vast power in a way and mauner not intended, even by the ill-considered Constitution which calls them into being. They are being pledged beforehand, without inquiry, to say that there sball be a certain, predetermined and large reduction; that is like pledging a judicial candidate to hang a man without trial. The new Constitution, on its face, shows that no such extraordinary pledges were ever contemplated. Indeed, it ought practically to render them impossible. That Constitution requires the Commissioners to take an official oath that they will maintain its provisions inviolate; they can't do that if they come to their duty with a mind already made up. The Constitution expressly provides how they shall arrive at a judicial judgment; they are to "examine books, records, and papers of all railroads and other transportation companies, and for this purpose they shall have power to issue subpenas and all other necessary process, to hear and determine complaints, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, take testimony, and punish for contempt, in the same manner as other courts." and any railroad or transportation company "which shall fail or refuse to conform to rates so established by such commissioners shall be fined not exceeding twenty thousand dollars for each offense." Now it is plain that there is to be a deliberate inquiry and a judicial judgment. Bad as the Constitution is, its framers unmistakably intended that fares and freights sbould be fixed after investigation, and upon the basis of facts and figures duly sworn to. That is the way in which the Commissioners, in obedience to their oaths, are compelled to fix them. If they swallow a cast-iron pledge they must either be false to it or to the Constitution, for they cannot, in the nature of things, be true to both. The process marked out for them to follow is plain beyond the possibility of mistake. It is the only common-sense principle upon which it is conceivable that such duties as theirs can be executed with any pretense of honesty, fair dealing or exact justice. The preparation of a table of fares and freights is necessarily a difficult task, requiring exact data and all the skill of an expert. The cost of the road, the amount of interest it should yield, operating expenses, allowances fo wear and tear, and scores of other considerations enter into the calculation, and can only be determined by just the process which the Constitution provides. There is no royal road by which to determine what particular rates will yield a sufficient income to permit a railroad to be run with a reasonable profit. Tbe proper figures must be settled by patient inquiry, and by the application of all the wisdom and experience which it is possible for the Commissioners to avail themselves of. To determine the question by bids for popular favor, at an election, is a dishonest and even criminal proceeding, for it involves perjury. The sworn oath of the Commissioner is to pursue the methods of tbe Constitution. Those metbods demand a judicial inquiry and a judgment according to the facts. We recently showed how so able a man as Mr. Cohen had greviously erred, and demonstrated from his own corrected figures that the railroad income is now just what he says it ought to be. The shocking example made of him and his calculations ought to warn others that a strictly judicial decision ought to be arrived at by judicial methods.

THE DUTY OF CAPITAL.

The certainty of Mr. Perkins' election to the gubernatorial ch air being now almost beyond peradventure, we desire to call to the attention of capitalists and employers generally the wisdom of shaping new courses in the future. "The end of conquest is, not to do as the conquered have done, but something infinitely superior." So said the greatest conqueror of antiquity, whose downfall arose from the non-practice of this theory. The great contest between capital and labor, which is now coextensive with civilization, displays a remarkable lack of judgment on either side. Whichever party considers itself temporarily the strongest dictates its ultimatum to the other, without consulting the equities of the matter, and a disastrous deadlock ensues until tbe weakest has been forced to terms. Speaking judicially, there can be no doubt of the rigbt of capital to a fair profit upon its investment, and of the right of labor to a remuneration adequate to a healthy living. Outside of these primary facts is the secondary consideration that, as labor does not receive any share in extraordinary profits, it is inequitable to compel it to hear all the burden of extraordinary losses. Whenever wages are reduced below a decent living standard common sense requires a justification thereof by exact proofs. There can be no doubt of the mutuality and interdependence of the two forces, and it naturally follows this should beget an honest confidence. Let masters and men consult each others' interests more and their own desires less and a way is opened up out of the difficulty. If it can be shown that the profits of production are inadequate to the selling price, there will no longer be any ground for opposition, and the nation which first appreciates and practices this idea will bave successfully solved the great problem. Else, if we are to go on in the present antagonistic conditions, it is only a question of time when capital and labor will perish from their own follies. The theory of supply and demand is all very well in its way, but dispassionate observers are of opinion that unless the accommodations are more justly regulated a social cataclysm may end the century. California has furnished tbe world with much that is useful, but if her men of brains can solve the capital and labor problem the greatest of all benefits will be conferred upon mankind with an incalculable profit to our State.

THE POLITICAL CRISIS AND THE INTERESTS OF THE STATE.

The attempted assassination of Kalloch by De Young has brought out more clearly the disgraceful condition to which political issues have been reduced in this city and State. The view taken in other parts of the Union is that San Francisco is the scene of a Kentucky vendetta, which is countenanced by 300,000 people, and that lawlessness has made this city its chosen abode, just as if it were a straggling village on the Texas frontier. The policy of the Chronicle has been to try to make it impossible for any public man except the nominees of the villainous De Youngs to be elected to office. If any one not emanating from them, or favored in their den of iniquity, has the hardihood to aspire to office, then he receives due notice from the Chronicle that the vocabulary of abuse and vituperation will he exhausted in vilifying him; that every report and rumor that his enemies put in circulation will be published and will be repeated for months, and that if these assertions are not black enough, they will manufacture monstrous lies out of whole cloth. The whole conduct of the Chronicle is an utter scandal and disgrace to a civilized community, and the fact that it has been supported in its infamous policy is, we are sorry to say, a proof that if this community will not take a higher view of public duty, and hy withdrawing their support allow the Chronicle to sink into oblivion, they must bear the stigma of the Chronicle's disgraceful misdeeds. The policy of that infamous sheet is one of moral murder, against which, in other countries, the law gives ample protection; hut when the De Youngs are in league with the City Hall and Court rings, and use every weapon of corruption that ingenuity can devise, what is the use of appealing to the Courts for redress?

The natural result of all these years of Chronicle infamies is that people have lost faith in the efficiency of the law and in the virtue of the people. They reason that the Chronicle can only exist if the public support it; and as the public do support it, the great mass of the people must he as demoralized as the Chronicle. California will now more than ever be a place to which outsiders will point the finger of warning, and so long as the Chronicle and the De Youngs are supported, we must be content to see this State placed in the category of countries to be avoided by settlers and by capitalists. Emigrants will not look favorably on a country that is characterized by lawlessness, and where scoundrelism is in the ascendant, and capitalists will not come to a country where Communism is rampant, and where confiscation of property is declared to be the policy of a large section of the people. The Sand-lot and the Chronicle have brought disgrace upon the State, have lessened the security of property, have frightened capital out of the State and warned it not to come here. And in doing this suicidal work they have reduced wages and destroyed confidence in the stability and permanence of our institutions. If this dastardly work is to be undone it must be by an uprising of the people in the interest of honor, honesty and justice, and in the present juncture of affairs the support of Flint for Mayor can alone redeem the city from the disgrace into which it has fallen, and give any security for property or for the proper administration of the government. It will be a lasting disgrace to the people of this city if they do not so act as to make the further existence of the Chronicle an impossibility. A new era of journalism is wanted in the daily press, one in which the rules of decency will be observed and from which villainy and mendacity will be excluded. Confidence must be restored by responsible journalism, and the people of this city and State can have responsible journalism if they will only support it, and they can rid themselves of infamous journalism if they will only withdraw their support from it.

MIDDLEMISS WASN'T LIBELED.

Middlemiss, of the Brilliant Mine, has been in the Police Court during the week investigating the question as to whether he was libeled by the News Letter, and has found out to his great chagrin that he wasn't. We told of his methods as President of the Brilliant Mine in terms which, if not true, were undoubtedly libelous. He did not challenge what we said on that subject, but substantially admitted their entire truthfulness. It was as curious a case of mine management as was ever presented to the public of San Francisco, which is saying not a little. While he allowed the very distinct allegations made on that subject to pass unnoticed, it was idle to waste his energies in dealing with the less serious allegations about his conduct in leering at and otherwise annoying women at the Palace Hotel. But as he invited investigation he got it, and we hope he is happy. The Gas Superintendent at the Palace was one out of several witnesses, and he swore that he caught the Brilliant Middlemiss in the act of kissing an unprotected nurse-girl, and so hard had he kissed her tbat her young charges, two innocent infants of aristocratic lineage, cried out with fear. The gas man also admitted that he gently chided the osculatory Middlemiss, who replied in language so indecent that the man of lights was constrained to resent the insult by smashing a gas-lighter over the fellow's head. Tbere was much more of a like import, all of which Col. W. H. L. Barnes brought out with his well known unction, to the sore discomfiture of Middlemiss, but to the evident delight of the spectators. The defense was submitted without argument, and the case was promptly dismissed by the Judge.

WITHDRAWAL OF THE BILKS.

The fact has at last become evident, even to the Bilks themselves, that notwithstanding their alliance with the remains of the Democratic party, tbere is not the ghost of a chance for any of their municipal candidates in the coming election. They have made overtures to withdraw in favor of the Republican ticket, provided they are allowed to decapitate it. In otber words, they demand—as if they had a right to demand anything—that Mr. Flint he retired from his candidacy for Mayor, and Judge Blake, or some other gentleman, be substituted. This the Republicans refuse to consent to, very properly considering that the Bilks must withdraw in any event. Their remaining in the field can only be for the deliberate purpose of aiding the Workingmen. It is only a question witb the Bilk managers whether they hate the Workingmen more or the Republicans less, and we presume their policy will not be dictated by any other motive thau comparative animosity. This being the case, let them assume a virtue, if tbey have it not, and support the Republican ticket without further dispute.

Somebody in England has spread over the world the news of the death of Gen. Grant's daughter, Nellie, when it is finally discovered, after three days, to have been Mrs. Sartoris, her mother-in-law, who died.

THE TOWN CRIER.

"Hear the Crier." "What the devil art thou?
"One that will play the devil, sir, with you."

"He'd a sting in his tail as long as a flail,
Which made him grow bolder and bolder."

His First Visit to his Uncle.—One nasty, damp, foggy, suicidal morning, such as is wont to vary the monotony of our glorious climate and Italian skies, poor Joe Impecer awoke and realized the awful fact that his appetite was immense but his cash capital "nil." In vain he searched through his pockets; alas! headless matches, well-chewed toothpicks and little scraps of dried up plug tobacco were all he could find.

Now, though a man need not live to eat, he has to eat occasionally to live. He may bluff his landlord, elude his tailor, escape from the clutches of Crispin, but he can't get away from his appetite. It will suggest itself with painful persistence and a dull gnawing at the vitals, which says plainer than words, "come, my boy, none of your fooling, I want my grub."

In vain poor Joe turned from side to side on his scantily covered bed, thinking a change of position might quell the demon within. Even his pipe, that solace of many a weary, sad hour, had lost its wonted charms. His stomach resented the sweet incense as a direct insult. Do what he would he could not calm or silence the clamorous calls of hunger. He ran through his list of friends, but alas! all had lent him money and given him quietly to understand that no more was forthcoming. At last a light dawned upon his gloomy soul, and springing gaily from his bed he cried, "My Uncle."

It took him but a short time to complete his toilet and start for that "Eldorado" of the dead broke, where the mocking trio of balls seem as if offering three to one you never get out again what you pawn. It was his first trip, and though he started with high hope elate, yet as he neared the gloomy portals he felt his courage oozing out, and to use a vulgar but expressive term, "he wilted" and "could not face the music."

He looked into the window, and pretended to be most deeply interested in studying the prices of the unredeemed pledges there exhibited for sale. At last, by a desperate effort, he screwed up enough courage to enter. The Hebrew within greeted him with a knowing, half-insulting, half-pitying smile, for long and varied experience had taught him to distinguish an amateur pawner from an old hand, at a glance. Hastily detatching his watch from its chain (a watch full, bye the hye, with dear memories), he placed it in the claws of the remorseless Uncle, and, in tremulous accents, asked how much he could get on it. It was a silver watch, an old family heirloom, and was (so said the Uncle) completely out of date. Five dollars was all he could let him have on it. Poor Joe was too bashful to argue, and, seeing some one enter the store, jumped at his offer, being only too glad to get out of the noisome den.

He had a glorious breakfast, costing the, to him, enormous sum of fifty cents. He had a good free lunch, and a dinner at Campi's; but still he was not happy. That night he lay awake, his gas lit, and the remainder of his capital full in sight; yet, strange to say, the sight brought him no pleasure. He felt that he had taken a good big step on the down grade. At last sleep came to his rescue. But, oh! what dreams! He fancied he was at home—in the old home, back East. He could recognize all the familiar landmarks, the old oak chairs, the winding staircase, with its shining walnut banisters, yet still the large hall-way looked queer, and not as it used to. At last he discovered the cause. All the old family portraits had left their frames. Entering the dining-room, what a sight greeted him! There they were, that crowd which he had been wont so to venerate, dancing around, gesticulating and howling in the wildest possible manner. The oddest part of all was, each held a stick in its hand, at the end of which hung "three golden balls." No sooner had he entered the room than they began to lay on blows, thick and heavy. He cried for mercy, and woke in the act. It was only his landlady's son, knocking, to ask for the "rint."

How queer it is that Pickering & Fitch have only just discovered how bad the "Chronicle" is. All these years, while the fences repeated the story that the "'Cbronicle' has the largest circulation," no industrious agent of the "Morning Call" has been found seated hard by on a stool, inviting subscriptions to that paper; and even if the "Call" proprietora looked askance at the legendary fence, thia was rather owing to an infirmity of nature than to irrepressible, virtuous indignatiou. How very queer it is! The two papers, both daily, had no sense of right or wrong till an unsavory man from Kansas was abot, when they feel that San Francisco can no longer do without unlimited "Calls." One would like to hear the nightly prayer of these holy men, when the habiliments by which we recognize them are laid aside, and their manly forms arrayed for alumber.

A woman disguised as a man, or rather elaborately made up as a sort of human crow, has just heen dismissed hy an Idaho congregation for whom she had acted as pastor for nearly a year. It was subsequently discovered that the deception had been of long duration, and that she had been turned out of several similar situations during her career. Not that her identity was ever detected, but somehow the ladies of her congregations became gradually dissatiafied, and she always had to step down and out. We have written to Beecher to explain this thing, and enclosed a stamped envelope for a reply, hut aomehow he doean't answer worth a cent.

A letter to the "Morning Call" has been handed to us, that paper having declined to receive it: "EDITOR CALL: Why don't you paste cards asking for subscriptions to your valuable paper on the coat-tails of 'City Pastors?" Thia would he a neat and inexpensive way of increasing the circulation of your valuable paper, and it would also serve as a letter of introduction to the Pastor himself. Any sacriligious boot raised to propel the reverend gentleman would sink before that noble legend, particularly if it bore as a heading the likeness of the senior proprietor. A CONSTANT READER."

The Sacramento Bee says the East is making more fuss over the Kalloch affair than San Francisco; and the Smoke Reporter says the point is well taken. We can vouch for it. There is almost a half-column in each of our daily papers that is not given up to discussion and endless wind-haggery about the Kalloch affair, the De Youngs, the messenger hoy, the mutton chop for breakfast, the bag of oranges, and the valuable paper; the San Franciscans never talk of these little local matters, for we are wide as the South Sea.

Some of the city papers make a face at the N. Y. Tribune because it says, with reference to the praise lavished upon Kearney for restraining his followers: "We are much obliged to Kearney; but suppose that he, instead of Kalloch, had been shot, what would the mob have done then?" This is called snivelling nonsense. It is, on the contrary, a very pertinent question; and when San Francisco papers declare that our society is not at the mercy of any one man, they forget that Kearney and all his followers have been praised by these very papers, and thanked for not sacking the city on Saturday last. It is a matter of local pride, no doubt, to sneer at New York journals; but the fact is that the Call and Bulletin and Alta thought we were at the mercy of a mob, and two of them did all they could to put us there.

With all our talk about the rights of women, we are still benighted. Here is Mrs. Lucy Schnee (a good, cool name for hot weather) arrested for taking two hundred and sixty dollars from a former husband of her's. Now, this is an outrage. A man is allowed to pursue his legitimate business in peace, and, according to modern theories, a woman has the same right. Philosophers declare that the business of a woman is to get a husband; and Mrs. Schnee has been getting, it seems, all of them she could, and their money as well. She is running down legitimate game, and we call for her release. If she is not released, we shall make a riot somewhere—that is, if we can find a good, safe place to make it in, and no Gatling guns about.

Mr. Farrow is the latest wonder. He shoots; and his person and ways are minutely described to an impatient world. "He is small and light; he has a pair of eyes. When he shoots, he holds his rifle with the muzzle toward the target, and after he has pulled the trigger the bullet proceeds on its way. If he hits the mark there is generally some sign of it. He never misses, or hardly ever. He began shooting the first time he took it up, and being in Connecticut just then, his first experience with rifles occurred in that State. He never tasted liquor, but always keeps a nutmeg in his mouth for the sake of his nerves. He is thirty-two years old, and generally wears boots or shoes."

A young female sends a poem, called "A Mountain Gorge," and enforces her claim to our consideration by the information that she is already somewhat known to fame "as the young lady who won the first prize for eating 411 clams at the recent Saucelito clam bake." This is indeed fame, and with such a right to public affection and recognition, as things go in California, we are surprised not to see "Selina's" name on the Bilk ticket for something or other. All the same, our advice to our correspondent is to continue to seek the bubble reputation at the clam's mouth, and, in fact, to stick to bay-side gorges and let mountain ones alone.

I dreamt I saw a "walker" gaunt
Who did not claim the belt;
A politician, too, went hy,
Who brihes had never smelt;
A girl whose love would last a month,
Who would not flirt and lie;
A trustee and a treasurer
Who did not steal and fly;
A singer and an actor that
To nurse no spite did seem;
But this, as Eugene Aram said,
Was "nothing hut a dream."

The doors and window-casings of Oakland houses have lately been found decorated with skulls and cross-bones, strange hieroglyphics, and death's heads, and those not in the secret are puzzled to know the meaning of these things. They are pictorial transcripts of the familiar phrase, "Prepare to meet thy God," and are painted hy contract, only on the houses of those who have positively refused to subscribe to the Morning Call. The publishers of that valuable paper are making a black-list of the persons thus honored.

The distressing intelligence comes that the poor King of Oude is compelled to worry along on a salary of $600,000 a year, and this notwithstanding the high price of board at Calcutta. Arrangements are already in progress, however, to induce the Melville Pinafore Troupe to give a complimentary benefit for him without delay. Meanwhile old clothes, spoiled hams, worked preserves, and other immediate necessities, will be forwarded hy Wells & Fargo's Express free of charge.

Clergymen, before being allowed to hegin the performance of divine service to-morrow, will he required to lay their hands upon their hearts, and answer, in the presence of Almighty God and these witnesses, whether they take the "Chronicle," and, if they do, they will be called upon to withdraw their subscription at once, and auhstitute the "Morning Call." This is authentic, hut will, of course, he denied.

The man at the theater who tells his neighhors all ahout the aecond scene while the first is in progress, is an angel of celestial light compared to the malignant villain who climbs out for a clove after each act, treads on your pet corns twice each trip, fluffs up your hair behind with hia elbow, and makes your new silk hat look like a Thomas cat treed by a bulldog.

A citizen of Petaluma last week again hrought that metropolis before the world hy knocking bis wife over the head with a tack hammer. He was sent to jail, and, on heing informed that his hetter-half was better, the partner of her jaws said he was sorry—aorry he hadn't used a sledge hammer. Thus we see the error of too hasty action.

The most intelligent dog in the world is a aetter belonging to Charley Kaeding. It was much distressed, laat week, at beholding a fellow canine with a tin-kettle tied to its tail, since when it never ventures out into this cold and heartless world without going first to its master to get its tail greased.

The election of Perkins is now a conceded fact; so is the election of Glenn; so is the election of farmer White. We are very glad for the sake of all these gentlemen, and only wish there were a few more of them. It is pleasant to see your friends happy.

In answer to inquiries, we would say that the article in yesterday evening's Bulletin, headed "Chopped off his own nose," does not directly refer to the venerahle proprietor of that paper—but it ought to.

A new "Thieves Dictionary" has been issued in New York, but as we do not find the indorsement of any leading stockhroker on the cover, it cannot expect much sale in this country.

And now the Paris papers speak of Lorillard as keeping "the best livery stahle in America." Such is fame.

There's a letter in the s-candle, and it pointa direct to you—Conkling.

WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE.

Little by little the truth comes out, and so it is evident that if a man uld only keep on living, he might know the real facts of history. It s long excited the wonder of those who know Roscoe Conkling, how a an so vain of his small personality could fascinate women in Washing- n and elsewhere. No one, for a long time, suspected the cause of the nator's irresistible ways, for nobody imagined a man would think of aking himself beautiful by cosmetics. One never heard of such a thing ; , perhaps, hardly ——. But the fact is that Conkling uses Mme. hel's Enamel Bloom, and the ladies in the Senate Gallery are just dy to faint at the sight of him.

Mrs. Skidmore's styles, just arrived and now being opened, are su- rlatively attractive. All that New York and Paris can offer of most licate and becoming in the mysterious art of adorning what nature had ady made irresistible, is to be found in the admirably selected stock 1114 Market street. The leaders of fashion in our metropolis of the cific have an exacting taste in these matters, as they should have, since are destined to take rank by the side of the Empire city at no distant y ; and yet Mrs. Skidmore is able to meet their demands, and offer m combinations which fill the imagination.

The Joke of the Cream.—At the Kilburn Show, the first prize for am cheese was taken by the Aylesbury Dairy Company. No doubt e Company's cheese was a sample of the creme de la creme.—Punch.

Reports from New York inform us that transactions are very few hides, and business looks moderate in tone. This seems to show that world is changing since the days when there was nothing like leather; d the experience of all San Francisco households strongly confirms the t. A change has indeed come over the world ; and every intelligent usekeeper will tell you that now there is nothing like Montanya's ion Range, the only perfect range known to the true artist in cookery ; d Jackson street, below Battery, bears witness to this.

One remarkable feature of the day, in the universal excitement of turday last, when merchants deserted their ledgers, and courts ajourned, politicians neglected their appointments, and cashiers forgot to count ir money, was seen at 213 Sutter street. The interest in the lunches dinners at Swain's was not only unabated, it was greatly increased ; the crowd throughout the day was eager, thoughtful, well-behaved, more than satisfied with the perfect quiet and the admirable cooking this first of all restaurants.

Every man writes better with his own pen, which has learned how to ld to the way in which he holds it, and the kind of pressure his hand es ; and it is often unpleasant to sign one's name with pens that make writing hardly recognizable. The McKinnon Pen is the indispensable ket companion of the writer. Filled in the morning, it has ink for hours, ready to flow when wanted and ceasing when the hand is taken Finished in every style, it is the finest pen in the world. A. S. nce & Co., 24 Geary street.

New Invention.—"The Tell-Tale Mariner's Compass"—evidently an ention for imposing some limit to the tales that are told to the marines.

The Bonapartist party is not yet dead in France, the Prince Jerome poleon having purchased a paper, which will advocate diluted Imperial- , and so set the genuine nephew of his uncle on his dynastic legs be- e the people. This is good for the Prince ; but it would help his cause, h at home and abroad, if he had his photograph taken by Bradley & lofson, their unequaled skill bringing out the distinctive traits of the racter, so that all could see at a glance how much of the great Corsican n the air and look of his relative.

The season has been singularly late and wet and unfavorable for every o throughout Europe generally ; and the wine districts of France and many suffer with the rest. The exquisite vintages of the Cote d'Or, Rhine and the Moselle, will all be short and scanty this year ; and lifornia will have to give of her abundance. So well is this fact appre- ed abroad and in the East, that Landsberger is daily receiving large ers for the Gerke Wine, the lightest and most genuine of all white es.

The indignation of our Italian fellow citizens over the Eureka outrage is no more than natural; and it is wonderful that such an affair could happen in a civilized country without a general uproar. Five men shot down by an armed posse of officers without reason given! It is high time to hold meetings and ask what we are coming to, when such things can be done. There should be a gathering of all our citizens and a demand for justice ; and every man should wear one of White's hats, from 614 Commercial street.

No house can be considered complete unless the plumbing and gas-fitting work have been directed by McNally & Hawkins, the pioneers in these artistic branches. At their beautiful store, under the Grand Hotel, they have an assortment of fittings in lamps, chandeliers, brackets, fancets, and every article in bronze, silver and nickel absolutely beyond compare.

The city of Sophia, in Turkey, has been damaged by fire to the extent of $400,000, a terrible sum, when we consider all that the unfortunate Turks have had to suffer within a few years. And yet even this large amount is a trifle compared to the losses caused by the use of bad whisky, when F. & P. J. Cassin's Golden Plantation is offered in the market, at the lowest price, and full of youthful health and vigor.

From Bad to Worse.—According to the society papers, the present season has been one of unequaled gloom and dullness. We sympathize deeply, for according to all accounts there will scarcely be any "hops" next season.—Fun.

The Neptune and Mermaid Swimming Baths are daily growing in favor with the public. Their situation on North Beach, at the foot of Hyde street, brings them within easy reach of every one ; the water is fresh from the ocean, and rolls in natural breakers, full of the life and spirit of the open sea. THE LATEST SHOOTING.

San Francisco is not, with sorrow let it he said, unaccustomed to shooting affrays. A most deplorahle one took place in a saloon on Saturday, in consequence, it would seem, of a heated discussion on the had politics of the hour, during which a useful citizen, whose death would he a loss to the city, was seriously if not fatally wounded, and that, too, though he was guilty of no offense. The dailies disposed of the unfortunate man's case iu a few lines, and whether at this moment he is alive or dead we are not informed. But, assuming that he still lives, it is certain that, though a true Workingman, no Workingmen with raised muskets and fixed hayonets march around his humhle ahode with funereal tread; no fellow workmen keep guard over his assailant, and prohahly none of them know whether he is in jail or out of it. The victim's hours of pain and anguish are unassuaged hy any stoppage of noisy traffic. No truly mournful or merely morhid crowd awaits hourly announcements of his condition, and no words of sympathy go fourth to cheer his family. This is the way in which we ordinarily treat such cases. We do not mention the fact in order to commend it. We merely mention the fact. Whether the man dies or lives, his murderous assailant will he tried hy a jury of his peers, sworn to try the facts and to render a true verdict according to the testimony. That course, sternly followed, we do commend. It is the only one compatihle with the good of society. The law should he supreme. Within it there is a right for every wrong. Outsids of it one wrong hegets another and a greater one, passion holds sway, tumult reigns, and life and property are of no account.

But the wounding of the foundryman, Doyle, by Williams, was not the only shooting done on Saturday last. The attack upon Kalloch, by De Young, took place earlier in the day, and, though not so unprovoked by a great deal, it nevertheless excited a wonderfully vaster measure of excitement. Except, perhaps, for the unparalleled nature of the provocation, there was little to distinguish it from hundreds of other murderous assaults which we flippantly call "shooting scrapes," and with which citizens hereahouts have become only too familiar. There was nothing in ths usefulness of the men to make their lives of exceptional importancs to anyhody hut themselves. The foundryman, in constructing machinery to cause tbe earth to yield up its riches, has been adding to the wealth of the State and the world. Kalloch and De Young, as strife hreeders and mischief makers, could he much hetter spared. The labors of the humhlest producer entitle him to claims greater far upon the world's interest in his life. He adds to the general good, whilst they rather detract from it. Kalloch's chief effort is to drag religion in the mire and outdemagogue the demagogues. De Young's living is principally gained hy hawling the skeleton out of every man's cuphoard, and hy hreaking up the twin relationship that should exist hetween capital and lahor. Neither of them produces any suhstantial thing, and whenever they die it is very certain the world will owe them little. That the shooting of the one, or the iminent danger of the other, should lash Workingmen into a very fury of excitement, whilst the possihle fatal wounding of the honest foundryman passed almost unnoticed, is a glaring inconsistency which we leave the orators of the sand-lots and the grangers of the New Constitution party to explain. To reason and right feeling it seems inexplicahle.

The truth is, this inconsistency is the offspring of hypocrisy and humhug. This high excitement is not, as it ought to be, an indignant protest against assassination per se, hut is a thing manufactured for the most part, if not wholly, for the purpose of serving a political end and of destroying a husiness rival. The Kearneys and Wellocks are concerned in the one, and the proprietors of the "two papers, hoth daily," are interested in the other. That is why the result of the wound of the workingman is of no concern, whilst that of the "reverend" vituperator of an aged mother is of supreme moment. It is not the wounds of Kalloch that all this hother is ahout, hut the use they can he put to.

For our own part our judgment would he, to treat this case of shooting as we would that of the foundryman Doyle, or as hundreds of similar outrages in the past have heen treated hy us, as well as hy others. We should state fully and fairly the nature of the attack, the character of the provocation, the condition of the assailed, and should detail the proceedings of the authorities to uphold the law. That done, we should permit the law to take its course, and, hy refraining from expressions of hias or prejudice, leave the minds of jurymen free to try ths cass according to the evidence, without fear, favor, or affection. If, for the mean purpose of gaining a few extra advertisements, or of winning a numher of unworthy snhscribers, we were to seek, hy artful devices, to excite the mob to riot and hloodshed, or if to ger rid of a husiness rival, we inflamed the minds of possihle jurors into a passion for revenge, rather than for justice, we should deem ourselves cold-blooded, calculating, inexcusahle murderers in our own hearts, compared with whose offense the act of De Young would sink into utter insignificance.

In regard to the case itself, we suppose now that trial hy the press has gone so far, it is impossihle to escape the by no means pleasant task, at this stage, of offering such criticisms as in our judgment ought only to he offered after the trial. Undouhtedly a terrihle thing was attempted. It is at all times shocking to contemplate that degree of uncontrollahle passion which would lead a man to take the life of another. Where society is properly organized, no excuse is permitted for assaults to kill, save only in defense of one's own life. Personally, we have been trained in a school of thought that tolerates no excuse for assassination. We have heen raised in a country where the law rights all wrongs, and where respect for it prevents provocation, and restrains resentment. There no plea of justification, except self-defense, would he heard, hecause it is a rooted principle, early instilled into the mind of every youth, that there is not, and cannot he, any justification for taking the law into one's own hands. If a wrong has heen done, hoth the law of puhlic opinion and the law of the land will deal with it as its heinousness deserves. There the offense of Kalloch, as well as that of De Young, would he alike inconceivahle. Tbat a minister of a Christian Church should address an audience in such unspeakahly vile language as that employed hy Kalloch, would be incredihle. Indeed, it would he impossibls. Bsfore thc first sentence had heen completed, he would have heen met with an almost involuntary hurst of indignation, that would have most effectually silenced him. His utterance would have heen instantly resented as an intolerahle insult hy those to whom it was addressed. Forever thereafter his occupation would have heen gone. Public opinion would have ostracized him as a social pariah. Nothing hut sympathy would have gone out for the suhject of his vituperatiou; the law, moreover, would have dealt with him civilly and criminally, and no attempt at justification, whether true or untrue, would have heen permitted for that which, in its very nature, is altogether uujustifiahle under any circumstances. On the other hand, if the victim of his hrutal verhal assault had resented it as De Young did, he would have heen tried, convicted and punished, and in his case, too, the plea of justification would not have heen listened to, for the good and sufficient reason that the law holds, and public opinion sustains it, that no justification can hs pleaded for taking the law into your own hands. That is the course events would have taken there. It would be well if the same respect for the majesty of the law prevailed hers and everywhere. Character and life would he safer, and society would in every way he happier and hetter. But that stats of things does not exist here, and that is an end of it.

We have to deal with public opinion and the code of moral ethics as we find them in California. Kalloch, at an out-door meeting of 7,000 persons, assailed the unoffending and venerahle mother of Charles De Young, in language which impeached his legitimacy and her virtue, and so fearfully foul that not even the exigencies that have arisen in this cass will permit of its heing repeated in these columns. Even the Call descrihed it, next morning, as heing so had that the women who were listening from the surrounding windows drew in their heads. When it is stated that almost every house in that locality is occupied by prostitutes, it may he imagined how terrihle was the language that caused those lewd women to rsalize a sense of shame, which even the dark shades of night did not suffice altogether to hide. For the use of that language Charles De Young, early next morning, deliberately shot Kalloch, without warning, inflicting two wounds, the result of which is not yet certain, though the indications favor his recovery. That is the whole case, as fully stated as it need be in order to form a judgment upon it. Other and extraneous circumstances are sought to he drawn into it, hut they in no wise affect the real issue. It is not to the purpose that De Young provoked Kalloch. Whatever sins of provocation the son was guilty of, the mother was innocent of any. A clergyman, of all others, should see the iniquity involved in hlasting ths good name of a mother in order to get even with her son. No thinking man, of right feeling, would dream of such an injustice. The question then resolves itself into this: Is there any justification whatever for a son avenging for his mother's sake the grossest wrong that can possihly he put upon her? That question must he taken home to the inner consciousness of every man who desires to make up a fair judgment. Concentrating his thoughts upon his own mother, he must imagine her assailed at the tims and place, and in the manner and words of Kalloch, and then say what he would do. The course he would himself adopt he must not hlame another for pursuing. If he would have acted as De Young did, then it lies not with him to censure, and whatever his objections may hs to the manner in which De Young conducts the "Chronicle," they should cut no figure in determining the right or wrong of his act of defending his mother's name from infamy. If there he any man who would not have avenged, or desired to avenge, such a wrong done his mother, then let him stand up and say who he is. When he has done that in unequivocal language it will be his right to pour out the vials of his wrath upon De Young's head, and call for the direst punishment known to ths law. We have heen mindful to eliminate all elements foreign to the real issue. If our sense of justice wers less strong one might easily follow ths example of others in seizing this occasion to say spiteful things. Ws have no particular love for the Chronicle, its readers are not our readers, nor its patrons our patrons, nor its ends our ends. But that is no reason why we should make De Young's case appear to he other than it is. Ws have ever done hattle with him over those things which are fairly matters of contest; hut we recognize him as a man, of like passions with ourselves, and the justice we would desire, we are ready to accord to him. If we were to act otherwise we are sure we shonld fail to satisfy the intelligent thought of the men and women of culture for whom the News Letter is designed. We have objected, time and time again, to De Young's newspaper course, just as we have objected to the newspaper course of Pickering & Fitch. Yet ws know him to he a good son to one of the hest of mothers. It is within our knowledge that when the Naphtaly trouhle arose the whole of the "matter" pertaining to the subject, which appeared in the regular issue of the Chronicle, was taken out and replaced hy other matter, and then extra copies were run of for his mother's nse, so that she might be kept in ignorance of what was transpiring, and to this day shs remains entirely oblivious of these trouhles—visitors heing warned not to speak of them. Who can fail to feel for such a son, or to sympathize with a mother capahle of inspiring such filial affection? We know that Charles ds Young's most private room is adorned with many souvenirs of a mother's love, even the paintings hung on its walls heing the work of her hands. Charles de Young is one of the most hard worked of men. Night after night, year in and year out, he is to he found in his office until two o'clock in the morning; whatever of comfort or affection he experiences in life, he derives them from his mother. He repays her with an individual affsction. Who can envy the feelings of a clergyuan who, for any causs whatever, would strike a foul hlow that must needs bring the gray hairs of that loving and heloved mother with sorrow to the grave? Who shall say that the uncontrolahle passion to avenge his mother's wrong with which De Young was seized, was utterly and unqualiiedly discreditahle to his heart?

If we go outside the one and only issue involved in ths act of shooting, then there is room for endless discussion. If anything De Young could say could justify Kalloch in attacking De Yonng's mother, then it must he confessed that Kalloch was not without provocation. The Chronicle had a right to discuss every act of Kalloch's life that might seem to throw any light upon his unfitness to he elected chief magistrate of the city. It availed itself of that right to the fullest extent, and made out such an overwhelming case that it ought at once to have deprived Kalloch of any chance whatever of heing elected. So far, the attacks were legitimate. But in making them, two unpardonahle errors were committed. First, the charges were conveyed in language needlessly offensive to puhlic decency, and secondly, Kalloch's dead father was disparagingly alluded to. Both errors were grievous ones, hut they make no justification for Kalloch's attack on De Young's mother.

That we have thus far dispassionately stated the case will, we are persuaded, he admitted hy thinking, unhiased men. It is a pity Ds Young's rivals in the newspaper business did not deal with it in a like spirit of fairness. They had a grand opportunity. If they had dealt with their enemy with a dignity and impartiality worthy of leaders of puhlic thought they would have made hosts of friends, would prohahly have thereby won not a little of the Chronicle's business, and certainly would have gained moral strength, which in the end means ma-

...rial success. They threw the opportunity away. They became lying, ...tal fools. Pickering and Fitch have proved once again that they are men of miserable, malicious, hateful dispositions. Both of them have in their time attempted the role of assassins, under circumstances that offered no such palliation as was present in De Young's case. They were manufacturers of newspapers when he was a boy selling them on the streets. He has since built up a newspaper whose success they envy. He made his paper. They bought theirs out of money obtained through a fraudulent public contract. To-day they are gloating over his difficulty in order to add to their shekels. If they could do it in secret they would tear Kalloch's wounds open wide and then expose them to the mob, in order to inflame passion and destroy their successful rival. Opinions may be divided about De Youngs recent acts, but about those of Pickering & Fitch there is but one view entertained by anybody. On all hands the judgment is of a most pronounced character. Deep down in men's hearts there is a feeling which we do not care to describe in words. Pickering & Fitch are overshooting the mark, and are unwittingly causing a reaction in favor of the man they would fain destroy.

BOOK NOTICES.

The etchings in the Portfolio for July are capital, Cellardyke Harbor particularly, in which the clouds and the far-away horizon are admirably given. Paul Potter's "Friesland Horse" is also thoroughly effective; a careful piece of work. The brief notice of Mr. Bough is rather friendly than critical, but "Cellardyke Harbor" would justify even a more laudatory tone. Mr. Lang has reached the Georgian era in his pleasant sketches of Oxford. These papers will one day make a delightful book. The chief effort of the text is Mr. Hamerton's article on Esthetics, the first of a series, in which the theory will be examined. The present one is principally concerned with definitions, well explained and not too subtle. Mrs. Heaton has a notice of Stanfield. From the Art Chronicle we learn that Rugby School has established an Art Museum; a good example, not only to the English hut to us as well. The Russian artist, Verestchagin, exhibits in the French Court at South Kensington 169 pictures, the product of two years' work in India. Two of these paintings are colossal: "The Prince of Wales in India—Jeypur" 25x20 ft., and "The Great Mogul in the Mosque at Delhi," almost as large. The artist's health broke down, and he was obliged to return to Europe before finishing what he calls his "pictorial poem" on Indian history. Not the Mahabharata itself will he more vast than this poem, if it is concluded. The "Great Mogul" must be the more impressive of the two works named. The tone of the interior is described as quiet; the Mogul being seen through the arch of a dividing screen, absorbed in prayer and in mysterious loneliness.

The exhibition of the Continental Galleries has for chief attraction Munkacsy's "Milton Dictating to his Daughters," familiar through the illustrated papers.

The catalogue of Greek coins in the British Museum, now published, has interest for students even on this side of the world, whether artistic or literary.

Mr. Hamerton, we observe, is making war on the combined diphthong, perhaps because the laurels of Mr. Freeman will not let him sleep. He writes not only Aesthetics, hut Aeneas, Boeotia, and so on; and we trust he finds comfort in it.

LIFE OF BENJAMIN F. BUTLER. By T. A. Bland, M.D. Lee & Shepard, Boston. Billings, Harbourne & Co., San Francisco.

Dr. Bland, who is also passionate and deeply religious, has found his hero, and ought to he happy. What can he more delightful than to look up, with fervid admiratiou and yet with friendly familiarity, to a man who has the "hrain of a Franklin, the firmness of a Jackson, the intellectual force of a Bacon, the integrity of an Aristides, and the ripe scholarship of a Cushing?"

Every one who loves his country must rejoice that Providence, in its wisdom, deprived this luminous mind of one eye; for there would have been no sleeping throughout America if B. F. Butler had dazzled the land with his inward splendor through two eyes. The ways of God are past finding out; hut Dr. Bland knows them pretty nearly, and whatever comes to pass he will not he caught napping. For he has the quintessence of all things in his hero; and we must have him whether we will or no. Since it appears on the last page of this wonderful hiography that B. F. Butler "is a factor in human progress. He makes history. His fame is world-wide. His words and his actions are discussed in every civilized country on the globe. He is feared and hated among the aristocracies of Great Britain, of the Continent, and of Western Asia, as well as of America"—Amen! and Amen!

Since the escape of the dreaded Gyascutus, there has been nothing so tremendous in or out of pantaloons. May the Lord protect us all!

THE "MUSIC TRADE JOURNAL," Vol. 1., No. 1, for August, 1879, is just received from the publishers, Root & Tinker, 86 Duane street, New York. The Journal is a large quarto, in appearance like the News Letter, and is meant to he an independent record of the music trade in the country, with only such reference to art and artistic matters as are intimately connected with the business. This first numher is full of promise, and seems to have heen edited in a perfectly fair spirit, with the possible exception of the full page illustration, "The Pirate Pinafore," which suggests an attack on some rival, more or less unworthy. The subscription price is Two Dollars a year.

THE "AVALANCHE," a National Review of Insurance, Trade, Commerce, Finance and Railway Interests, bas reached the fifth numher of its eighth volume, and gives every sign of making its enemies wait a long time for its deatb. The numher for August has a great many articles on California, and is full of information, especially on insurance matters, important to all business men.

THE LONDON "ELECTRICIAN," of August 2d, puhlishes the first part of the paper by E. J. Molera and J. C. Cebrian on the "Divisibility of the Electric Light," read before the Academy of Sciences in this city, April 21st, 1879. An abstract had heen given previously, hut great interest heing manifested in tbe subject, the entire document will be laid before the readers of the Electrician. This is a merited compliment to these two engineers.

St. John's Presbyterian Church, Post street, between Mason and Taylor. The Rev. Dr. Scott, pastor. Preaching at 11 o'clock hy the Rev. A. C. Gillis, late of Virginia City, but now en route to Australia. Dr. Scott will lecture at 7½ o'clock, and the public cordially invited. Sunday School and Bihle Classes, 9½ A.M. Prayer and Praise Service, 6½ P.M.

Mr. Baron Huddleston told the following story at the Flintshire Assizes, where a question of identity arose in a charge of horse-stealing: "We always ought to be very careful," his lordship said, "in cases of this kind, because mistakes might be made by the most well-meaning persons. When I was on the Oxford circuit, there was a friend of mine at the bar who went on a fishing expedition in the Principality. He had a horse with him, and during the day he took it to an inn in a town to bait. Meanwhile he walked down the street quietly, inspecting the shops. He was closely followed by an inspector of police, and all at once he found himself the object of attention at the hands of this official. After walking after him a good way down the town, the officer at last went up to him and said: 'It's no use your making any nonsense about it—you are Flash Bill!' (Great laughter.) The member of the bar and of the Oxford circuit was horrified, but the police officer said, 'It's no use; I know you perfectly well.' And he pulled out a Police Gazette, in which there was a description which, I am bound to say, fully justified tho officer in suspecting him. 'And,' he added, 'there is the very horse you have stolen, up at the stable.' (Laughter.) And it was with great difficulty he was taken before a magistrate that day. He always mentions the story with very great gratitude to the magistrate, who was induced to leave his dinner. He thought first he had better be remanded for a few days to get witnesses down, but ultimately did leave his dinner, and he was convinced by the earnestness of the gentleman that the policeman had made a mistake. (Laughter.) The next train brought his friends from the neighborhood, and they satisfied the magistrate that there was a mistake made. To this day this gentleman tells the story. He now holds the dignified position of Deputy Chairman of Quarter Sessions, and he says he has occupied every position in the court: he bas heen a juryman, a judge, a witness and a prisoner." (Laughter.)

THE DAY BOOK

FROM

Saturday to Saturday.

On Saturday, August 23d, Charles De Young, proprietor of the Chronicle, of this city, shot Rev. I. S. Kalloch, Workingmen's candidate for the Mayoralty. Mr. Kalloch was dangerously, perhaps mortally, wounded. Mr. De Young is in custody.——LONDON, August 23d.—It is raining again to-day with great severity. There are floods in Oxfordshire. ——A reduction of five per cent. on the wages of calico-weavers at Oldham came into force on Friday. The Oldham fustian manufacturers have agreed to reduce the wages of weavers 8¼ per cent. Other reductions are pending.——The Manchester Guardian says that the winter will be one of the most severe experienced for some time past, and the position of the operatives will be considerably aggravated if they have to suffer another reduction. Some of the manufacturers state that the only alternative of closing the factories will be another reduction of 10 per cent. in wages.—— The Times announces that Lieutenant Carey, in addition to the official notification of the reversal of the sentence of the Court-martial in his case, has received a letter from the Duke of Cambridge, Commander-in-Chief of the British Army, reviewing the circumstances of the death of the Prince Imperial, and concluding with the opinion that, after the surprise of the reconnoitering party by the Zulus, resistance was impossible and retreat imperative.——The Post's Berlin dispatch says: "The Catholic inhabitants of Cologne anticipate a visit from the Pope next year, if the Church conflict he settled."——ROME, August 24th.—Four Cardinals will he created at the Consistory next month. Monsigneur Maselle is expected at the Vatican on Monday, with documents concerning the relations between Germany and the Vatican. The Vatican has taken steps with several governments to prevent any judicial recognition of Old Catholics, and it is understood its representations in this respect have heen favorably entertained.——The Czar has written to the Pope declaring his readiness to make peace with the Catholic Churches in Poland.——The Sultan has written, stating his desire to give the Catholic Church full liberty in his dominion.——VIENNA, August 25th.—Diplomatic relation hetween the Austrian and Russian Cabinets are less cordial than hetween any two Cabinets in Europe, and the friendly intercourse which existed hetween the two courts for many years has also entirely ceased.——LONDON, August 25th.—It is declared hy competent judges that the rain last week has done greater damage in some districts than all previous excessive rains.——The huilders' strike in Liverpool, which hegun in November, 1878, is now ended with the suhmission of workmen.——The mining engineer employed hy the British Government to examine the Aynaad gold fields, in Malahar, reports to the Viceroy of India that the quartz contains gold in greater proportions than many of the successfully worked Australian reefs.——Sir Charles Gapper has ordered 45,000 tons of steel rails at 97 shillings and sixpence per ton delivered in Montreal for the Canadian Pacific Railway.——MEMPHIS, August 25th.—Thirty-four cases of fever were reported to-day, 20 white and 14 colored. The fever has apparently taken a fresh start in this city and suhurbs.——SEATTLE, August 26th.—"Lieutenant" Joseph Neuzil left here at ten o'clock this morning on his three-log raft Neptune for San Francisco. He rounded Sandy Point hefore a spanking breeze, and headed away toward Port Madison. To those who questioned the prohability of his reaching San Francisco in such a crazy craft, he replied, "I will either make San Francisco or die. If I reach there safely, my fortune is made. I will haul the Neptune on Long Bridge, place her on exhihition and clear $8,000 in a week. If I perish in the attempt, that concerns no one hut myself. I was shipwrecked once in the Pacific Ocean, and was picked up after drifting three days on a single stick of timber, so you will see I am not a stranger to perils hy the sea."——BERLIN, August 25th.—The North German Gazette publishes the electoral manifesto of a new conservative party, declaring that the State and the Catholic Church should meet each other half way; the inalienahle rights of the State should he guaranteed, especially as regards education, but religious instruction should be left to religious bodies.—— LONDON, August 26th.—The examination hefore the Bristol Magistrates of seven Directors of the West of England and South Wales District Bank on a charge of conspiracy has heen hegun. The counsel for the Crown is opening the case.——ROME, August 26th.—The Phylloxera has appeared in the district of Lecco, and in the Commune of Valmadrela, in Lombardy. The Minister of Agriculture is taking precautionary measures against the spread of the pest.——In connection with the recent countermanding of maneuvers at Ciprano, the War Office reports that fevers, including typhoid, are largely on the increase in various districts. There are 300 sick out of 2,700 people at San Giovanna in Croce. Numerous cases have appeared around Cassine.——CHICAGO, August 26th.—The strikers at the Lake Shore freight depots were this afternoon offered a compromise on wages of $1 15 daily, and ahout forty accepted and will work to-morrow. The remainder will probahly also accept.——The suit of James O'Connor vs. Joseph Musto, et als, was tried during the week in the Fourth District Court, and judgment rendered for the defendants. The action was commenced in October, 1877, to partition the lot 62½x137½ feet, on the east line of Taylor, 75 feet south of Post street, the plaintiff claiming one-half. The trial revealed some peculiar facts, as follows: Mrs. O'Connor, the mother of plaintiff, died, as was alleged in the complaint, in 1861. According to the law of that date, the mother's half of community property went to the children and the other to the husband and father. The date given as the time of her death was six days prior to the time the change in the law was made. At the trial lately it was proved hy records that Mrs. O'Connor died in 1862, one year after the date alleged in the complaint. An inspection of the gravestone showed that the figures had been altered from 1862 to 1861, and the cross taken from the coffin-lid also showed that the inscription had heen tampered with, and the figures changed to correspond with the gravestone. As a still further proof of her death in 1862, two newspapers containing notices were offered in evidence.——MONTREAL, August 26th.—Criminal proceedings will be taken against the Directors and ex-General Manager of the Consolidated Bank, for preparing and suhmitting to the Government an untrue statement of the affairs of the Bank. A writ of attachment has been applied for against the Mechanics' Bank hy holders of hills.——The steamer Oceanic arrived from the Orient at 5:35 P.M. on the 25th, having made the unprecedented run from Hongkong in 19 days and 18 hours steaming time, and from Yokohama in 14 days, 5 hours and 45 minutes. This vessel has previously made the passage from Yokohama in 14 days, 15 hours and 20 minutes. Neither passage has ever heen heaten, the City of Peking making the nearest approach to it in 15½ days from Yokohama.

Sunday Drunkenness in Ireland.—Since the passing of the Act for the closing of public houses in Ireland on Sundays, the arrests for drunkenness have decreased from 2,046 to 707 between October 12, 1877, and April 12, 1878. These figures show a reduction of 70 per cent. in the police arrests in six months, a result highly satisfactory. But this is not all. The testimony in Ireland is practically unanimous to the fact that Sunday drunkenness of a less flagrant type has been lessened to even a greater degree. Serious and common assaults, once very frequent on that day, are now almost unknown, and the time-books of large employers of labor show that work is commenced much more regularly on Mondays than under the old system. In the five cities and towns exempted from the free operation of the Act, but where the hours of sale are materially shortened, the results are also very marked, there being a reduction of 35 per cent. in the arrests for Sunday drunkenness.——The idea of being poisoned by cold pie seems too ridiculous to be entertained for one moment, yet a careful analysis of the body of William Corbett, saloon steward on board the English troop ship Tamar, shows the deceased to have died of choleric diarrhea, induced by mephitic poisoning, possibly caused, the medical men assert, "by a pigeon pie." Poisonous changes, it appears, take place in cold pies, and especially in those made with game, by simply keeping or laying by for some time. This fact cannot be too widely known.——The Paris Globe publishes the following telegram from Odessa: "The transport ship which left this port recently for Saghalien with a convoy of 700 Nihilists lost 200 of them on the way from disease, occasioned by over-loading and the absence of all sanitary precautions. One hundred and fifty others were landed in an almost dying state. A second transport is being prepared under the same horrible conditions. The prisoners are packed like cattle in the hold of the ship."——A philanthropic gentleman living at Reigate has written Mr. Mapleson, the operatic manager, a letter, which now lies before us, stating to the effect that the factory girls in Carmen looked pale from constant labor in the cigarette factory, and that he should be happy to give them a day in the country. He stated that, as most of them were apparently young, his daughter would receive them, give them third-class tickets, a substantial dinner and a day in the fresh air. Mr. Mapleson replied, in effect, that the girls on the stage, though apparently working in a factory, were really not so, and he explained that few or any of them could really make cigarettes. In short, it was but a stage illusion, and the "girls" were really the tolerably mature ladies of his chorus. Since then no more has been heard from Reigate.——Many characteristic anecdotes of the late King Victor Emmanuel are told in a work on his private life by an Italian journalist. Among other tales of his late Majesty related in this book are the following: In matters of dress the King was supremely indifferent. He disliked the frock-coat, which he contended was invented by the democracy in order to confound masters with their servants. He usually walked abroad in a short jacket, and in this garment he often visited the theaters and other places. One evening he went to the Apollo, in Rome. On his arrival, he was told that the Empress of all the Russias was in the Royal loge. "How shall I manage?" said the King. "I am not dressed comme il faut, and I do not wish to return to the Quirinal. But I must pay a visit to her Majesty the Empress." He looked around, espied the Marquis of Bagnasco, and summoned him. The Marquis came and found the King in his shirt-sleeves. All was explained. The Marquis doffed his coat and the King put it on. He had no white cravat. A speckless tie on a waiter caught his eye. He sent for him, unloosened the tie, put it on himself, and, viewing himself in a mirror, said: "It appears to me that I can now present myself as a King of Italy." On another occasion, when his Majesty went to the same theater, just as he was about to enter his loge he espied through the glass portals the portly figure of Colonel Galletti, one of his intimes. "Do not budge," said Victor Emmanuel; "I wish to take your portrait." His Majesty then limned out a very capital sketch of the colonel's burly figure on the glass—he had a penchant for crayon-drawing, and usually stuffed his pockets with different colored pencils. On the following evening his Majesty returned to the theater, and on entering his loge saw an attendant diligently engaged in endeavoring to erase the crayon lines of the royal artistic efforts of the previous evening. "What are you doing?" said the King. "Your Majesty," replied the fellow, "I am cleaning off what some imbecile has been doing." Victor Emmanuel walked away laughing, merely exclaiming, "I am the imbecile."——Petaluma Argus: A gentleman of this city, just from a hunt in the wilds of Humboldt county, vouches for the following: A few weeks since, while out hunting in that region, Doc Stanley shot and killed four grizzly bears without moving from one spot. Meeting one of the varmints, he drew a bead, fired and dropped it; thereupon another made its appearance, and shared a like fate, only to be followed in rapid succession by numbers three and four, each and all of whom traveled the way of those that had gone before. By this time the Doc's leaden ammunition had "gin out," and with it his nerve, and he took to the nearest tree, not knowing the number of the bruin tribe. A friend, who was out with him on the hunt, hearing the rapid shots and thinking that he also wanted some of it, hastened up, but only to find the Doc up a tree, quietly and anxiously watching four dead grizzlies. Next!——A friend of mine, says Atlas in the World, wired the following to Cape Town, in time to be forwarded to me by the Nubian, which arrived in Plymouth Sound on Friday morning:

"PIETERMARITZBURG, Tuesday, July 8.

Old Forbes galloped in here last evening, gaunt, grizzly, in absolute tatters from riding through thorns, and plastered with mud from head to foot. From morning 4th till last night had hut three hours' sleep. Repeated old Bulgarian tactics, and was first hy twelve hours to acquaint Wolseley, Frere and whole South Africa with news of fight, victory, and burning Ulundi. Tough old beggar; rode about three hundred miles in fifty hours: first hundred alone through enemy's country, mostly during night. Comic thing—he had forgotten his revolver, and was absolutely unarmed. Has gone off to Wolseley, expecting, by some mysterious cross-riding, to overtake him to-morrow. His thigh swelled from contusion—spent bullet."——The British Trade Journal for August says: One of the severest winters of the century has been succeeded by six months continuous downfall of rain. This will seriously affect the harvest prospects, and as a good harvest means a saving of some £15,000,000 or £20,000,000, it follows that the prospects of a trade revival may be more or less retarded. An authority, writing to the Times some weeks ago, then said: 'Three weeks of repeated downpours, with a low temperature and want of sunshine, have considerably darkened our prospects for cereal crops, especially on our cold, stiff, glutinous clays, where, undrained, their mud-like condition has excluded air from the plant roots, and has caused the crops to look yellow and unhealthy. Pulse, green crops, and pastures have been improved hy the rains, but all now require a warm and dry time to ripen them, even on light porous soils, which have suffered much less than the clays.' Since that was written we have had a forty days' further continuance of heavy rains, with a temperature far from seasonable. But at last we have some gleams of sunshine and warm weather. It seems generally recognized that one inevitable result from the existing distress will be a great reduction in rents. Save in a few cases, landholders have been receiving the same annual income from their property, although they have benefitted by the reduced cost of living. One of the best farms in Perthshire has just been let for nineteen years at a reduction equivalent to 40 per cent., with still further advantages to the tenant in about four years' time.——Mrs. Bell, sister of James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, has just given birth in Paris to a fine baby, and the happy father was so delighted with the advent that he sent a handsome service of plate to the doctor who presided on the occasion. Mrs. Bell is very rich, and the only heiress of her brother, and she can afford to have the costliest of babies just as often as she pleases. It is a boy, and the happy little fellow found in his cradle 100 U. S. Bonds, of $1,000 each, as a present from his uncle.——The King of Solo, a native Prince of Java, will soon arrive at Paris. Wonderful tales are related concerning his accomplishments and wealth, his income being placed at the pretty figure of 30,000,000 fr. per annum! He brings a band of music with him, whose performances are unique.——The Illustrated London News states that the will of Lord Lawrence was proved on the 17th ult. by his widow and two sons, John Hamilton, Lord Lawrence, and the Hon. Henry Arnold Lawrence, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £140,000. The testator settles his estate at Pimlico and elsewhere upon his eldest son, and bequeaths pecuniary legacies to all his children, and annuities to his sisters. A sum of £50,000 is left upon trust for his wife for life, and then for the person who shall he entitled to his real estate. The residue of the personal estate he gives to his wife absolutely.——The London Times has reason to believe that Lieutenant-General Valentine Baker Pasha is likely to be nominated hy the Ottoman Government to an important civil and military post in Kurdistan. It is stated in the same journal that the consulate at Resht, on the Caspian, has been abolished, and one constituted in its stead at Asterabad, on the south-eastern shores of the same sea. Major O. B. C. St. John, C.S.I., of the Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, has been selected for the new post.——SIX THINGS TO BE PROUD OF, BY A CHILD OF IMPULSE.—1. Not to have written a Book. 2. Not to have given a Recitation. 3. Not to have appeared in Vanity Fair. 4. Not to have been presented with a Testimonial. 5. Not to have been offered Knighthood. 6. Not to be buried in Westminster Abbey.—Punch.——The revenues of the Suez Canal have increased from $1,000,000 in 1870, to $7,000,000 last year. The shares of the Company were 400,000, the par value being $100. They fell as low as $20, and afterward advanced to $60 at the opening of the canal. Five years later they rose to $114, at which Mr. Disraeli bought 176,602 for the British Government. Now the stock is $114.—Bullionist.

"BIZ."

The outside street excitements of the week have tended greatly to the diminishing of the volume of trade, diverting the attention of business men from their legitimate callings, and causing a great diminution of traffic in nearly every department. We are living now, as it were, upon a volcano, liable at any moment to belch forth its fiery flame. Nevertheless, we are hopeful for the continuance of law and order. On the 3d proximo the election for State and municipal officers takes place, the first under the new State Constitution. Great anxiety prevails as to the result, as upon the choice of our best citizens depends the future growth and welfare of this commonwealth. Let us work and labor for the success of the best men without regard to their politics. We note an increased inquiry for improved real estate, chiefly on the hillsides covered by cable railroads, notably that of California street. Our citizens are rapidly returning from their Summer retreats in the country, and are now looking out for eligible residences for the Fall and Winter seasons. Money continues very plentiful and at low rates of interest, and our savings and loan societies are at all times prepared to make free loans upon desirable real estate property.

The Bag Ring have not yet been able to make a riffle; they seem to be clogged up by an unexpected avalanche of outside Grain Sacks, that are selling at very low prices—even less than the first cost of importation. Stocks are large, and Standard 22x36 Calcutta Grain Sacks, new importation, can very readily be purchased at 8¾c.

Coffee.—The Pacific Mail steamship City of Panama brought up 2,390 bags from Central America. The market at present is lifeless; holders firm; stock light, with an upward tendency for all strictly choice No. 1 C. A. Greens, suited to the trade of Chicago, St. Louis, etc. We are now supplied with Rio via New York, worth 14@15c. There is a cargo of Ceylon now en route to Parrott & Co. for the fall trade.

Coal.—Our spot supply of Anthracite in store is large, and prices both low and nominal with a very small demand. Steam Coals from Sydney and elsewhere foreign are in light stocks and few cargoes are en route, which gives strength to the market, although the California Mt. Diablo deliveries are both free and liberal, selling at $4@5. Seattle is worth $5 50@6. At the same time supplies of Coos Bay for household purposes are offered at low figures. Wellington and other British Columbia mines continue to furnish us with liberal supplies of first-class House and Steam Coals at $6@8—the latter for Screened Wellington.

Cement.—Our stocks of Portland and other sorts are large and free and the demand light, and prices both low and nominal.

Case Goods.—There has been very little done in Case Salmon during the past fortnight. The Columbia River catch has been unprecedented, only limited when the stock of tin gave out, and no cans in which to put their Salmon. Present Spot price of 1-lb tins, $1 05@$1 07½. Some of the largest and best known canners, holding each 25,000@30,000 cases, have not yet sold a case of this season's catch, refusing offers of $1 15@$1 25 for their entire catch, and now, forsooth, they may be compelled to sell for $1 per doz. cans. This, however, depends largely upon the firmness of local holders and the catch at Fraser River, as well as that at Puget Sound, now in full blast. Fortunately for us, Chicago, St. Louis, etc., have this season drawn more largely upon us for Salmon than ever before, and this demand has prevented prices from dropping below $1.

Metals.—There have been sales of Pig Iron recently at $24 and possibly less; figures withheld. The general market is very slack. The consumptive demand is very small at present.

Quicksilver.—The spot market is strong at 40c, some holders asking 42½c—stock light. The Quicksilver exports by sea from August 23d are as follows:

To China, per "Gaelic," hence 23d inst:

	Flasks.	Value.
Degener & Co	1,460	$41,000
Wau Yuen Lung Kee	997	30,000
Wing Chong Wo & Co	325	9,625
To Japan, per "Gaelic," hence 23d inst:
Seth Thomas' Clock Co	50	1,600
Totals	2,832	$ 82,225
Previously, since January 1st	38,917	1,114,893
Totals, since Jan. 1st, 1879	41,749	$1,197,118
Totals, same period 1878	21,706	713,400
Increase in 1879	20,043	$483,718

Receipts for the week, 1,187 flasks.

Rice.—By the Oceanic we received from Hongkong 7,950 mats. The China, from same, brought 2,450 mats. Our stock of China is large; Mixed selling at 4⅝c.; higher grades, 5¼@5¾c.; Hawaiian Table is scarce at 5¾@6c.

Sugar.—Imports during the week have been of no magnitude. The Refineries control the market and keep prices down to bedrock—say, for Whites, 9½@10c.; Golden "C," 8¼c.; other Yellow, 7¾@8c. Eastern Refined continues to come forward in quantities.

Salt.—There has been quite a movement in Liverpool Stoved during the week, resulting in the purchase of all the Ashton's here in first hands at $20, which is a large advance over rates heretofore ruling.—The California supply, as well as that from Carmen Island, falls short of our consumptive wants.

Teas.—The market is firm for all descriptions, say for Japan papers, "M & Co., and diamond L brands, 35@37½c. The steamship China brought us 3,097 pkgs., and the Oceanic 5,656 pkgs., while these two steamers brought for Eastern cities 15,730 and 24,907 pkgs., respectively. The Oceanic made the passage from the Orient in the shortest time on record, say from Hongkong 25 days, and from Yokohama 14 days 6 hours.

Wines.—By the Equator, from France, we received liberal supplies of Champagne and other still wines from Bordeaux, but where the profit comes in we do not see, judging from the ruinous prices realized, last week at auction, at the sale of first-class French Wines of well known brands and varieties.

Freights and Charters.—We note the arrival of several vessels during the week, in ballast, seeking, and a few ships will load Wheat upon owners' account. Quite a number of Grain Charters for Europe have been written during the week at 43@45s. for wood, to 46@47s. 6d. for iron vessels to Havre and Liverpool direct, or to Cork or Falmouth for orders U. K. or the Continent at the customary advance. We have now a fleet of 28 disengaged vessels in port—say 26,800 tons register; 33 vessels now on the berth or loading grain. Since July 1st we have loaded and dispatched 30 vessels belonging to the Grain Fleet, which is a much less number than we cleared same time last year. The present spot rate to the Continent is 50 shillings.

Flour and Wheat.—The markets remain substantially unchanged for both articles—say $5 for best shipping Extras; $5 50 for Gilt Edged, for local use; Superfine, $4@4 50, as to brand and quality. Large sales of No. 1 Wheat have been concluded during the week, at $1 70@1 72½, and for No. 2 Shipping, $1 55@1 65 ₱ cental.

Barley.—There is very little movement at present. We quote Chevalier at $1 50@1 70 ₱ cental; Brewing, 85c@$1; Feed, 65@75c.

Corn and Oats.—There is very little demand for either, and prices for both low and nominal—say, for Corn, 80@85c ₱ ctl; Oats, $1 15@1 50, according to quality.

Hops.—The stock of old is well nigh exhausted, worth 8c to 12½c; new command 15c to 20c.

Wool.—The Fall clip is now arriving, with sales of 20,000 lbs Solano fleece at 13c to 17c.

Tallow.—The demand is light; sales of 10,000 lbs. Common, 5½@5¾c.; 5,000 Refined at 7¾c.

Fruits and Vegetables.—The market is now liberally supplied with Grapes of choice quality, Pears, Peaches, Plums, etc.; also Blackberries, Raspberries, Strawberries, etc. Prices for all rule very low, and quite within reach of the poorest citizen.

PACIFIC MAIL STEAMSHIP COMPANY.

The Company's steamers will sail as follows at 12 M: CITY OF TOKIO, Oct. 4th, Dec. 27th, March 20th—CITY OF PEKING, Nov. 15th, Feb. 7th, May 1st—for YOKOHAMA and HONGKONG.

TELEPHONES IN CHURCH.

According to the New York Journal of Telegraphy, a telephone has been placed in the Congregational church at Mansfield, Ohio, the wires leading to the houses of several invalid persons. A contemporary, in describing it, says it surmounts a floral decoration on the table in front of the open platform, where it is hardly seen. The speaker pays no attention whatever to it, yet every word uttered in the auditorium is clearly heard in the rooms of the dwellings which the wires reach. The first message from the minister was from Scripture: "The word is nigh unto thee. His word runneth very swiftly." Recently, in a church in Richmond, Va., a transmitter was placed upon one of the pillars of the pulpit, almost entirely hid from sight. A small insulated wire ran down inside the pulpit rail and across the angle of a stair, up the wainscotting and along under the top rail, out through a gimlet-hole in the window-frame and to the top of the parsonage, passing down through the ventilator into the chamber of an invalid young lady, where it was attached to the ordinary hand telephone. Imperceptibly to all around, the little instrument did its work, conveying to the ear of the patient sufferer the sounds of the well-known voice in the pulpit for the first time in long years. Of course, the reverend doctor was anxious during the morning sermon, as his thoughts reverted to the distant listener, to know if she heard; and his pleasure may be imagined when he learned that the entire service—sermon, prayers, hymns, organ and singing—had been audible to the person for whose comfort the arrangement had been planned.

For City and County Surveyor.—This is really a non-political office that ought to be filled quite irrespective of party affiliations. It is an office that demands the skill of an expert, and the local knowledge that is only acquired by long residence, and by personal acquaintance with sewer levels, established grades, boundaries of streets, original surveys, and the like technical information. Wm. P. Humphreys, the present occupant of the office, has long discharged its duties with eminent ability and is a candidate for re-election. His professional status is of the very highest. He comes of a family of great engineers, his father having been Chief Naval Constructor for the United States, and his brother being now the distinguished Chief Engineer of the U. S. Army. Wm. P. Humphreys has several times been elected by almost unanimous consent, and once absolutely without opposition, he being indorsed by all parties. A very natural feeling exists that his acquired knowledge of the city's surveys is invaluable, and has saved the city from many costly errors that new men would almost certainly have fallen into. It would be a serious error to remove this able and experienced professional man from a strictly non-political office, the duties of which he discharges in an entirely unexceptionable manner. The city may have to pay dearly for the inevitable errors of an inexperienced man. Wm. P. Humphreys ought to be re-elected City and County Surveyor undoubtedly. Citizens should see that his name is on their tickets.

For Public Administrator.—Colonel Wm. Doolan, having discharged the duties of his office as Public Administrator during one term with marked acceptability, he has fairly earned the indorsement usually conceded to a faithful officer of a re-election to a second term. Prior to his incumbency this office seemed one into which it was most difficult to place the right man. It was not always filled in a manner that merited or received public approval. There seems to be something exceptionally tempting in figuring dead men's money. It is due to Col. Doolan to say that his high honor and strict integrity were so well established that it was felt that he was just the man to redeem the office of Public Administrator from the distrust into which it had fallen, and the wide prevalence of that feeling won him his election on a ticket that was partially defeated. Now that his term is about to end, it is a demonstrated fact that he has proven himself equal to the anticipations of his friends. He has discharged his duties most satisfactorily, and, as we have said, has fairly earned the indorsement of a second term. The tried and trusted official ought not to be slighted for an unknown man. Col. Doolan has pre-eminent qualifications for the office, as he has proven. See that his name is on your ticket.

Mr. Robert Howe, of the Produce Commission house of Howe & Hall, is nominated, both by the Democrats and the New Constitution Party, as a candidate for the Shrievalty. Mr. Howe has been twenty-seven years in California, and has had practical experience of all phases of pioneer life. He was for ten years engaged in mining in Tuolumne County, and during that period was twice sent to the Legislature. A resident of our city for seventeen years past, he has sat for the last six years in the State Senate. His vote was cast against the Water Bill, which proposed to rob our people of $17,000,000. Mr. Howe married a California lady, and has seven intelligent children, all daughters. His opponent, Desmond (W. P. C. candidate), recommends himself as one who assisted to release Fenian prisoners; and strengthens his claim to office in America on this ground by allowing Denis Kearney, in his hearing, to promise for him that, if elected, he will give up Chas. De Young to the mob, to be hanged by them. The contrast between the candidates could not be made sharper.

The present Tax Collector, William Ford, has been renominated by the Democrats, and, it is to be hoped, will be elected as if by acclamation, for the city has never had a more conscientious, accurate, faithful official. Mr. Ford has always taken his duty in the plain, direct meaning of the word. He was in office to collect the taxes and to account for them, and this he has always done with scrupulous exactness. All the surplusage, received in payment of odd sums for which our currency offers no accepted coin, has been turned over to the Treasurer, and the city has in this way profited to the amount of FIFTEEN HUNDRED DOLLARS. The order and method in the office business have been remarked by all who have dealings with the Collector, and the accounts of each day are verified before the next morning, cost what labor it may. No good citizen should forget to vote for such a man.

Among the Republican nominees for the Board of Education Mr. Luman Wadhams is one sure to command the respect and win the votes of intelligent citizens. Mr. Wadhams is very widely known through his connexion with the house of N. P. Cole & Co., and is entirely fitted by his straightforward character and strong sympathy with the cause of education to do the public good service in the School Department.

Mr. Fred M. Campbell, the nominee of the Republican party for State Superintendent of Schools, is essentially the right man in the right place. With an experience of some twenty years as a teacher, and having also, by a great majority, been elected Superintendent of Schools for Alameda County, in which position he merited and received extraordinary credit, Mr. Campbell is far above any other candidate in the field. He is indorsed, not only by Protestant clergymen and laymen, but by the Reverends M. King and John B. McNally, Catholic rectors of Oakland. Withal, Mr. Campbell's face and his sterling merit are a passport into the best society in any land. He is a highly educated man, without any of the pedantry or Martinetism which are generally supposed to appertain to a pedagogue. The most gratifying testimonial to his merit is that of some three score of his old pupils, who are now among the foremost men of San Francisco and Oakland.

Judge Louderback has had so much experience in dealing with the criminal classes as Police Judge and as Police Commissioner, and has discharged his difficult duties at all times with such strict impartiality and public acceptability, that it would be a loss to the whole city if he by any chance failed of re-election. We don't believe that it is at all probable that he will fail. He has been nominated by the Republicans, Democrats and New Constitution party—a combination that ought surely to win. The larger his majority, the more his hands will be strengthened. The hoodlums will thereby be taught that good citizens have watched and approved his course in the past, and that they will sustain it at all hazards in the future. By all means let a rousing majority indorse the course of this well-tried public officer.

Of nominees for the Board of Supervisors, none is more deservedly popular or certain to control a larger vote than Dr. J. D. Whitney, who has been put forward as a candidate by the Republicans of the Fifth Ward. A native of San Francisco, educated at the University of the Pacific, where he was graduated, and accomplished in his profession by all that study in the East and the great medical schools in Europe could give him, Dr. Whitney is also a man of wide general intelligence, practical energy and entire devotion to the best interests of the community. To choose such a representative in the city government is the duty of all good citizens, without distinction of party.

Alfred H. Townsend, nominee of the Workingmen for Judge of the Superior Court, comes to us strongly indorsed by the newspapers, Democratic and Republican, at his old home in Iowa. Accordiug to one he is a gentleman of untarnished character, high intellectual attainments, superior legal learning and ability, and eminently well fitted for the position to which he aspires. Another says of him that he is a man of fine legal mind and possessed of many excellent qualities fitting him for Judge. These testimonies, coming as they do from old neighbors, are of special value to the voters of our city. It is safe to say that they will not miss it much in supporting Mr. Townsend.

We remark among the names before our fellow-citizens of Marin county that of Stuart S. Wright, as one of the Superior Judges to be voted for in the coming election. Judge Wright already, as Justice of the Peace, he will undoubtedly be chosen to this higher position, and continue the honorable tradition of his father, so long the respected Judge of our County Court. Stuart S. Wright is an attorney of the Supreme Court, and has practiced at the bar for several years. He is almost entirely our own, having been a student of the State University, and he has around him a growing and interesting family.

Much depends upon the constitution of the next Board of Supervisors, and all are concerned to see that only good men, responsible in the eyes of the community, and entirely above all suspicion of doubtful practices, are selected. The Republicans of the Third Ward have set an excellent example in nominating Mr. J. M. Litchfield, well known through his long business record among us as a man of absolute integrity and excellent capacity, whose success in administering his own affairs gives assurance of the ability to discharge the difficult and complicated duties which devolve upon a Supervisor.

The nomination of General John McComb on the Republican ticket, as a candidate for the Auditorship, is one of the best of all that have been made. Necessarily brought before the public eye as one of the editors of the Alta, and as a prominent military man, General McComb has impressed all who know him as a thoroughly upright, firm, decisive character, quick to see the right and steadfast in maintaining it. No one could be better suited to fill the office of Auditor, which calls for sagacity, great moral courage and inflexible integrity.

The Republicans of the Tenth District have renominated Dr. William B. May to represent them in the Assembly. This indorsement of his fearless and intelligent course as a member of the last Legislature, while it must be extremely gratifying to Dr. May, is no more than his just due, since he displayed from the beginning of the session all the qualities which go to make a good public man; and an official career so well begun merited indeed the approbation of a re-nomination. The Republicans have done well by the man, who did well by the whole community.

Among re-nominations, every way most fit, is that of Judge Jas. C. Pennie, one of the best known and most highly respected Justices of the Peace in the city. This responsible office Judge Pennie has held through every vicissitude of State and city politics since 1865, to the entire satisfaction of all. Known as he is in every portion of the State, there is everywhere but one opinion with regard to him. No man ever enjoyed a more genuine popularity, or one more fairly earned by a long life of uprightness and probity, and intelligent devotion to duty.

A gigantic telescope, which is said to be the largest in the world, has just been constructed for Sir Henry Bessemer by Messrs. Galloway, engineers and ironfounders, Knot Mill Iron Works, Manchester. The telescope is a marvel of ingenuity and workmanship, and is estimated to cost £40,000.

REPAIRING THE EYE.

Some curious facts have come to light about the regeneration of the eye, during experiments made by M. Philippeaux, facts of a very pleasing kind if we only infer that what applies to inferior animals is applicable also to man. M. Philippeaux has been, it seems, anxious to discover whether, on completely emptying the eyes of young rabbits and Guinea pigs, the vitreous humor would be reorganized, and whether even the crystalline would be reproduced. With this view he has been conducting his operations, always, of course, taking care not to touch the crystalline capsule, for experience has shown that in order that an organ shall regenerate, a portion of it must be left in its place. It seems that a month after the mutilation was effected, the experimentalist was able to state that the eyes, which had been emptied, were filled afresh, and that the crystalline was reconstituted. He operated on twenty-four animals, and in each case the mutilated eye revived. This would seem to show that the optic organ has the same capabilities as the bones; the organic process repairs an evil and reconstructs, more or less completely, that portion which has been struck off from the whole.—Galignani's Messenger.

TOO MUCH EDUCATION.

The popular idea that universal education is a panacea for all evils, is an exploded fallacy. Formerly a tolerably good education was of value to its possessor, but now the article has become so diffused, and thereby so cheapened, that it seldom benefits its possessor. It is the old story of "over-production and excessive competition." Your college graduate may starve, while your able mechanic or industrious laborer continues to plod along in the good, old-fashioned way, and seldom lacks a meal or wants for silver in his purse. We have frequently had occasion to note the positive distaste of public school graduates for any and all of the mechanical trades, and the apparent reason is, that by such occupations they lose caste. Consequently, the country is overrun with slip-shod clerks, shyster lawyers and quack doctors. The truth is, we have run this education business into the ground, and are burdened with yearly-increasing taxation in order to supply an already over-stocked world with supercilious idiots, who are of no use to themselves or to the community. The remedy is plain. Reduce the school apportionment, cut off all our pet hobbies, and limit the system to primary and grammar schools. Then we may hope to produce useful men, and so get our money's worth.

Gilbert & Moore, the well known dealers in school and house furniture, have on exhibition at the Fair, in the east gallery, some remarkably fine specimens of their work in office desks. These were made to order for the Chronicle, and are of a style and model which recommend them to every person of taste. The old desk, with its high bulwark of pigeonholes, is almost a thing of the past, and seems antiquated indeed by the side of these low cylinder tables, at which one sits in perfect comfort, with good light all round, and a clear view over the room. It is as designers of School furniture that Gilbert & Moore have made their reputation, and every one who has visited the schools of this city, or Oakland, or Alameda,—for the firm have contracts with all of these—must have been struck with the compactness, neat finish and solidity of the desks and chairs in use. These are at once so simple in plan and so comfortable to the scholars, that it seems as if there never could have been any other kind; but in this, as in all other mechanical contrivances, simplicity is the result of many experiences and long study, and very few men are original enough to give practical shape to clear principles.

BODIE (Mono County), Aug. 23, 1879.

F. E. Luty, Esq., Sec. Boston Con. Mining Co.—DEAR SIR: At about forty feet on the incline shaft, sinking jointly by the above company and the Last Chance, counection was made with the old shaft. At this point there were about five feet of a fine character of quartz. From this depth the old work will be used; that is, enlarged and timbered, as described in last letter. It will soon be finished to the sixty odd feet, when virgin ground will be encountered, and the work will then show more what the future of the property is likely to be. Surface work about the mine is progressing accordingly as may be needed.

Yours truly, D. B. HUNT, Acting Sup't.

The Pope is about to issue an encyclical letter on the subject of philosophical teaching. Taking as the basis of his letter the apostolic constitution proclaimed by the Vatican Council, he begins his argument by the proposition that faith and right reason are not irreconcilable with each other, nor ever are they found in conflict; but if what appears to be reason is found in conflict, or apparent conflict, with faitb, it is because the apparent reason is fallacious and is not right reason. The letter is said to be marked by extraordinary clearness of statement, by strictly logical reasoniug, and to be couched in admirably concise and elegant phraseology.

At an inquest held at Liverpool the other day by the borough coroner, the death of "a strong and healthy man" was attributed by the doctors to narcotic poison, arising from freely eating of lettuce, which is kuowu to contain opium. The deceased was sixty-nine years of age, and one of the medical witnesses said tbat a very small dose of narcotic would affect an elderly person. The jury found that the man bad died from the effects of poison, but that there was not sufficient evidence to show that it was attributable to eating lettuce.—Court Journal.

The steamer "Parthenius" will leave Washington-street wharf tonight at 8 o'clock, for a moonlight excursion around tbe Bay. There will be a fine band of music and refreshments on board, and dancing will be indulged in. The same steamer will also run to Sacramento and back on Tuesdays and Thursdays till further notice, leaving Wasbing-street wharf at 10 A. M.

In this perfect weather the Terrace Baths, at Alameda, are resorted to by thousands, and the scene on these moonlight nights is enchanting. The merry voices of the bathers are borne on the soft air across the water tbat sparkles, and plashes, and breaks into diamonds in the light, while scent of the infinite sea brings with it health and tbe sense of a joyous life. Last night the baths were almost crowded, spacious as tbey are, and tonight the scene will be even yet more wonderful.

SANITARY NOTES.

The deaths this week number 61, as compared with 77 last, and 83 for the corresponding week last year. There were 40 males and 21 females, 7 Chiuese, 2 suicides. There was no death from diphtheria, and only one from typboid fever. The chief causes of death were: Phthisis 10, pneumonia 7, infantile convulsions 3, bronchitis 2, heart disease 2, paralysis 2, alcoholism 2; and one death each from aneurism, brain disease, Bright's disease, diarrhœa, gastretis hœmoptysis, hepatites, liver disease, lung congestion, puerperal hemorhage, peritonitis, scarlatina, syphilis. The infantile mortality contiuues very low—only 16 deaths under 5 years of age. Four persons died over 70 years. There were no deaths in the Third and Fith Wards, and 10 in the Eleventh Ward. The sanitary condition of the city is unusually good.

A TURTLE 179 YEARS OLD.

We received a turtle a few days since which had marked on its back the date of 1700, and also the Spanish coat-of-arms, indicating that this old resident was in existence one hundred and seventy-nine years ago. What changes this old fellow of the deep has seen. The rise and fall of empires, and the continent ou which he partly lived emerged from the thraldom of despotism with the rise of a republic that has become the great conservator of freedom, the advancement of civilization and the glory of the world. A few words in Spanish were translated, which say: "Caught in 1700 by Hernanda Gomez, in the St. Sebastian, and was carried to Matanzas by Indians; from tbere to the Great Wekiva (which is now the St. John's River)." On Tuesday, the 17tb of June, the turtle was turned adrift in the St. John's River, at Palatka, with the inscription on his back, "Eastern Herald, Palatka, Florida, 1879." It may be supposed that by this time the old fellow has scented salt water and gone over the bar at high tide, and probably a few generations hence may take him up at a Spanish port on the other side.—Palatka (Florida) Journal.

A RAINY SUMMER.

This year we had no time for commune sweet,
With spires of snowy chestnut overhead;
I lying, with the bluebells, at your feet,
As from an old-world book, mayhap, I read
Some tale of nightly prowess for fair dame;
For scarcely had I smoothed the pages—so—
And looked for inspiration in your eyes,
And sighed, and sought your little hand, when, lo,
Wildly the winds of heav'n began to blow,
And all alarmed and fluttering you fled,
With waving of white garments to and fro,
Whilst from the jealous, unrelenting skies
Th' inevitable July downpour came,
Nor left me time to say what I had said. —World.

LETTER FROM AN "OLD CONTRIBUTOR."

NEW YORK, August 19th, 1879.

Dear News Letter: For three and a half days and four nights the rain has poured down continuously, in showers that have penetrated "the joints of the harness," and the remotest interstices of one's boots and under-clothing. A more suicidal period has never been experienced by me in these latitudes, and had it not been for one or two mysterious murders I must have died of ennui. Do you leave your basement window open of nights, and your watch and jewelry and silverware on the parlor table? This is the usual practice in the best households in New York and Boston, and great surprise is felt at so many householders being found murdered in the morning—victims of misplaced confidence. Hence such murders as that of Mr. Frye, who refused to look his doors, on the ground that the neighborhood was honest.

Summer in New York is never an agreeable time, but in such weather as we have lately had it is depressing to the last degree. The best people are all out of town, and the churches and theaters shut up. This is sufficient to make one feel "remote, unfriended, melancholy, slow;" but when the horrors of a New York boarding-house in Summer are added, a bathos of wretchedness is reached which my pen is powerless to describe. Boarding-houses at the best of times are an abomination, but in Summer they gather horrors. The landladies go away, the servants treat you as they please, the butcher sends fly-blown meat, and "an ancient and fish-like odor" pervades everything you eat. Yet, in these hard-up times, middle-class society is divided into only two classes—those who board and those who take in boarders. There is positively no alternative; you must either board other people, or other people will board you. As for the cooking, a man had better "cook his own goose" before he tries it.

"Son of man, there is death in the pot," as the Jewish prophet remarked, and, as Ingoldshy says,

"Pains ventral, sub-ventral,
In stomach and entrail," are the inevitable lot of the boarder. Sydney Smith viewed with alarm and astonishment the small boy who "didn't like gravy," and justly regarded him as an "infant phenomenon," but who can speak of boarding-house gravy in New York and Brooklyn?

I will not dwell upon the horrors of what is called "dressing" for poultry and some kinds of fish. But I will not "harrow up your soul" or "freeze your young blood" with enlarging further on these culinary horrors. Rather let me tell you of the brief parentheses of health I have enjoyed when taking an excursion steamer to Long Branch, or Ocean Grove, or Far Rockaway, or Coney Island. This last place, by the way, is now one of the wonders of the world. One hundred thousand is its average of visitors on fine afternoons, and the loss to the hotels during these three days of storm is computed at three hundred thousand dollars, each visitor spending on an average a dollar—those who spend ten dollars and those who spend ten cents striking the balance between them. When I first visited Coney Island, twelve years ago, there were but one or two primitive hotels, and the only conveyance to and fro was by horse cars from the Brooklyn side of Fulton Ferry. Now, one can reach it easily by half a dozen steam car routes and as many excursion steamers, direct from New York and Brooklyn. And when one gets there it is a sight worth seeing; what with the new Pier, standing out to sea, and the Observatory, reaching to the sky, and the thousands of bathers, swimming, floating, diving, laughing, sneezing, and sometimes yelling in good earnest. At least so it was at Ocean Grove the other day, when a pious young man, a member of the Young Men's Christian Association, went into the briny deep and began disporting himself, unmindful of "the great leviathan taking his pastime therein," to-wit: a hungry shark, with a weakness for Evangelical tenderloin and Methodist spare-rib. A howl of anguish, and the circumambient tide was crimsoned with the gore that streamed from the puritanic back and legs of the member of the Young Men's Christian Association. He was rescued by a fishing smack. His brethren of the Y. M. C. A. put him to bed, and he has remained there ever since, too weak to get up, the shark having made a free lunch of his backbone. Since this catastrophe I am very careful not to bathe in Christian watering-places, as it is the period of camp-meetings, and the sharks, like other queer fish, are attracted by the preaching. If you would like a portion of the cuticle of the Christian young man so horribly nibbled, I will inclose it in my next.

Yours, swimmingly,
"AN OLD CONTRIBUTOR."

The monster Canadian cheese recently exhibited at Kilburn has been cut up and distributed to a favored few of the press. There were, it will be recollected, two of these colossal specimens of dairy produce, each weighing three-quarters of a ton. They were "cut by electricity," a process thus explained on a circular which accompanied the specimen: "The current is obtained from a cell battery, passes through induction coils, causing the rotation of a series of magnets, which, acting upon a driving wheel, causes the revolution of the cylinder around which the wire passes, which will divide one or any number of cheeses in an incredibly short time."—Court Journal.

During the present moonlight nights the Neptune and Mermaid Baths, foot of Hyde street, North Beach, will remain open. Water warm and delightful, beach clean, and strict propriety assured.

A SCIENTIFIC BIBLE.

An English religious paper says: The preparation of the new Bible has not made much advance yet. We lay before our readers the improved version of the first chapter of Genesis: 1. There never was a beginning. 2. And Cosmos was homogeneous and undifferentiated, and somehow or another evolution began and molecules appeared. 3. And molecule evolved protoplasm, and rhythmic thrills arose, and then there was light. 4. And a spirit of energy was developed, and formed the plastic cell whence arose the primordial germ. 5. And the primordial germ became protogene, and protogene somehow shaped eozoon; then was the dawn of life. 6. And the herb yielding seed and the fruit-tree yielding fruit after its own kind, whose seed is in itself, developed according to its own fancy. 7. The cattle after his kind, the beast of the earth after his kind, and every creeping thing became evolved by heterogeneous segregation and concomitant dissipation of motion. 8. So that, by survival of the fittest, there evolved the simiads from the jelly-fish, and the simiads differentiated themselves into the anthropomorphic primordial types. 9. And in due time one lost his tail and became man, and behold he was the most cunning of all animals. 10. And in process of time, by natural selection and survival of the fittest, Mathew Arnold, Herbert Spencer and Charles Darwin appeared, and behold it was very good.

THE CASPIAN CABLE.

The correspondent of the London Times at St. Petersburg gives the following information relating to this cable: Six large masted barges, towed by three steamers, lately arrived in St. Petersburg from Cronstadt heavily laden with the cable destined to be laid between Baku and Krasnovodsk, and orders have been given to hurry it to its destination. The wire, which measures about 147 nautical miles, weighs nearly 62,000 puds (2,232,000 lbs.), and, including the expenses of transport and sinking, will altogether cost about £62,000, has been specially manufactured for the Russian Government by the India Rubber and Gutta Percha Telegraph Works Company in London, and has been conveyed to Cronstadt in the Great Northern, a vessel specially constructed for laying cables. The little fleet of barges and steamers will proceed by the Empress Maria Canal from the Neva to the Volga, whence it will descend as far as Astrakhan, where the cable will be transshipped into a large steamer and sunk in the Caspian at its narrowest parts between Baku and Krasnovodsk.

The Nihilist organ, entitled the Revolutionary Chronicle, contains the following details concerning a new Imperial Bodygnard: "It is probable that there are few people in Russia who are aware of the existence of a very original institution, and so-called safety guard. It is kept secret by the Government in order to facilitate its working. Its duty consists in watching over the personal safety of the Czar and the high state functionaries. The members of this corps are subjected to the strictest discipline, and, though organized as a military body, nevertheless wear all kinds of official uniforms and civil clothes. The crowd of supposed workpeople which assembled when Solovieff made his attempt on the life of the Czar was for the most part composed of the members of this corps. The gendarme Koch who arrested the would-be regicide was one of the Secret Guardsmen, and has been rewarded for this service by being appointed commander of the corps, in the place of General Hase. This Secret Guard, which numbers at the present time more than 1,000 men, is placed under the direct control of the Czar, and its very existence has been kept so secret that even now the full details of its organization are unknown."

The "European Mail," for August, says: Mr. Sergeant Edward Cox, an old schoolfellow of the proprietor of the News Letter, is about the most newspapered man in existence. The whole Field is his, and he possesses the Queen. He has the Law Times, and several other "class" papers, and all that he touches is successful. He has now become academical, and bought the Academy. This fine literary paper, a worthy rival of the Athenæum, has for some time missed the cultured guidance of Dr. Appleton, whose death in Egypt was such a blow to both science and literature, and it was never a gold mine to its owners. But Mr. Sergeant Cox seems to know how to make his public, and the Athenæum will have to look to its laurels.

Order reigns all over Russia, and the Nihilists, as soon as they are hung, accept the clemency of the Czar with unanimity. As for revolution, they agree with Minister Stoughton that there's nothing in it. The demand for well-bred criminals for export continues lively, and supplies are brought in freely from the interior. A very superior article of Polish disaffected has been cleared for Vladivostok, on terms kept strictly private, and there is some inquiry for Cossacks. For a parallel to the present activity in this staple we must go back to the golden days of Nicholas, though some old inhabitants declare that they have never known the market to be so well sustained.

A wedding at the Colton Mansion.—On Wednesday evening last took place, at the residence of Mrs. General Colton, the marriage of Daniel Cook, the well known capitalist, to Miss Carrie Colton. Only the relatives of the family and intimate friends, including the heads and officers of the Central Pacific Railroad, were present, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Platt. The newly married pair left for the East the next morning in the special car formerly used by General Colton, and expect to be absent for several months. A happy and prosperous journey, and a safe return to the home—no longer a house of mourning.

A little more than twelve months ago a howling mob broke Mr. Gladstone's windows, and in places of public amusement his name was received with unmistakable signs of disapprobation. But, the other night, Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone occupied a box at the Haymarket Theater, and, on his entrance, the audience fairly rose, and round after round of applause testified to his restored popularity, one or two hisses only serving to increase the enthusiasm. Boxes, pit and amphitheater appeared to vie with each other in the heartiness of their greeting. The right hon. gentleman appeared somewhat surprised at his reception.

We are always glad to welcome duly qualified physicians to our city. We call attention to the card, in our advertising columns, of Dr. F. F. De Derky, who has had considerable experience in Mobile and Canada.

THE STOCK MARKET.

The market, for the past week, has been extremely dull, and, though a slight improvement was noticeable after the election, the change for the better was but short-lived. The public have settled down to the determination to await developments, and are calmly resigned to the situation. The connection of the Union shaft with the 2,200 level of Sierra Nevada will be completed within the next fortnight, when the operation of pumping the submerged levels will be prosecuted with the greatest possible speed. The rapidity with which the shaft has been pushed ahead will enable the managers of these mines to cross-cut the ledge much sooner than was anticipated, and this fact, undoubtedly, is the cause of the steady strengthening of Union Consolidated stock for the past week. In the "watery" group everything is in readiness to pump the water from these mines, and this time we feel certain that the long inundated levels will be entirely freed from water. This fact will have a stimulating effect upon these stocks, and with the prevailing idea of the existence of an ore-body in Savage and Norcross, we look for quite a lively deal in this section. The dividends on the Bonanza mines will probably be omitted for the current month. At the close the market showed no particular change.

OUR "SHEET MARKET."

Next week we shall resume our quotations of the "SHEET MARKET," which were temporarily suspended during the political campaign. We warn our contemporaries throughout the State that "there's a chiel amang 'em takin' notes, and faith he'll prent 'em." We shall extract all the grains of common sense, with due credit to their authors, and unhesitatingly sit down upon all pretenders in the ranks of journalism. There is at present so much of mere buncombe, jobbery and deceit, and so little of sterling merit, that our task of Mentor will by no means be a sinecure. But the Press of this coast needs purging, and, in our capacity of physician, we shall not hesitate to use heroic remedies. Now, gentlemen, if you wish a palm, merit it.

Private letters from Europe announce the intended departure of George C. Berry, Esq., by the White Star steamer Germania for New York, on the 2d of October next, en route for San Francisco, which he will reach about the 1st of November. Mr. Berry left California in March, 1878, has been all over the Continent and the United Kingdom, has seen and heard all that is eminent and remarkable, and will be gladly welcomed home by his numerous friends.

Mr. J. A. Robinson, for eight years past Chief Clerk in the U. S. Surveyor-General's office, has begun practice in this city at 509 Montgomery street, rooms 3 and 4, as an attorney in land and mining matters specially. Mr. Robinson's facilities are not greater than his fitness for this line of business, and his connection with able Washington practitioners insures to his clients every possible advantage.

According to the returns of the License Collector's office there are in this city 350 Chinese wash-houses, 285 produce and fruit peddlers, 97 dealers in general merchandise, 133 dealers in groceries, 43 dealers in clothing, 94 dealers in cigars, and from 50 to 60 in other occupations. The wash-houses, clothing and cigar dealers employ a number of hands each.

Hearst, Jackson McKenty, Mrs. Meyer. LONDON: Mrs. W. Lent and family.—The Continental Gazette, Paris, Aug. 14, 1879.

It is with the most sincere pleasure that we welcome, in the name of their numerous warm friends, the return of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Bonynge from an extended and delightful tour of the Old World.

A notice of Little, Brown & Co's (Boston) issue of Daniel Webster's Great Speeches will appear in our next.

THE WORKINGMEN AND THE GRANGERS.

That the Workingmen and Grangers have no natural affiliations is what every body might have known. The attempt to unite them was like endeavoring to make oil and water mix. They came together in the New Constitution fight, hut that was an end of the unnatural alliance. That election over, the Grangers caused it to he pretty well understood that thsy would not follow Kearney and his crowd. The Chronicle thought it could take the Workingmen over to the Grangers, and attempted to do it, hut made a most ignominious failure. The Granger never holds enough land to satisfy him, and never gets labor cheap enough to please him. He, therefore, did not at all object to Glenn as an employer of Chinese lahor, or as a land monopolist. He saw in him a man of his own class, with interests and sympathies like unto his own. Ths farmer's chief desires are to get his produce carried to market for nothing, or next to nothing, to farm as much land as he can possibly control, and to get his harvesting done hy the cheapest kind of labor. Glenn represented these interests, and hence the farmers everywhere voted for him. In thess views the Workingmen had no concern, and very naturally they took another and very different way of voting. Having labor to sell, thsy object to competitors who will undersell them. Hoping some day to have a little plot of laud of their own, they have no desire to see it meanwhils monopolized by a few. Knowing that the railroad is the largest employer of labor, they desire to ses it fairly remunerated in order that it may pay a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. The interests of the two classes, therefore, clash. They do everywhere. The farmer in England keeps the agricultural laborers the hardest worked and worst paid class in that country. The planter in the South made men slaves in order that the soil might he cheaply cultivated. This antagonism of interest is world-wide, and need not be looked upon with surprise here; the wonder is that anyhody should have heen shallow enough to suppose that two interests so diametrically opposed to each other could he successfully united.

THE END OF THE ZULU WAR.

King—or rather, ex-king—Cetewayo is suing for terms, and has declared his willingness to suhmit and pay taxes, if his country is cleared of British soldiers. Very naturally, however, his offer is treated with contempt, and he has heen told that he is deposed and must surrender unconditionally. In short, the Zulu war is practically at an end, and with it ends the independence of the hrave nation that has put the British to so much loss and trouble. One cannot help sympathizing with and pitying the Zulus, for they have defended their country with the utmost hravery, and valor will command respect, no matter who shows it; hut at the same tims it must he remembered that they have brought their present misfortunes upon themselves. It is easy enough to say that they ars the victims of British greed, hut no sensihle or well informed man believes this to be the case. Long hefore hostilities were commenced, Cetewayo had heen a constant menace, and often an actual scourge, to his neighhors, especially to those who owned the sway of Great Britain. He was repeatedly warned that, if he did not put a stop to his depredations, he would he severely punished; but, believing that the few troops then in South Africa constituted England's whole power, he scoffed at such warnings and spitefully increased his ravages. There was but one way to treat him, and that way has heen followed to a successful issue. Another king will now, probably, he placed at the head of the nation, who will be under such rigid control that a revolt will he impossible, even should he venture to attempt it after the sharp lesson learned during the past six months. Zululand will henceforth he practically, if not actually, a British possession. Cetewayo himself has not the ghost of a chance for any power in the future. Like Shere Ali, his reign ended with his first hlow at the British, and, like the unfortunate Ameer, we should not be surprised to hear of his death before he falls into the hands of the conquerors.

NATIONAL GOLD BANK AND TRUST COMPANY.

Banking has had its unfortunate side in California, and a goodly number of ambitious men, who had a desire to rival the Rothschilds and thought banking an easy way to influence and fortune, have found it an easy way to lose their money and to prove beyond all possible doubt their own incompetence. The bulk of the hanking failures in this city have heen caused by the absence of the special experience necessary in those who assumed the direction and supervision of banks, and also hy the ahsence of employés thoroughly trained to the business. The fact has been that half a dozen men, not one of whom alone would have undertaken to carry on a bank, have undertaken to do so in a body, each one relying on the superior knowledge of his co-directors, and the result has been that money has heen hopelessly locked up in ways where recovery is in the last degree improbable, and has heen frittered away in forms which now represent nothing. The investigating committee of the National Gold Bank and Trust Company show that the assets were over-estimated on August 13th by $194,151 89, and tbus the nominal capital of $750,000 is reduced to $555,848 11, or ahout 74 per cent. There were three courses open to the sharebolders: to levy an assessment to make up the loss of $194,151 89, to reduce the nominal capital to the amount of the real capital, or to wind up the business altogether, and the shareholders (hy a vote of nearly two-thirds) have chosen the last course. As usual in such cases, it was found that there was loose management, that the regulations set down for the guidance of the Directors wers not observed, that transactions were entered into of which those whose business it was to know all about them knew nothing whatever. Then there are the usual recriminations among the Directors, and there is talk of personal responsibility for certain debts; but all this means nothing. The bank will disincorporate, he wound up, and the balance of its assets be distributed among tbe shareholders, and that will be the end of it.

Our allies, the Natal Zulus, are no doubt very hrave when they assegai to death wounded Zulus, which they have repeatedly done, and have fled before them with ahject terror on meeting them in the field. The other day a Treek ox had laid down tired outside the Fort; he was dragged a few yards out of sight, when, without killing it, they cut ahout 14 pounds of raw flesh from his back and rump, and left it. My informant heard the poor hrute's moans, and saw it attempt to rise; then, after reporting the circumstance, went back and shot the poor hrute.—Extract from South African Letter.

ART JOTTINGS.

The writer of Jottings has been absent from the city these three weeks. Among the various notes received is the following:

816 California Street, Tuesday, Sept. 2d, 1879.

To the Art Critic S. F. News Letter—Dear Sir: As an artist and a stranger, I inclose you my card. I have just placed a picture at Messrs. ——— Gallery, ———, and have one on my easel (at above address) just receiving finishing touches. Should be happy to receive a call at your convenience.

Yours faithfully, Alma Woodleigh,
Otherwise F. L. Montague (nom de plume).
